Justice and Defence.—The judiciary consists of a supreme court, with a chief justice (a Filipino) and 10 associate justices (4 Filipinos); 31 judicial districts, each with a judge of first instance, except 11 districts which have 2 judges each, and one, covering the city of Manila, which has 7 judges. In addition there are 19 auxiliary judges of first instance. There are justices of the peace for the various municipalities and municipal districts. Manila has a municipal court of 3 judges.

Public order is maintained through the municipal police and the Philippine Constabulary, latter consisting of 401 officers (15 Americans) and 5,617 enlisted men, distributed at 132 stations throughout the Archipelago. Expenditures on the Constabulary totalled 2,595,254 dollars in 1931. The United States maintains a force of about 11,000 troops of the United States Army, including 6 regiments of Filipino soldiers.

Religion.—The dominant religion of the islands is the Roman Catholic (9,925,479 adherents). In 1902, an independent Filipino Church was founded which adheres to modern science, proclaims that science is superior to Biblical tradition, denies the possibility of miracles, and conceives God as an invisible Father with one essence and a single person. The ritual resembles somewhat that of the Roman Church. Latin was originally prescribed, but the Spanish language is now the official tongue, and encouragement is given to the vernacular dialects. Marriage is allowed to its apostles. According to the Government Census of 1918, the Independent Filipino Church had 1,417,448 followers, but in the last Church Census its followers numbered 4,000,000. Several Protestant denominations have extensive organisations and have many communicants, probably more than 200,000. They co-operate in maintaining a Union Theological Seminary, the Philippine Council of Religious Education, and a National Christian Council, which forwards reform movements, evangelistic campaigns, etc. The American missions look forward to withdrawal within the next decade or two, leaving the indigenous Filipino Protestant Churches to carry on. The Buddhist religion is professed by 24,263 men and women, while the Mahomedans number 443,037, and are chiefly to be found in the districts of Mindanao and Sulu.

Education.—Education in the public schools of the Philippines is free, secular, and co-educational, its principal aim being the spread of literacy on the basis of a common language, English. In 1930-31, there was an enrolment of 1,205,427 pupils (36·9 per cent. of those of school age) in the 7,761 public schools, with 260 American and 28,209 Filipino teachers. The expenditure on public-school education for 1931 was 17,027,378 dollars (insular only, excluding provincial and municipal). There are a number of special schools, including the Philippine Normal School, and 8 provincial normal schools; the Philippine School of Arts and Trades, and 26 provincial trade schools; the Central Luzon Agricultural School and 29 provincial agricultural schools, together with some 282 farm settlement schools. For higher education there is the State-supported University of the Philippines, with 499 professors, 1932, and 7,597 students; and 35 accredited private institutions of higher learning—among them the University of Sto. Tomas, founded in 1611, the oldest university under the American flag—giving collegiate instruction in liberal arts and sciences and in technical courses. There are in all 363 separate private schools of all grades of instruction accredited by the Government. The total enrolment in these approved private schools and colleges in 1931 was over 100,000, and the total number of instructors and teachers was about 3,749.

There are 195 newspapers and periodicals published in English and other languages.

Finance.—The revenues and expenditures of the central government for five fiscal years were:—

—	1927-28	1928-29	1929-30	1930-31	1931-32 ¹
	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars
Revenues	42,727,126	44,840,602	42,247,815	34,712,795	29,919,888
Expenditure	39,933,275	39,535,718	47,914,119	38,320,732	32,845,225

The total bonded debt on June 30, 1932, amounted to 81,833,500 dollars, including provinces and municipalities. Sinking fund, 26,219,767 dollars.

Production and Industry.—The areas of uncultivated land are very considerable. The Archipelago has a total area of 73,214,700 acres, of which 39,657,600 acres or 54 per cent., are suitable for cultivation; only 9,318,000 acres, or 23·5 per cent., were cultivated in 1931. The principal products are rough rice ('palay'), Manila hemp ('abacá'), coconut, sugar cane, corn, tobacco and magney. There are 44 sugar centrals; output in 1933-34, 1,486,871 short tons; 1932-33, about 1,050,000 tons. A law adopted November, 1933, restricts annual production for 3 years beginning 1932-33 to 1,400,000 short tons of raw sugar and 80,000 tons of refined sugar. In 1932 the United States took all the sugar exported, 1,016,307 metric tons. Tobacco output is about 50 million kilos annually, of which half is exported in manufactured form. The principal fruit is the banana; there are also mangoes, papaya, anonas, pilinut (Canarium commune), and mandarin and oranges. Production of cleaned rice in 1931 was 1,427,200 metric tons. The cultivation of rubber is increasing yearly, especially in the southern provinces where the large plantations are located; output, about 300 tons. About 96 per cent. of the total cultivated area is owned by Filipinos whose farms average 3 acres.

In the production of copra and coconut oil the Islands are classed among the foremost countries in the world. During the year 1932, there were exported 213,089 metric tons of copra and copra cake, and 114,670 tons of coconut oil.

The live-stock industry is increasing steadily. On December 31, 1931, there were: 2,076,440 carabaos (water buffaloes); 1,257,970 cattle; 344,448 horses and mules; 2,971,267 hogs.

The commercial forests furnish chiefly cabinet and construction timber, but also gums and resins, vegetable oils, rattan and bamboo, tan and dye barks and dye woods. About 97.5 per cent. of this belongs to the Government. Exports of logs and sawn timber, 1931, totalled 71,333,760 board feet.

Gold is the principal mineral produced in commercial quantities, chiefly from the Baguio district. Output in 1932, 229,728 ounces valued at 4,728,900 dollars. Some silver (149,131 ounces in 1932) and a small amount of platinum are recovered from the gold mining operations. Chromite has been discovered in Zambales and Pangasinan. The small iron production is consumed entirely in the manufacture of native agricultural implements. Two cement factories have a combined output of 600,000 barrels a year. The total value of mineral production in 1932 was 18,500,000 dollars.

Manufacturing is largely carried on in homes or in small factories; the principal exceptions are 45 sugar centrals, 2 sugar refineries, 9 chocolate and coffee factories, 6 coconut oil mills, 4 dessicated cocoa factories and 17 large cigar and cigarette factories.

Total value of production, 1932, is estimated at 1,082,866,080 pesos, including manufactured goods, 393,957,650 pesos; agriculture, 301,164,930 pesos; fishing, 200,000,000 pesos; lumber, 150,000,000 pesos; and live-stock, 19,293,800 pesos.

Commerce.—Free trade exists between the United States and the Philippines, but the American Congress has placed a tariff of about 20 per cent. on foreign imports into the Philippines. The values of imports and exports for recent calendar years are stated as follows in U.S. dollars (50 cents U.S. currency = 1 peso):—

Imports .	115,851,472	134,656,898	147,160,275	123,092,954	99,178,719	79,895,085

In the fiscal year ending June 30, 1931, the commerce was distributed principally as follows (in Philippine pesos, 1 peso = 50 cents U.S. currency):—

Countries	Imports	Exports	Countries	Imports	Exports

Exports to United Kingdom (Board of Trade figures) for calendar year 1933, £683,849; imports from United Kingdom, £527,113. These totals include Guam.

Shipping and Communications.—The overseas trade of the Philippine Islands during 1932, was carried mainly by 235 American vessels aggregating 1,286,347 net tons, 383 British with 1,551,974 net tons, and 236 Japanese with 870,576 net tons. The coastwise trade of the Islands is carried exclusively by domestic vessels.

On January 1, 1932, there were in operation, 989 post-offices, 635 money-order offices, 8,583 miles of insular telegraph lines, and 642 miles of cable, with 511 telegraph offices, including 78 radio stations, with 354 combined telephone-telegraph stations. At the same time there were 286 postal savings banks in operation, with 333,623 accounts, amounting to 8,529,954 pesos (Philippine currency).

When the United States entered the islands in 1898 there was but a single line of narrow gauge track running between Manila and Dagupan, a distance of about 120 miles. At the end of 1931, the Manila Railroad Co. had 705 miles on Luzon, and the Philippine Railroad Co. had 132 miles on Panay and Cebu. The Government has taken over the former of these companies. Total railway mileage, about 837. Total length of roads, 8,905 miles of which 4,785 miles are first-class, 2,501 second-class and remainder third-class. Besides the foregoing roads there were 2,772 miles of foot and horse trails. January 1, 1932, there were 23,373 motor cars and 14,131 trucks registered.

Banking and Coinage.—There are ten banks doing business in the Islands. Four are foreign: the National City Bank of New York, the Hong-Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, the Chartered Bank of India, Australia, and China and the Yokohama Specie Bank. Combined resources of all banks on June 30, 1932, was 122,341,000 dollars; capital and surplus 16,676,000 dollars. The Philippine National Bank was inaugurated, under a special charter granted by the Philippine Legislature, on May 2, 1916. On December 31, 1932, the bank had a capital of 10,000,000 pesos; surplus and undivided profits of 6,137,074 pesos; reserves, 8,519,439 pesos; deposits, 56,207,066 pesos, against which reserves were held of 51,082,580 pesos, or 90 per cent. The Government has now purchased almost all the privately-owned shares of stock of the bank and guarantees the final redemption and payment of the circulating notes of the institution. Since July 1, 1916, the Bank has been the sole Government depository. This bank and the Bank of the Philippine Islands, founded 1852, are the only ones that have the privilege of issuing notes.

The Philippines is on the gold-exchange standard, except as modified by the currency legislation adopted by the United States in 1933 and 1934.

The Philippine peso is equivalent to fifty cents of the United States money. The maintenance of the parity of the peso with gold is provided for by the Gold Standard Fund Act of June 13, 1922. The peso contains twenty grammes of silver, 800 fine. The coins used in the Philippine Islands are of the following decimal denominations: Peso, one-half peso, peseta (20 centavos), media peseta (10 centavos), all in silver; five centavo, in cupronickel; and one centavo, in bronze. Treasury certificates and bank notes are issued in one, two, five, ten, twenty, fifty, one-hundred, two-hundred, and five-hundred peso denominations. The Philippine coins are now coined at the Mint in Manila. Gold coins of the United States are legal tender for all debts, public and private, unless otherwise provided in the contract.

GUAM

The Island of Guam, situated at the southern extremity of the Mariana Archipelago, in latitude 13° 28' N., longitude 144° 43' E., is the largest island of that group. It was ceded by Spain to the United States by the Treaty of Paris (December 10, 1898). It is a Naval Station and saluting port under the jurisdiction of the Navy Department of the United States. A garrison of marines and a shore naval force are maintained here.

The length of the island is 32 miles, the breadth from 4 to 10 miles, and the area 206 square miles. Agaña, the seat of Government, is about eight miles from the anchorage in Apra Harbour. The port of entry is Piti. The number of inhabitants (including the military establishment and non-native residents) on June 30, 1933, was 19,800, of whom 18,477 were classed as 'natives.' The census of April 1, 1930, showed a population of 18,509. The native language is Chamorro, but Spanish and English are also spoken. English is the official language.

The Governor of the island, a naval officer appointed by the President, takes precedence over and is entitled to the honours due to an Admiral. The Governor is also the Military Commander of the island, Commandant of the naval station, and combines the functions of the executive, legislative and judicial power of the Government. The judiciary system comprises one police court, an Island Court, a Court of Equity, a Higher Court of Equity, and one Court of Appeal. The Spanish Colonial laws, modified when necessary by executive general orders of the Governor, are still in force.

Elementary education is compulsory. There are 3,766 pupils registered. English, handicrafts and agriculture are taught.

There is a Government radio station on the island, which is also in cable telegraphic communication with all parts of the world. There is an irregular mail service per westbound U.S. army and navy transports, from San Francisco, via Honolulu, and to Manila.

A line of commercial steamers, with scheduled sailings from San Francisco every 90 days, stops at Guam westbound en route to Manila. The station ship makes about four trips a year to Manila, China, and Japan for freight and coal.

The port is closed to foreign vessels of war and commerce except in special cases. Permission to visit the island must be obtained of the Navy Department in each case.

The products of the island are maize, copra, rice, sweet potatoes, coffee, alligator pears, and sugar, besides valuable timber. Copra (exports, 1932-33, 1,500 tons) and coconut oil are the principal exports. There are 6,209 head of cattle, including 300 water buffaloes. The imports into the island in the year ending June 30, 1933, amounted to 379,121 dollars, and the exports to 52,196 dollars.

The official currency is that of the United States.

Governor.—George A. Alexander, Captain U.S. Navy (appointed June 21, 1933).

SAMOAN ISLANDS.

(AMERICAN SAMOA.)

The history of American Samoa commenced in the year 1872, when the harbour of Pagopago, in Tutuila, was ceded to the United States for a naval and coaling station. In 1878 rights of freedom of trade and extra-territorial jurisdiction in Samoa were granted. On June 14, 1889, a treaty between the United States, Germany, and Great Britain proclaimed the Samoan Islands neutral territory, with an independent government, the natives being allowed to follow their own laws and customs, while for civil and criminal causes involving foreigners a Supreme Court of Justice, with an American citizen as presiding judge, was established. This arrangement continued till 1899, when owing to disturbances, the kingship was abolished, and, by the Tripartite Treaty of November 14 of that year, Great Britain and Germany renounced in favour of the United States all rights over the islands of the Samoan group east of 171 degrees of longitude west of Greenwich, the islands to the west of that meridian being assigned to Germany.

The total area of American Samoa is 76 square miles and according to the 1930 census, contained 10,055 inhabitants. The Island of Tutuila 70 miles from Apia, has an area of about 40·2 square miles, with a population of 7,809 (including the island of Aunu'u) according to the 1930 census. Ta'u has an area of 14 square miles, and the other islets (Ofu and Olosega) of the Manu'a group have an area of about 4 square miles with a population of 2,147. Swain's Island, annexed in 1925, is from a mile and a half to two miles in diameter. Population (1930) is 99. The harbour at Pagopago, which penetrates the south coast like a fiord, is the only good harbour in Samoa. It is a United States naval station.

The Commandant is also the Governor of American Samoa by commission from the President of the United States. He appoints officers and frames laws or ordinances, but native customs (not inconsistent with United States laws) are not changed without the consent of the people.

The islands are organised in three political divisions corresponding to the old Samoan political units. In each District there is a Native Governor, County Chiefs and Village Chiefs. All of these officials are appointed by governmental authority although the District Governor has indirect control of the County Chiefs, and the County Chiefs of the Village Chiefs. Judicial power is vested in village courts, in six judicial district courts, and in a High Court. There is a native guard (known as the Fitaftas) of 76.

There are no public lands in American Samoa. Nearly all the land is owned by natives. The soil is fertile; the fruits comprise orange, lime, banana, mangoes and alligator pears. Copra of excellent quality is abundant.

The Government (1933) maintains 21 public schools, giving every child over 6 years of age the opportunity of an elementary English education: 2,229 pupils are enrolled. All private schools must teach English a percentage of the time. There are four parochial schools under missionary auspices having, in all, six white and six Samoan teachers and about 350 children of all ages; instruction is chiefly in Samoan.

The native taxes, both poll and school, are fixed by the Fono, Advisory Council to the Governor, in November, payable before the following June 30. The average annual output of copra is between 1,000 and 1,500 tons. The chief island products, besides copra, are taro, breadfruit, yams, coconuts, pine-apples, oranges, and bananas. Chief exports are copra, reed mats and curios. Imports: 1932, 129,984 dollars. Exports: 1932, 29,058 dollars.

About 30 miles of public roads have been constructed. There is a United States Naval high-powered radio station (open to commercial traffic) on Tutuila, which reaches New Zealand, Australia, Honolulu, the United States, and the islands of the Pacific. The fast mail steamers of the Matson Navigation Company touch here on their regular trips between the United States, Hawaii, Fiji, New Zealand and Australia.

PART THE THIRD

OTHER COUNTRIES

ABYSSINIA.

(ETHIOPIA.)

THE ancient Empire of Abyssinia, or 'Ethiopia,' includes the former Kingdoms of Tigré, in the north-east; Amhara and Gojjam, in the centre, and Shoa in the south; together with the modern acquisitions to the south, Harrar, and the Galla, Shankalla and Dankali territories. The following are the principal provinces into which the country is divided: Harrar, Wollo, Gurage, Kaffa, Gore, Sayu, Benishangul, Wogera, Southern Tigré, Adowa and Aksun, Sokota, Lasta, Goffa, Nekemti (Lekemti) and the Western Galla countries, Sellale, Wollaga, Gimira, Sidamo, Arussi, Borana, Gojjam, Gondar, Jimma. The whole area is 350,000 sq. miles. For treaties relating to the boundaries of Abyssinia see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1907, p. 667, and for 1923, p. 677.

By the convention of Addis Ababa of October 26, 1896, between Italy and King Menelik, the independence of Abyssinia was recognized.

Under an Agreement signed December 13, 1906, on behalf of Great Britain, France, and Italy, the three Powers undertake to respect and endeavour to preserve the integrity of Abyssinia; to act so that industrial concessions granted in the interest of one of them may not injure the others; to abstain from intervention in Abyssinian internal affairs; to concert together for the safeguarding of their respective interests in territories bordering on Abyssinia; and they make agreements concerning railway construction in Abyssinia and equal treatment in trade and transit for their nationals. By an exchange of Notes dated December 14-20, 1925, Great Britain and Italy more specifically defined their respective spheres of interest in Abyssinia, as indicated in the above agreement; in particular Italy recognised the exclusive right of Great Britain to deal with the waters of Lake Tsana, while Great Britain agreed not to oppose any Italian scheme for railway development in the hinterland of Eritrea or Italian Somaliland, which may affect Abyssinia.

On August 2, 1928, Italy and Abyssinia signed a treaty of friendship and arbitration (the first of the kind ever made by Abyssinia), providing for arbitration in all disputes for a period of 20 years. A further agreement was signed at the same time whereby Abyssinia was granted a free zone at the port of Assab in Eritrea; provision was also made for the construction of a motor road from that port to Dessie in Abyssinia.

Government.

Emperor.—Haile Selassie I., born July 17, 1891; crowned King (Negus) on October 7, 1928, proclaimed Emperor, after the death of the Empress Zauditu, on April 3, 1930, and crowned Emperor, November 2, 1930. Married Waizeru Menen in 1912, and has 3 sons and 3 daughters. On January 25, 1931, the eldest son, Asfaou Wosan was proclaimed Crown Prince and heir to the throne; he was married on May 9, 1932, to the daughter of Ras Sayoum.

After the overthrow of the Emperor Theodore by the British in 1868, the suzerain power passed to Prince Kassai of Tigré, who assumed the old title of Negusa Nagast ('King of Kings'), and was crowned in 1872 as John IV., Emperor of Ethiopia. After the death of this potentate in 1889, Menelik II., King of Shoa (born 1844), became the supreme ruler of Abyssinia.

Menelik died in December, 1913, and was succeeded by Lij Yasu, born in 1896, son of his second daughter, Waizeru Shoaragga and Ras Mikael, the chief of the Wollo Gallas.

On September 27, 1916, Lij Yasu was deposed by public proclamation, and Zauditu, another daughter of Menelik, was nominated Empress and 'Queen of Kings of Ethiopia,' and Ras Taffari, son of Ras Makonnen, and great-nephew of Menelik, proclaimed heir to the throne.

On July 16, 1931, a constitution was proclaimed. This provides for a unified state under the government of the Emperor advised by two nominated chambers. All are equal before the law and succession to the Throne is reserved to the present dynasty.

Abyssinia was admitted into the League of Nations on September 28, 1923.

Population.

No reliable figures of population exist, but recent estimates indicate a figure of about 5,500,000. The Abyssinians, properly so called, number rather less than 3 millions, and inhabit the provinces of Tigré, Amhara, Gojjam, and Shoa (in part), covering an area of over one-third of the whole country. They are Christians, and are of Hamitic origin, semiticized by waves of Semitic invasion from Arabia and adulterated by intermarriage with Negro and other conquered races. The Gallas, some of whom are Christian, some Moslem, and some Pagan, comprise more than two-thirds of the entire population, and are a pastoral and agricultural people of Hamitic origin. Ogaden, Issa and other Somalis inhabit Harrar, the Somaliland plateau, and the south-east. The Danakil are Mohammedans, and are still somewhat turbulent. There are also Negroes (in the South-West), and the Falashas (of Jewish religion), in the N.-E. centre with a growing number of foreigners (Indians, Arabs, Armenians, Europeans) in the towns.

There are few towns in Abyssinia in our sense of the word—Addis Ababa, Dire Dawa and Harrar being the most important. Addis Ababa, the capital, has 60,000 to 70,000 inhabitants with a foreign population of several thousands, of whom the majority are British Indian and British Arab subjects, Greeks and Armenians. Dire Dawa contains about 30,000 people, of whom about 300 are Europeans, and the old walled city of Harar has a population of about 40,000, with about 100 foreigners, mostly Indians and Arabs. Other important towns, politically or commercially, are: Debra Markos, capital of Gojjam, 5,000; Gondar, capital of Amhara, 3,000; Adua, capital of Tigré, 5,000; Axum, ancient capital of Ethiopia, 5,000; Antalo, former capital of Tigré, 1,000; Ankober, former capital of Shoa, 2,000; Debra-Tabor and Makallé; Gore, Saiyu Nekemti, Saméré, 3,000-4,000, and Sokoto, 1,500, important trading centres. Gambeila, in Western Abyssinia, is a trading station leased to the Sudan Government. It is an important outlet for the trade in the West. A service of steamers is maintained from June to November with Khartum.

Domestic slavery is a recognized institution, but slave trading, by an ancient law renewed by a decree issued in June, 1923, is punishable by death. A comprehensive edict of 45 clauses was issued in March, 1924, providing for the gradual emancipation of slaves, beginning with the children born of slaves. In July, 1931, a further edict was published whereby inter alia slaves regain their freedom immediately on the death of their master. In August, 1932, a new Slavery Department, independent of the Ministry of the Interior, was constituted by decree.

Religion and Education.

Since the conversion of the Abyssinians to Christianity in the fourth century they have retained their connection with the Alexandrian Church through the Abuna, or head bishop, who is always a Copt, and who is appointed and consecrated by the Coptic Patriarch of Alexandria. Under the Abuna is the Itchege, a native ecclesiastical dignitary, who presides over the spirituality, numbering about 100,000 ecclesiastics. In addition to the Itchege, who was consecrated bishop in January, 1930, there are four other Abyssinian bishops, who were consecrated as such by the Coptic Patriarch in 1929. Their consecration was a great innovation, as hitherto no Abyssinian priest had been consecrated a bishop. The priestly class is very numerous and the Church holds a considerable proportion of the land. Both Copts and Abyssinians are monophysite, rejecting the decrees of the Council of Chalcedon (A.D. 451).

Education is mostly in the hands of the priests and monks, but a number of secular schools have been founded in recent years. There are 4 at Addis Ababa, 2 at Harar, and others at Jijiga, Gore, Sidamo, and Dessie. In addition, a few foreign missions, Swedish, American French, Italian and German, carry on a limited amount of educational work. The Greeks and Armenians have their own schools.

Justice.

Justice is administered by the provincial governors, and shums, or petty chiefs, with the right of appeal to the Emperor. The Fetha Nagast, or Code of Laws, deals with ecclesiastical, civil and penal law. The legal system is said to be based on the Justinian Code. The penal code is based on the Mosaic law. Foreigners are subject to the jurisdiction of a special ('mixed') court or to their own consular Courts according to circumstances. Administration of Justice is very defective, but punishments for crimes are less barbarous than formerly.

Defence.

The Abyssinian Army in the field consists of two main parts. The standing army composes the nucleus, and the remainder of the forces are drawn from the chiefs and their retainers summoned in time of war, a sort of militia. Besides the above, a varying number of irregulars join the army on the outbreak of war, every man, except the priests, being an actual or potential soldier. The standing army, instituted by Menelik, forms in effect the paid standing garrison of each province, and amounts altogether to something under 100,000 men. Both they and the militia, amounting to perhaps 300,000–400,000 men, are very loosely organized, and have nothing in the shape of transport, and little modern equipment. A Belgian military mission was engaged in 1929 and is now at work training some 2,500 men of the Royal Bodyguard. The latter is armed with a certain amount of modern armament, including a 5-ton tank given to the king by the Duke of Abruzzi during his visit to Abyssinia in May, 1927. A beginning has been made with the formation of an Air Force, which has been started under French auspices.

Agriculture and Industry.

The chief industries are pastoral and agricultural. Cattle, sheep, and goats are numerous. The horses of the country are small but hardy, and make excellent polo ponies; mules are bred, being used as pack animals; donkeys are also small and serve for baggage animals. Cotton, the sugar-cane, date-palm, coffee, and vine thrive well in many districts, but, except coffee, are nowhere extensively cultivated. The production of Harari coffee (long berry Mocha) is on the increase. Besides this, which is cultivated, there grows more especially in southern and western Abyssinia a wild coffee plant, yielding a berry known as Abyssinian coffee, which grows in extensive forests. The supply is said to be unlimited. The native produce includes hides and skins, wax, barley, millet (dhurra), wheat, gesho (which serves as a substitute for hops), and tobacco; but, with the exception of hides, skins, wax, grain and coffee, not in sufficient quantities for export. Manufacturing industries are practically non-existent. The forests abound in valuable trees including rubber. Iron is found in some districts and is manufactured into spears, knives, hatchets, &c. Placer gold mining and washing are carried on in the western districts; coal, copper and sulphur have been found, also platinum. There are said to be valuable deposits of potash salts in the Asal salt plains in the north-eastern part of the country, and their exploitation has been carried on with the aid of Italian capital.

Foreign enterprise has begun to establish itself in the country; two Belgian companies are working coffee plantations, and a Franco-Belgian company is experimenting on a large scale with cotton.

Commerce.

The total trade of Abyssinia (export and import) in 1931 was valued at 1,275,295*l.*, of which nearly 80 per cent. passes through French Somaliland.

The principal artery of trade is the Franco-Ethiopian railroad, but caravans also do a large trade in the interior. The chief trade routes besides the railway are the following:—(1) Khartum-Gambella, Khartum-Gallabat, and Sudan; (2) Mombasa-Nairobi-Moyale (British East Africa); (3) Zeila Jijiga, Hargeisa-Ogaden (British Somaliland); (4) Massawa-Asmara-Gondar-Assab-Dessie (Italian Eritrea); (5) Mogadishu-Lugh-Dolo-Arusi (Italian Somaliland).

The exports consist mainly of hides and skins (including leopard and monkey), coffee, wax, ivory, civet, and native butter. The imports comprise grey sheeting, cotton yarns, artificial silk, corrugated sheets and bars, hardware, cement, kerosene, petrol, glass and salt. The imports are chiefly from England, France, India, Italy, Germany, Japan, and the United States. The value of the leading imports into Abyssinia from and via the Sudan in 1931 were:—cotton and silk goods, £E.29,625 (£E.29,926 in 1930); salt, £E.3,349 (£E.13,329 in 1930); other goods, £E.18,556 (£E.27,189 in 1930). Exports from Abyssinia to and via the Sudan in 1931 were:—coffee, £E.97,811 (£E.219,133 in 1930); other goods, £E.15,573 (£E.11,586 in 1930).

The total trade between Abyssinia and Great Britain for 5 years (according to Board of Trade Returns) was as follows:—

—	1929	1930	1931	1932	1933
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports from Abyssinia	166,891	229,032	216,517	138,051	190,565
Exports to Abyssinia	88,785	33,843	22,636	18,772	88,095
Re-exports to Abyssinia	1,148	953	662	761	696

Communications.

Roads in Abyssinia are mere tracks, and transport is effected by means of mules, pack-horses, donkeys, and, in some places, camels. In the capital and its vicinity several miles of metalled road were constructed in 1926. In 1896 the Franco-Ethiopian Railway Co. was formed for the construction of a line from Jibuti in French Somaliland, which reached the capital in 1917. The line is of metre gauge, with a total length of 486½ miles. Trains run twice weekly in each direction, covering the distance in three days, but running by day only. In the dry season a weekly express is also run, which does the journey in 36 hours. The railway is under French management, and depends financially on a subvention from the French government.

Considerable interest is now being taken in road construction. Chief among the roads now under consideration are the following: Dessie-Assab, Addis Ababa-Jimma, Jijiga-Hargeisa, Gore-Gambeila, Addis Ababa-Lake Tsana. The total road mileage of all kinds is estimated at about 2,615 miles, of which about 1,615 miles are dirt trails, and 1,150 miles earth and gravel. There are also about 65 miles of macadam roads.

There are telegraph lines under Italian control (about 1,229 miles) connecting Addis Ababa with Harrar, with Sidamo, and with Massawa in Eritrea. Telephone lines connect Addis Ababa with Harrar, and Jibuti in French Somaliland, also with Gore and Gambeila (in the west), Jimma and Sharada (south-west), Dessie (north), and Debra Tabor and Gojjam, and with Ankober, and Asmara with Adua and Borromeida. Length of line is estimated at 5,113 miles. In 1929, there were 16 post offices.

Money and Credit.

The Bank of Abyssinia, which held a banking monopoly in the country since its institution in 1905, was bought in 1931 and replaced by a State Bank named the Bank of Ethiopia, with an initial nominal capital of 15 million English shillings or their equivalent in a new Ethiopian gold currency, in shares of 500 shillings, 50 per cent. paid up. No other bank is permitted in the country without special Government sanction.

The current coin of Abyssinia is the Maria Theresa dollar (nominally worth about 2s., but greatly depreciated as a result of the fall in the value of silver) weighing 28·0668 grammes, ·8333 fine, and the Menelik dollar, weighing 28·075 grammes, ·835 fine. It has nominally the same value as the Maria Theresa dollar, but in some places it is not taken at all. Other silver coins are the half, quarter, sixteenth (guerches, makeliks, tamooous, or piastres) of a dollar, and there is also a copper coin, the besa (= one thirty-second of a dollar). The number of piastres or besa obtainable for a dollar although fixed by law, is in fact liable to constant fluctuation. Various articles, however, are used as medium of exchange; bars of salt are accepted as money in many parts of the country, at a fluctuating rate according to supply and cost of transport. Cartridges are also currency, although to a diminishing extent; and in most places barter prevails.

The Maria Theresa dollar was originally minted in Vienna in the middle of the 18th century.

Weights and Measures.

The metric system of weights and measures is used to a certain extent in the capital and district bordering the railway line. The principal native weights and measures, which are also used in trade with foreigners, are as follows:—

WEIGHTS.

Ookia = weight of Maria Theresa/Menelik dollar = 28·067 grammes, approximately 1 oz. avoirdupois.

Natr = 30 ookiat, approximately 1 lb. 14 ozs. avoirdupois.

Farasula = approximately 37½ lbs.

Kantar = 100 lbs.

1 Waggia (for ivory) = 480 dollars' weight.

1 „ (for rubber) = 640 dollars' weight.

LINEAL MEASURES.

Kund = French Coudée (length of forearm and hand) = cubit = 50 centimetres = 19½ inches.

Khalad = 130 kinnds = 65 metres = 213½ feet, say 71 yards.

LAND MEASURE.

The measure is a Gasha, which varies according to the quality of the land, and ranges between 15 khalads by 25 khalads, and 7 khalads by 11 khalads, the latter equalling roughly 80 acres.

GRAIN MEASURES.

2 ladan = 1 dawala = 80 kilos.

MEASURE FOR HONEY AND CIVET.

10 wanche (horn cups) = 1 goundo = about 3 litres.

Diplomatic Representatives.

1. OF ABYSSINIA IN GREAT BRITAIN.

Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary.—Bajirond Tekla Hawariat (appointed May, 1933).

First Secretary.—Ato Ephrem Tewolde Medhen.

2. OF GREAT BRITAIN IN ABYSSINIA.

Minister.—Sir Sidney Barton, K.C.V.O., K.B.E., C.M.G. (appointed May 21, 1929).

First Secretary.—P. S. Scrivener.

Consul at Addis Ababa.—W. L. Bond.

There are Consuls also at Harrar, Goré, Maji, Dangila and Mega.

AFGHÁNISTÁN.

AFGHÁNISTÁN is a country of Asia lying between parallels 29° and 38° 35' of north latitude, and 60° 50' and 74° 50' of east longitude, with a long narrow strip extending to 75° east longitude (Wákhán). For the boundaries, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1925, pp. 654-55; for the treaty of November, 1921, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK 1928, p. 642; and for earlier British relations with Afghánistán, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1916, pp. 662-3.

Government.—The government of Afghánistán is a constitutional monarchy, in which the supreme legislative power is vested in the Parliament consisting of the King, a Senate and a National Assembly. The Senate consists of a maximum of 40 members, who are nominated for life by the King. In 1933 there were 38; they sit throughout the year. The National Assembly consists of 120 elected members. It is in session between May and October, and may be summoned at any time. There is yet a Grand Assembly (Loe Jirgeh), which is summoned at irregular intervals of about four years to consider major questions of policy referred to it by the King. The title of King instead of Amír was adopted in 1926. The country is divided into five major provinces of Kábul, Mezar, Kandahár, Herat, and Kataghan-Badakhshán; and four minor provinces: Simat-i-Mashriqi (i.e. Eastern Province), Simat-i-Janubi (Southern Province), Farah, and Maimena. Each province is under a governor (called in major provinces Naib-ul-Hukumeh and in minor provinces Hakim-i-'Aala).

There are separate departments of War, Foreign Affairs, Internal Affairs, Education, Commerce, Justice, and Revenue, each in charge of a Minister and two departments (1) Health ; (2) Posts and Telegraphs, under director-generals.

Reigning King.—Mohammed Zahir Shah, born at Kábul in 1914 ; married on November 7, 1931, to his cousin, daughter of Sirdar Ahmed Shah Khan ; succeeded his father, Mohammed Nadir Shah, who was assassinated on November 8, 1933.

Area and Population.—The extreme breadth of Afghánistán from north-east to south-west is about 700 miles ; its length from the Herát frontier to the Kháibar Pass, about 600 miles ; the area is about 245,000 or 270,000 square miles. Population, according to the latest estimate, about twelve millions. The languages spoken are Persian and Pushtoo, and Turki in Turkistan and parts of Badakhshán. The pre-dominant religion is Islam.

The largest towns are Kábul, the capital (population about 80,000), Kandahár (population with suburbs 60,000), Herát (population 30,000), and Mazar-i-Sharif (20,000).

Education.—Elementary and secondary schools exist throughout the country. Both elementary and secondary education are free. There are at present 27 primary schools and one normal school for teachers in Kábul. In addition there are four secondary schools. Technical, art, commercial and medical schools exist for higher education. The Kábul University was established in 1932.

Justice.—The law is based on the Shara' or Islamic law. Lower Courts (Mahakima-i-Ibtidaia) are established in each seat of government, and Higher Courts (Mahakima-i-Murafiaah) may have appeals from the former brought before them. A High Court in Kábul is the supreme judicial authority. In many instances efforts are made by litigants to compose their differences by the aid of unofficial juries in each locality.

Finance.—The revenue of Afghánistán is subject to considerable fluctuations. The Government share of the produce recoverable is said to vary from one-fifth to one-tenth, according to the advantages of irrigation. The total revenue is estimated at about one hundred and fifty million (Afghani) rupees, a considerable portion of which is found from Customs.

Defence.—The peace strength of the army is 70,000, and in time of war these would be supported by considerable numbers of tribesmen in the form of irregulars. There is also a small air force, officered by Afghans trained in Europe.

Production and Industry.—Although the greater part of Afghánistán is more or less mountainous, and a good deal of the country is too dry and rocky for successful cultivation, yet there are many fertile plains and valleys, which, with the assistance of irrigation from small rivers or wells, yield very satisfactory crops of fruit, vegetables, and cereals. The castor-oil plant, madder, and the asafetida plant abound. Fruit, viz. the apple, pear, almond, peach, quince, apricot, plum, cherry, pomegranate, grape, fig, mulberry, is produced in profuse abundance. They form a staple food of a large class of the people throughout the year, both in the fresh and preserved state, and in the latter condition are exported in great quantities. The fat-tailed sheep is native to Afghánistán. These sheep furnish the principal meat diet of the inhabitants, and the grease of the tail is a substitute for butter. The wool and skins not only provide material for warm apparel, but also furnish the country's main article of export.

Northern Afghánistán is reputed to be tolerably rich in copper, and lead and iron are found in many parts. Coal is found in the Ghorband Valley and near the Khurd Kábul Pass. Crude petroleum has been discovered near Herat. Silver mines exist in Panjsher Valley. Iron is smelted in Katghan and Parmal. Other minerals of commercial value are to be found widely in the country; and none have been properly exploited so far. Gold in small quantities is also brought from the Laghman Hills and Kunar. Badakhshan is said to be the only country in the world to produce first-quality lapis lazuli.

At Kábul there are factories for the manufacture in small quantities of matches, buttons, leather and boots. There is also a 'Machine-Khana' where arms and ammunition, boots and clothing, etc., for the army are manufactured. It also includes a mint. All these factories are owned and supervised by the State.

Commerce.—Of the exports from India to Afghánistán the chief items are cotton goods, indigo and other dyeing materials, sugar, hardware, leather and silver treasure. The imports into India include timber, fruits, skins, carpets and raw wool.

Imports from Afghanistan into U.K. in 1933 (Board of Trade figures), 2,825*l.*; exports to Afghanistan, 15,050*l.*; re-exports, 204*l.*

Communications.—Afghánistán joined the Postal and Telegraphic Unions in 1928.

The trade routes of Afghánistán are as follows:—From Persia by Meshed to Herát; from Bokhára by Merv to Herát; from Bokhára by Karshi, Balkh, and Khulm to Kábul; from East Turkistán by Badakhshán and Nuristan (formerly Kafiristan) to Kábul; from India by the Kháibar road to Kábul; from India by the Gomál Pass to Ghazní and Kelat-i-Ghilzai; from Chaman, the terminus of the North-Western Railway beyond Quetta, to Kandahár and thence to Kábul or Herát; from Parachinar (Kurram) via Peiwar and Shutargardan Passes to Logar and Kábul.

There are no railways in the country. The following roads are fit for motor traffic, except after snow or heavy rain, but are mostly unmetalled: Kháibar-Kábul, Kábul-Kandahár, Kábul-Gardez, Kandahár-Farah-Herat (sometimes impassable owing to lack of bridges), Kandahár-Chaman, Kábul-Bamian, Kábul-Mazar-i-Sharif (opened in 1933), and Mazar-i-Sharif-Maimana-Herat. In addition there are some 200 miles of minor roads fit for motor traffic, mostly in the vicinity of Kábul. Merchandise, however, is still transported chiefly on camel or pony back. There are practically no navigable rivers in Afghánistán, and timber is the only article of commerce conveyed by water, floated down stream in rafts. Telephones are installed in a few of the larger towns. There is telegraphic communication between Peshawar-Kábul, Kábul-Kandahár, Kandahár-Chaman. A wireless installation connects Kábul with Eastern Europe and India.

Money and Currency.—The monetary system is on the silver standard. The unit is an Afghani, weighing 10 grammes of silver .900 fine, which is subdivided into 100 Puls. The currency consists of:—Copper: 1 Pul, 2 Pul, 10 Pul, 25 Pul pieces; Bronze: 30 Pul pieces; Billon: $\frac{1}{2}$ Afghani pieces; Silver: Afghani; Gold; Tilla-i-Nadra (no fixed value). There is no paper currency. The unit is a Kabuli rupee, equal to 60 Paisah; 11 Kabuli rupees are equal to 10 Afghanis. The old coins frequently met with are:—Bronze: Abbasi, or Tanga = $\frac{1}{2}$ rupee = 30 Puls; Silver: Abbasi, or Tanga = $\frac{1}{2}$ rupee = 30 Puls; Qiran = $\frac{1}{2}$ rupee = 45 Puls; Kabuli Rupaiyah rupees = 91 Puls; Nim Sanad, $2\frac{1}{2}$ rupees = 2.27 Afghani; Sanad, 5 rupees = 4.54 Afghani. The National Bank of Afghanistan, with branches both in Asia and Europe, was recently established.

Weights and Measures.—The metric system has now been adopted. The old measures varied from place to place. Those of Kabul are :—Linear : 16 Girah = Gaz-i-Shah = 42 inches; Land : Gaz = $29\frac{1}{2}$ inches; 4,000 Gaz = Karoh = 1 mile, 6 furlongs, 198 yards; 9 sq. Gaz = 1 Biswasah; 20 Biswasah = 1 Biswah = about 121 sq. yards; and 3,600 sq. Gaz = 20 Biswah = Jarib = $2,417\frac{3}{5}$ sq. yards. Weights :—24 Nakhud = Mithqal = about 92 grains; 6 Mithqal = 1 Pukhtah bar = 1 oz.; 4 Pukhtah bar = 1 Khurd = 4 oz.; 4 Khurd = 1 Pao = 1 lb.; 4 Pao = 1 Charak = 4 lbs.; 4 Charak = 1 Ser = 16 lbs.; 8 Ser = 1 Man = 1 cwt. 16 lbs.; and 10 Man = 1 Kharwar = 11 cwt. 1 qr. 20 lbs.

ALBANIA.

(SHQIPERIA.)

THE territory known as Albania is made up of the old Turkish Provinces of Scutari and Yanina, and of parts of those of Kosova and Monastir. The Albanians, from the point of view of their language, are divided into two principal groups—the Ghegs, who live to the north of the river Shkumbi, and the Tosks in the south.

The early history of the Albanians is complicated and local. But after the death of George Kastrioti—nicknamed and popularly known as Skanderbeg—in 1479, under whom the Albanians had united and heroically resisted the Turks for a quarter of a century, Albania passed under Turkish suzerainty, and thus remained—nominally or actually according to the locality and period—until 1912. At the beginning of the eighteenth century Ali Pasha of Tepelen established a virtually independent Albanian State with Janina as its capital, and waged war against his Albanian rivals the Pashas Bushati (1750-1831) of Shkodër (Scutari), who had temporarily thrown off Turkish control in the north. Between 1878 and 1880 an Albanian League unsuccessfully attempted to establish Albanian autonomy.

The independence of Albania was proclaimed at Vlonë (Valona) on November 28, 1912, and on December 17, 1912, the London Conference of Ambassadors agreed to the principle of Albanian autonomy. Subsequently that Conference decided upon the frontiers of the new country, and agreed that a European Prince be nominated to rule it. Prince William of Wied, having accepted the crown of the Principality from an Albanian deputation at Neuwied, on February 21, 1914, arrived at Durazzo (Durrës) on March 7, 1914. Previously, an International Commission of Control had been constituted to control the International loan to Albania.

Prince William's reign was foredoomed to failure. Intrigue and treachery were followed by revolt in central Albania. After the outbreak of the European War in 1914, the Prince and nearly all the members of the International Commission on September 3 left Albania, which fell into a state of anarchy. By the secret Pact of London of April 26, 1915, provision was made for the partition of Albania; but this arrangement was repudiated by Italy on June 3, 1917, when the Italian Commander-in-Chief in Albania, proclaimed at Gjinokastër (Argirocastro) the independence of Albania. After the Armistice there was fighting between the Albanians and both the Italians and Yugoslavs; but eventually foreign forces were withdrawn beyond the Albanian frontier, and the independence of the country confirmed. On December 17, 1920, Albania became a member of the League of Nations. In January, 1925, the country was proclaimed a Republic, which continued until 1928. A Constituent Assembly for the purpose of changing the Albanian Republic into a Monarchy was opened on August 25, 1928, and on September 1, the necessary amendments to the Constitution were voted and Ahmed Beg Zogu, President of the Republic since January 31, 1925, was proclaimed King. The new régime was generally recognised by the European Powers.

According to the constitution of 1928, Albania is a democratic, parliamentary, independent monarchy, without any state religion and with only one elected Chamber.

On November 22, 1927, a defensive alliance for a period of twenty years was signed between Albania and Italy.

Reigning King.—Zog I., born October 8, 1895, a Moslem by religion and hereditary chieftain of the Mati clan, proclaimed King September 1, 1928. The King is assisted in the administration by a council of ministers appointed by him.

Area and Population.—The area of the country is 10,629 square miles, while the population, according to the Census held on May 25, 1930, was 1,003,124.

The country is divided into 10 prefectures, named after the principal towns, which with the population in 1930 are as follows:—

Prefectures	Population in 1930		Prefectures	Population in 1930
	Prefecture	Town		Prefecture	Town
Berat . . .	142,616	10,403	Korçe (Coriza) .	147,536	22,787
Dibër (Dibra) .	86,992	—	Kosova (Cossovo)	49,081	—
Durrës (Durazzo)	77,890	8,739	Shkodër (Scutari)	132,334	29,209
Elbasan . . .	111,480	13,796	Vlonë (Valona)	53,461	9,100
Gjinokastër (Argi-rocastro) .	143,926	10,836	Tirana (Capital)	57,808	30,806

Religion and Education.—There is no State religion. The population is distributed according to the following estimates:—Moslems, 688,280; orthodox Christians (National Albanian Church), 210,313; Roman Catholics, 104,184. The Gheg Christians in the north are for the most part Roman Catholics under two Archbishops, three Bishops, one Mitred Abbot and an Apostolic Delegate, and the Tosk Christians in the south are members of the Albanian Autocephalous Church, which is under the rule of the Holy Synod (constituted February 18, 1929) and four bishops.

Primary education is nominally compulsory for children between the ages of 5 and 12, but owing to the shortage of schools this cannot be enforced. There were in 1933, 505 State primary schools with 820 teachers (105 women) and 30,250 pupils (5,900 girls); 32 State secondary schools, with 100 teachers (8 women), and 2,001 pupils (250 girls). There are also 14 Infants Schools, and 3 training colleges for teachers. About 300 Albanians are studying abroad.

Justice is administered by the Pretor, the tribunal of first instance and the collegiate tribunal. There is no court of appeal. At Tirana there is a court of cassation. On January 1, 1928, the new Albanian Penal Code, which is based on that of Italy, and the new Civil Code (April 1, 1929), based on that of Italy, France and Switzerland, came into force, to take the place of the Ottoman laws previously imposed. According to the new Code polygamy is abolished, although Islam is the dominant religion in Albania. The new Albanian Commercial Code came into force on April 1, 1932.

Finance.—The revenue and expenditure for five years ending March, 1931 is as follows :—

—	1929-30	1930-31 ¹	1931-32 ¹	1932-33 ¹	1933-34 ¹
	gold francs	gold francs	gold francs	gold francs	gold francs
Expenditure .	83,125,536	81,845,000	29,097,000	28,500,000	27,527,000

In May, 1925, Albania obtained a foreign loan for the nominal amount of 50,000,000 gold francs in Italian lire, and by the rise in value of the lira the Government made a profit of 15,000,000 gold francs. Thus the sum to be expended was 65,000,000 gold francs. The loan, administered by the Italian Company for the Economic Development of Albania (S.V.E.A.), and guaranteed by the yield of the Albanian Customs, and of the Albanian Monopolies on salt, matches, cigarette papers and playing cards, is also guaranteed by the Italian Treasury, and is being used exclusively in carrying out public works. This loan proving inadequate, the Italian Government agreed in June, 1931, to subsidise the Albanian revenues to a maximum annual amount of 10,000,000 gold francs, for a period of ten years. This sum bears no interest; but, on the instance of the Albanian Government, repayment is to be considered when the Albanian revenues amount to 50,000,000 gold francs, provided such repayment does not effect the economic development of the country. Expenditure is to be controlled by a commission of two Italian and two Albanian members, one of whom is chairman having equal vote with the other members; but decisions are by majority vote. The Commission has the right to scrutinise all accounts and budgetary provisions, and to make such recommendations for economy as it thinks fit.

Defence.—Military service is compulsory between the ages of 19 and 50. Service with the colours is for 18 months. The strength of the army in 1931 was 771 officers and 12,699 other ranks, organized in 12 infantry battalions, 22 battalions of artillery, 9 engineer companies, and 1 section of armoured cars. The army estimates (September, 1933), amounted to 7,000,000 gold francs.

The nucleus of a navy has been formed by the purchase of two patrol vessels, and four motor boats for coastguard purposes.

Production and Industry.—The Albanian economic system is very primitive; each family provides for its own needs. Great tracts of the country remain uncultivated, and the areas at present under cultivation (about 928 square miles) are dealt with in a primitive way. A number of agrarian reforms were initiated in 1930, including the formation of an Agricultural Bank. The State owns some 125,000 acres of the best land in the plain between the rivers Shkumbi and Vjosa. The country for the greater part is rugged, wild, and mountainous, the exceptions being along the Adriatic littoral and the Korçë Basin, which are fertile. Tobacco, timber, wool, hides, furs, cheese and dairy products, fish, olive oil, corn, cattle and bitumen are the principal products of the country. Cattle-breeding receives special attention. The wool is made up into coarse and heavy native cloth and exported. There are vast tracts of forest land composed of oak, walnut and chestnut trees, as well as beeches, pines and fir. The mineral wealth of Albania is considerable but undeveloped. The copper mines in the Puka district are being exploited. The salt-pits at Vlonë (Valona) are said to be of commercial importance, and Selenizza Bitumen mines are also worked successfully. The principal industries in the country are those connected with agriculture, such as flour-milling, olive-pressing and cheese-making.

Commerce.—Imports and exports for 5 years are shown as follows (in gold francs):—

—	1928	1929	1930	1931	1932
Exports	14,694,203	14,682,608	12,352,063	7,509,000	4,500,360

The distribution of trade in 1932 was as follows (in gold francs):—Imports from Italy, 8,919,000; United Kingdom, 1,586,000; Czechoslovakia, 1,767,000; Yugoslavia, 2,063,000; Greece, 645,000; United States, 2,216,000. Exports to Italy, 2,822,000; to United States, 996,000; to United Kingdom, 7,000; to Greece, 589,000; to Yugoslavia, 55,000.

The principal imports in 1932 were: cotton and cotton textiles, 2,890,000 gold francs; cereals, 2,790,000 gold francs; metals, 493,000 gold francs; the principal exports: animal foods and fish, 2,295,000 gold francs; hides and skins, 380,000 gold francs.

Total trade between Albania and Great Britain (according to Board of Trade Returns) was as follows:—

—	1929	1930	1931	1932	1933
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports from Albania	278	2,544	469	953	87
Exports to Albania	32,486	22,531	29,775	33,685	44,798
Re-exports to Albania	167	150	298	384	275

Communications.—All the principal towns of Albania are connected by passable roads which compare very favourably with those in other Balkan countries. The mountain districts of the north are still, however, mostly inaccessible with wheeled vehicles, and communications are still by means of pack ponies or donkeys. The total length of roads suitable for motor traffic in the country at the end of 1933 was 1,118 miles. A railway to join Durrës with Tirana, 22 miles in length, is under construction. The ports are four in number, viz. Shengjin (San Giovanni di Medua), Durrës (Durazzo), Vlonë (Valona), and Sarandë (Santi Quaranta). Durrës is being fully equipped; but the others remain primitive. Number of post and telegraph offices, 55. There are seven regular air routes in service: Tirana-Rome, Tirana-Salonica, Tirana-Shkodër, Tirana-Korçë, Tirana-Vlonë, Tirana-Peshkepijë and Tirana-Kukës; and 3 wireless stations.

Banking and Currency.—On September 2, 1925, the National Bank of Albania was established in Rome, with branches in Tirana, Durrës, Korçë, Vlonë, Shkodër, Sarandë and Gjinskastër. It has a capital of 12,500,000 gold francs. Albanian participation was to have amounted to 5,625,000, but owing to the failure of Albanians to subscribe, almost the whole of the Albanian quota was eventually taken up by Italians. The remainder of the capital was subscribed by an international financial group headed by the Credito Italiano. The Bank has the exclusive right of issuing paper money and metal coinage. A new currency based on notes freely convertible into gold coin, gold exchange, or foreign bank notes convertible into gold has been established. The monetary unit chosen is the (Franka ari) gold franc (5 Lek) (.3225806 gr. 900 fine), with a parity of 25.2215 to the gold £.

The Bank has issued Bank notes of 100, 20, 5 gold francs and 5 Lek (1 gold franc); and metallic currency as follows:—gold, 100, 20 and 10 franc pieces; silver, 5, 2 and 1 franc pieces; nickel, 1, $\frac{1}{2}$ and $\frac{1}{4}$ Lek; and bronze, 0.10 and 0.05 Lek. On August 31, 1933, there were in circulation notes amounting to 12,760,000 francs and coin to the value of 2,165,000 francs, of which 1,281,000 francs were gold, and 884,000 francs nickel coins. Silver and bronze coins, and the 5 Lek (1 gold franc) note, are no longer in circulation. The cover for the note circulation on that date consisted of 21,152,000 francs, of which 7,227,000 francs were in gold, 6,453,000 francs in dollars and 7,470,000 francs in other currencies.

ARABIA.

ARABIA is essentially a desert country comprising an area of roughly 1,000,000 square miles and inhabited for the most part by nomadic Beduin tribes eking out a precarious pastoral existence by the breeding of camels, sheep and goats. Bounded on the north by Iraq and Transjordan (Palestine), it is enclosed on the other three sides by the sea—the Red Sea on the west, the Arabian Sea on the south and the Persian Gulf on the east. The land-surface of the peninsula enclosed within these limits slopes down steadily from the elevated mountain barrier, which runs down the whole length of its western side parallel with the Red Sea, to sea-level on the Persian Gulf, and the uniformity of this slope is only interrupted in the extreme south-eastern corner of the peninsula, where the mountains of the Oman district rear their crests to an elevation of 10,000 feet above sea-level. With the exception of this mountainous district and the similar district of the Yemen, Arabia is a barren country consisting of vast tracts of steppe-desert, sand-waste and mountainous wilderness. It is a country of insignificant rainfall (the Yemen and Oman excepted); here and there, scattered oases, or oasis-groups, are formed. The Taif district, for instance, in the Hejaz mountains above Mecca, the Qasim and Jebel Shammar provinces in Central Arabia and the Hasa province near the Persian Gulf are among the best examples of such districts, while Medina, Taima, Riyadh, Jauf and Wadi Dawasir are but a few among the many large oases which occur frequently throughout the country.

The population of Arabia cannot be estimated with any certainty, but would seem to be about 10 millions.

The inhabitants of Arabia are at present found in every degree of transition from the purely nomadic life of the Beduin to the simple civic life of towns in the interior like Anaiza or Buraida and the more highly developed civilization of Mecca, Medina and Jedda. Political changes have contributed to a development whereby the patriarchal, tribal organisation of the Beduin has weakened steadily before a natural tendency to communal organisation into States and principalities imposed on the people by the development of civic life. The introduction of modern fire-arms and the growth of an Arab nationalist spirit (directed against Turkish domination) in the borderlands of Syria and Iraq tended to encourage this process during the first decade of the present century, and the rise to power of Abdul Aziz ibn Sa'ud, the present Wahhabi King, gave it a further impetus. Ibn Sa'ud set to work to organise the unsettled Bedouin into civic communities under cover of a great Wahhabi revival, and in the spring of 1913 struck the first blow for the Arabs against the Turks by capturing the Hasa province from the latter. The Great War completed and stereotyped the process of political organisation in Arabia, and the ejection of the Turks from the Hejaz, Asir and the Yemen left the Arabs to work out their own salvation unchecked by foreign control. Internecine warfare not unnaturally followed, and the result of a six years' struggle was that a single power (the Ibn Sa'ud dynasty of Nejd) achieved a paramount position throughout the peninsula beyond the southern coastal fringe, where the States of Yemen and Oman are the most important of those which maintain an independent existence together with the lesser principalities of Kuwait and Bahrain, the crucial chiefs of the Oman coast, the Hadramaut and the Aden hinterland, all of which enjoy in a greater or less degree the protection of Great Britain. The principality of Asir (capital Sabya), reduced in extent to a mere strip of the coast, maintained a precarious independence between Ibn Sa'ud and the Imam of Yemen (capital Sana') until October, 1926, when it accepted the suzerainty of Ibn Sa'ud. In 1930 it was practically annexed to the Hejaz and it was formally incorporated completely in Ibn Sa'ud's dominions in 1933 as a result of an abortive rising under its titular ruler, the Idrisi, in October, 1932. The northern province of Aqaba-Maan was annexed by the British Government to the Trans-Jordan mandated area in July, 1925.

THE KINGDOM OF SAUDI ARABIA.

(MAMLAKAT 'ARABIYAT AS-SA'UDIYA.)

The Kingdom of Saudi Arabia (Mamlakat 'Arabiyyat as-Sa'udiyya) is now a single kingdom under the rule of Abdul-Aziz ibn Abdur-Rahman Al-Faisal Al Sa'ud, G.C.I.E., who had been proclaimed King of the Hejaz on January 8, 1926, and had in 1927 changed his title of Sultan of Nejd and its dependencies to that of King, thus becoming "King of the Hejaz and of Nejd and its Dependencies." The unification of his dominions under their joint name was effected by a decree of September 22, 1932. On May 20, 1927, a treaty was signed at Jedda between Great Britain and Ibn Sa'ud, by which the former recognized the complete independence of the dominions of the latter.

For a short account of the rise of the Wahhabis under Ibn Sa'ud, and of the latter's conquest of Hejaz, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1929, pp. 645-47.

Ibn Sa'ud has placed his State in a dominant position among the States of Arabia. The dual character of his realm is maintained provisionally, and there are still two capitals at Mecca and Riyadh. His administration as regards the kingdom of Nejd and its dependencies is simple and of a patriarchal character, without ministers of State or other imitations of Western Europe. The king's eldest son, the Amir Sa'ud, who was formally declared heir apparent on June 15, 1933, normally resides in Nejd and exercises there the functions of Viceroy. The administration of the kingdom of the Hejaz, however, as set forth in a 'Constitution' issued on August 29, 1926, is controlled by the King acting through a Viceroy resident in Mecca. This was modified by an order regulating the function of the Council of the Secretaries of State, which consists of four members, a vice-president and a president (H. R. H. The Viceroy). This order, issued in 1931, was further modified in January, 1932. There are four Ministries and three State Departments, two of which, namely the Ministry of Internal Affairs and the Department of Public Education, are responsible in the first place to the Viceroy. The Department of Foreign Affairs which is directly responsible to the King, was elevated into a Ministry in December, 1930, under the Amir Faisal, the King's second son, who is also the Viceroy of Mecca. The religious law of Islam is the common law of the land, and is administered by religious courts at the head of which is a Chief Judge who is responsible for the Department of Sharia (legal) Affairs. The Constitution also provides for the setting up of certain advisory Councils, comprising a consultative Legislative Assembly in Mecca, Municipal Councils in each of the towns of Medina and Jedda, and Village and Tribal Councils throughout the provinces. The members of these Councils consist of chief officials and of notables nominated or approved of by the King.

The Government has adhered to the seven International Postal Conventions, the Public Health Treaty of Rome of 1907, the International Treaty of Public Health of 1926, which is not yet ratified and the Treaty of Paris of 1928 for the Renunciation of War, and is in treaty relations with the British Empire, Iraq, Transjordan, Syria, Persia, Germany, Turkey, France, Italy, Afghanistan and Yemen.

The total population of Nejd is estimated at about 3,000,000. Towns with a population exceeding 10,000 inhabitants are: (1) Hufuf; (2) Mubarraz; (3) Riyadh; (4) Shaqra; (5) Anaiza; (6) Buraida; (7) Hail; (8) Jauf; (9) Sakaka; and (10) Hauta. Of these Hufuf and Riyadh have populations of about 30,000, but none of the others exceed 20,000.

The products of Nejd are dates, wheat, barley, fruit of various kinds, hides, wool, clarified butter (saman or ghi) and abas (Arab cloaks), besides camels, horses, donkeys and sheep. The export trade is still insignificant, though capable of considerable development, especially as regards dates, hides and clarified butter. The export of Arab horses to Bombay is not as active as it was in the past, but the annual export of camels to Syria and Egypt is a steady source of income to the Beduin. The chief imports of Nejd are piece-goods, tea, coffee, sugar and rice.

The frontiers of the Hejaz are not sufficiently definite to allow of anything like an accurate estimate of its area, which probably does not exceed 150,000 square miles. The population is probably about 1,500,000, of whom Mecca, the capital, accounts for some 130,000, Medina for 15,000 and Jedda for 30,000, while the great majority of the rest are Beduin. The chief port is Jedda, the seaport of Mecca; Yanbu, next in importance, occupies a similar position in relation to Medina; while ports of less importance are Aqaba (now annexed to Transjordan), Muwaila, Wajh, Rabigh, Lith and Qunfuda. Medina produces excellent dates in abundance; Taif and other oases in the mountains and valleys produce honey and a fair variety of fruit; while Beduin products are hides, wool and clarified butter. But the exports of the Hejaz are insignificant, and the country depends for existence almost entirely on the annual pilgrimage which brings large numbers of pilgrims from abroad each year.

For defence Ibn Sa'ud depends mainly on tribal levies, but the elements of a small regular army, not numbering more than about 1,000 men, have recently been brought together in the Hejaz.

There are no roads, properly so called, in the Hejaz. From Jedda to Mecca (45 miles), a track across the desert is in some parts metalled. There is also a track from Mecca eastward through Riyadh to Ukair on the Persian Gulf, a distance of 829 miles, which is used for motor transport. A similar route connects Jedda with Medina via Rabigh and Yanbu. Motor cars can now travel between Riyadh and Kuwait and between Riyadh and Hail, Jawf and the Northern Frontier Towns and also between Jedda and Duba and Mowailih and between Jedda and Jizan and Sabya.

That section of the Hejaz Railway which is in Wahhabi territory is not now in working order. Construction of the railway to connect Jedda and Mecca is to be begun in April, 1934. At present several lines of motor omnibuses ply between Jedda and Mecca.

The English gold sovereign is the basis of the currency. On January 22, 1928, a new silver currency, the Riyal, weighing 24.055 grammes, .830 fine, was introduced in place of the Turkish Mejidie currency. Ten Riyals = £1 (gold) at par, but the Riyal, in December, 1933, was quoted at 23 to the £ sterling. The Riyal is subdivided into 11 Qarsh (piastres) Miri, and each Q.M. contains 2 Qarsh Darij. The Q.D., $\frac{1}{2}$ and $\frac{1}{4}$ Q.D. are nickel coins. A branch of the Netherlands Trading Society of Amsterdam conducts banking business in Jedda.

Seven powers viz.: Great Britain, Soviet Russia, Italy, Iraq, Turkey, Persia and Holland maintain legations at Jedda, with Ministers in the first three cases and Chargés d'Affaires in the other four. France is represented by a Chargé d'Affaires but has not changed the status of her Consulate. Egypt maintains, unofficially, a consular representative. Germany and Afghanistan have discontinued consular representation. The Czechoslovak Consul at Jerusalem is also Consul for Sa'udi Arabia.

Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary.—Sir Andrew Ryan, K.B.E., C.M.G. (appointed January 31, 1930.)

Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary (in London).—Sheikh Hafiz Wahba. (November 10, 1930.)

Yemen.—The Yemen may be divided as follows: Aden; the Aden Protectorate; and the domains of Imam Yahya b. Muhammad b. Hamid ed Din.

The Zaidi Imam Yahya, whose capital is Sana' (Lat. 15° 20' N., Long. 44° 12' E.), has a domain of some 75,000 square miles with a population of two to three millions. His territories include the area to the north of the Anglo-

Turkish boundary drawn in 1902-4. In a northerly direction his influence extends to Nejran (Lat. $17^{\circ} 30' N.$, Long. $44^{\circ} 15' E.$) of the Yam, whose tenets are those of the sect of Ismailiya or Fatimiya, and their chief is the Da'i Ali Mohsin Al Shibami, of the house of the Makarima, whose descent is from Ismail b. Jafar Alsadiq, the offspring of Al Husein, the second son of the fourth Caliph Ali. The same tenets are professed by the inhabitants of Haraz near Menakha. To the north of Sana' are the Imamic large towns of Amran, Tawila, Al Khamr, Al Suda, Sada (Lat. $16^{\circ} 47' N.$, Long. $43^{\circ} 43' E.$), Quflat Al Udhr, and also the region of Al Jauf, Upper, Middle and Lower, with their capitals respectively at Al Matamma, Al Hazm, and Al Ghail, where live the 'Shawaf,' clansmen of the influential Bakil tribe, all of which tracts, watered by the River Kharid, own the Imam's suzerainty. To south of Al Jauf, and to east by north of Sana' at a distance of six days' journey, lies the district of Marib, or Saba, whose ruler pays homage to Imam Yahya. Other large towns in the Yemen are Taizz (alt. 4600 ft.), Ibb (6275 ft.), Yerin (8600 ft.), Dhamar (7650 ft.). The altitude of Sana' is 7260 ft. The highest mountain is Nabi Shuaib (11,000 ft.). Sumara, Kinan, Takar and many others are all over 9000 feet altitude.

The population of Sana', a walled city with eight gates, is between 20,000 and 25,000. The old-time granaries of the Upper Yemen still exist, and lie chiefly between the towns of Ibb and Al Jubla, and in the Wadi Sahul below Ibb and to its north, though indeed the agricultural products are widely distributed throughout the country and comprise barley, wheat, and millet, together with coffee—the finest berries coming from Menakha. Hides also are largely exported.

The Imam has twelve sons, the eldest of whom is the Emir el Hadi Mohamed Seif al Islam, who commands in the country to the north of Sana'.

The Hadramaut is a considerable tract of fertile valleys lying to the East of the Aden Protectorate. The greater part of it owes allegiance to the Qa'aiti dynasty, whose representative is the present Sultan of Makalla. A rival dynasty, the Kathiri, rules a number of towns and villages inland. The whole area is loosely under British protection and control.

Oman.—Muscat is the capital of the independent Sultanate of that name situated at the easterly corner of Arabia. Its seaboard is nearly 900 miles long and extends from Tibbat on the west side of Cape Mussandam round Ras Rajir, rather over 200 miles due north of the Island of Socotra, with the exception of a small strip of the east coast of the Mussandam peninsula from Dibbeh to Khor Kalba, which is in the administration of the minor chiefs of Trucial Oman. The Sultanate extends inland to the borders of the Great Desert, but of late years the Omanis have become virtually autonomous. The interior is for the most part mountainous, the high country extending down to the sea-coast in a series of arid rocky heights, though vegetation exists on the higher mountains. North-west of Muscat the sea-coast littoral tract is fertile and prosperous, and date groves extend along it for over 100 miles. This strip is known as the Batinah Coast. The remainder of the coast, with one notable exception, is barren and forbidding and rarely visited by Europeans. The exception is Dhofar, which is the name of a small fertile district, comprising a group of villages, at the south-west corner of the Sultanate. Gwadur, a port on the Mekran coast, and a small tract of country round it also own allegiance to Muscat. It is the last remnant of the Omani possessions on the Persian side of the Gulf.

The town of Muscat, once so important and prosperous, has been falling into decay for years now. Most of the trade goes to the sister port of Matrah, which is the starting point of the trade route to the interior, but Muscat still remains the capital and seat of government.

Area, 82,000 square miles; population, estimated at 500,000, chiefly Arabs, but there is a strong infusion of negro blood, especially along the coast. The towns of Muscat and Matrah hardly contain an Arab, being inhabited almost entirely by Baluchis and Negroes. The capital, Muscat, has a population of 4,300, and the adjacent town of Matrah 8,200.

The present Sultan is His Highness Saiyid Said bin Taimur (born August 13, 1910), who succeeded his father Saiyid Sir Taimur bin Feisal, K.C.I.E., C.S.I., as the 14th of his dynasty to be Imam or Sultan of Oman.

A sister of Saiyid Feisal bin Turki was married to the father of Saiyid Ali II, 9th Sultan of Zanzibar (1902-11), of the other branch of the dynasty which has been reigning there since the separation of the crowns on the death of Saiyid Said bin Sultan, Imam of Oman and 1st Sultan of Zanzibar, October 19th, 1856.

The revenue of the Sultan from all sources varies between six and seven lakhs of rupees yearly. The population is poor. In the valleys of the interior, date cultivation has reached a high level, and there are possibilities of agricultural development where the water supply more certain. Inland camels are bred in large numbers by the tribes.

Trade is mainly in the hands of British Indians, and imports and exports are mainly from and to India. The chief imports in 1932-33 were: rice, Rs. 11,26,291; coffee, Rs. 3,72,274; sugar, Rs. 1,29,320. Dates are the principal export, Rs. 8,28,650 in 1932-33. (Rs. 13-12-0 per £ average for 1932-33.) Pomegranates, fresh and dried limes, and dried fish are the only other exports of any note. There are no industries of any importance. Total imports for 1932-33 amounted to Rs. 34,71,618, and total exports to Rs. 20,27,334. Import duty is at present 5 per cent. ad valorem. There is no export duty, and imports for re-export by the importer within six months are not subject to any duty.

The only port of call for steamers is Muscat where, in 1932-33, 123 steamships of 454,936 tons and 131 sailing vessels of 17,167 tons entered and cleared. It is one of the ports on the subsidiary mail route between Bombay and Basra. The mail service is a weekly one in both directions. The Indian Government maintains a post office and the Imperial and International Communications, Ltd., a telegraph office at Muscat.

Inland transport is by pack animals. The motor road between Muscat and Matrah has been extended for about 30 miles beyond Matrah, thus facilitating communication by car with the Batinah Coast. There is a daily motor bus service between Muscat and Sibi.

The common medium of exchange is the Maria Theresa dollar (see p. 651). On the coast, but not in the interior, the rupee circulates. There is one Omani copper coin, which fluctuates in value. The muhammadi of 20 gaj (1 dollar = 11½ muhammadi) is only money of account. The weights in use are 1 Kiyas = the weight of 6 dollars or 5.9375 oz.; 24 Kiyas = 1 Maskat Maund; 10 Maunds = 1 Farāsala; 200 Maunds = 2 Bahār. Rice is sold by the bag; other cereals by the following measures:—40 Palis = 1 Farrah; 20 Farrahs = 1 Khandi.

Political Agent and H.B.M.'s Consul.—Major C. E. U. Bremner, M.C.

The State of Kuwait is situated on the north-western coast of the Persian Gulf. The reigning dynasty was founded by Subah abu Abdullah, who ruled from 1756 to 1762. The Sheikh is subsidised by the British Government, which maintains a Political Agent at his Court. The present Sheikh, Ahmed ibn Jabir al Subah (b. 1885), succeeded his uncle, the 9th Sheikh Salim ibn Mubarak, on February 23, 1921. Although His Highness has two sons by his first marriage—Abdullah (b. 1905) and Mohamed (b. 1909)—and one by his present consort, the daughter of the late Sheikh Salim ibn Mubarak Jabir (b. June 29, 1926)—the Heir Presumptive according to the Koweiti rule of succession is the Sheikh's uncle, Hamad ibn Mubarak (b. 1894), who has a son Mubarak.

Estimated population, 50,000, to which an indeterminate number of Bedouins must be added.

Indian rupees and annas are legal tender in Kuwait town, and the post office, which is administered by the Iraqi postal department, issues Indian stamps overprinted 'Kuwait.' Maria Theresa dollars are still used in the interior.

Political Agent.—Lieut.-Col. J. C. More, D.S.O.

The Trucial Sheikhs.—From Khor Khalba, on the Gulf of Oman, 90 miles south of Ras Musandam, for nearly 50 miles to Dibah, the coast of the Gulf of Oman is attributed to the Sheikhdom of Shargah, but is to some extent under the local control of various petty Sheikhs. The capital of the Sheikhdom is on the Persian Gulf side of the Musandam peninsula which runs up the Strait of Ormuz. The top of the Musandam peninsula, from Dibah on its east side to near Sha'am about 35 miles from Ras Musandam on its west side, forms part of the Sultanate of Muscat, and is peopled by the Shihuh tribe. From Sha'am for nearly 400 miles to Khor el Odeid at the south eastern end of the peninsula of Qatar the coast, formerly known as the Pirate Coast, of the Persian Gulf belongs to the Trucial Sheikhs who in 1820, after hostilities with the Honourable East India Company, signed a general treaty prescribing peace with the British Government, and perpetual abstention from plunder and piracy (specifically including the slave trade) by land and sea. This treaty was followed by further agreements providing for the suppression of the slave trade and for the search and, if necessary, seizure by British warships of any vessels belonging to the Trucial Sheikhdoms suspected of engaging in this trade, and by a series of other engagements of which the most important are the Perpetual Peace Treaty of May, 1853, and the Exclusive Agreement of March, 1892. Under the latter, the Sheikhs, on behalf of themselves, their heirs and successors, undertook that they would on no account enter into any agreement or correspondence with any power other than the British Government, receive foreign agents, or cede, sell or give for occupation any part of their territory save to the British Government. The area of these Sheikhdoms is not defined, but the total population of the six was estimated in 1916 at about 80,000, of whom some 8,000 were nomads. Relations with the Trucial Sheikhs are normally conducted through the British Residency Agent on the Trucial Coast, at present Khan Bahadur Isa bin Abdul Latif, O.B.E., under the control of the Political Resident in the Persian Gulf at Bushire, at present the Hon. Lieutenant-Colonel T. C. W. Fowle, C.B.E.

The six Trucial Sheikhs are :—

Shargah . . .	Muhammad Sultan bin Saqar.	Succeeded 1924.
Ras al Khaimah . .	Sultan bin Salim.	„ 1919.
Umm ul Qawain . .	Ahmad bin Rashid.	„ 1929.

Debai . . .	Said bin Maktum.	„ 1912.
Abu Dhabi . . .	Shakput bin Sultan.	„ 1923.

Qatar.—This Sheikhdom, which includes the whole of the Qatar peninsula, extends along the coast of the Persian Gulf from Khor el Odeid to the boundaries of Hasa. Its settled population was estimated in 1916 at about 25,000. The relations of the Sheikh of Qatar with the British Government are similar to those of the Trucial Sheikhs, and are regulated by a Treaty of November 3, 1916.

ARGENTINE REPUBLIC.

(REPÚBLICA ARGENTINA.)

Constitution and Government.

ARGENTINA was discovered in 1616 by Juan Díaz de Solís. In 1535 Don Pedro de Mendoza was sent out by the King of Spain, and in 1536 founded the town of Buenos Aires. On May 25, 1810, the population rose against the Spanish rule, and on July 9, 1816, Argentine independence was proclaimed. Between 1816 and 1852 was a period of anarchy, and in 1853 stable government was once more established.

The following is a list of Presidents from 1898 onwards:—

Gen. Don Julio Argentino Roca, Oct. 12, 1898—Oct. 12, 1904.	Dr. Don Hipólito Irigoyen, Oct. 12, 1916—Oct. 12, 1922.
Dr. Don Manuel Quintana, Oct. 12, 1904—Mar. 12, 1906. ¹	Dr. Don Marcelo Torcuato de Alvear, Oct. 12, 1922—Oct. 12, 1928.
Don José Figueroa Alcorta (Acting), Mar. 12, 1906—Oct. 12, 1910.	Dr. Don Hipólito Irigoyen, Oct. 12, 1928—Sep. 6, 1930. ²
Dr. Don Roque Sáenz Peña, Oct. 12, 1910—Aug. 9, 1914. ¹	Gen. Don José Félix Uriburu (Provisional), Sep. 6, 1930—Feb. 20, 1932.

² Deposed.

The Constitution of the Argentine Republic bears date May 25, 1853, with modifications in 1860, 1866 and 1898; extensive modifications were being discussed in 1934. The President is elected for six years by 376 electors appointed by the fourteen provinces and the capital, equal to double the number of senators and deputies combined. A Vice-President, elected at the same time, presides over the Senate, but has otherwise no political power. The President is commander-in-chief of the army and navy, and appoints to all civil, military, naval, and judicial offices, in certain cases with the approval of the Senate, and has the right of presentation to bishoprics; he is responsible with the Ministry for the acts of the executive; both President and Vice-President must be Roman Catholics, Argentine by birth, and cannot be re-elected, unless a period of six years intervenes. The President has a salary of 96,000 paper pesos (£8,800 at par), and 28,800 paper pesos for official expenses. The National Congress consists of a Senate and a House of Deputies. The Senate numbers 30, two from the capital and from each province, elected for nine years (one-third retiring every three years) by a special body of electors in the capital, and by the legislatures in the provinces. The Chamber of Deputies has 158 members elected by the people. The deputies are elected for four years, one-half retiring every two years. The two chambers meet annually from May 1 to September 30; the lower house receives the budget and initiates fiscal legislation.

President of the Republic.—General Agustín P. Justo. Elected November 8, 1931. Assumed office, February 20, 1932.

The Ministry, appointed by and acting under the orders of the President, consists of eight Secretaries of State—namely, of the Interior, Foreign Affairs, Finance, War, Justice and Public Instruction, Agriculture, Marine, and Public Works.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

The Constitution, with certain small exceptions, is identical with that of the United States. Such matters as affect the Republic as a whole are under the Central Government. The governors of the various provinces, elected by the people of each province for a term varying between three and four years, are invested with very extensive powers, and are independent of the central executive. The provinces elect their own legislatures, and have complete control over their own affairs. The territories are under the supervision of governors appointed by the President. In Buenos Aires the 'Intendente' or Mayor is appointed by the President with the approval of the Senate. He is assisted by a deliberative council of 80 elected by the male inhabitants over 18 years including foreigners who comply with certain conditions. Registered voters, June 30, 1933, numbered 2,570,103. Voting is compulsory under penalty of a fine. The deliberative council votes on measures relating to city finance, works, and general administration, and its decisions are carried out by the Mayor. Other municipalities have constitutions of a similar character.

Area and Population.

The Argentine Republic consists of fourteen provinces, ten territories and one federal district, containing the land area and population shown below :—

¹ The Capitals are given in brackets. Where no name appears in brackets, the capital bears the same name as the province or territory.

The population is overwhelmingly European in origin (principally from Italy and Spain) with practically no mixture with the aborigines.

The Ministry of War's estimate of the population for January 1, 1933, was 13,712,742, of whom 2,827,990 were foreigners.

The dwindling Indian population is estimated at from 20,000 to 30,000.

The movement of population for five years is given as follows (excluding territories):—

² Provisional.

Population of the capital, Buenos Aires, on December 31, 1932, was 2,214,702. Others, estimated, in 1931: Rosario (Santa Fe), 485,354; Córdoba, 253,182; La Plata, 182,401; Avellaneda, 214,512; Tucumán (1930), 123,572; Bahía Blanca, 102,430; Santa Fe, 125,295; Mendoza (1930), 76,780; Quilmes, 55,309; Paraná, 66,204; Salta (1925), 34,490; Lomas de Zamora, 80,300; Río Cuarto, 89,600; Corrientes, 53,209; Concordia, 31,011; Mar del Plata, 50,084; Santiago del Estero (1924), 29,138; Chivilcoy, 52,487; and Candil, 52,647.

Religion and Education.

There is no State religion, though the Roman Catholic religion is supported by the State; all other creeds are tolerated and freedom of conscience prevails. There are 1 archbishop (Buenos Aires) and 10 suffragan bishops. For the clergy there are 8 seminaries. In 1888 civil marriage was established in the Republic.

Illiteracy among the voters has fallen from 35 per cent. in 1916 to 21·98 per cent. in 1930; in the Federal capital, to 2·6 per cent. Primary education is free (subsidised by the General and Provincial Governments), secular and compulsory for children from 6 to 14 years of age. In 1931 the primary schools numbered 11,552 with 54,685 teachers and an enrolment of 1,441,348; there were also 232 secondary, normal and special schools with 89,595 pupils under the Ministry of Public Instruction, and 241 provincial secondary schools with 13,709 pupils. National schools throughout the Republic in 1931 numbered 4,786, with 23,330 teachers and 638,306 students. Private schools numbered 1,360, with 169,598 pupils. There are national universities at Córdoba (founded 1613), with 2,742 students; Buenos Aires (1821), with 11,242 students; La Plata (1897), with 1,880 students; Tucumán (1912), with 600 students; the National University of the Litoral, in Santa Fe, with branches in Rosario (1920), and in Corrientes (1922), with 3,533 students. In 1931, 20,175,312 paper pesos were spent on university education, and a total of 209,906,903 paper pesos on all forms of educational activity. The National Library (1932) held 276,477 volumes and 1,495 periodicals.

Justice.

Justice is administered by Federal and by Provincial Courts. The former deal only with cases of a national character, or in which different provinces or inhabitants of different provinces are parties. The Federal Courts are the Supreme Courts, with 5 judges at Buenos Aires; 5 Appeal Courts, one with 5 judges at Buenos Aires, and with 3 each at La Plata, Paraná, Córdoba, and Rosario (Santa Fe), and courts of first instance in each of the provinces and territories. Each province has its own judicial system, with a Supreme Court (generally so designated) and several minor courts. Trial by jury is established by the Constitution for criminal cases, but never practised, except in the province of Buenos Aires.

Finance.

Total ordinary and extraordinary receipts and expenditures for recent years have been as follows, in paper pesos (£1 sterling at par = 11.45 paper pesos).

Of the 1934 estimated revenue, customs are expected to furnish 264,000,000 paper pesos; inland revenue, 119,300,000 pesos; land taxes, 63,822,000 pesos, income tax, 60,000,000 pesos, and bond issues, 99,498,929 pesos; of expenditures, 431,654,000 pesos will be for general administration (including 118,453,049 pesos for justice and public instruction), and 237,472,000 pesos for public debt.

On June 30, 1933, according to the Corporation of Bondholders, the national debt amounted to 3,797,814,000 paper pesos and the debt of the Provinces to 1,219,101,725 paper pesos, and the Municipalities to 480,187,776 paper pesos; grand total, 5,497,103,501 paper pesos. National floating debt December 31, 1932, 901,300,000 paper pesos. National Mortgage bonds outstanding June 30, 1933, totalled 1,372,199,675 paper pesos out of a total of 2,000,000,000 authorized.

Defence.

ARMY.

The army of the Argentine Republic is a National Militia, service in which is compulsory for all citizens from their 20th to their 45th year. Naturalised citizens are exempt for a period of 10 years. For the first 10 years the men belong to the 'active' army, or first line (Permanent Forces).

After completing 10 years in the first line, the men pass to the National Guard and serve in it for another 10 years, finishing their service with 5 years in the Territorial Guard; the latter is only mobilised in case of war. The period of continuous service, or training in the ranks with the Permanent Forces, is for 1 year. The reservists can be called out for training periodically.

The territory of the Republic is divided into 5 military districts for administrative purposes. The strength of the army in 1932 was 2,558 officers and 34,362 other ranks. The army is organised in 5 divisions, 3 cavalry brigades and 2 mountain detachments.

There is a trained reserve numbering 300,000 men, of whom 150,000 men are of the first line, and 150,000 of the special reserve. The territorial reserve numbers 100,000 men.

The weapon of the Argentine infantry is at present the Mauser magazine rifle. The cavalry have a carbine of the same pattern. The artillery are armed with a Krupp 7.5 cm. Q.F. gun.

The estimated military budget for the year 1932 was 73,160,954 paper pesos.

There is a Military Aviation Training School at El Palomar. In 1929 the air force was organised in 3 aviation groups, each comprising 1 bombing flight and 1 observation flight; one group has in addition 1 fighting flight; each group has a photographic and a training centre. In 1932 Argentina had 86 aeroplanes.

There are also 5 modern flotilla leaders, 4 destroyers, 3 submarines, and some training and miscellaneous craft.

In 1924-25, the battleships Moreno and Rivadavia and 4 destroyers were refitted at a cost of 9,500,000 gold pesos, the boilers of all six vessels being adapted to burn oil. The coast defence ironclads Independencia and Libertad and 3 cruisers of the San Martín type have since been converted to oil burning and otherwise modernized. A new naval programme, to involve the expenditure of 75,000,000 gold pesos, spread over a period of ten years, was approved in 1926. It provides for extension of the present dockyard accommodation in the River Plate and at Puerto Belgrano, and the construction of a new yard at Mar del Plata. New construction covered by this legislation includes the cruisers Almirante Brown and 25 de Mayo, and 3 submarines, built in Italy, as well as the 5 flotilla leaders mentioned above, three of which were built in England. Two British-built surveying vessels were delivered in 1928. Further orders are to be placed when funds become available.

The active personnel of the navy comprises 337 officers, 130 engineers, 27 electrical engineers, and about 11,000 men (including about 5,000 conscripts), who have to serve two years. There is a corps of coast artillery of 450 men, a naval school, a school of mechanics, a school for artillery, and a school for torpedo practice. The training of officers and men has recently been placed on a much higher scientific level.

Production and Industry.

Argentina has an area of about 689,436,900 acres, of which about 197,688,000 acres may be used for agriculture, 269,349,900 acres for cattle raising, 123,555,000 acres are woodland, and the remainder, 98,844,000 acres, are mountain, lake, river, or arid regions. Of the cultivable portion, about 10,000,000 acres require irrigation. In the territories the Federal Government has wide tracts of land amounting to 237,768,000 acres suitable in general for pastoral colonisation, and these lands are conditionally offered free, or for sale or on lease.

The area and produce of principal crops are shown as follows for recent years:—

Alfalfa, on about 14 million acres, for feeding livestock, is Argentina's most successful crop. Cotton, potatoes, sugar, vine, tobacco, and yerba maté (Paraguayan tea) are also cultivated. About 352,342 acres, chiefly in Tucumán, Jujuy, and Salta produced in 1933, 312,824 tons of sugar. Potato crop for 1932 was 920,150 metric tons, of which 37,925 tons were exported. The total vine area is about 323,800 acres, chiefly in Mendoza and San Juan; production of wine, in 1932, 55,512,383 gallons; in 1933, 147,400,000 gallons. The area under tobacco, 1932, 26,664 acres; output, 13,433,757 kilos; Yerba maté, 92,580 acres, producing 38,506 tons. Production of raw cotton from 326,782 acres in 1931-32, 125,000 tons; of ginned cotton, 36,685 tons (equal to 164,152 bales); of cotton seed, 84,333 tons; exports of cotton, 1932, 23,272 tons. Crashings of vegetable oils, principally from peanuts, totalled 37,056,428 kilos in 1932. About 75,000,000 dollars (U.S.) has been invested in 23 mills extracting the tannin content of quebracho logs. Export of quebracho-extract in 1932 totalled 188,059 tons; export of logs for treatment abroad, 51,329 metric tons.

In the provinces of Buenos Aires, Santa Fé, and Entre Rios 463,000 acres of agricultural lands have been acquired by the Jewish Colonisation Association; 158,000 acres are under cultivation. In 1931 there were 156 rural co-operative societies in Argentina.

The live-stock census (July 1, 1930) showed cattle, 32,211,855; horses, 9,858,111; sheep, 44,413,221; goats, 5,647,396; pigs, 3,768,738. The Province of Buenos Aires contains one-third of the sheep within the Republic. Argentine wool exports in 1933 were 144,000 tons, compared with 131,488 tons the previous year. Exports of butter, 1933, 13,907 metric tons; in 1932, 25,363 tons; of casein (nearly 75 per cent. of the world's output), 17,680 tons (1932); cheese, 667 tons (1932).

The principal industry is meat refrigeration. In 1932, 370,634 metric tons of chilled, 36,660 metric tons of frozen beef, 44,175 tons of tinned meat, and 70,631 metric tons of mutton were exported. Meat exports, 1932, to Great Britain were valued at 78,588,295 gold pesos compared with 1,917,786 gold pesos to France, the next largest consumer. The largest refrigerating plant in the world, with a daily capacity of 5,000 cattle and 10,000 sheep, is at Buenos Aires. Cattle killed in Argentina in 1933, 3,272,179 head; sheep, 5,193,640; hogs, 1,047,405. Exports in 1932 of hides, 110,755 tons. Flour milling ranks second to refrigeration. In 1932 179 mills ground 1,835,063 tons of wheat, producing 1,294,915 tons of flour and 520,239 tons of by-products. Exports of flour, 1932, 57,949 tons. Near Bahia Blanca is being constructed the largest grain elevator in the southern hemisphere, with capacity of 81,000 tons. In 1933 there were 26 woollen mills; 6 cotton-spinning mills; 20 cotton textile mills with 3,000 looms; 200 hosiery and knitted wear makers; and 30 silk manufactories. Mining is of no great importance. Gold, silver, and copper are worked in Catamarca, where there are also two valuable tin mines, and gold and copper in San Juan, La Rioja and the south-western territories. Coal is found in the Andine Provinces, in the Cordillera region of Patagonia and in Northern Patagonia. Tungsten is also an important mineral, others being borate, salt, and limestone. During 1932 the crude-oil production in the State-owned oil-fields in Argentina amounted to 5,575,146 barrels; from private oil-fields, 7,428,545 barrels. In addition, she imported 1,570,387 barrels of petroleum and 5,195,337 barrels of fuel oil and other products.

Commerce.

Agriculture accounts for from 50 to 65 per cent. of total exports. Real values of foreign trade in gold pesos, exclusive of coin and bullion (1 gold peso = 4 shillings at par or 96 cents, U.S.):—

Shipping and Navigation.

The total shipping in the foreign trade entering Argentine ports in the twelve months to June 30, 1932, was 12,069,000 tons; cleared, 17,364,000 tons. The total gross tonnage of the mercantile marine (June 30, 1933) was 342,477 (including 243 steamers of 267,908 tons).

Internal Communications.

The first railway concession dates from 1854. Railways open, December 31, 1932, 24,858 miles, of which 5,574 miles belong to the State, and 19,284 miles to private companies. Operating receipts in 1930 of both the State and private railways were 242,361,000 gold pesos as against 287,527,550 gold pesos in 1929. Passenger traffic in 1930 was 170,073,000; freight traffic, 41,630,000 tons. Length of good motor roads in 1932, 6,733 miles; of unsurfaced roads, 133,861 miles. In January, 1932, there were 257,399 passenger motor-cars, 3,700 motor buses and 69,924 commercial vehicles.

Aviation, under the auspices, chiefly, of foreign companies, has developed rapidly in the Republic. Aerial routes for mail and passengers have been organised from Buenos Aires to numerous points within the Republic and abroad, and from Bahia Blanca to the South coast.

National post office in 1929, handled, it is estimated, 2,300,000,000 pieces of mail and 8,279,920 telegrams. National telegraph lines, 75,413 miles in 1931. Number of telephone exchanges in Argentina in 1931, 537, with 250,286 subscribers. Telephone service is operated mainly by the United River Plate Telephone Company, and by the Compania Telefonica Argentina in Buenos Aires, both connecting with Chile and Uruguay; they have been absorbed by the International Telephone and Telegraph Company. There are 19 broadcasting stations. Wireless telephony between Buenos Aires, Chile, the United States and Europe is in general use; there are 2 wireless telegraph companies.

International cable service to other Latin American countries and the United States is provided by All America Cables.

Banking and Credit.

According to the First Banking Census taken by the National Bureau of Statistics, on December 31, 1925, there were 112 banks in Argentina with 1,033,946,000 paper pesos of capital and reserves; 91 (1 State Bank—Banco de la Nacion—77 other Argentine banks, and 13 foreign banks) were ordinary Discount and Deposit Banks with capital and reserves amounting to 710,228,000 paper pesos, 15 were Mortgage Banks with 310,264,000 paper pesos of capital and reserves and 6 were Pignorative Banks whose capital and reserves amounted to 13,454,000 paper pesos.

The Banco de la Nacion (founded in 1905) reported September 30, 1933, capital of 164,303,096 paper pesos; reserves of 30,538,769 gold pesos (apart from the three special Conversion Funds totalling 32,607,918 gold pesos); cash, 971,907 gold pesos, and 258,732,015 paper pesos; deposits, 1,540,572,780 paper pesos, and 88,049 gold pesos. It has 237 branches.

Although it is the State Bank, it is not a Central Bank in the ordinary sense; its volume of commercial banking is nearly as great as that of all the other banks combined.

On April 5, 1915, a national postal savings bank (Caja Nacional de Ahorro Postal) was incorporated. On December 31, 1931, 5,055 branches had 1,487,869 depositors with total deposits amounting to 96,793,297 paper pesos; 3,566 of the branches were in schools. The bank is also patronized largely by married women, who are given, by the law, exclusive control of their accounts.

On December 31, 1933, total stock of gold was 246,842,667 gold pesos; total circulation, 1,213,920,220 paper pesos. In October, 1931, control of purchases and sales of foreign exchange was placed in hands of the Exchange Control Committee. By rigid control of the country's purchases of foreign exchange, the New York value was pegged in 1932 at 25·81 cents; in 1933 it ranged between 25·75 cents and 43 cents. London value, 1932, was between 44½*d.* and 34½*d.*; in 1933, between 45½*d.* and 35½*d.* On January 19, 1934, the paper peso was 'pegged' to sterling at 15 paper pesos per £. The Conversion Office is permitted to issue notes to the Banco de la Nación, re-discounting prime commercial bills, providing that such notes do not reduce the gold cover below 40 per cent.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The monetary system of the Republic is nominally on a gold exchange standard, the unit for foreign transactions being the peso oro (gold peso) and for domestic transactions, the peso moneda nacional (paper peso). But the Niemeyer report of April 3, 1933, urged the abandonment of this dual system and during the year the Government discontinued the use of the gold peso in foreign exchange and customs.

The gold peso weighs 1·6129 grammes of gold $\frac{9}{10}$ fine; it is divided into 100 centavos. The par value 47·62*d.*; one pound sterling (at par) = 5·04 gold pesos. Figures in gold pesos are followed by the abbreviation o/s (oro sellado, minted gold). The monetary law of November 5, 1881, authorizes the coinage of five and two-and-a-half gold peso pieces. The 5-peso gold piece (the Argentino) weighs 8·0645 grammes, .900 fine, and therefore contains 7·25805 grammes of fine gold. But gold is not widely in circulation.

The paper peso is equal to .44 gold peso, which makes it worth 1*s.* 8½*d.* (11·45 to the £). To convert paper pesos into gold pesos, multiply by .44. To convert gold pesos into paper pesos, multiply by 2·2727. Figures in paper pesos are usually followed by the abbreviation m/n (moneda nacional, national money). The bulk of the currency in circulation consists of paper notes ranging from 1,000 pesos down to 50 centavos. Five, ten and twenty-centavo pieces of nickel are coined to meet the demand for small currency.

Since January 1, 1887, the use of the metric system is compulsory.

AUSTRIA.

(DIE REPUBLIK ÖSTERREICH.)

Constitution and Government.

THE Republic of Austria was proclaimed on November 12, 1918. The Government was taken in hand by a National Assembly which appointed a temporary cabinet and proceeded to pass laws. On February 16, 1919, the National Constitutional Assembly, consisting of only one Chamber, was duly elected on the basis of universal and proportional suffrage; every Austrian subject, male and female, has a vote if 21 years of age, and is eligible for election if 29 years of age. At the elections held on November 9, 1930, the following parties were returned:—Christian Social, 66; Social Democrats, 72; Economic Bloc, 19; Home Bloc, 8; total, 165.

The Constitution, which was adopted December 7, 1929, provides for a President, elected by all citizens of 21 years of age (who may also depose him); his term is for 4 years, and he appoints the ministry and has power to dissolve Parliament; for an Assembly (Nationalrat), elected by popular vote for 4 years; and for a First Chamber (Bundesrat), chosen by the Provincial Diets in proportion to their population (at present the members number 46). The powers of the Bundesrat are advisory. Austria is declared to be a Federal Republic composed of eight provinces and the city of Vienna. All special privileges are abolished, and equal rights granted to all citizens.

President of the Republic.—Dr. Wilhelm Miklas. Born October 15, 1872. Elected December 5, 1928. Re-elected October 9, 1931.

The Ministry, constituted on September 21, 1933, is as follows:—

Federal Chancellor, Minister of Foreign Affairs and Minister of Agriculture and Forestry.—Dr. Engelbert Dollfuss (Christian Social).

Vice-Chancellor.—Emil Fey (Home Bloc).

Minister of Finance.—Dr. Karl Buresch (Christian Social).

Minister of Commerce and Communications.—Fritz Stockinger.

Minister of Education and Minister of Justice.—Dr. Kurt Schuschnigg.

Minister of Social Administration.—E. Neustädler-Stürmer.

Minister of Defence.—Lieut.-General Count Schönburg (March 12, 1934).

Ministers without Portfolio.—Dr. Otto Ender (Christian Social), Richard Schmitz (Christian Social), and Dr. Robert Kerber.

The national flag consists of three horizontal stripes, the top and bottom being red and the centre white.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

The Republic of Austria comprises 9 provinces, viz., the City of Vienna, Lower Austria, Upper Austria, Salzburg, Styria, Carinthia, Tyrol, Vorarlberg, and Burgenland. There was in every province a Provincial Assembly (Landtag), consisting likewise of one chamber which used to be elected on the basis of the same suffrage as the National Assembly. But in March 1934 these Assemblies were dissolved in preparation for the establishment of the authoritarian state. At the head of the Provincial Assembly was the Provincial Committee (Landesausschuss) elected by the Provincial Assembly.

Every commune has a council to deliberate and decide its affairs. The members are mostly elected for 5 years. The council elects from its midst the head of the commune (burgomaster) and a committee for the administration of the affairs and execution of its resolutions. All who are 21 years of age have a vote, while for the passive suffrage the attained age of 24–30 years is required.

Area and Population.

For the boundaries of Austria according to the Treaty of St. Germain, signed on September 10, 1919, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1920, pp. 674–5.

The area and population of Austria (census taken on March 7, 1923) are shown as follows:—

Provinces	Area, English square miles	Population (Census 1923)			Percentage of Population 1923	Population per square mile 1923
		Males	Females	Total
Vienna . . .	107	860,119	1,005,661	1,865,780	28.55	17,437
Burgenland . .	1,532	141,144	144,465	285,609	4.37	186
Lower Austria .	7,452	725,884	754,565	1,480,449	22.65	199
Upper Austria .	4,626	425,917	450,157	876,074	18.41	189
Salzburg . . .	2,762	108,847	114,176	223,023	3.41	81
Styria	6,323	483,291	495,554	978,845	14.98	155
Carinthia . . .	3,680	179,911	190,906	370,817	5.67	101
Tyrol	4,882	154,028	159,857	313,885	4.82	64
Vorarlberg . . .	1,005	68,263	71,736	139,999	2.14	139
Total	32,369	3,147,404	3,387,077	6,534,481	100.00	202

Compared with the total population in 1920, the total for 1923 shows an increase of 108,187, or 1·68 per cent., excluding Burgenland of 117,427, or 1·92 per cent. The male population (excluding Burgenland) has increased by 70,530 or 2·40 per cent. as compared with 1920. Estimated population December 31, 1932, 6,739,524.

Movement of population (including Burgenland) in 1932:—Marriages, 45,358 (6·7 per mille); living births, 102,178 (15·2 per mille); deaths, 93,599 (13·9 per mille); divorces, 6,318 (0·94 per mille). Emigrants, 1932, 2,129; 1931, 2,585. Of the emigrants in 1932, 185 went to United States, 28 to Canada, 98 to Brazil, 174 to Argentina, 219 to other American countries, and 3 to Australia.

PRINCIPAL TOWNS.

The estimated population of Vienna on December 31, 1930, was 1,865,780. The population of the other principal towns on March 7, 1923, was as follows:—Graz, 152,706; Linz, 102,081; Innsbruck, 56,401; Salzburg, 37,856; Wiener Neustadt, 36,956; St. Pölten, 31,576; Klagenfurt, 27,423; Baden, 22,217; Steyr, 22,111; Villach, 22,099; Mödling, 18,677; Wels, 16,412.

Religion.

Religious liberty is one of the fundamental laws of the Republic, and the principle is embodied in the Treaty of St. Germain (article 63). In 1910 there were (including Burgenland), 6,225,843 Catholics (93·68 per cent.), 206,505 Protestants (3·11 per cent.), 194,584 Jews (2·93 per cent.), and 19,052 'others' (0·28 per cent.). The Catholic Church has 2 archbishoprics and 4 bishoprics.

Education.

The educational organisation of Austria comprises: (1) elementary schools; (2) middle schools; (3) schools for special subjects; and (4) universities.

Attendance is compulsory at the elementary schools from 6 to 14 in Austria generally, but there are far-reaching facilities for exemption for pupils of 12 years and upwards. The cost of elementary education is borne in the first instance by the communes and provinces. In 1932-33 there were in the Republic 5,337 public and private elementary schools, with 29,264 teachers and 874,832 pupils.

Secondary education is provided in the Gymnasias, Real-Gymnasias, Real-Schools and High Schools for women. These institutions are maintained by the State, the provinces, the towns, or private individuals. Of all kinds of secondary schools there were (1931-32) 163 with 59,374 pupils, and 4,644 teachers.

There are also 8 Commercial Academies with 220 teachers and 3,994 pupils.

Austria has three universities maintained by the State, viz., Vienna (in 1931-32, 928 teachers and 12,365 students), Graz (317 teachers and 2,573 students), and Innsbruck (263 teachers and 2,725 students); and there are also two technical high schools at Vienna (382 teachers and 3,805 students) and Graz (144 teachers and 819 students); technical high schools and high schools for other special subjects, and a theological high school (Fakultät) at Salzburg for Roman Catholics (number of teachers, 1931-32, 17; students, 192). There are also 13 other theological colleges, of which 11 are Roman Catholic, 1 Armenian Catholic, and 1 Jewish. In 1932 there were also 36 training colleges for teachers, with 694 lecturers and 5,348 students.

Justice and Crime.

The Supreme Court of Justice (Oberster Gerichtshof) in Vienna is the highest court in the land. Besides there are 3 higher provincial courts (Oberlandesgerichte), 20 provincial and district courts (Landes- und Kreisgerichte), and, in connection with these, the jury courts (Geschworenengerichte) and the Schöffengerichte, which are courts composed of professional and non-professional judges. In Vienna is a court for young criminals. There are likewise 243 county courts (Bezirksgerichte), and 1 special court for commercial affairs, 1 constitutional court, 1 administrative court, 1 electoral court, and 11 for industry.

In 1931, 116,039 persons were tried for criminal offences (118,689 in 1930).

Pauperism.

Poor relief in Austria is based on regulations dating back to December 3, 1863, according to which the poor, if they cannot obtain assistance from any other source, may claim relief from their native parish. Relief consists of the means of subsistence, medical aid and nursing service during sickness. In every municipality there is a fund for poor relief, derived from endowments, voluntary contributions and certain legal sources, such as fines, contributions from intestate estates of secular priests, etc. If these amounts do not suffice, the municipality must provide for the balance in its budget.

The law for unemployment insurance bears date March 24, 1920. The means for unemployment relief are contributed as to one-half by the employers, and as to the other half by the workers.

Finance.

The budgets for five years provided revenue and expenditure as follows, in thousands of schillings:—

	1930 ¹	1931 ¹	1932 ¹	1933 ²	1934 ^{2,3}
Expenditure . . .	2,214,967	2,425,408	1,966,682	1,808,545	1,296,320

¹ Estimated budget as passed by the Legislative Assembly.

² Estimates.

The following are some of the details of the supplying budget for 1933 in thousands of schillings:—

Revenue	Thousands of Schillings	Expenditure	Thousands of Schillings
Direct Tax Revenue . . .	281,000	Interest on Debt . . .	233,264
Turnover Tax . . .	263,500	Subventions to Provinces and Municipalities . . .	4,448
Customs . . .	200,000	Pensions . . .	211,700

Telegraphs, Telephones and Post Office (surplus) . . .	257	Justice . . .	50,312
Excise . . .	160,658	Railways (deficit) . . .	100,695
		Army . . .	82,600

Principal revenues, 1934 budget:—Taxes 847 million schillings; tobacco monopoly, 204 million (surplus). Principal items of expenditure:—Social welfare, 195 million; debt service, 240 million; pensions, 210 million.

The public debt of the Republic of Austria was composed as follows on December 31, 1932 (in schillings):—

Pre-War Debt	266,772,590
War Debt	100,781
Debts incurred by the Republic	2,712,247,464
Total	2,979,120,835

1. ARMY.

By the terms of the Treaty of St. Germain, universal compulsory military service is abolished in Austria, and the total number of military forces in the Austrian Army is limited to 30,000 men, including officers and depôt troops. The effective strength on October 31, 1933, was 1,374 officers, 1,356 non-commissioned officers, and 18,996 men.

Austria is permitted at her own discretion to organise this number of troops either in divisions or in mixed brigades.

The latter organisation has been chosen, and the army has been organised in 6 mixed brigades and 1 independent artillery regiment.

The maximum authorised armaments and stocks of munitions are per 1,000 men:—

Rifles or carbines	1,150	500	rounds of ammunition per arm.
Machine guns	15	10,000	„ „ „ „
Trench mortars, light }	2	{	1,000	„ „ „ „
„ „ medium }		{	500	„ „ „ „
Guns }		{
Howitzers } mountain }	3	1,000	„ „ „ „

All officers must be regulars. Officers now serving retained in the army must serve to the age of 40. Officers newly appointed must serve on the active list for 20 consecutive years.

The period of enlistment for non-commissioned officers and privates must be for a total period of not less than 12 consecutive years, including at least six years with the colours. The proportion of officers and men discharged for any reason before the expiration of their term of enlistment must not exceed one-twentieth of the total strength. All measures of mobilisation are forbidden.

The number of gendarmes, customs officers, foresters, and members of police forces must not exceed the number employed in a similar capacity in 1913. Educational establishments and all sporting and other clubs are forbidden to occupy themselves with any military matters. Within two months of the final ratification of the Treaty the air forces of Austria were demobilised. The armed forces of Austria therefore do not include any military or naval air forces. The manufacture, importation, and exportation of aircraft, and parts of aircraft, are forbidden.

The military budget for 1933 amounted to 80,000,000 schillings.

2. NAVY.

Austria now has no war fleet.

Production and Industry.

Agriculture forms the main occupation of the country. In 1932 the total acreage sown amounted to 4,816,427 acres. Of the total in 1932, 2,112,739 acres were in Lower Austria, and 1,004,453 acres in Upper Austria.

The size of farms in Austria is as follows: under 0·5 hectare (1·2 acre), 2·91 per cent.; from 0·5 to 5 hectares (1·2 to 12·3 acres), 9·13 per cent.; from 5 to 20 hectares (12·3 to 49·4 acres), 30·68 per cent.; from 20 to 50 hectares (49·4 to 123·5 acres), 17·98 per cent.; from 50 to 200 hectares (123·5 to 494 acres), 15·92 per cent.; over 200 hectares, 23·38 per cent.

The chief products are shown as follows for two years:—

Crop	1931		1932
	Acreage	Yield (metric tons)	Acreage	Yield (metric tons)
Wheat . . .	517,500	299,617	584,521	881,848
Rye . . .	934,088	480,872	956,625	615,407
Barley . . .	415,938	216,593	422,697	274,097
Oats . . .	777,458	332,055	758,964	369,818

Sugar beet .	105,500	977,603	105,499	1,020,374

Production of raw sugar in 1930-31 was 150,252 metric tons; in 1931-32, 162,559 metric tons; in 1932-33, 164,898 metric tons.

The foodstuffs produced do not suffice for the population. Forests abound and timber forms an appreciable asset of Austria. The number of farm animals on June 14, 1930, was: horses, 247,727; cows, 1,207,137; oxen, 259,847; bulls, 78,764; and calves, 767,101.

In 1932 the production of lignite was 3,104,045 metric tons (2,982,076 metric tons in 1931), and of anthracite, 221,314 metric tons (228,144 metric tons in 1931). There were 4 anthracite mines worked in 1932, and 41 lignite mines. The output of iron ore was 306,796 tons in 1932 (511,945 tons in 1931); lead and zinc ores, 56,226 tons (27,533 tons); copper ore, 9,044 tons (65,960 tons); lead, 1,986 tons (6,117 tons); copper, 1,987 tons (3,235 tons); crude graphite, 10,598 tons (12,060 tons); and salt, 78,257 tons.

The output of pig iron in 1932 was 94,466 tons as against 145,037 tons in 1931; the output of raw steel was 204,514 tons in 1932 and 322,689 tons in 1931.

According to the industrial census of June 14, 1930, there were in Austria 367,652 industrial establishments employing 1,438,967 people. Of the total the clothing industry was the most important, with 64,271 establishments and 153,436 employees. The 9 factories of the Austrian tobacco monopoly in 1932 made 150,583,000 cigars, 5,650,965,000 cigarettes, and 38,166 metric quintals of smoking tobacco.

Commerce.

Imports and exports for 5 years (in 1,000 schillings) were as follows:—

	1929	1930	1931	1932	1933
Imports . . .	3,317,700	2,738,929	2,209,983	1,402,639	1,145,000
Exports . . .	2,219,600	1,879,614	1,326,753	783,810	773,000

The following table shows the values of the chief trading groups during 1931 and 1932 in thousands of schillings:—

Group	Imports		Exports
	1931	1932	1931	1932
Livestock	167,965	122,270	17,731	8,537
Foodstuffs	510,235	351,331	37,685	30,818
Mineral Fuel	176,599	140,210	2,718	719

Gold and silver	48,610	16,089	35,691	22,200

The trade in 1933 was distributed among principal countries as follows:

Country	Imports	Exports	Country	Imports	Exports
	1000 Schillings	1000 Schillings		1000 Schillings	1000 Schillings
Czechoslovakia	156,006	60,400	Yugoslavia	105,500	56,400
Germany	214,900	117,100	Hungary	185,000	76,900
Poland	73,100	29,000	Great Britain	38,300	55,600

Italy	50,400	86,900	Rumania	53,300	45,500

The total trade between England and Austria (Board of Trade returns) for five years were as follows:—

	1929	1930	1931	1932	1933
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports from Austria to U.K. . .	2,781,841	3,389,520	2,729,792	1,091,147	1,266,204
Exports to Austria from U.K. . .	2,520,682	2,089,555	1,317,918	944,574	877,960
Re-exports to Austria from U.K. .	469,174	455,516	412,731	226,958	223,875

Internal Communications.

Austria had in 1932, 4,175 miles of railway lines, of which 2,347 miles were operated by the State, 981 miles were private railways operated by the State on its own account; 286 miles, private railways operated by the State on account of their owners, and 541 miles were private railways operated by private interests. There were also 287 miles of tramways, etc., privately owned. At the end of 1932, 511 miles of the State railways had been electrified. The amount of freight carried by the Federal Railways in 1932, was 19,208,819 metric tons, the number of passengers, 70,479,688. Gross earnings in 1931 were 538,563,790 schillings and expenditure, 572,672,053 schillings.

There were 8,632 miles of road at the end of 1932, of which 1,399 miles were first-class; 3,226 miles second-class; and 4,007 miles third-class.

In 1931 number of pieces of mail handled: internal, 218,751,000 letters, 98,499,000 post-cards, 208,459,000 printed packets. Received from abroad, 51,924,000 letters, 29,929,000 post-cards; sent abroad, 63,695,000 letters and 33,896,000 post-cards.

Length of telegraph line 1931, 7,323 kilometres; length of wire, 37,972 kilometres; number of offices, 3,692; number of inland telegrams, 1,075,356, of foreign telegrams, 2,086,740.

At the end of 1931 there were 239,178 telephones in use on the principal systems in the country. Length of line (1931), 84,074 kilometres; length of wire, 779,413 kilometres; inter-urban cables, lines 31,663 kilometres; wire 160,288 kilometres.

An Austrian Air Transportation Company (Oesterreichische Luftverkehrs A.G.) is subsidised by the State (1,490,000 schillings in 1933), and runs a series of regular services.

Banking and Credit.

A new National Bank for Austria was opened on January 1, 1923. It has capital of 43,200,000 schillings. It is a private, not a State institution. The note circulation on February 15, 1934, was 930,195,661 schillings. Gold and bullion amounted to 188,775,162 schillings. Savings banks deposits amounted to 1,427,057,000 schillings in 1932.

According to the Treaty of St. Germain the Austro-Hungarian Bank was liquidated on July 29, 1923.

Money, Weights and Measures.

The Austrian unit of currency was the krone. But as from June 30, 1925, there came into general use a new unit, the gold schilling, made up of 100 groschen. The schilling contains 0.21172086 grammes of fine gold. It was equivalent to 10,000 kronen. The National Bank issues token coins as follows:—2 schilling pieces, silver; 1 schilling pieces, silver; half-schilling pieces, silver; 10 groschen pieces (copper and nickel), 5 groschen pieces (copper and nickel), 2 groschen pieces (copper) and 1 groschen pieces (copper). Since July, 1926, 100 schilling pieces, gold, and 25 schilling pieces, gold, have also been issued.

The metric system of weights and measures is in use.

BELGIUM.

(ROYAUME DE BELGIQUE—KONIGLIJK BELGIE.)

Reigning King.

Leopold III, born November 3, 1901, son of the late King Albert (died February 17, 1934), and of Princess Elizabeth of Bavaria; succeeded his father, February 23, 1934; married on Nov. 4, 1926, to Princess Astrid of Sweden.

Children of the King.—(1) Josephine Charlotte, born October 11, 1927. (2) Prince Baudouin, born September 7, 1930.

Brother and Sister of the King.—(1) Prince Charles, Count of Flanders, born Oct. 10, 1903. (2) Princess Marie-José, born Aug. 4, 1906, married to Prince Umberto, heir-apparent to the crown of Italy, on January 8, 1930.

Aunts of the King.—(1) Princess Henriette, born Nov. 30, 1870; married Feb. 12, 1896, to Prince Emmanuel of Orleans, Duke of Vendôme. (2) Princess Josephine, born Oct. 18, 1872; married May 28, 1904, to Prince Charles of Hohenzollern.

The King has a civil list of 12,000,000 francs and the Queen-Mother, of 2,000,000 francs.

The Kingdom of Belgium formed itself into an independent State in 1830, having from 1815 been a part of the Netherlands. The secession was decreed on October 4, 1830, by a Provisional Government, established in consequence of a revolution which broke out at Brussels, on August 25, 1830. A National Congress elected Prince Leopold of Saxe-Coburg King of the Belgians on June 4, 1831; he ascended the throne July 21, 1831. On his death in 1865 he was succeeded by his son, Leopold II., who reigned until 1909.

By the Treaty of London, Nov. 15, 1831, the neutrality of Belgium was guaranteed by Austria, Russia, Great Britain and Prussia. It was not until after the signing of the Treaty of London, April 19, 1839, which established peace between King Leopold I. and the King of the Netherlands, that all the States of Europe recognised the Kingdom of Belgium. In the Treaty of Versailles (June 28, 1919), it is stated that as the treaties of 1839 'no longer conform to the requirements of the situation,' these are abrogated and will be replaced by other treaties.

Constitution and Government.

According to the Constitution of 1831 Belgium is 'a constitutional, representative, and hereditary monarchy.' The legislative power is vested in the King, the Senate, and the Chamber of Representatives. The royal succession is in the direct male line in the order of primogeniture. By marriage without the King's consent, however, the right of succession is forfeited, but may be restored by the King with the consent of the two Chambers. No act of the King can have effect unless countersigned by one of his Ministers, who thus becomes responsible for it. The King convokes, prorogues, and dissolves the Chambers. In default of male heirs, the King may nominate his successor with the consent of the Chambers. If the successor be under eighteen years of age, the two Chambers meet together for the purpose of nominating a regent during the minority.

Those sections of the Belgian Constitution which regulate the organisation of the legislative power were revised in October, 1921. For both Senate and Chamber all elections are held on the principle of universal suffrage.

The Senate consists of members elected for four years, partly directly and partly indirectly. The number elected directly is equal to half the number of members of the Chamber of Representatives. The constituent body is similar to that which elects deputies to the Chamber; the minimum age of electors is fixed at twenty-one years, and the minimum length of residence required is six months. In Belgium only the following women may vote in parliamentary elections: (1) Widows, not re-married, of soldiers killed in the Great War; widows of Belgian citizens killed by the enemy during the War, or, failing them, their mothers, if the latter are widows; (2) Widowed mothers of bachelor soldiers killed in the War; (3) Women condemned to imprisonment or subjected to preventive detention, for political reasons, during the enemy occupation of Belgium. In the election of members both of the Senate and Chamber of Representatives directly, the principle of proportional representation of parties was introduced by Law of December 29, 1899. Senators elected indirectly are chosen by the provincial councils, on the basis of one for 200,000 inhabitants. Every addition of 125,000 inhabitants gives the right to one senator more. Each provincial council elects at least three senators. There are at present forty provincial senators. No one, during two years preceding the election, must have been a member of the council appointing him. Senators are elected by the Senate itself in the proportion of half of the preceding category. The senators belonging to these two latter categories are also elected by the method of proportional representation. All senators must be at least forty years of age. They receive 28,000 francs per annum. Sons of the King, or failing these, Belgian princes of the reigning branch of the Royal Family are by right senators at the age of eighteen, but have no voice in the deliberations till the age of twenty-five years.

The members of the Chamber of Representatives are all elected directly by the electoral body. Their number at present, 187 (law of March 6, 1925), is proportioned to the population, and cannot exceed one for every 40,000 inhabitants. They sit for four years. Deputies must be not less than twenty-five years of age, and resident in Belgium. Each deputy has an annual indemnity of 42,000 francs, and a free pass all the year over Government and Companies' railways.

The Senate and Chamber meet annually in the month of November, and must sit for at least forty days; but the King has the power of convoking them on extraordinary occasions, and of dissolving them either simultaneously or separately. In the latter case a new election must take place within forty days, and a meeting of the Chambers within two months. An adjournment cannot be made for a period exceeding one month without the consent of the Chambers. Money Bills and Bills relating to the contingent for the army originate in the Chamber of Representatives.

Parties in the Chamber elected November 27, 1932 :—Catholics, 79 ; Socialists, 73 ; Liberals, 24 ; Communists, 3 ; Flemish Nationalists, 8.

Parties in the Senate elected November 30, 1932 :—Catholics, 74 ; Liberals, 21 ; Socialists, 63 ; Flemish Nationalists, 1.

The Executive Government consists of 12 departments, under the following Ministers (appointed December 17, 1932, re-arranged, January 10, 1934) :—

Prime Minister.—Comte de Broqueville (Catholic).

Minister of Finance.—Henri Jaspar (Catholic).

Minister of Foreign Affairs.—Paul Hymans (Liberal).

Minister of Justice.—Paul Emile Janson (Liberal).

Minister of Education.—Maurice Lippens (Liberal).

Minister of Home Affairs and Minister of Hygiene.—M. Pierlot.

Minister of Industry and Labour.—Philippe van Isacker (Christian Democrat).

Minister of Transport.—Pierre Forthomme (Liberal).

Minister of National Defence.—M. Deveze.

Minister of the Colonies.—Paul Tschoffen (Christian Democrat).

Minister of Public Work and Minister of Agriculture.—Gustave Sap (Flemish Democrat Catholic).

Minister of Social Welfare and Posts and Telegraphs.—M. Van Cauwelaert.

Local Government.

The provinces and communes (2,670 in 1932) of Belgium have a large measure of autonomous government.

In regard to the communal electorate, the law of April 15, 1920, definitely lays it down that all Belgians over 21 years of age without distinction of sex, who have been domiciled for at least six months, have the right to vote. Proportional representation is applied to the communal elections, and communal councils are to be renewed every six years. In each commune there is a college composed of the burgomaster, the president, and a certain number of aldermen.

Belgium (including the districts of Eupen and Malmédy) has an area of 30,444 square kilometres, or 11,752 English square miles. The following table shows the population at various dates :—

Census Years	Population	Total Increase	Increase per cent. per annum	Census Years	Population	Total Increase	Increase per cent. per annum

Religion.

Of the inhabitants professing a religion the majority are Roman Catholic; but no inquiry as to the profession of faith is now made at the censuses. There are, however, statistics concerning the clergy, and according to these there were in 1929:—Roman Catholic higher clergy, 86; inferior clergy, 6,186; Protestant pastors, 35; Anglican Church, 9 chaplains; Jews (rabbis and ministers), 17. The State does not interfere in any way with the internal affairs of either Catholic or Protestant Churches. There is full religious liberty, and part of the income of the ministers of all denominations is paid from the national treasury.

In 1920 there were six Roman Catholic dioceses, 204 deaneries, 3,679 Catholic churches and chapels, 6 large and 11 small seminaries.

The Protestant (Evangelical) Church is under a synod.

Education.

There are universities at Brussels, Louvain, Ghent, and Liège, the two latter being State institutions. In October, 1930, Ghent University became a Flemish University. In 1931–32 Brussels had 2,721 students; Ghent, 1,881; Liège, 2,734; and Louvain, 4,071. On November 11, 1923 the Colonial School at Antwerp (founded January 11, 1920) and the School of Tropical Medicine were constituted a Colonial University.

There were also 31 technical and commercial high schools, the Royal Academy of Fine Arts at Antwerp, 2 State agricultural institutes (at Gembloux and Ghent), and a State veterinary school at Cureghem, 65 schools of design, and 4 royal conservatoires at Brussels, Liège, Ghent, and Antwerp. Higher Education: (Dec. 31, 1931): 24 royal athenæums, with 7,989 pupils; 20 special athenæums with 1,551 pupils (903 boys and 648 girls); 5 communal and provincial colleges with 1,633 pupils, and 10 private colleges with 1,905 pupils. There were also 8 lycées for girls with 1,078 pupils. The next grades of schools are the higher grade schools, of which there were 144 State schools (94 for boys and 50 for girls) with 33,148 pupils (22,784 boys and 10,359 girls), 14 communal and provincial (7 for boys and 7 for girls) with 4,389 pupils (2,213 boys and 2,176 girls), and 5 private higher-grade schools with 1,139 pupils (2 for boys with 356 pupils, and 3 for girls with 783 pupils). Elementary Education: (December 31, 1932), there were 8,582 primary schools, with 956,560 pupils; 4,033 infant schools with 252,248 pupils; and 1,284 adult schools with 34,022 pupils. Normal Schools: there are (1932) 7 for training secondary teachers (372 students) and 81 for training elementary teachers (8,989 students).

There are many private or free schools, mostly under ecclesiastical care. No statistics are available for these.

Each commune must have at least one primary school. The cost of primary instruction devolves on the communes, with subsidies from the State and provinces.

In 1932, there were 2,388 libraries, with 4,330,782 volumes and 649,558 readers; number of volumes borrowed, 8,207,433.

French and Flemish are both spoken.

Justice and Crime.

Judges are appointed for life. There is one Court of Cassation, three Courts of Appeal, and Assize Courts for criminal cases. There are 26 judicial districts, each with a Court of first instance. In each of the 230 cantons is a justice and judge of the peace. There are, besides, various special tribunals. There is trial by jury.

Pauperism.

Apart from private charity, the poor are assisted by the communes through the agency of the bureaux de bienfaisance whose duty it is to provide outdoor relief, and by the governing bodies of the hospices civils. Provisions of a national character have been made for looking after war orphans and men disabled in the war. Certain other establishments, either State or provincial, provide for the needs of deaf-mutes and the blind, and of children who are placed under the control of the courts. Provision is also made for repressing begging and providing shelter for the homeless.

Finance.

Internal long term debt was 28,620,300,000 francs; internal short debt, 2,018,200,000 francs; total internal debt, 30,638,500,000 francs. External long term debt was 26,124,950,000 francs; external short debt, 864,000,000 francs; total external debt, 26,988,950,000 francs.

On October 25, 1926, a debt of 20,000,000l. was contracted, for 30 years, for the purpose of stabilising the franc.

Defence.

ARMY.

According to the Military Law passed in 1923, the Belgian Army is recruited by means of annual calls to the Colours and by voluntary enlistments. Military service is compulsory for those called to the Colours.

Voluntary enlistment is 5 years (for youths less than 17), 4 years (for youths less than 18), and 3 years (for youths over 18).

By the law of 1928 the period of service of 21,000 of the annual contingent is 14 months in the supplementary orders, 13 months for cavalry, horse artillery, and the routine troops of Liège, 12 months for the remainder. The rest of the annual contingent, about 23,000, does 8 months active service. The duration of military obligation is 25 years, of which 15 are in the Regular Army and reserve, and 10 years in the Territorial Army.

Military expenditure, 1933, 873,262,073 francs.

The strength of the army with the Colours for 1933, inclusive of forces overseas, was 5,025 officers and 89,000 other ranks organised as follows:—

³ Including 2 cyclist regiments.

NAVY.

On grounds of economy, the small Navy formerly maintained by Belgium has been abolished. The ex-British sloop Zinnia, of 1,200 tons, is still employed on fishery protection service.

Production and Industry.

I. AGRICULTURE.

Of the total area of 3,044,400 hectares, there were in 1932, 1,835,466 hectares under cultivation, of which 39.55 per cent. were under cereals, 1.23 per cent. vegetables, 3.95 per cent. industrial plants, 14.47 per cent. root crops and 40.90 per cent. forage. In 1931, 1,836,036 hectares were under cultivation. The forest area covers 18 per cent. of the land surface.

The following figures show the yield of the chief crops for three years:—

In 1931, the value of the pig-iron was 1,372,672,000 Belgian francs; of wrought steel 2,971,260,000 francs; and of zinc 268,206,000 francs. In 1932, the production of lead amounted to 70,850 metric tons, value 151,527,000 francs.

In 1931, there were 40 sugar factories, output 190,846 metric tons of raw sugar; 3 white sugar refineries, output 144,356 tons; 52 distilleries, output 384,816 hectolitres of potable and industrial alcohol; 1,494 breweries, output 18,377,464 hectolitres of beer; 16 margarine factories, output 34,921 tons; 50 vinegar factories, output 143,396 hectolitres; 15 match factories, output 59,983 million matches.

According to an industrial census taken on October 31, 1926, there were 13,082 industrial concerns (of more than ten employees) with a total number of 1,080,331 workpeople, of whom 874,309 were men and 206,022 women. There were also 96,567 salaried officials (84,005 men and 12,562 women). Of the more important industries the following may be mentioned: iron and steel, glass, artificial silk, motor-cars, lace (particularly hand-made lace), linen, and gloves.

Commerce.

By the Convention concluded at Brussels on July 25, 1921, between Belgium and Luxemburg and ratified on March 5, 1922, an Economic Union was formed by the two countries, and the Customs frontier between them was abolished on May 1, 1922.

The following table shows imports and exports for 6 years (in thousands of paper francs):—

Shipping and Navigation.

On July 1, 1933, the Belgian merchant fleet was composed of 212 ships of 456,207 tons, among which were 175 steamers of 393,094 tons.

There were 36 Belgian shipping companies at the beginning of 1931, of which the most important were the Compagnie Maritime Belge, with 44 ships, and the Adolf Deppe, with 35 ships.

The navigation at Belgian ports was as follows:—Number of vessels entered, 1931, 17,555; tonnage, 27,793,141; 1930, 18,413; tonnage, 29,113,791. Number of vessels cleared, 1931, 17,486; tonnage, 27,054,991; 1930, 18,331; tonnage, 28,964,997. In 1932, 9,407 vessels of 19,666,745 tons entered the port of Antwerp; in 1931, 11,256 vessels of 22,388,342 tons.

Internal Communications.

The total length of the roads in Belgium (1932) was as follows:— State roads, 5,448 miles; provincial roads, 980 miles; conceded roads, 13 miles; total, 6,441 miles. The majority of the roads are paved with stone.

The total length of navigable waterways (rivers and canals) in 1930 was 1,036 miles.

In September, 1926, the State handed over its control of the railways to a private company, the Société Nationale des Chemins de Fer Belges for a period of 75 years. The length of railway operated on January 1, 1932, was 2,995 miles of main line. There were also 170 miles of private railways and 3,002 miles of provincial lines. It is proposed to electrify the railway system of the country. Receipts in 1931 were 3,085·2 million francs, and expenditure was 3,022·2 million francs.

In 1931 the Post Office in Belgium handled 323,860,000 private letters, 66,303,000 official letters, 89,088,000 post-cards, 402,081,000 packets of printed matter, and 422,457,000 newspapers. On December 31, 1931, there were 1,703 post offices in Belgium. The gross revenue of the Post Office in the year 1931 amounted to 422,314,000 francs, and the expenditure to 472,700,000 francs (in 1930, 390,987,000 and 478,960,000 respectively).

A Régie of telegraphs and telephones for running the services on business lines was created by the law of July 19, 1930, effective Nov. 1, 1930. In 1931 the telegraph system carried 9,899,264 dispatches, of which 2,333,654 were official. Total length of public telegraph wires was 31,668 miles, and of line 6,222 miles. There were 1,569 telegraph offices. Receipts for 1931 were 65,674,000 francs.

In 1931 there were 242 radiograph stations and 28,995 radiotelegrams were despatched.

In 1931, the telephone service comprised 461 exchanges, connecting 495 public telephone stations and 227,000 subscribers. There were 1,617,833 miles of telephone line in service, including 1,317,494 miles of local line, 233,436 miles of inter-urban line and 65,423 miles of international lines, and the total number of calls, including 3,103,828 long-distance calls, was 232,477,000. Receipts in 1931 were 350,682,000 francs.

The following are some traffic figures relating to Belgian Air Service (Brussels, Ostend, Antwerp, Liège and Le Zoute):—

Money and Credit.

The franc, containing 0·0418422 grammes of fine gold, is the unit of currency.

No gold has been minted since 1882 (save only 5,000,000 francs struck in 1914), and no silver 5-franc pieces since 1876.

On October 26, 1926, the Belgian franc was stabilised and the paper currency relinked to gold, when all notes of the National Bank of Belgium became payable in gold or its equivalent in foreign currency. A new currency unit—called the Belga, with a weight of 0·20921 grammes of fine gold—has been introduced. One belga equals five paper francs and 35 belgas equal £1 gold. The franc, however, remains the basis of the monetary system, and will continue to circulate in the country, and is the medium of exchange in all domestic business. New nickel coins of the value of 5 francs or 1 belga were put into circulation in 1930; 20-franc nickel pieces were recently minted. The use of the belga is compulsory in all foreign exchange transactions. To provide the necessary funds, a stabilisation loan for the equivalent of 100,000,000 dollars was floated abroad.

The one bank of issue in Belgium is the National Bank, instituted 1850. By law of March 26, 1900, its constitution was modified, and its duration extended to January 1, 1929. In 1926 its privileges were prolonged for a further 25 years. Its capital and reserve amounted in 1927 to 284,063,000 francs. It is the cashier of the State, and is authorised to carry on the usual banking operations. Its reserve, in gold or foreign gold securities, must be equal to 40 per cent. of its right engagements, 75 per cent. of which must be in gold. Its position on February 21, 1934, was (in thousands of belgas):—

Gold and silver	2,713,887	Notes in circulation	3,419,191
Securities	753,473	Current accounts	395,387

There are joint-stock and private banks, also agricultural banks, credit unions, and popular banks.

The popular savings bank in Belgium is mainly concentrated in the Caisse Générale d'Epargne et de Retraite, at Brussels. The Caisse d'Epargne is a private company with legally regulated functions and operates under the supervision of the Minister of Finance. It co-operates with the Belgian postal service, thus obviating any need of a postal-savings system. On December 31, 1932, this institution had 5,259,837 accounts, with deposits amounting to 9,864,244,000 francs.

The weights and measures are those of the metric system.

BELGIAN CONGO

(CONGO BELGE.)

Constitution and Government.—The Congo Independent State was founded in 1885 by Leopold II., King of the Belgians, and the State was placed under his sovereignty.

The annexation of the State to Belgium was provided for by treaty of November 28, 1907, which was approved by the chambers of the Belgian Legislature in August and September and by the King on October 18, 1908. The Minister for the Colonies is appointed by the King, and is a member of the Council of Ministers. He is President of the Colonial Council, consisting of 15 members, 8 of whom are appointed by the King, and 3 chosen by the Senate and 3 by the Chamber of Representatives. One of those appointed by the King, and one chosen by the Legislative Chambers, retire annually but may be re-appointed. The King is represented in the Colony by Governor-General, assisted by a Vice-Governor-General, one or more State Inspectors, and six Provincial Commissioners. The budget is presented to the Chambers, and voted by them; the financial accounts have to be verified by the Court of Accounts. An annual report on the Congo Administration has to be presented to the Chambers.

The Annexation has been recognised by all the Powers.

Governor-General.—Lieut.-General Tilkens (appointed December 27, 1927).

The precise boundaries of the Congo Colony were defined by the neutrality declarations of August, 1885, and December, 1894, and by treaties with Germany, Great Britain, France, and Portugal.

The Colony is divided into six Provinces and sixteen administrative districts. Each district is divided into administrative territories, of which there are 103 in the whole country. The capital of each province bears the name of the province itself. The Elisabethville Province; districts: Haut-

Katanga, Lulua, Tanganyika. The Léopoldville Province; districts: Bas-Congo, Léopoldville, Kwango, Lake Léopold II. The Coquilhatville Province; districts: Congo-Ubangi, Tshuapa. The Lusambo Province; districts: Sankuru, Kasai. The Costermansville Province; districts: Kivu, Maniéma. The Stanleyville Province; districts: Uélé, Kibali-Ituri, Stanleyville. The capital of the Colony, formerly Boma, was, by royal decision (1923), changed to Léopoldville. At the head of each Province there is a Provincial Commissioner.

The districts of Ruanda and Urundi (formerly in German East Africa) have been ceded to Belgium as mandatory of the League of Nations. Both districts were united administratively with the Congo, under the direction of a Vice-Governor, by a law of August 21, 1925. Ruanda-Urundi is populated by three races—the Wa-tusi, the Wa-hutu, and the Batwa. Both districts are rich in cattle. The frontier was formally ratified on October 20, 1924. Usumbura is the capital. (See under Additions and Corrections.)

On July 22, 1927, a convention was signed between Belgium and Portugal by which the former ceded to the latter territory in the extreme south-west portion of the Belgian Congo, having an area of 3,500 square kilometres (480 square miles), in return for a cession by Portugal of an area in the estuary of the Congo, near Matadi, of three square kilometres. Belgium further undertook to commence the construction of a railway to link up with the Portuguese railway (the Lobito Bay-Katanga line). This railway was opened on July 1, 1931.

Area and Population.—The area of Belgian Congo is estimated at 918,000 square miles. The black population of the Belgian Congo is chiefly of Bantu and Sudanese origin with some nilotics and pygmies. According to the latest census the native population numbered 9,383,883. The white population on January 1, 1933, numbered 18,721. Of these, 12,045 were Belgians, 27 Germans, 597 Americans, 496 British, 19 Canadians, 24 Danes, 26 Spaniards, 396 French, 157 Luxemburgers, 498 Greeks, 453 Dutch, 1,238 Italians, 14 Norwegians, 28 Poles, 1,339 Portuguese, 20 Rumanians, 113 Russians, 10 Yugoslavs, 114 Swedes, 182 Swiss, 242 South Africans, 23 Turks and 210 others.

Kiswahili is the language spoken by the natives who have been under Arab influence. Bangala is the commercial language on the Upper Congo; Fiote is used near the coast.

Religion and Education.—The religion of the natives consists of a gross fetishism; mission work is actively carried on. There were, on January 1, 1933, 2,665 missionaries, of whom 1,888 were Catholic and 777 Protestant. In education they co-operate with the Government. The school statistics give about 300,000 children as receiving elementary education. Several educational bodies direct under control of the Government establishments for general and professional training, especially at Boma, Léopoldville, Moanda, Coquilhatville, Lusambo, Kabinda, Stanleyville, Buta, Elisabethville and Bunia. In 1933 the Government grant to the missionaries for education of native children amounted to 10,105,022 francs, while the total expenditure on education was 19,431,493 francs. An organised medical service exists. The income from a special fund of 150 million francs as well as a Government grant are applied to the medical service.

Justice.—There are 6 courts of first instance, 16 district courts, 16 prosecutors' courts, 104 police courts, and 2 courts of appeal (one at Léopoldville and the other at Elisabethville).

Finance.—Estimates of ordinary revenue and expenditure for five years (in francs):—

Revenue	634,332,000	541,856,000	434,674,475	357,736,580	866,626,230

For 1933 the ordinary receipts and expenditure were estimated as follows:—

Receipts	Francs	Expenditure	Francs
Duties and taxes	256,922,880	Institutions and services acting in Belgium	319,389,268
Domianial receipts	7,062,000	Expenses of general administration in Africa, those of the Public Force included	170,200,278
Judicial receipts and receipts of the administrative services	56,956,510	Expenses for the social and humanitarian works	92,109,497
Proceeds of capital & revenues	36,795,190	Expenses of economic order	143,559,897
Total	357,736,580	Total	725,757,940

Debt, December 31, 1932, 3,372,892,883 francs, of which 2,371,803,883 francs were Consolidated Debt and 1,001,089,000 francs Floating Debt.

Defence.—The Colony possesses a force of native troops amounting to 149 European officers, 145 European non-commissioned officers and 13,244 natives, including the recruits and about 5,550 men of the territorial police. The force is recruited by conscription and voluntary enlistment. The term of service does not exceed seven years, and the recruits are trained in two camps of instruction before being drafted to their units.

Production.—The yield of the chief vegetable products in 1932 was as follows (in metric tons):—palm-oil, 38,765; cotton, 12,128; palm-nuts, 57,935; rice, 44,600; coffee, 2,917; cacao, 1,194; rubber, 91; and ivory, 162. Cattle thrive only in the districts where there is no tsetse fly, notably in the highlands of Katanga, Ituri and Kivu. Mining flourishes, the chief minerals being copper, diamonds, gold, tin, cobalt, uranium, radium, coal and iron. The gold mines in 1932 produced 8,547 kilos, chiefly from the Kilo-Moto mines. The most important mines in the Congo are the copper mines near Kambove, Musonoi and Elisabethville in Haut Katanga, operated by the Union Minière du Haut Katanga. The total output in 1932 was 59,629 metric tons of copper. The Union Minière produces radium from the Chinkolobwe mines. The output of diamonds (chiefly from the mines of the Forminière company in the Kasai district) in 1932 amounted to 3,751,719 carats, of radium 6 gr., of coal 17,000 tons, of tin 972 tons, of cobalt 335 tons.

Commerce and Shipping.—The value of the commerce for six years was as follows (in francs):—

Years	Imports	Exports	Years	Imports	Exports
1927	1,466,358,868	1,055,239,249	1930	1,581,315,177	1,511,490,871

According to the Board of Trade Returns the imports into the United Kingdom from the Belgian Congo in 1933 amounted to the value of 29,049% ; and the exports of British produce and manufactures to the Belgian Congo to 92,008% ; re-exports from U. K. were 21,897%.

At the port of Boma in 1932 there entered 157 sea-going vessels of 666,011 tons. In the coasting trade there entered 18 sailing ships, of 5,665 tons. The two other ports are Banana and Matadi. In 1932, 558 steamships with tonnage of 2,171,941 entered, and 551 with tonnage of 2,111,941 cleared the three ports of Belgian Congo.

Internal Communications.—The Congo is navigable for 95 miles from its mouth to Matadi, and on this section ply 15 steamers belonging to the State. Above Matadi, for over 249 miles, numerous rapids, render the river unnavigable as far as Stanley Pool (Léopoldville). Above the Pool are 1,068 miles of navigable water, reaching Stanley Falls, while several of the great tributaries are navigable over a considerable extent of their course (total, 6,279 miles). Above the Stanley Falls the Congo is called Lualaba and navigable for 585 miles, from Ponthierville to Kindu and from Kongolo to Bukama (Katanga).

There were (January 1, 1933) 24,093 miles of road. The total length of railways on July 1, 1933, was 2,780 miles. New railway lines are planned between Zobia and Isiro, and between Kamaniola and Costermansville (Kivu).

An important development in 1911 was the construction of a pipe line from Matadi to Léopoldville, 246 miles long, for the purpose of transporting crude oil for the use of river steamers. It has a diameter of 4 inches, with 8 pumping stations delivering 50,000 tons of oil at Léopoldville, the terminus. The concession is for 70 years, at the expiration of which period all the pipe lines, with the material, except the vessels and stores of petroleum, will become the property of the Congo Government.

The river steamers run from Léopoldville to Stanleyville and the tributaries of the Congo; they belong to different companies, of which the Unatra Company is the most important. The fleet of the various companies consists of 264 steamers and 531 barges. Powerful tugboats hauling four to eight barges of 800 tons each afford cheap transportation on the Congo river and the largest tributaries.

There is a regular air service between Léopoldville and Lusambo with intermediate stages at Bandundu, Port Francqui and Luebo. The distance is 806 miles. A regular service runs between Léopoldville and Boma, a distance of 217½ miles; and between Léopoldville and Stanleyville (1,062 miles) with stages at Bandundu, Inongo, Coquillhatville, Basankusu, Lisala and Basoko. The service between Port Francqui and Lusambo was restarted in August, 1933.

In 1932 there were 75 post offices, and 68 special telegraph offices. In the internal service (1932) 1,747,400 letters, papers, &c., were transmitted; and in the external, 3,885,400 were handled. The Congo is included in the Postal Union. Total length of telegraph lines 4,209 miles. In 1932, 92,700 internal and 78,800 foreign telegrams were transmitted, besides 35,800 official telegrams. There are 29 stations of wireless telegraphy, 64 telephone offices and 15 central stations serving 1,420 subscribers, 4,000 miles of telephone lines, and 5,540 miles of telephone wire. Number of calls in 1932, 2,319,000.

Money and Credit.—The monetary unit is the franc equivalent to one-fifth of the belga and containing 0.0418422 gramme of fine gold. This value was fixed by an agreement with the Banque du Congo Belge on October 10, 1927, approved by Royal Decree on November 14, 1927, authorising the Bank to issue notes in Belgian Congo and Ruanda-Urundi. The notes at present in circulation are of a nominal value of 1,000, 500, 100, 50, 20, and 5 francs. By Royal Decree of December 28, 1920, the Government was authorised to issue copper-nickel coins in denominations of 1 franc and 50 centimes. There are also perforated coins, also in copper-nickel, of 20, 10, 5, 2 and 1 centimes. The notes and coins in circulation in the Colony are not legal tender in Belgium. Eight banks are in existence, of which the three most important are the 'Banque du Congo Belge,' the 'Banque Commerciale du Congo,' and the 'Banque Belge d'Afrique,' all three with branches in all the important commercial centres.

Weights and Measures.—The Metric System was introduced by law on August 17, 1910.

British Consul.—H. C. Swan (at Léopoldville).

There are British Vice-Consuls at Elisabethville and Stanleyville.

BHUTÁN.

STATE in the Eastern Himálaya, between 26° 45' and 28° N. latitude, and between 89° and 92° E. longitude, bordered on the north and east by Tibet on the west by the Tibetan district of Chumbi and by Sikkim, and on the south by British India. Extreme length from east to west 190 miles; extreme breadth 90 miles. Area about 18,000 square miles; population estimated at 300,000.

The original inhabitants of Bhután, the Tephús, were subjugated about two centuries ago by a band of military colonists from Tibet. In 1774 the East India Company concluded a treaty with the ruler of Bhután, but repeated outrages on British subjects committed by the Bhután hill merled from time to time to punitive measures, usually ending in the temporary or permanent annexation of various duars or submontane tracts with passes leading to the hills. In November, 1864, the eleven western of Bengal duars were thus annexed. Under a treaty signed in November 1865, the Bhután Government was granted a subsidy of Rs. 50,000 a year on condition of good behaviour. By an amending treaty concluded in January, 1910, the British Government undertook to exercise no interference in the internal administration of Bhután. On its part the Bhutanese Government agreed to be guided by the advice of the British Government in regard to its external relations. The treaty also provided for the increase of the subsidy to Rs. 1,00,000.

The form of Government in Bhután, which existed from the middle of the sixteenth century until 1907, consisted of a dual control by the clergy and the laity as represented by Dharma and Deb Rájás. In 1907 the Deb Rájá, who was also Dharma Rájá, resigned his position, and the Tongsa Penlop, Sir Ugyen Wangchuk, G.C.I.E., K.C.S.I., was elected as the first hereditary Maharaja of Bhután. He died on August 21, 1926, and was succeeded by Maharaja Jig-me Wang-chuk, K.C.I.E.

Chief fortresses or castles : Punakha, a place of great natural strength ; Tashi-Cho-dzong, Páro, Angduphodang (Wangdupotrang), Tongsa, and Byaka.

The people are nominally Buddhists, but their religious exercises consist chiefly in the propitiation of evil spirits and the recitation of sentences from the Tibetan Scriptures. Tashi-Cho-dzong, the chief monastery in Bhután, contains 300 priests.

Beyond the guards for the defence of the various castles, there is no standing army.

The chief productions are rice, Indian corn, millet, lac, wax, different kinds of cloth, musk, elephants, ponies, chowries, and silk. Extensive and valuable forests abound. Muzzle-loading guns and swords of highly-tempered steel are manufactured.

His Highness keeps an Agent at Kalimpong who is also Assistant to the Political Officer in Sikkim for Bhutanese affairs.

BOLIVIA.

(REPÚBLICA BOLIVIANA.)

Constitution and Government.

THE Constitution of the Republic of Bolivia (so named in 1825) bears date October 28, 1880, with amendments adopted January 11, 1931. Executive power is vested in a President, elected for four years by direct popular vote, and not eligible for re-election until eight years after his term has ended. A Vice-President is elected to succeed him in case of resignation, death, illness, or on his becoming commander-in-chief of the army in the event of war. There is a Congress of two chambers, called the Senate and the Chamber of Deputies, which sits at La Paz. The suffrage is possessed by all unmarried males over 21 years of age who can read and write, and have an 'assured income,' and by all married males over 18 who are similarly qualified. There are 16 Senators (2 for each Department) elected for six years (one-third retiring every two years), and 70 Deputies elected for four years (one-half retiring every two years); both by direct vote of the people, but in the future Senators are to be elected by the Departmental Assemblies. Senators receive a salary of 900 bolivianos (45*l.*) per month; Deputies, 40 bolivianos for the session. Sittings, as a rule, last for 60 days, but may be extended to 90 days. Extraordinary sessions may be held for special purposes when convoked by the Executive, or by a majority of both Chambers. The President's Cabinet consists of the Ministers of six departments—Foreign Relations and Worship; Finance and Industry; Government and Justice; Public Works, Posts and Telegraphs; War and Colonisation; Education and Agriculture. In addition, a National Economic Council, composed of representatives of mining, commerce, agriculture, banking, labour and other interests, passes upon public contracts, railway concessions, and projects affecting the credit and economic welfare of the country; their recommendations are transmitted to Congress.

President of the Republic.—Dr. Daniel Salamanca. Elected January 5, 1931; assumed office March 10, 1931, for the period 1931–1935.

The Republic is divided into 8 departments and 3 territories, with 71 provinces administered by sub-prefects, and 630 cantons (the number varies) administered by corregidores. The supreme political, administrative, and military authority in each department is vested in a prefect, but under an arrangement pending (1934) legislative matters will be under a Departmental Assembly composed of the Senators and Deputies from that department and of delegates elected by the various provinces and the capital. Budgets will be prepared and considerable financial power will be enjoyed, though public order, education and roads will remain under national control. The territories in the north-west of the Republic and in the Chaco and Oriente are governed by three officials, called delegados nacionales. Prefects will be appointed by the President of the Republic, from lists presented by the Departmental Assembly; sub-prefects (virtually chief constables) will be appointed by the Prefects; corregidores and village alcaldes are appointed annually by the sub-prefects of the provinces. The capital of each department has its municipal council; the subdivisions have municipal boards, and the still smaller subdivisions have municipal agents.

Bolivia's most serious boundary difficulty is with Paraguay, its eastern neighbour, and grows out of a long-standing dispute as to where the frontier line crosses the Gran Chaco. Bolivia claims all the Chaco between the Pilcomayo and Paraguay rivers, whereas the Paraguayan claim would cut her off from the Paraguayan River. Fighting began in July, 1932, and continued on an increasing scale until a state of war was formally declared by Paraguay in May, 1933. Efforts at mediation were made in turn by the Commission of Neutral Nations at Washington, the so-called A.B.C.P. countries (Argentine, Brazil, Chile and Peru), the League of Nations, and finally the A.B.C.P. countries acting under a mandate from the League; an armistice was agreed to but agreement had not been reached by March, 1934.

The boundary line between Bolivia and Peru in the peninsula of Copacabana, from the River Suches to the north of Lake Titicaca, has been delimited by a joint commission, and awaits ratification. That between Argentine and Bolivia, as determined by treaty ratified in 1889, was re-examined in 1925; Bolivia ratified the new agreement in 1929, but Argentine has not yet done so.

The following table shows area and population of the different political divisions (the capitals of each are given in brackets):—

Departments and Territories	Area : square miles	Census 1900	Estimated 1932	Per square mile 1932
La Paz (La Paz)	40,687	430,616	776,358	19·1
Cochabamba (Cochabamba)	25,288	326,163	571,730	22·6
Potosí (Potosí)	45,032	325,615	567,291	12·6
Santa Cruz (Santa Cruz)	146,045	189,592	365,154	2·5
Chuquisaca (Sucre)	36,332	196,434	345,448	9·6
Tarija (Tarija) ¹	78,128	77,887	179,251	2·3

Colonial Territories (Riberalta)	27,930	16,883	55,548	1·9

¹ Including 46,561 square miles in the El Chaco region.

Boundary disputes make exact calculations of area impossible; one official estimate puts the area at 506,467 square miles, exclusive of the area disputed by Paraguay.

The 1929 estimate showed 1,586,649 Indians, 426,212 whites and 898,429 mixed races. Other estimates (1930) distribute the population thus: Indians, 54·5 per cent.; mixed, 30·9 per cent.; white 14·6 per cent.; there are 6,000 Chinese, Negroes, etcetera.

The language of the educated classes is Spanish, that of the natives Qüechüa and Aymara.

The estimated population (1932) of the principal towns: La Paz (the actual seat of government, though Sucre is nominally the capital), 150,165; Cochabamba, 49,000; Potosí, 35,900; Sucre (the legal capital and the actual seat of the Judiciary, the University, and the Archbishop), 26,113; Tarija, 11,950; Oruro, 30,000; Santa Cruz, 31,300.

Religion, Education, and Justice.

The Roman Catholic is the recognised religion of the State; the exercise of other forms of worship is permitted. The religious orders have 17 convents (9 for males and 8 for females); the male members number about 230, the female 280; there are about 567 secular clergy. In 1900 the non-Catholic population numbered 24,245. The Church is under an archbishop (resident in Sucre) and 6 bishops (La Paz, Cochabamba, Santa Cruz, Oruro, Potosí, and Tarija). The maintenance of the Church cost the State 108,271 bolivianos in 1932. By a law of March 19, 1912, all marriages must be celebrated by the civil authorities. Divorce was permitted by a law enacted in April, 1932; 821 divorces were granted that year.

Primary instruction, free and obligatory, is under the care of the municipalities and the State. In 1933 there were 2,033 elementary schools with 1,242 teachers and 161,380 pupils. For secondary instruction there were 29 colleges (19 national), 5 clerical institutions, and 5 private schools with, in all, 298 teachers and 4,480 pupils. For special instruction there are 22 establishments with 3,104 students. By a reform in the constitution the universities are made autonomous, with full control of all appointments and large powers over their finances. At Sucre and La Paz are the only two universities which possess more than one faculty. The University at Sucre, known as the St. Xavier University, is one of the oldest in America, having been founded in 1624. There are also a number of training colleges for teachers, including two for Indians. There are 18 institutions offering university instruction; they have 141 teachers and 1,682 students.

The judicial power resides in the Supreme Court, in superior district courts (of 5 judges) and in the courts of local justices. The Supreme Court, with headquarters at Sucre, is divided into two sections of 4 justices each, with the Chief Justice presiding over both. Members of the Supreme Court are chosen on a two-thirds vote of Congress. They nominate the district judges and largely administer the judiciary budget. The district courts have each 5 judges; there are local tribunals and parish alcaldes. Public justice, supervised by commissions appointed by the Chamber of Deputies, is directed by an Attorney-General and by district and local attorneys.

Finance.

The revenue of Bolivia is derived mainly from customs duties, spirit duties, export duties on tin, silver, gold, wolfram, antimony, lead and other minerals, rubber export, patents, and stamps. Tin is the chief single source of revenue.

Ordinary and extraordinary revenues and expenditures for 6 years were as follows:—

—	Revenue	Expenditure	—	Revenue	Expenditure
	Bolivianos	Bolivianos		Bolivianos	Bolivianos
1928	44,893,604	60,681,287	1931	22,629,611	32,386,328
1929	48,942,327	53,181,231	1932	19,870,567	33,503,017
1930	36,247,829	49,133,753	1933 ¹	19,964,481	21,049,572

¹ The 1933 budget bill was presented to the 1932 Congress, but had not been passed when the session closed. The President by decree extended the validity of the 1932 budget with certain drastic modifications through the financial year 1933.

The principal items of expenditure in the 1933 budget as decreed were (in bolivianos): public debt, 8,062,284; instruction, 3,200,000; interior, 2,352,700; communications, 2,110,996. No appropriation was included for the war ministry, the cost of which was transferred to a special war budget; the extraordinary expenses of the war with Paraguay, as well as the cost of the war ministry, were met by two loans from the Central Bank of Bolivia, amounting together to 50,000,000 bolivianos, service on these loans being provided by a series of emergency war taxes.

The public debt of Bolivia on March 31, 1933, amounted to 316,028,338 bolivianos, being principal of external debt, 172,743,487 bolivianos; external debt service, 35,496,592 bolivianos; internal, 86,358,843 bolivianos; and floating, 21,429,416 bolivianos. Service on the foreign debt is in default, but as it is all issued in U.S. dollars, the devaluation of the dollar in 1933 has greatly reduced it.

Defence.

The territory of the Republic is divided into 3 military districts, the Northern, the Central, and the Southern, and 3 'military commands' formed of the departments Santa Cruz, El Beni, Tarija, and the Territories.

The law of December 15, 1915, provides for a permanent force of 3,577 men, to which is added an annual contingent of conscripts divided into two categories, the total number of effectives being about 8,000. Military service is compulsory for all males from the 18th to the 50th year. Those from 19 to 25 years of age serve not more than 2 years with the standing army; those from 25 to 30 years of age, 'the ordinary reserve,' return at some time for 3 months' service. After this the men pass to the 'extraordinary reserve' for 10 years, and finally complete their service by 10 years' enrolment in the Territorial Guard.

The permanent army consists of 12 infantry regiments, each of 2 battalions; 6 cavalry regiments, each of 4 squadrons; 3 mountain artillery regiments, each of 2 batteries; a field artillery regiment of the same strength; 6 battalions of engineers; 1 aviation corps of 2 flights.

In addition to the above troops there are small bodies of infantry of from 100 to 200 men (called columnas) at the chief towns of departments, which can be expanded to battalions, if necessary. There also exist other units, for garrisoning the North, the North West, the South West, and the East, consisting of 300 men each.

The infantry armament is the Mauser (Bolivian Model) rifle of 1898.

Production and Industry.

The extensive and undeveloped region of Bolivia lying east of the Andes comprises about three-quarters of the entire area. It is estimated that about 4,940,000 acres are under cultivation, but agriculture is in a backward condition. Irrigation by means of artesian wells is being attempted in some regions. Potatoes, cacao, coffee, barley, coca, highland rice, and rubber are the principal products. Bolivia ranks as the second rubber-exporting country of South America, coming next to Brazil. Tropical forests with woods ranging from the 'iron tree' to the light palo de balsa await exploitation. The public lands of the State have an area of about 245,000 square miles, of which 104,000 square miles are reserved for special colonisation. In 1931 it was estimated that there were 1,854,915 cattle, 5,552,074 sheep, 747,581 goats, 1,882,000 llamas and alpacas, 335,580 pigs, and 375,738 equines.

Mining is practically the only important industry, and Oruro is its principal centre. The mineral wealth of Bolivia includes tin, silver, copper, lead, zinc, antimony, bismuth, wolfram, gold, and borate of lime. Bolivia produces one quarter of the total tin output of the world, standing next to the Malay Peninsula in the production of this metal. Practically all the tin ore is shipped to Great Britain, where it is reduced to tin in pigs and reshipped to the United States, which is the ultimate consumer of the bulk of Bolivian tin. Under the International Tin Restriction scheme, Bolivia, June 1, 1932, accepted a quota of 14,687 tons per annum for 1932 and 1933. Production of minerals in 1932 was, in metric tons: Tin (metal equivalent), 21,400; silver, 128; lead, 5,448; copper, 2,016; zinc, 12,968; antimony (metal equivalent), 1,469; bismuth, 2; wolfram, 411. Output of gold, 1932, was 12,281 ounces. Bismuth is mined in La Paz and Potosí by an international company which adjusts production to market demand. Next to China, Bolivia is the world's chief source of antimony. Large deposits of common salt are found near Lake Poopó and in the south of Bolivia. Surface indications of petroleum and gas abound in the whole territory between the Argentine frontier and the north-west territory bordering Peru; the Standard Oil Company with 16 wells is developing production at Chaco Oriental. But output is small, only 44,000 barrels in 1932.

Commerce.

The value of imports and exports for five years are given as follows (13·33 bolivianos = 1l. or 1 boliviano = 36·5 cents (U.S.)) at par:—

—	1928	1929	1930	1931	1932
	Bolivianos	Bolivianos	Bolivianos	Bolivianos	Bolivianos
Imports . . .	64,390,583	71,417,273	68,134,613	29,821,019	22,351,535

Tin ore has usually constituted in value about 90 per cent. of Bolivia's exports since 1920, but in 1932, owing to the continued decline in prices, export of tin (37,122,307 bolivianos) constituted only 76 per cent. of the value of total exports. But metals, in value, constituted 91·7 per cent. of all exports in 1932. Other principal exports in 1932 were silver, 3,312,468 bolivianos; copper, 758,774 bolivianos; lead, 661,742 bolivianos; tungsten (or wolfram), 258,999 bolivianos; antimony, 459,364 bolivianos; and zinc, 2,292,372 bolivianos. In 1932 the United States furnished 24·1 per cent. of imports and Great Britain 21·9 per cent.; of exports, Great Britain took 82·7 per cent., and the United States 3·6 per cent.

Bolivia having no seaport, imports and exports pass chiefly through Arica, Mollendo, Antofagasta, La Quiaca, and river-ports on the rivers flowing into the Amazon. The chief imports are sugar, flour, wheat, coal, petroleum, iron and steel products, mining machinery, rice, wines and spirits, textiles, and ready-made clothes.

Total trade between U.K. and Bolivia (Board of Trade figures) for 5 years:—

—	1929	1930	1931	1932	1933
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports from Bolivia to U.K. .	5,989,034	3,391,748	2,273,771	1,877,005	1,682,494
Exports to Bolivia from U.K. .	673,349	846,813	170,118	194,174	419,789
Re-exports to Bolivia from U.K.	15,066	17,972	20,610	10,548	8,630

Communications.

The total length of railway open in Bolivia is about 1,384 miles; 175 miles are under construction from Cochabamba to Santa Cruz. The principal line is the Antofagasta and Bolivian Railway. Total length in Bolivia, 575 miles. Under the Bolivian-Chilian treaty of October 24, 1904, the Arica-La Paz line (276 miles, of which 151 miles are in Bolivia) was built from La Paz via Lluta with Taregra and to Corocoro.

The Lloyd Aero Boliviano, under the supervision of the War Ministry, has established a number of routes since 1927; principal one is from Cochabamba to Santa Cruz.

Traffic on Lake Titicaca is carried on by the steamers of the Peruvian Corporation. About 12,000 miles of rivers, in three systems, are open to navigation by light-draught vessels.

Of main highways there was (1933) one of 166 miles from La Paz through Puno into Peru and another from La Paz, via La Quiaca, into Argentine of 749 miles, passable throughout the year: similar roads in the interior totalled 2,337 miles, besides 3,875 miles of secondary roads passable during the dry season: 527 miles were under construction.

In Bolivia there were, in 1929, 454 post offices. Number of pieces of mail handled, domestic, 2,251,500; foreign, 2,505,695 pieces.

There are (1930) about 5,627 miles of telegraph lines. Number of telegrams dispatched, 1929, 855,876; received, 964,468. There are 318 telegraph, telephone and wireless offices. The Bolivian Power Co. was given in 1928 a concession to build and operate a countrywide telephone system; an exchange was opened in Oruro in 1930.

Banking, Money, Weights, and Measures.

On July 1, 1929, on the recommendation of the Kemmerer Mission, the Banco Central de Bolivia was inaugurated at La Paz, taking over the assets of the Banco de la Nación Boliviana; it acts as a central Bank of issue. On May 30, 1933, the bank's reserves were 28,283,143 bolivianos (legal reserve, 24,500,000 bolivianos); note circulation, 43,724,802 bolivianos; deposits, 33,026,886 bolivianos.

On July 11, 1928, the gold exchange standard was adopted for the currency. Notes of the Banco Central de Bolivia (which has a monopoly of the note issue) were convertible on demand into gold or gold exchange. The unit of account is the gold boliviano containing 0.54917 grams of fine gold and equal in U.S. money to 36.5 cents, but on September 25, 1931, gold payments were suspended. Foreign exchange rates are controlled by the Banco Central and are based largely on the London price of tin. The law provides for the minting of coins of ten and twenty bolivianos, the former to be called a 'Bolivar' and the latter a 'Double Bolivar,' the 'Bolivar' to weigh 6.10189 grams of 900 fine. There is no Bolivian gold yet in circulation. Gold is legal tender up to any amount, and silver up to 10 bolivianos. Silver coins are minted in denominations of 1 boliviano (15 grams 800 fine), one-half, and one-fifth bolivianos. But paper notes in denominations of 1, 5, 10, 20, 50 and 100 bolivianos are the chief circulating medium.

The metric system of weights and measures is used by the administration and prescribed by law, but the old Spanish system is also employed. The quintal is equal to 101½ lbs.

BRAZIL.

(ESTADOS UNIDOS DO BRASIL)

Constitution and Government.

BRAZIL was discovered on May 3, 1500, by the Portuguese Admiral Pedro Álvares Cabral, and thus became a Portuguese settlement; in 1815 the colony was declared 'a kingdom,' and on May 13, 1822, Dom Pedro, eldest surviving son of King João VI. of Portugal, was chosen 'Perpetual Defender' of Brazil by a National Congress. He proclaimed the independence of the country on September 7, 1822, and was chosen 'Constitutional Emperor and Perpetual Defender' on October 12, 1822. On November 15, 1889, his only son, Dom Pedro II. (born 1825, died 1891), was dethroned by a revolution, and Brazil declared a Republic under the title of the United States of Brazil.

The following is a list of Presidents since the establishment of the Republic:—

Marshal Deodoro da Fonseca, Nov. 15, 1889—Nov. 23, 1891. ¹	Marshal Hermes da Fonseca, Nov. 15, 1910—Nov. 15, 1914.
Marshal Floriano Peixoto (Acting), Nov. 23, 1891—Nov. 15, 1894.	Dr. Wenceslão Braz, Nov. 15, 1914—Nov. 15, 1918.
Senhor Prudente de Moraes Barros, Nov. 15, 1894—Nov. 15, 1898.	Dr. Francisco de Paula Rodrigues Alves. ²
Dr. Manuel Ferraz de Campos Salles, Nov. 15, 1898—Nov. 15, 1902.	Dr. Delphim Moreira (Acting), Nov. 15, 1918—July 28, 1919.
Dr. Francisco de Paula Rodrigues Alves, Nov. 15, 1902—Nov. 15, 1906.	Dr. Epitácio da Silva Pessoa, July 28, 1919—Nov. 15, 1922.
Dr. Afonso Penna, Nov. 15, 1906—June 14, 1909. ³	Dr. Arthur Bernardes, Nov. 15, 1922—Nov. 15, 1926.
Dr. Nilo Peçanha (Acting), June 14, 1909—Nov. 15, 1910.	Dr. Washington Luiz Pereira de Souza, Nov. 15, 1926—Oct. 25, 1930. ⁴

¹ Resigned.² Died.³ Owing to illness did not take office—Nov. 15, 1918; died Jan. 16, 1919.⁴ Deposed.

The old constitution, adopted in 1891 and modified in 1926, is undergoing (1934) a radical revision. The draft submitted in November, 1933, to the Constituent Assembly (and still under discussion, March, 1934), would replace the old two-chambered National Congress by a single-chambered National Assembly elected from the various states for 4 years. The President (with greatly restricted powers) would be elected by a secret vote of the National Assembly. A supreme council of 35, elected for 7 years, would share executive power.

By the old constitution, the United States of Brazil consisted of twenty States, the Federal Territory of the Acre, and one Federal District. Each State was administered at its own expense without interference from the Federal Government save for defence, for the maintenance of order, for the reorganization of the State finances when payments on its funded debt were suspended for more than two years, and for the execution of the Federal laws and judgments. Control of import duties, stamps, rates of postage, and bank-note circulation belonged to the Union; but export duties as well as taxation on real property, professions and industries, belonged to the States.

The old National Congress, which consisted of the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate, met usually on the 3rd of May at Rio de Janeiro (the Federal capital) and sat four months. The Chamber of Deputies consisted of 212 members elected for three years by direct vote (providing for the representation of the minority). No State had less than four representatives. The Chamber initiated legislation relating to taxation, to fixing the strength of land and sea forces, and in proceedings against the President of the Republic and Secretaries of State. Senators, 63 in number, were chosen by direct vote, three for each State, and for the Federal district, for nine years, one-third being elected every three years. The Vice-President was President of the Senate.

The President of the Republic (old constitution) must be a Brazilian by birth, over thirty-five years of age. His term of office was four years, and he was not eligible for the succeeding term. He and the Vice-President were elected by the people directly, by an absolute majority of votes on the 1st of March in the last year of each presidential period.

The President appointed and dismissed ministers, was in supreme command of the army and navy, and, with the authorization of the National Congress, when recourse to arbitration failed, had the power to declare war and make peace. He (with the consent of the Senate) appointed the members of the Supreme Federal Tribunal and the diplomatic ministers.

The franchise, under a decree of February 24, 1932, extends to all citizens, both men and women, not under twenty-one years of age, duly enrolled, except beggars, 'illiterates,' soldiers actually serving, and members of monastic orders, &c., under vows of obedience. Citizens who are eligible but do not register cannot hold office or be employed in the Government service. Voting is secret.

President of the Republic.—Dr. Getulio Vargas. Assumed office November 3, 1930, after a military uprising in various states and the capital had forced the resignation of President Washington Luis Pereira de Souza and prevented the installation of Dr. Julio Prestes, elected March, 1930. Elected by the Constituent Assembly in November, 1933.

There were, under the old constitution, 7 Secretaries of State at the head of the following Departments:—1. Finance, 2. Justice and Interior, 3. War, 4. Marine, 5. Foreign Affairs, 6. Communications and Public Works, 7. Agriculture. In addition President Vargas established ministries of: 8. Labour, Industry, and Commerce, and 9. Instruction and Public Health.

I. LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

Each State is organised under the republican form of government, with distinct administrative, legislative, and judicial authorities. Each State has its own Constitution and laws which must, however, agree with the constitutional principles of the Union. Taxes on inter-state commerce, levied by individual States, which previously flourished, were, by a decree of the Provisional Government in 1932, ordered to be gradually extinguished. The new Constitution would abolish them forthwith, also export taxes. The governors and members of the legislatures are elected, but magistrates are appointed and are not removable from office save by judicial sentence. The Federal District is administered by a council elected by the citizens of the District, the municipal executive authority being exercised by a Prefect appointed by the President of the Republic.

Area and Population.

Following are the census returns of 1920 and estimate for December 31, 1929 (capitals of States in brackets):—

Total . . .	3,275,510	30,635,605	9·3	40,272,650 ¹

¹ Total estimated, January 1, 1933, 43,340,000.

In 1920 the population consisted of 15,443,818 males and 15,191,787 females. Of these 1,565,961, or 5 per cent., were foreigners, viz., 558,405 Italians, 433,575 Portuguese, 219,142 Spaniards, 52,870 Germans, 50,251 from Asiatic Turkey, 33,621 Uruguayans, 27,976 Japanese, 26,354 Austrians, 22,117 Argentinians, and 141,650 other nationalities. Some 100,000 Indians are to be found in the Amazon area. The language is Portuguese, though Italian and German are widely used in the Southern States.

In 1930 the estimated population of Rio de Janeiro was 1,468,621; São Paulo, 879,788; S. Salvador, 329,898; Recife, 340,543; Belem, 279,491; Curitybe, 100,135; Porto Alegre, 273,376; Manáos, 83,736; Nitheroy, 108,233; Bello Horizonte, 108,849; Fortaleza, 98,848; Maceió, 103,930; São Luiz, 62,895; Parahyba, 74,104.

The number of immigrants between 1820 and 1930 was 4,518,558, including 1,480,000 Italians, 1,288,000 Portuguese, 574,000 Spaniards, 198,000 Germans, 110,000 Russians and 89,000 Austrians. In 1932 the number of immigrants was 29,534.

Religion.

The population is overwhelmingly Roman Catholic, but in 1889 connection between Church and State was abolished, and absolute equality declared among all forms of religion. The Government left to the Church all religious buildings and their properties and income; religious orders are allowed and are prosperous. They maintain 6 seminaries; there is a Cardinal whose seat is at Rio de Janeiro and who acts as an Archbishop, and there are besides 14 archbishops, 44 suffragan bishops, 7 prelates, and 3 apostolic prefects. There are 20 seminaries. There are eight leading Evangelic sects (and innumerable small ones), while Judaism, Buddhism, Mahometanism, Spiritualism, and Positivism have many followers. Evangelic sects maintain 10 seminaries.

Education.

Education is free but not compulsory, except in some States (e.g. Ceará, Maranhão, Alagoas, Matto Grosso, Minas Geraes, S. Paulo, Santa Catharina). The Union Government undertakes to provide, in part, for higher or university instruction within the Union, but there are institutions of this nature maintained, some by the States, and some by private associations, while primary schools are chiefly maintained and supervised, either by the States or by the municipalities and private initiative. There is one official university in Brazil, the University of Rio de Janeiro (Federal District), founded on September 7, 1920, and two private universities, at Bello Horizonte (Minas Geraes) and Curitiba (Paraná); there are moreover 56 faculties which confer degrees. At the Capital are maintained by the Federal Government a school for the blind; another for deaf and dumb; a School of Fine Arts; and a National Institute of Music, there being similar private institutions in the Federal District and some States. There are seven engineering and mining polytechnics at Rio de Janeiro (University), S. Paulo, Rio Grande do Sul, Bahia, Minas Geraes, and Pernambuco; 19 schools of medicine, pharmacy and dentistry; 12 schools of law and social sciences; and 97 industrial schools, 41 agricultural, and 48 commercial schools. The Oswaldo Cruz Institute, in Rio de Janeiro, is devoted to experimental medicine, and the Butantan Institute, in S. Paulo, to the preparation of anti-ophidic serum.

There were in January, 1931, 3,973 boys' schools, 2,167 girls' schools and 29,295 co-educational schools (total 35,435) of which 426 were Federal, 17,965 State, 6,655 municipal, and 10,389 were private: these were divided into 33,049 primary schools, 1,145 high schools, 87 colleges, 211 teachers' colleges, and 943 special schools. Teachers numbered 73,555; total enrolment, 2,284,883.

Justice.

There is a supreme Federal court of Justice at Rio de Janeiro, which celebrated its centenary on January 20, 1929. There are also Regional Tribunals in each State as well as in the Federal District and the Territory of Acre. Justice is administered in the States in accordance with State law, by State courts, but in Rio de Janeiro Federal Justice is administered. Judges are appointed for life. There are also municipal magistrates and justices of the peace, who are elected for four years, and whose chief function is to settle cases up to a certain amount. Capital punishment has been abolished. There is no divorce.

Finance.

Receipts and expenditures in recent years have been as follows (1 gold milreis = 4.567 paper milreis = at par about 6d. sterling = 12 cents. U.S.):—

—	Revenue		Expenditure
	(Gold) Milreis	(Paper) Milreis	(Gold) Milreis	(Paper) Milreis
1928 ¹	198,859,000	1,308,325,000	125,401,846	1,349,453,397
1929 ¹	190,886,000	1,530,109,000	126,043,156	1,442,054,444
1930	120,933,000	1,074,746,000	127,123,000	1,820,685,000
1931	107,902,000	1,264,864,000	89,742,545	1,335,073,728
1932 ²	109,536,000	1,392,751,000	34,406,000	1,894,285,000
1933 ²	87,756,000	1,502,678,000	34,264,855	1,861,975,603

² Budget estimate.

The consolidated Federal foreign debt of Brazil on December 31, 1933, amounted to 90,457,026*l.* (British), 325,171,000 francs, and 144,618,500 dollars (United States) equivalent to 9,384,196 contos paper. Inability to secure sufficient foreign exchange for service on this foreign debt forced Brazil in October, 1931, to tender 5 per cent. scrip as interest payments on all but three of her foreign loans. On February 6, 1934, a decree was published establishing new conditions for the service of the external debt, to be in operation from April 1, 1934, to March 31, 1938. It applies to all loans of the Federal Government, of the States, and of municipalities. Altogether the annual debt service is reduced to 8,000,000*l.* The total debt has been divided into 8 categories with varying percentages of service moneys. External debt of the States on December 31, 1933, was about 5,000,000 contos. Internal funded debt, December 31, 1933, was 3,016,096 contos paper; in addition, inconvertible Treasury notes in circulation December 31, 1933, totalled 3,004,095 contos paper, while the floating debt was 1,563,756 contos paper.

Defence.

Army.—Under the military law of 1923 military service is obligatory on every Brazilian from 21 years of age to 44. The terms of service are 9 years (from the 21st to the 30th years of age) in the army 'first line' (1 in the ranks, the rest in the reserve), and 14 years (from the 30th to the 44th years of age) in the army 'second line' (7 in the 'second line' and 7 in the reserve of the same). The reservists are called up for training annually for 4 weeks, besides which there is rifle practice once a month. The men in the territorial army also have an annual training of 2 to 4 weeks. The total peace strength for 1933 was 5,546 officers and 42,200 other ranks, organized in 4 divisions, 3 cavalry divisions, 1 mixed brigade, and 1 coast defence district. There is an air force of 3 companies and 1 group with a personnel of 2,000 and 41 aeroplanes.

Mobilisation would yield about 120,000. The military police under the War Office number 33,450, capable of expansion to 130,000. Infantry are armed with the Mauser rifle, the field and horse artillery with 75 mm. guns.

Navy.—The principal ships of the Brazilian navy are as follows:—

Laid down	Name	Displacement	Armour		Principal Armament	Torpedo Tubes	H.-P.	Nominal speed
			Belt	Gun
1907	BATTLESHIPS. (Minas Geraes . . .) (São Paulo . . .)	19,281	9	9	{ 12 12-in., 22 4·7-in., 2 3-in. A.A. . . }	—	23,500	21
	PROTECTED CRUISERS. (Bahia . . .) (Rio Grande do Sul . . .)
1907	COAST DEFENCE VESSEL. Floriano . . .	3,150	—	—	10 4·7-in., 4 3-in. A.A. .	4	22,000	27
898	COAST DEFENCE VESSEL. Floriano . . .	3,200	14	8	2 9·4-in., 4 4·7-in. . .	—	3,400	15

There is 1 river monitor (Pernambuco), 2 river gunboats, 10 destroyers, 1 submarines (of which only one is of an ocean-going type), and a submarine depot and salvage vessel. The cruisers Bahia and Rio Grande do Sul were refitted in 1925–26, new engines and oil-fired boilers being installed. A four-masted training ship with auxiliary Diesels, the Almirante Saldanha, is completing in England.

There are three naval arsenals—at the Ilha das Cobras (Rio de Janeiro), Pará, and Ladario de Matto Grosso (this latter a river arsenal).

Rio de Janeiro (Federal District) is the seat of the military college, the general staff school, the military school, the veterinary school, the school of aviation, the improvement school for officers, the naval school of war, and the professional schools of the navy. In the State of Rio de Janeiro is the naval school.

Production and Industry.

Brazil is an agricultural country, though only a small fraction of its soil has been brought under culture, and she is a heavy importer of wheat and flour. The cultivated area covers about 17,387,000 acres, of which 4,133,000 acres are in coffee, 6,919,000 in maize, 1,500,000 in cotton, and 1,315,000 in rice. Brazil ranks first in the production of coffee, second in the production of cocoa, and third in that of sugar and tobacco. Coffee, the chief product cultivated, accounts annually for from 60 to 75 per cent. of Brazil's total exports. The four States of São Paulo, Rio de Janeiro, Espírito Santo, and Minas Geraes are the principal districts for coffee growing. Brazil, with 2,924,739,376 coffee trees, has two-thirds of the world total and three-fourths of the coffee. Sales since February, 1931, have been controlled by the Federal Government; stocks purchased by the Government and the Coffee Council up to June 30, 1933, totalled 37,572,714 bags, of which 26,065,000 bags had been incinerated by December 31, 1933. Output in 1933–34, 29,880,000 bags, of which 17,928,000 bags will be exported (1 bag = 132 pounds). Exports of oranges are growing—in 1933, 2,554,258 boxes, of which Great Britain took 70 per cent. Cotton output, 1932–33, 75,367 tons.

Indiarubber is another great natural product of the country, the principal rubber-growing districts being the Acre Territory and the States of Amazonas and Pará. The best rubber to be found on the world's markets, the 'fine hard Pará,' comes from Pará, but production has declined. Brazil is the chief source of carnauba wax, used for electric insulation, phonograph records, etc.; exports in 1932, 6,380 metric tons.

The chief crops, with production and value for 1931-32 were :—

The census of cattle for 1932 showed that there were in Brazil 42,539,200 cattle ; 21,614,622 swine ; 10,660,598 sheep ; 5,231,455 goats ; 6,573,329 horses ; 2,745,021 asses and mules.

Both the forests and mines of Brazil are important. Total exports of timber 1933, 101,967 metric tons, chiefly to Argentine. Manganese ores, found in Minas Geraes, are the principal mineral export ; exports in 1933, chiefly to Belgium and the United States, were 24,893 metric tons. Coal deposits exist in Rio Grande do Sul, Santa Catharina, Paraná, and São Paulo. Total reserves are estimated at about 5,000 million tons, and the annual output, from 7 mines, about 370,000 tons. Iron is found chiefly in Minas Geraes. At Itabira foreign capital is now opening up what is believed to be one of the richest iron ore deposits in the world. Gold is found in practically every State, though large scale mining is confined to a single mine in Minas Geraes ; the production in 1931 was 3,932 kilos. Alluvial deposits were discovered in Maranhão in 1933. Export of gold has been forbidden since 1918 ; the output is used to guarantee the inconvertible Treasury and Bank notes. Diamond districts are Diamantina, Grão Mogol, Chapada Diamantina, Bagagem, Goyaz, Matto Grosso, and other States. Exports have declined from 384,000% in 1928 to 2,000% in 1933. A great part of the world's supply of monazite comes from Brazil, chiefly from Bahia and Espirito Santo.

The most important manufacturing industry in Brazil is cotton weaving (largely in São Paulo and Minas Geraes). There were in 1929, 347 cotton factories with 2,620,471 spindles and 78,910 looms. There are also 13 silk mills, 35 woollen mills, 16 jute mills, 18 paper mills (output, about 70,000 metric tons annually), over 2,000 tobacco factories, and approximately 216 sugar factories. In Rio de Janeiro flour milling is important, wheat being imported chiefly from the Argentine and Uruguayan Republics and the United States. There are 15 packing houses. There are about 500 hydro-electric plants, with a combined capacity of 700,000 horse-power.

Shipping and Navigation.

Inland waterways, mostly rivers, are open to navigation over some 40,300 miles. By means of its waterways Brazil is connected with the neighbouring States. All coasting and river vessels must be Brazilian. Merchant shipping on June 30, 1933, included 29 sailing vessels of 50,107 tons, and 266 power-driven vessels of 438,781 gross tons. Rio de Janeiro and Santos are the two leading ports. The largest shipping company, the Lloyd Brasileiro with 73 vessels of 270,623 gross tons, is owned and subsidized by the Government.

Internal Communications.

Railway history in Brazil begins in 1854 with 89 miles. On December 31, 1931, the total length of railways 22,279 miles, with 3,395 locomotives, 45,078 freight waggons and 3,888 passenger cars. Of this total 13,153 miles were the property of the Union, 3,319 were operated under Federal concessions, 1,588 miles belonged to the States, and 4,219 miles were privately owned. The Central Brazil Railway (2,082 miles) is the principal railway in Brazil, and is owned by the State, and joins up the railways of Brazil with those of Uruguay, Argentina and Paraguay. The Paulista railway is electrified from Jundiahy to Rincao (177 miles), and the Oeste de Minas railway from Barra Mansa to Augusto Pestana, a length of 44 miles. The total length of highways in 1932, was 90,644 miles, of which 20 per cent. were first-class roads. Motor cars, 1932, totalled 224,820.

Of the telegraph system of the country about half, including all inter-State lines, is under control of the Government. There are 75,000 miles of line, including 46,291 miles of Government property, 7,516 miles of railway property and 21,196 miles of submarine cables. In 1928 there were 5,115 telegraph offices. Three submarine cables connect Brazil with Europe, 2 with the United States, and 3 with the River Plate. All-America Cables operates land lines between Sao Paulo and Santos, and submarine cables from Rio de Janeiro and Santos, linking those points with all Latin America and the United States. Telephone service in the State of Rio Grande do Sul as well as point-to-point radio telegraph service between the cities of Rio de Janeiro, Porto Alegre, Sao Paulo, Florianopolis and Curityba are furnished by the Companhia Telefonica Rio Grandense.

About 40 wireless stations, including one very powerful one, have been established; there are 485 wireless land stations. Radio telephonic communications with the United States was opened in December, 1931.

Brazilian Post-office, with 4,870 offices, during 1931 handled 1,506,259,574 letters and post-cards; air-mails handled 3,324,884 pieces of mail.

Since 1927 several companies, especially the Compagnie Generale Aero-postale, the Kondor Syndicate and the Pan American Airways, furnish air-mail and passenger services; in 1931 66 planes were in service.

A decree was issued in 1913 adopting the standard time and longitude of Greenwich (instead of that of Rio de Janeiro) as from January 1, 1914.

Money, Credit, and Banking.

Brazil has long had a dual currency, with a gold milreis (1,000 reals or reis) for foreign trade and a paper milreis for domestic trade. But a presidential decree of November 21, 1933, abolished the gold milreis and authorised the collection of customs at a new rate of 8 milreis paper to 1 milreis gold. Another decree of November 27 made the paper milreis legal tender for all debts, public or private, whether stated in gold milreis or not.

The law of December 18, 1926, attempted to fix the gold milreis as equal to 4.567 paper milreis = 5½*d.* (sterling at par) = 11.96 cents (U.S.). But in its 1931 finances, the Government reckoned 1 gold milreis = 6.75 paper milreis = 4*d.* sterling, and in 1933, as stated, reduced the nominal gold value still further. The exchange value of the gold milreis in London in 1933 ranged between 5½*d.* and 5¾*d.*; in New York between 9.00 cents and 7.50 cents. The currency in use is chiefly paper, of the following denominations: 1, 2, 5, 10, 20, 50, 100, 200, 500 and 1,000 milreis. The last-named is always called '1 conto of reis.'

The law passed December 18, 1926, set up a new unit of account called the cruzeiro, a gold coin to contain 2 grammes of gold .900 fine. Gold coins of 2, 5 and 10 cruzeiro were eventually to be minted, along with subsidiary token coinage.

A law of April, 1927, placed the volume of currency under control of the Caixa de Estabilizacdo, but the Provisional Government on November 22, 1930, abolished the bureau and transferred its functions, with certain restrictions, to the Bank of Brazil. The latter controls the purchase and sale of all foreign exchange.

Total paper currency in circulation, December 31, 1930, had been reduced to 2,713,600,000 milreis (about 56,500,000*l.*), but its convertibility into gold had been suspended by the decree of November 22, 1930, which transferred the entire gold reserve abroad to protect the foreign exchange value of the milreis. The rebellion in Sao Paulo in July, 1932, resulted in an increase of about 400,000 contos in the circulation, which stood on December 31, 1933, at 2,982,352,000 milreis.

The Bank of Brazil (founded in 1803 and reorganized in 1906) with an authorised capital of 100,000 contos of reis) has 83 branches throughout the Republic, and does a general banking business. Its reserves, December 31, 1932, stood at 220,185 contos; total deposits, 2,647,019 contos; current loans, 1,502,739 contos; cash on hand, 458,206 contos; own notes in circulation, 170,000 contos. During 1933 note circulation was reduced to 40,000 contos.

Commercial banks on September 30, 1933, had cash on hand of 985,754 contos and total advances of 7,063,372 contos out of total resources and liabilities of 28,820,723 contos.

Weights and Measures.

The metric system has been in use in all official departments since 1862. It was made compulsory in 1872, but the ancient measures are still partly employed in certain rural districts of the interior. They are:—

The Libra	.	.	.	=	1.012 lbs. avoirdupois.
„ Arroba	.	.	.	=	32.38 „ „
„ Quintal	.	.	.	=	129.54 „ „
„ Alqueire (of Rio)	.	.	.	=	1 imperial bushel, or 40 litres.
„ Oitava	.	.	.	=	55.34 grains.

(BLGARIYA.)

Reigning King (Tsar)

Boris III, eldest son of King Ferdinand (of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha), and of the late Marie Louise (died January 31, 1899), eldest daughter of Robert the last reigning Duke of Parma, born January 30, 1894, succeeded to the throne on the abdication of his father, October 3, 1918, married October 25, 1930, Princess Giovanna of Savoy (Queen Ioanna), daughter of King Victor Emanuel III of Italy.

Offspring.—Princess Marie Louise, born January 13, 1933.

Brother and Sisters of the King.—(1) Prince Cyril, born November 17, 1895; (2) Princess Eudoxia, born January 17, 1898; and (3) Princess Nadejda, born January 30, 1899; m. January 24, 1924, to Duke Albert Eugène of Württemberg.

According to the Constitution the Sovereign and the heir to the throne must profess the Orthodox religion, and must reside permanently in the country. The royal title is hereditary.

The civil list is fixed (1934) at 5,000,000 leva, besides 29,170,000 leva for the maintenance of palaces, &c.

Constitution and Government.

The Principality of Bulgaria was created by the Treaty of Berlin, signed July 13, 1878. On October 5, 1908, Bulgaria declared her independence, and the Powers recognised Bulgarian independence, and the title of 'King of the Bulgarians' assumed by Prince Ferdinand. On September 18, 1885, the province of Eastern Rumelia was united with Bulgaria.

On September 30, 1912, Bulgaria allied with Serbia, Greece and Montenegro commenced war on Turkey (First Balkan War), which was ended by the Treaty of London on May 30, 1913, by which Turkey ceded to the Allies all its European territory west of a line drawn from Midia on the Black Sea to Enos on the Aegean, and also Crete. Crete was eventually ceded to Greece.

The Balkan League broke up almost immediately after the signing of the Treaty of London, owing to disagreements among the allies as to the division of the territory ceded to them, and on June 29, 1913, war broke out among the allies (Second Balkan War). On July 10, 1913, Rumania intervened to impose peace on the allies and to exact for herself from Bulgaria an extension of her frontier. Peace came finally on August 10 (July 26 old style), 1913, by the Treaty of Bukarest, between Bulgaria on the one hand, and Rumania, Serbia, Greece and Montenegro on the other.

By the Constitution of 1879, amended May, 1893, and June, 1911, the legislative authority was vested in a single Chamber, called the Sobranie or National Assembly, composed of 227 members. The members are elected by universal manhood suffrage at the rate of one member to every 20,000 of the population. On April 13, 1927, the Sobranie agreed to adopt the principle of proportional representation. Every member receives 400 levas a day (including Sundays and holidays) during the session. All over 30 years of age who can read and write (except the clergy, soldiers on active service, persons deprived of civil rights, &c.) are eligible as representatives. The duration of the Assembly is four years, but it may be dissolved at any time by the King, when new elections must take place within two months. Laws passed by the Sobranie require the assent of the King. Questions concerning the acquisition or cession of territory, changes in the constitution, a vacancy on the throne, or the appointment of a regent have to be decided by a Grand Sobranie, elected for the special purpose in a manner similar to that in which the ordinary Sobranie is elected, but with double the number of members.

Parties in the Sobranie (elected June 21, 1931):—Liaptchef Coalition, 79; National Bloc, consisting of: Agrarians, 74, non-Radoslavist Liberals, 29, Democrats, 41, Radicals, 7 (total 151); Social Democrats, 5; Communists, 31; Macedonian group, 8. Total, 274. According to a decree of April 12, 1933, the Communist members were excluded from Parliament.

The executive power is vested in a Council of Ministers nominated by the King. The cabinet (appointed October 12, 1931 and reorganized December 31, 1932, with additions January 18, 1933) is composed as follows:—

Premier and Minister for Foreign Affairs and Culls.—Nicholas Moushanoff (Democrat).

Minister of Interior.—Dr. Alexander Ghirghinoff (Democrat).

Minister of Education.—Dr. A. Boyadjieff (Liberal).

Minister of Justice.—M. I. Katchakoff (Liberal).

Minister of Commerce.—Dimitri Ghitcheff (Agrarian).

Minister of War.—Gerard A. Kissioff.

Minister of Finance.—Stephan Stephanoff (Democrat).

Minister of Public Works.—Verghil Dimoff (Agrarian).

Minister of Posts and Railways.—Stoyan Kostuorkoff (Radical).

Minister of Agriculture.—Constantine Mouravieff (Agrarian).

For local administration the country is divided into a number of Departments, each under a Prefect assisted by a Departmental Council and aided by several sub-prefects. Each community has its Kmet or mayor and its Council.

Area and Population.

The area of Bulgaria is 103,146 square kilometres, or 39,814 English square miles, and the census population on December 31, 1926, was 5,478,741 (2,743,025 males and 2,735,716 females), as against 4,846,971 (2,420,784 males and 2,426,187 females) in the census of 1920. Population on December 31, 1932, was estimated at 5,956,300 (2,991,800 males and 2,964,500 females); 20·6 per cent. of the population was urban and 79·4 per cent. rural.

By the Peace Treaty of Neuilly, signed on November 27, 1919, Bulgaria ceded Thrace to the Allied and Associated Powers and the Strumnitza line and a strip of territory on the north-west frontier to Serbia. Bulgaria was deprived of its Aegean littoral, but an efficient economic outlet to the same sea was promised to her by the Treaty, but has not yet been put into effect.

Religion and Education.

The national faith is that of the Orthodox Church, though, in 1870, in consequence of its demand for and acceptance of religious autonomy, the Bulgarian Church was declared by the Patriarch of Constantinople to be outside the Orthodox Communion. The Church is governed by the Synod of Archbishops. There are 11 Dioceses, viz., Sofia, Plovdiv, Stars Zagora, Sliven, Varna, Ruse, Tirnovo, Vratza, Lovetch, Vidin and Nevrokop, in addition to 4 in Macedonia and 1 in Thrace (suspended at present). In addition to the Archbishops in charge of these dioceses there are Bishops of Bregalnitz, Dragovitz, Nichava, Velitza, Vranitza and Znepolye. The clergy, both Orthodox and of other religious bodies, are paid by the State and also receive fees for services at burials, marriages, &c. There were, according to the last census of 1926, 4,568,773 members of the Orthodox Church of Bulgaria, 789,296 Moslems and 40,347 Catholics, 6,735 Protestants, 46,431 Jews, 25,402 Armenian-Georgians, and 1,757 others.

Elementary education is obligatory and free for children between the ages of 7 and 14. The census of 1926 showed that 26.53 per cent. of the male population and 53.60 per cent. of the female population were illiterate.

The following are the educational statistics of Bulgaria for 1931-32 :—

Justice.

The lowest Court is that of the Justices of the Peace, who possess jurisdiction in minor civil and criminal cases. The Departmental Court, or Court of First Instance, is competent to pronounce sentence of death and penal servitude, and also acts as a Court of Appeal. Above these are three Courts of Appeal, sitting at Sofia, Plovdiv and Ruse. The highest tribunal is the Court of Cassation, sitting at Sofia, and composed of 12 judges.

Finance.

On June 30, 1933, the total debt of Bulgaria was given as follows: Foreign debt: consolidated, 567,665,065 gold francs, 256,211,845 French francs, 3,112,280½ sterling, 16,985,500 dollars, 3,618,250 paper roubles, total equivalent to 19,641,549,931 leva; non-consolidated, 10,614,516 French francs, 1,391,866 Sw. francs, 2,988,700 dollars, 15,553 R.M., 471,473 gold Italian lire, 55,000,000 lei, total equivalent to 478,289,895 leva, or a grand total of consolidated and non-consolidated foreign debt of 20,119,839,626 leva. Internal debt: 6,523,401,450 leva (consolidated, 2,470,136,600 leva; non-consolidated, 4,053,264,650 leva).

Defence.

The pre-war peace strength of the Bulgarian army was about 3,900 officers and 56,000 other ranks. Its war strength was approximately 500,000 men.

Under the terms of the Treaty of Neuilly of November 27, 1919, the total military forces of Bulgaria must not in the future exceed 20,000 men, enrolled by voluntary system. The strength on December 31, 1932, was 966 officers, 17,652 other ranks. The obligatory military service is abolished. All measures of mobilisation are prohibited and, in order to prevent the formation of a reserve, service in the ranks is to be for a minimum period of 12 years. Officers serving at the time when the treaty was signed must undertake to serve at least till the age of 40 and newly appointed officers serve for at least 20 years.

A frontier guard of 3,000 men voluntarily enlisted is permitted (strength in 1932, 2,960); and in addition the number of armed gendarmes, police, customs officials and forest guards must not exceed 10,000 (strength in 1932, 6,643).

The maximum authorised armaments and munition supplies are :—

	Per 1,000 men.	Munitions per arm.
Rifles or carbines . . .	1,150	500 rounds
Machine guns . . .	15	10,000 „
Trench mortars, light . .	2	1,000 „
„ „ heavy . . .	2	500 „
Guns or howitzers . . .	3	1,000 „

No military or naval aircraft is permitted.

The manufacture of arms, munitions and war material is only to be carried out at one factory under State control. The importation and exportation of arms and munitions are prohibited.

In 1933 the strength of the active army was 999 officers, 18,957 other ranks, organised in 8 infantry regiments each of 3 battalions, 3 cavalry regiments each of 4 squadrons, 8 artillery groups each of 3 batteries, 3 battalions of engineers and auxiliary services. The gendarmerie and the frontier guards numbered 9,798 all ranks.

The military budget for 1933-34 amounted to 959,614 leva.

Under the terms of the treaty Bulgaria has surrendered all warships and submarines, but is permitted to maintain on the Danube and along the coast 4 torpedo boats and 6 motor boats, now of little value, all without torpedoes and torpedo apparatus, for police and fishery protection duties.

Production and Industry.

Agriculture is the chief occupation of the people. Land is held in absolute freehold by the owners and there is a land tax. The communes hold pasture-land and wood-land in perpetuity and pay no rent, and over such lands the members of the communes have grazing and wood-cutting rights.

According to the census of 1926, 80·02 per cent. of the active population (2,464,421) were engaged in agriculture, most of them being small proprietors holding from one to six acres. The methods of cultivation are primitive, but machinery is being gradually introduced.

The total area of Bulgaria is 10,814,617 hectares, or 25,786,550 acres; of this the cultivated area is (1931) 4,130,175 hectares, or 10,205,975 acres, and the forest area (1931) 2,942,922 hectares, or 7,262,255 acres (671,803 hectares belonging to the State, 1,665,754 hectares to the municipalities, and 605,865 hectares to others).

The area and yield of cereals for 2 years are given as follows :—

Fruit grows in abundance, especially in the neighbourhood of Kustendil. The area under vines was 224,168 acres in 1931, and the vintage about 47,504,183 gallons. Cotton in 1932 yielded 13,021 quintals, and in 1933, 38,939 quintals from 20,090 acres and 50,020 acres respectively. Sugar production in 1931 was 27,953 metric tons, the area under beet being 29,915 acres; production in 1932, 27,820 metric tons; 16,801 acres were under rose cultivation in 1931, producing 2,231 kilogs of essence, as against 16,475 acres and 1,862 kilogs in 1930. Tobacco area in 1932, 50,715 acres, yield, 17,352 metric tons; 1933 yield 17,514 metric tons from 57,562 acres. In 1930, the production of silkworm cocoons was 2,265,275 kilos valued at 79,284,625 leva; in 1931, the production was 1,109,589 kilos valued at 38,835,615 leva; and in 1932, the production was 1,304,487 kilos valued at 39,136,610 leva.

Industry is not much developed, though the State encourages industrial enterprise. On January 1, 1932, there were 1,367 'encouraged' undertakings in operation. Mining development has been slow. The country is rich in coal; there are three State mines (at Pernik, Bobovdovl and Maritza), and several privately-owned mines. Total coal production in 1932, 1,761,149 metric tons, of which 1,488,847 tons came from State mines and 272,302 tons from privately-owned mines, compared with 1,522,541 tons (1,295,578 tons from state mines and 226,963 tons from private mines) in 1931. In 1932 there were mined the following minerals (in metric tons):—copper, 40; lead, 62; aluminium, 2,836; and salt, 3,380.

Shipping and Communications.

Mercantile marine comprises 11 vessels of 8,242 tons.

The number of vessels entered at all the Black Sea ports of Bulgaria in 1933 was 5,828 of 2,195,182 tons; number of vessels cleared, 5,802 of 2,183,707 tons. At all the Danube ports there entered, in 1933, 10,528 vessels of 1,859,824 tons; and cleared, 10,517 vessels of 1,855,786 tons.

In 1932, there were in Bulgaria 4,785 miles of State roads, and 5,919 miles of communal roads; total: 10,704 miles of road.

In 1932, Bulgaria had 1,649 miles of railway of ordinary gauge and 262 miles of narrow gauge; total, 1,911 miles. All the lines belong to the State, which works them. Railways connect Sofia with the general European system. In 1932, there were 39 miles of electric tramways.

There were, in 1932, 578 post offices. Total correspondence handled, 44,963,766 letters and postcards, 842,548 parcels. Length of telegraph line (excluding line belonging to the railways) in 1932, 1,467 miles; number of offices, 573; number of messages, 2,562,384. In 1932 there were 613 telephone stations; length of line, 9,659 miles, number of conversations, 59,541,844, of which 37,160 were international.

Money and Credit.

The National Bank of Bulgaria, with headquarters at Sofia and branches in the different towns of Bulgaria, has a capital of 500,000,000 leva, provided by the State. It has the sole right of note issue. On August 7, 1933, it had in hand 1,521,102,581 leva in gold, and reserves of 1,192,579,237 leva. The note circulation on the same date was 2,640,496,902 leva. There is also a State Agricultural Bank for the purpose of providing cheap credit for the agricultural community. Its capital is 726,067,913 leva. The Bulgarian International Bank for facilitating and encouraging international trade was established on January 11, 1922. The original capital of this bank was 75,000,000 leva, of which 30,000,000 leva were apportioned to the Bulgarian National Bank and the Bulgarian Agricultural Bank, and the remainder to foreign banks and organisations. The Bulgarian Co-operative Bank is another State bank founded in 1910.

Deposits in the 548 Postal Savings Banks of Bulgaria at December 31, 1932, amounted to 1,346,000,000 leva.

Coins in circulation: gold pieces of 100, 20, and 10 leva; silver pieces of 100, 50, and 20 leva; copper-nickel pieces of 10, 5, 2, and 1 leva; nickel pieces of 20, 10, 5, and 2½ stotinki (centimes); and zinc pieces of 20, 10, and 5 stotinki (centimes): the notes of the National Bank circulate at par. The leva has been stabilised at 92 leva to 1 gramme of fine gold, or 673·659 leva = 1*l* (gold).

The metric system is in general use. On April 1, 1916, the Gregorian Calendar came into force in Bulgaria.

CHILE.

(REPÚBLICA DE CHILE.)

Constitution and Government.

THE Republic of Chile threw off allegiance to the Crown of Spain, constituting a national government on September 18, 1810, finally freeing itself from Spanish rule in 1818.

The following is a list of the Presidents since 1896:—

Don Federico Errázuriz, Sept. 18, 1896—Sept. 18, 1901.	Don Juan Luis Sanfuentes, Dec. 23, 1915—Dec. 23, 1920.
Don Germán Riesco, Sept. 18, 1901—Sept. 18, 1906.	Don Arturo Alessandri, Dec. 23, 1920—Sept. 10, 1924. ^a
Don Pedro Montt, Sept. 18, 1906—Aug. 16, 1910. ¹	Gen. Don Luis Altamirano (Acting), Sept. 10, 1924—Jan. 28, 1925. ^a
Don Elías Fernández Albano (Acting), Aug. 16, 1910—Sept. 8, 1910. ¹
Don Emilliano Figueroa Larraín (Acting), Sept. 8, 1910—Dec. 23, 1910.
Don Ramón Barros Luco, Dec. 23, 1910—Dec. 23, 1915.

Junta appointed.

³ Deposed.⁴ Resigned.

By the Constitution of October 18, 1925, legislative power is vested in the National Congress, consisting of the Senate and the Chamber of Deputies, both of which are elected by direct popular vote. The Senate consists of 45 members, elected for eight years, who represent 9 provincial groups of departments. Each group elects five senators. One-half the Senate is renewable every four years. The Chamber of Deputies consists of 143 members elected for four years by departments or groups of departments, one member for every 30,000 inhabitants or fraction of not less than 15,000. The Belgian system of proportional representation prevails. Electors are all registered citizens of 21 years of age or over, who are able to read and write; electorate numbers 464,879 of whom 343,892 participated in the presidential election of October 30, 1932. All voting is by ballot. Congress sits from May 21 to September 18. The President of the Republic is elected for a term of six years, by direct popular vote. A retiring President is not re-eligible. In legislation the President has a modified veto; a bill returned to the Chambers with the President's objections may, by a two-thirds vote of the members present (a majority of the members being present), be sustained and become law. The validity of all elections of President, Deputies and Senators is determined by a special body called Tribunal Calificador, consisting of five members chosen by lot from among the following: One each from past-presidents or vice-presidents of the Chamber and Senate; two from members of the Supreme Court; and one from members of the Court of Appeal of the city where Congress meets. The capital is Santiago.

President of the Republic.—Don Arturo Alessandri. Elected October 30, 1932; assumed office, December 24, 1932.

The salary of the President is fixed at 84,000 pesos.

The President is assisted by eight Ministers of State, who constitute a Cabinet and who are responsible to him. Ministers may speak in Congress but do not vote.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

For the purposes of local government the Republic is divided into Provinces, presided over by Intendentes; and the Provinces into Departments, with Gobernadores as chief officers, appointed by the President. The Departments constitute one or more municipal districts each with a council or municipality of 5 to 15 members, elected for three years. The Government in 1930 took over control of the finances of the 65 Departments, to safeguard a loan made to them in New York of 15 million dollars.

Area and Population.

Chile is divided into 17 provinces. All provinces except 2 extend from the Pacific to the international boundary, while the inter-provincial boundaries in most cases now follow watersheds instead of rivers, thus confining within one province the waters of a single system and avoiding jurisdictional disputes.

For an account of the dispute between Chile and Peru regarding the provinces of Tarapacá and Tacna-Arica, see the STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1931, p. 718.

The present areas of the various provinces and their populations, as determined by the census of 1920 and that of November 27, 1930, are as follows:—

¹ Population in 1920 of the present areas as revised in 1927.

Many islands to the north, west, and south belong to Chile. The coast-line is about 2,485 miles in length; the average width of the country, 110 miles.

In the census of 1930, 2,122,709 were males and 2,164,736 females, and 49·4 per cent. were urban; 1,337,814 or 31 per cent. were gainfully employed. Estimated population on January 1, 1933, was 4,403,465. The great majority of the population is of European origin. The indigenous inhabitants are of three branches, the Fuegians, mostly nomadic, living in or near Tierra del Fuego; the Araucanians (98,703) in the valleys or on the western slopes of the Andes; the Changos, who inhabit the northern coast region and work as labourers. Foreigners included in the census of 1930 numbered 105,463, of whom Spaniards, with 23,439, formed the largest group.

The two leading cities, with census population in 1930, are Santiago, 696,231, and Valparaíso, 193,205. Other towns with census population in 1930 are:—Concepción, 77,589; Antofagasta, 53,591; Viña del Mar, 49,488; Iquique, 46,468; Talca, 45,020; Chillán, 39,511; Temuco, 35,748; Valdivia, 34,296; Talcahuano, 27,594; Magallanes, 24,307.

Births in 1932, 149,459; marriages, 28,813; deaths, 99,664; passengers arriving, 25,107; departing, 25,930. There is no divorce.

Religion.

The Roman Catholic religion was maintained by the State, but in 1925 the church was disestablished. There is one archbishop (Santiago), 12 bishops, and three vicars apostolic. There were in 1931, 1,239 churches and chapels.

Education.

Education is gratuitous and at the cost of the State, and since August 26, 1920, compulsory for at least six years in the cities and four years in the rural districts. A decree issued February, 1928, makes it compulsory for all children between the ages of 7 and 15. There were in 1931, 3,944 public and private primary schools with 553,944 pupils and 11,816 teachers; 7 public normal schools with 1,362 pupils and 195 teachers; 200 public and private secondary schools with 35,225 pupils and 3,523 teachers; 11 public commercial schools with 198 teachers and 3,539 pupils. Professional and secondary instruction is provided in the State University of Chile, with 3,911 students in 1932, the Catholic University at Santiago (973 students in 1932), the National Institute of Santiago, the University of Concepción, and in the lyceums and colleges established in the capitals of provinces, and in some departments. A school of technology was opened at Valparaíso (Universidad Industrial de Valparaíso). There are besides agricultural schools, schools of mines, and professional schools. Education expenditures in 1929 took 160,546,991 pesos.

There are 885 newspapers and journals published in Chile, including 96 dailies and 177 weeklies.

Justice and Crime.

There are, in addition to a High Court of Justice in the capital, eight Courts of Appeal distributed over the Republic, Tribunals of First Instance in the departmental capitals, and second class judges in the subdelegations. The police force includes about 15,316 officers and men; it is organised and regulated by the President of the Republic at the charge of the national treasury.

Finance.

In recent years the revenue and expenditure were as follows (40 pesos = £1 at par; 1 peso = 12 cents, U.S.):—

Year	Revenue	Expenditure	Year	Revenue	Expenditure
	Pesos	Pesos		Pesos	Pesos
1929	1,267,556,419	1,118,202,372	1932	514,756,934	703,609,112
1930	1,055,189,183	1,131,490,328	1933 ¹	945,962,000	945,593,001

Customs revenue in 1930, 532,805,478 pesos; in 1931, 302,309,000 pesos. Nitrate taxes, 1929, furnished 295,875,400 pesos (23·08 per cent. of revenue); in 1930, 173,568,300 pesos (15·32 per cent.).

On September 1, 1932, funded external debt was 2,430,829,000 pesos; arrears of interest, 161,742,121 pesos; external floating debt, 337,543,009 pesos; guaranteed foreign loans, 1,155,460,978 pesos; and external Treasury notes, 39,406,087 pesos; internal debt, 929,488,798 pesos. Payments on external debts were suspended July 30, 1931.

Defence.

ARMY.

The Chilean Army is a national militia in which all able-bodied citizens are obliged to serve. Liability extends from the 20th to the 45th year, inclusive. Recruits are called up in their 20th year, and are trained mostly for one and a half years. Afterwards they serve for 12 years in the reserve of the active army, after which they belong till the completion of their 45th year to the second reserve. The latter is organised as a second-line army.

Chile is divided into 3 zones or military districts, each of which furnishes a complete division on mobilisation. The army is organised in 3 divisions, comprising: 9 regiments and 3 mountain infantry battalions, 6 cavalry regiments, 4 field artillery regiments, 3 heavy artillery groups and 3 mountain artillery groups, 1 engineering regiment, 1 battalion of railway troops and 2 aviation groups. The total strength of the active army in 1933 was 1,325 officers and 6,735 other ranks.

The infantry are armed with the Chilean Mauser rifle (1895), calibre 7 mm., and the cavalry with a carbine of similar pattern and lance. The field artillery are armed with Q. F. Krupp guns.

In December, 1918, an Air Force was formed under British instruction, and comprised in 1933 11 flights with 105 aeroplanes.

NAVY.

The principal vessels of the Chilean fleet are as follows:—

Name	Launched	Displacement, tons	Extreme Armouring, inches	Main Armament	Torpedo Tubes	Indicated Horse-Power	Nominal Speed
Battleship: Almirante Latorre . . .	1913	23,000	10	10 14-in.; 14 6-in.; 44-in.	4	37,000	23
Coast Defence Vessel: Capitan Prat	1890	6,900	12	4 9 4-in.; 8 4 7-in.	2	12,000	18
Armoured Cruiser: O'Higgins	1897	8,500	7	4 8-in.; 10 6-in.; 12 3-in.	2	16,000	21.5
Protected Cruisers: Blanco Encalada . . .	1893	4,420	—	2 8-in.; 10 6-in.	5	14,500	22
Chacabuco	1898	4,500	—	2 6-in.; 10 4 7-in.; 5 3-in.	5	15,500	24

The Almirante Latorre served in the British Fleet during the war as the Canada, and in 1930-31 was refitted and modernised at Devonport Dockyard under a contract between the Chilean Government and the Admiralty. There are 11 large destroyers, all built in England, 9 submarines, and various training and auxiliary vessels. A submarine depot ship, the Araucano, and two oil tankers were completed in British yards in 1930. The general efficiency of the personnel of the Navy appears to be high; the active strength at present is about 8,000.

A number of British naval and air officers have been lent to the Chilean Navy in recent years in connexion with the re-organisation of training in certain branches.

Agriculture and Industry.

There are three zones in Chile—the arid zone in the north, which for many years has furnished the world's entire supply of natural nitrate of soda, 90 per cent. of its iodine and 18 per cent. of copper consumed; the agricultural zone in the centre; and the forest zone in the south. Mining in the north and agriculture in the centre are the principal occupations. Total area of agricultural land (1930) was 87,494,000 acres; of forest land, 5,080,000 acres; of fruit trees and vines, 293,600 acres; of meadows, 37,087,000 acres. Number of farms in 1930, 210,736 with an average value of 28,800 pesos. Chile produces annually large quantities of cereals, besides excellent wine (5,889,752 litres exported in 1932, chiefly to Germany and Belgium), fruit, and vegetables. Capital invested in vineyards is about 414,000,000 pesos. Tobacco output from 4,625 acres in 1932 was 10,212,140 lbs. The principal crops of the harvest for 3 years are shown as follows:—

The live stock census of June 30, 1930, showed 441,027 horses, 37,455 asses, 31,414 mules, 2,387,940 cattle, 6,263,482 sheep, 788,831 goats, and 331,156 pigs.

Dairy farms and the production of butter and cheese are on the increase. In Patagonia and Tierra del Fuego large tracts of country are devoted to sheep-farming, largely by British subjects; wool exports, 1932, 24,711 tons. Extensive natural forests are found, the largest in the provinces of Valdivia, Llanquihue and Chiloé. Exports of soap bark (quillaya) in 1932 amounted to 714 tons, principally to Germany.

The wealth of the country, however, consists chiefly in its minerals, especially in the northern provinces of Atacama and Tarapacá. The metals obtained are gold, silver, copper (Chile is the world's second largest producer of copper, with 1932 output of 103,199 tons, and exports of 121,000 tons), cobalt, zinc and manganese; the non-metallic substances being coal, nitrate, borate, salt, sulphur (about 15,500 tons per year), and guano. Production of gold, principally from 'washings' is increasing; output in 1932 was 35,179 ounces; of silver, 182,800. Iron-ore deposits are found in the provinces of Atacama and of Coquimbo, estimated at over 1,000,000,000 tons. Coal production in 1932, 1,085,005 tons. Reserves total 2,000,000,000 metric tons, partly low in thermal units.

Nitrate of soda, or 'salitre,' is Chile's most important article of export and usually a substantial source of governmental revenue. It is found in the section of the desert of Atacama known locally as the 'pampa salitrera,' a territory comprising an area of some 500 miles in length, lying between latitude 15° and 26° south, and situated at an elevation above sea level of from 2,000 to 6,000 feet. There are 152 nitrate works or oficinas with a productive capacity of 58,136,000 quintals; 7 were in operation in 1931-32, producing 1,067,200 tons, of which 920,100 tons were exported. Production from 20 oficinas in 1930-31, 1,575,200 tons, exports, 1,631,100 tons. About 90 per cent. of the world's supply of iodine is a by-product of the Chilean nitrate oficinas.

In 1930 census, 92,719 were returned as owners of manufacturing establishments, with 296,201 employees. Electric power is abundant.

Shipping and Navigation.

The commercial shipping of Chile consisted, on June 30, 1933, of 102 steamers, motor-driven vessels and sailing vessels of 155,710 tons gross. The shipping entered and cleared at the ports of Chile in foreign trade in 1932 was as follows: Entered, 1,165,265 tons; cleared, 1,172,274 tons.

Communications.

In 1930, there were in Chile 24,414 miles of highways, of which 20,045 miles were earth roads, 3,878 miles of sand and clay or gravel, 358 miles of macadam and 37 miles of concrete or asphalt. Only 37 miles can be called first-class and 358 second-class. About 16,000 are fit for motor traffic. There were (1931) 26,575 automobiles and 14,144 trucks and motor-buses. There are 851 miles of navigable river, and 497 miles of navigable lakes.

The length of State Railway lines amounted in 1930 to 3,600 miles; private railway lines, principally British-owned, to 1,940 miles, making a total of 5,540 miles. State Railway lines are:—Arica-La Paz Railway, (Chilean section) 128 miles; North Longitudinal Railway, 442 miles; Central North Line, 1,078 miles; Central South Line, 1,770 miles; and Puente Alto-Valcan Railway, 38 miles. The Government has 70 per cent. ownership of the Chilean Transandine Line. State-owned lines produced an operating profit in 1930 of 23,649,545 pesos. Electrification of the railways was commenced in 1921 on the line between Valparaiso and Santiago, a distance of 115 miles. Aviation is highly developed between interior points and abroad; a plant for the manufacture of airplanes was established in 1930.

The 890 post-offices and agencies dispatched in 1932, 77,348,628 postal pieces. The length of telegraph lines at the end of 1932 was 19,727 miles (10,555 miles Government and 9,172 miles private). In 1930, there were 430 Government offices, and 532 private offices. There were (1930) 327 telephone exchanges with 35,489 subscribers. The largest telephone company is the American-owned Chile Telephone Company which operates in Santiago, Valparaiso and other cities, with 249 exchanges and 30,967 subscribers.

A chain of wireless stations along the coast for shore-to-ship transmission is operated by the Navy; stations are at Arica, Antofagasta, Coquimbo, Valparaiso, Talcahuano, Valdivia, Puerto Montt, Magallanes (formerly known as Punta Arenas), and Quilicura (near Santiago). The first international radio station was opened at Quilicura in 1928. A wireless station is also being erected on the Juan Fernandez Islands, about 400 miles west and south of Valparaiso. There are 3 large broadcasting stations.

Banking and Credit.

In August, 1925, the Government established at Santiago the Central Bank of Chile, with (1933) 10,000,000 pesos paid up capital, which should have the right of issuing a new peso, value 6*d.*, to be the basis of a new national currency. The Central Bank commenced operations on January 11, 1926, and gold payments were re-established. On June 30, 1933, the Central Bank had paid-up capital and reserves of 201,738,811 pesos, cash 107,428,071 pesos and deposits, 491,059,345 pesos.

The paid-up capital and reserve funds of 12 leading Chilean and 7 foreign banks amounted on June 30, 1933, to 549,000,000 pesos; total loans and investments, 1,148,000,000 pesos. The Caja Nacional de Ahorros has a monopoly of savings accounts; on June 30, 1933, the savings deposits amounted to 228,000,000 pesos.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The monetary unit is the gold Peso, containing 0.183057 gramme of fine gold, with, originally, a par value of 6*d.* sterling or 12.17 cents, U.S. £1 sterling therefore equals at par, 40 gold pesos. Only gold coins of 20, 40 (called, officially, the 'libra Chilena' and equal to the £ sterling), 50 and 100 pesos are minted. But no gold circulates. The silver coinage is mainly one coin, the peso, with formerly a fine silver content of 2.4 grammes, but now (1934) pesos of nickel (25 per cent.) and copper (75 per cent.) are replacing the silver pesos. In April, 1932, the convertibility of the currency was suspended. The exchange value of the peso is fixed by the Central Bank, which promotes barter when exchange is not available; in 1933 the rate on London was nominally around 53 pesos to the £; in New York it ranged from 10.25 cents, U.S. to 6.12 cents. There are nickel coins of 1, 0.20, 0.10 and 0.05 peso. Actually the currency in circulation is chiefly paper issued by the Central Bank in lieu of gold, in denominations of 10,000, 5,000, 1,000, 500, 100, 50, 10, 5, and 1 pesos.

The metric system has been legally established in Chile since 1865, but the old Spanish weights and measures are still in use to some extent. Greenwich time has been adopted in place of Chilean time.

CHINA.

(CHUNG-HUA MIN-KUO, i.e. REPUBLIC OF CHINA.)

Government.

ON February 12, 1912, China, one of the oldest of Monarchies, became a Republic.

The Chinese Imperial family was of Manchu origin, dating from 1644, and was styled Ta Ch'ing Ch'ao ('Great Pure Dynasty'). The last Emperor, P'u-yi, was the tenth of the line; but the official genealogy is carried back six generations earlier than the real founder, and P'u-yi's will be the sixteenth name in the canonised series of Ta Ch'ing Emperors. He was born on February 11, 1906, succeeded his uncle, the Emperor Kuang-Hsi, on November 14, 1908, and abdicated on February 12, 1912. On December 1, 1923, he was married. He retained the title of Emperor of the Manchu Imperial House up to November 5, 1924 (when it was abolished), together with other rights of preferential treatment secured under the Abdication Agreement, making P'u-yi an ordinary citizen of the republic. For account of the Revolution of 1911, see STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1912, pp. 699-701, and for later developments, see STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1919, pp. 740-41, and the STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1928, p. 734.

The present Government at Nanking (March, 1934) is a Committee Government, representing broadly the Kuomintang, or National Party. According to the 'Organic law of the National Government of the Republic of China,' which the Kuomintang promulgated on October 4, 1928 (amended December, 1931), the National Government is to be composed of five Yuan (Councils)—Executive, Legislative, Judicial, Examination, and Control. There shall be a President and from 24 to 36 Government Councillors, and a President and Vice-President of each Yuan, who are to be elected by the Central Committee of Kuomintang. The Executive, Legislative, Judicial, Examination, and Control Yuan shall be responsible to the Central Executive Committee of the Kuomintang. Decrees, decisions, and commands of military mobilisation shall be signed by the President of the National Government, and counter-signed by the President of the appropriate Yuan, and by the Minister of the appropriate Ministry. The Executive Council shall be the highest organ of the National Government. It shall establish Ministries to which will be entrusted various executive duties, and it may appoint commissions for specified executive matters. It may introduce in the Legislative Council Bills on matters within its competence. Budgets, amnesties, declarations of war, peace negotiations, conclusions of treaties, and other important international matters are to be submitted to the Legislative Council.

The Legislative Council shall be the highest legislative organ. It shall have power to decide upon legislation, budgets, amnesties, declarations of war, negotiations for peace, the conclusion of treaties, and other important international matters. It shall have a President and Vice-President, and shall be composed of between 49 and 99 members to be appointed by the National Government at the instance of the President of the Legislative Council. The term of office shall be two years, and members shall not concurrently be non-political administrative officials of the various organs of the Central or local Governments.

The Judicial Council shall be the highest judicial organ, and shall take charge of judicial trial, judicial administration, disciplinary punishment of officials and trial of administrative cases. The granting of pardons, reprieves, and restitution of civil rights shall be submitted by the President of the Judicial Council to the National Government for approval and action.

The Examination Council shall be the highest examination organ, and shall take charge of examinations and determine qualifications for the public service. All public functionaries shall be appointed only after they have passed an examination and their qualifications for the public service have been determined by the Examination Council.

The Control Council shall be the highest supervisory organ, and shall, according to law, exercise the powers of impeachment and auditing. It shall have a President and Vice-President, and shall be composed of from 19 to 29 members who are to be appointed by the National Government at the instance of the President of the Control Council. The security of tenure of office by members shall be determined by law, and members shall not concurrently hold any office in any organs of Central or local Governments.

President of the National Government of China.—Mr. Lin Shen (February, 1932; re-elected January, 1934).

There is also a Cabinet of Ministers, appointed in January, 1932, as follows:—

President of the Administrative Council.—Wang Ching-wei.

Minister of Finance.—H. H. Kung (October 29, 1933).

Minister of Foreign Affairs.—Wang Ching-wei.

Minister for War.—General Ho Yin-chin.

Minister of the Navy.—Admiral Chen Shao-kuan.

Minister of Industry.—Chen Kung-po.

Minister of Education.—Chu Chia-hua.

Minister of Railways.—Ku Meng-yu.

Minister of the Interior.—General Huang Shao-shan.

Minister of Communications.—Chu Chia-hua.

Minister of Justice.—Dr. Lo Wen-Kan.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

In July, 1928, six special municipalities were organized at Nanking, Shanghai, Tsingtao, Tientsin, Hankow and Canton, and several new ordinary municipalities were also established, but in May, 1930, the distinction between special and ordinary municipalities was revoked. There is still a difference between municipalities under the direct control of the Executive Yuan and those under provincial control. The Mayor of a city of the former type is appointed by the Government, while in the other case a Mayor is recommended by the Provincial authorities, for approval by the Central Government, or else is directly appointed by the local authorities. In municipalities under Executive Yuan control, the heads of the different bureaux are either directly appointed by Government or are recommended by the Mayor for subsequent approval by the Government. Bureau heads in municipalities under provincial control are either directly appointed by the provincial authority or are recommended by the Mayor for approval by the Provincial Government.

Area and Population.

According to statistics compiled by the Ministry of the Interior (1932), the total population of China is 474,787,386. The most recent estimate of the area of the country (including Manchuria) is 4,278,352 sq. miles.

The following table gives a statement of the area and population of the Chinese Republic according to the estimate of the Post Office in 1926:—

Estimates prepared by the Chinese Maritime Customs in 1929 gave the total of 438,933,373, inclusive of 19,290,000 for Manchuria. The figures for Mongolia and Tibet are rough estimates, and a certain amount of reserve should be maintained in regard to all these figures.

The Island of Formosa was ceded to Japan in accordance with the terms of the Treaty of Shimonoseki, ratified and exchanged at Chefoo on the 8th of May, 1895. The formal transfer of the Island was effected on June 2, 1895.

By agreement with the Chinese Government, dated March 27, 1898, Russia took possession of Port Arthur and Talienwan (called Dalny by Russia and Dairen by Japan) and their adjacent territories and waters, on lease for the term of 25 years, with option of extension by mutual agreement. In 1900, in consequence of the 'Boxer' uprising, Russia occupied Manchuria. Japan, after long and unsuccessful efforts to induce Russia to withdraw, broke off diplomatic relations, and on February 8, 1904, commenced hostilities. The war, in the course of which Japan proved victorious both on land and at sea, was brought to an end by the Treaty of Portsmouth, signed September 5, 1905. Under this Treaty Russia and Japan agreed to evacuate Manchuria, except the territory affected by the lease of Kwantung (or the Liao-tung Peninsula), where Japan succeeds to the leasehold and other rights of Russia. The exclusive administration of Manchuria (with the exception mentioned) was to be restored to China. By treaty of December 22, 1905, China agreed to the transfer to Japan from Russia of the lease of the Liao-tung Peninsula and the control of the railway from Port Arthur to Ch'ang-chun (Kwan-ch'angtzu), and conceded to Japan the right to construct a railway from Antung to Mukden, and agreed to open 16 Manchurian ports and cities to foreign commerce.

The Chinese Government granted to the French in April, 1898, a 99 years' lease of the Bay of Kwang-Chau-Wan, on the coast of the peninsula, between Hong Kong and the Island of Hainan, and in November, 1899, the possession of the two islands commanding the entrance of the bay. This territory has been placed under the authority of the Governor-General of French Indo-China.

In accordance with a Convention signed between the British Government and the National Government of China on April 18, 1930, the rendition of Wei-hai-Wei to China took place on October 1, 1930.

The Belgian concession at Tientsin was formally restored to China on January 15, 1931.

Peiping (formerly called Peking), the capital of China until 1928, has a population of 811,188 according to the 1926 census of the Municipal Bureau. According to the Census of the Metropolitan Police Administration, taken in 1927, the population of Peking and its suburbs is close on 1,297,718 (779,704 males and 518,014 females). The population of the treaty ports was given as follows for 1931 by the Chinese Maritime Customs: Aigun, 38,112; Harbin, 330,436; Hunchun, 39,000; Lungchingsun, 4,059; Antung, 91,015; Dairen, 282,665; Newchwang, 106,040; Chinwangtao, 20,020; Tientsin, 1,387,462; Lungkow, 10,676; Chefoo, 131,659; Tsingtao, 390,337; Chungking, 685,000; Wanhsien, 210,837; Changsha, 606,972; Yochow, 4,800; Ichang, 107,940; Shasi, 113,526; Hankow, 777,993 (including Wuchang and Hanyang); Kiukiang, 80,166; Wuhu, 135,385; Nanking, 683,452; Chinkiang, 199,776; Shanghai (including neighbouring districts), 3,259,114 (the International Settlement at Shanghai has a total of 1,007,868 inhabitants, of which 971,397 are Chinese and 36,471 foreigners); Soochow, 260,000; Hangchow (municipal area), 506,930; Ningpo, 218,774; Wenchow, 631,276; Santuao, 9,000; Foochow, 322,725; Amoy, 234,159; Swatow, 178,636; Canton, 861,024; Kongmoon, 32,200; Samshui, 9,160; Kiungchow, 45,757; Pakhoi, 36,000; Wuchow, 90,000; Nanning, 68,110; Lungchow, 13,600; Mengtsz, 193,004; Szemao, 20,000; Tengyueh, 19,000. In addition, there are also a number of other places open to international trade; these are called commercial ports or marts, and were opened at the instance of the Chinese Government. Nanking is the present capital.

According to the estimate of the Customs authorities, in 1931 the total number of foreigners resident in China was 370,393, made up as follows:—

American . . .	8,637	French . . .	8,651	Russian . . .	66,479
Austrian . . .	245	German . . .	3,444	Spanish . . .	334
Belgian . . .	546	Italian . . .	756	Swedish . . .	342
British . . .	13,344	Japanese . . .	260,621	Swiss . . .	309
Czechoslovak . . .	276	Mexican . . .	4	Other Countries . . .	2,455
Danish . . .	650	Norwegian . . .	229
Dutch . . .	700	Polish . . .	14	Total . . .	370,393
Finnish . . .	89	Portuguese . . .	2,368

The total number of Chinese abroad was estimated in January, 1934, to be about 11,393,636 persons, including 3,400,000 in Formosa, 2,000,000 in Malay and Borneo, 1,233,855 in Dutch East Indies.

Until 1929 there were 23 Treaty Powers in China, as follows: Great Britain (1842), United States (1844), France (1844), Norway and Sweden (1847), Denmark (1863), Netherlands (1863), Spain (1864), Belgium (1865), Italy (1866), Peru (1874), Brazil (1881), Portugal (1887), Japan (1896), Mexico (1899), Chile (1915), Switzerland (1918), Bolivia (1919), Persia (1920), Germany (1921), Soviet Russia (1924), Austria (1926), and Finland (1927). Of these powers, Germany, Bolivia, Persia, Chile, Austria, Mexico, Soviet Russia, and Finland have renounced the privilege of consular jurisdiction. Fixed Customs Tariff Conventions were definitely renounced by all powers except Japan in 1928. Italy, Belgium, Denmark, Spain and Portugal signed treaties with China in 1928 and on certain conditions agreed to submit to Chinese jurisdiction after January 1, 1929.

During 1928 the National Government announced that treaties that had lapsed, or were about to lapse, would be abrogated and new treaties negotiated on a basis of 'equality.' Treaties of a commercial character have been made with the principal nations. As from January 1, 1930, the Chinese Government declared the withdrawal of extra-territorial privileges from foreigners in China. In an Aide Mémoire from the British Government on December 20, 1929, however, it was stated that 'His Majesty's Government are willing to agree that January 1, 1930, should be treated as the date from which the process of the gradual abolition of extra-territoriality should be regarded as having commenced in principle.' This date was later extended to January 1, 1932, but at the end of December, 1931, the Chinese Government announced that the proposal to abandon extra-territorial rights on January 1, 1932, had been postponed.

Religion.

Three religions are acknowledged by the Chinese as indigenous and adopted, viz. Confucianism, Buddhism, and Taoism.

With the exception of the practice of ancestral worship, which is everywhere observed throughout the Republic, and was fully commended by Confucius, Confucianism has little outward ceremonial.

Buddhism and Taoism present a very gorgeous and elaborate ritual in China, Taoism—originally a pure philosophy—having abjectly copied Buddhist ceremonial on the arrival of Buddhism 1,800 years ago. Most Chinese (not Mohammedans or Christians) profess and practise all three religions. The bulk of the people, however, are Buddhist.

Mohammedans are found in every province of China, being most numerous in Kansu, Sinkiang, Shansi, Shensi, Chihli, and Yunnan. There are 30,000 in Peking, with 30 mosques. Estimates for all China vary widely, from 3,000,000 to 80,000,000; 20,000,000, however, is generally favoured.

Roman Catholicism has had a footing in China for more than three centuries. In 1929 it had 76 bishoprics and 3,616 foreign missionaries, and counted 2,486,841 native Christians. Protestant Missions date from 1807. In 1922, native Christians numbered 806,926 (366,524 communicants). Attached to Protestant Missions in 1920 were 27 colleges of university standing, 256 middle schools, and 581 higher elementary schools. Under Christian instruction were 189,794 pupils. The Russian Orthodox Mission dates from 1685. In 1923, the Church counted 5,000 baptised Chinese adherents.

Most of the aboriginal hill-tribes are still nature-worshippers, and ethnically are distinct from the prevailing Mongoloid population. There is also a colony of Chinese Jews in K'aifeng, capital of Honan.

Education.

Since September 3, 1905, an enormous impetus has been given to the new educational movement, schools for the teaching of 'western learning' springing up in every town throughout large portions of the Republic.

There are two kinds of primary schools: the higher and the lower. The former are established by district governments, and are intended as intermediaries between the lower primary schools and the middle schools. The total for the whole country in 1923 was 10,236, with 582,579 pupils. The latter—also called Citizen Schools—are established by local government boards, although in recent years a good number have been founded with private funds. The total number was 167,076, with 5,814,375 pupils, in 1923.

The Government Universities are the National University at Peking; Wuchang Normal University; Chung Chow University, Kaifeng; National South-Eastern University at Nanking; North-Western University at Sianfu, in Shensi Province; Tung Luh University in Yunnan Province; Peking Normal University; and Hangchow University. In addition to the above there are several Universities supported by private funds. The Chiaotung (Communications) University, under the aegis of the Ministry of Communications, was opened on July 21, 1921. It is now divided into three Colleges, each with a university status: Nanyang, Shanghai; Tangshan, Chihli Province; Communications, Peking. The National University of Peking was established in 1898, and completely reorganised in 1917. In February, 1920, five women students were admitted for the first time. In the year 1928-29, there were 34 universities and colleges and 16 High Technical Colleges in China, including Government and private institutions. The total number of students was 19,453, of whom 3,507 were enrolled in the Faculty of Law; 2,271 Arts; 2,135 Engineering; 1,232 Science; and 1,127 for Business Administration.

The Peking Union Medical College was founded early in 1906 for the training of Chinese medical students. On July 1, 1915, the China Medical Board of the Rockefeller Foundation assumed the full support of the Union Medical College.

There are numerous Protestant and Catholic mission schools, colleges and universities at Shanghai and other ports, where the English and French languages and lower branches of Western science are taught.

A modern university for Chinese, with British professors, has been successfully established in Hongkong, and attracts students from many parts of China.

According to statistics compiled by the Ministry of Education, 1,484 students in 1929-30 were granted certificates to study abroad. Of this total, 826 students proceeded to Japan, 272 to America, 173 to France, 84 to Germany, 60 to Belgium, 55 to Great Britain, and 14 to Austria. Among these were 162 women students, or about 11 per cent.

Justice.

A provisional Criminal Code was drawn up in the closing year of the Tsing dynasty, and proclaimed on March 10, 1912, the first year of the Republic. The code was framed after the Continental system, and adopts the most modern legislation in regard to conditional release and postponement of punishments. There are special provisions for the treatment of youthful offenders and insane persons. As regards the power of inflicting penalties, the arbitrary use of power by the court is guarded against by fixing a maximum and minimum sentence for each case. A second draft of this code was completed in 1919. Texts in both English and French have also been published. Altogether, three codes have been drawn up and revised—the Code of Civil Procedure, the Commercial Code, and the Code of Criminal Procedure. The work of drawing up and revising the new Codes is undertaken by the Law Codification and Compilation Commission, which is also engaged in the drafting of commercial laws.

There are at present 276 courts and procuratorates, with the Supreme Court and the Procuratorate-General at the head of all. The Supreme Court of China may be likened to the House of Lords or the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council of Great Britain. As its name implies, it is the highest tribunal in the land. It was reorganised in 1912 into two divisions—Criminal and Civil—since increased to seven, five Civil divisions and two Criminal divisions. In each division there is a presiding Judge with four other judges. The cases handled by the Supreme Court in 1926 were: Civil, 5,430; Criminal, 1,953.

Great Britain and the United States have special courts in China, the one, His Majesty's Supreme Court for China at Shanghai (established 1865), and the other, the United States Court for China (established 1906).

Finance.

Receipts and disbursements (ordinary revenue and expenditure) of the National Government, for 4 years, from July 1 to June 30 are shown as follows:—

	1929-30	1930-31	1931-32	1932-33
	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars
Revenue	438,063,208	560,926,199	708,352,865	680,000,000
Expenditure	539,005,919	714,468,144	868,919,492	890,000,000

Principal items of revenue, 1931-32: Salt tax, 163,247,417 dollars; customs duties, 374,682,000 dollars; rolled tobacco and other consolidated taxes, 75,777,228 dollars; wine, tobacco and stamp taxes, 48,856,337 dollars; mining taxes, 1,071,288 dollars; income from state enterprises, 6,126,184 dollars. Proceeds from state loans amounted to 180,000,000 dollars. Principal items of expenditure: military services, 279,947,666 dollars; loan services, 343,404,644 dollars; finance administration, 77,422,432 dollars; party expenses, 6,240,000 dollars; education, 16,794,279 dollars.

Likin (local customs dues on internal transit) was abolished on January 1, 1931.

The collection of the revenue on the Chinese foreign trade and the administration of the lights on the coast of China are under the management of the Chinese Maritime Customs, an institution founded by Sir Robert Hart, which has a large staff of Foreign and Chinese subordinates. By agreement, dated February 13, 1898, China undertook that the post of Inspector-General should be held by a British subject so long as British Foreign Trade predominated.

By the terms of the Re-organisation Loan Agreement of 1913 the Chinese Government agreed to take immediate steps for the re-organisation, with the assistance of foreigners, of the system of collection of the salt revenues. A Central Salt Administration was established in Peking under the control of the Minister of Finance, with a Chief Inspectorate under a Chinese Chief Inspector and a foreign Associate Chief Inspector, who exercise the chief authority for the superintendence of the issue of licence and the compilation of reports and returns of revenue.

By exchange of Notes effected on September 19 and September 22, 1930, it was agreed that Great Britain should return her share of the Boxer Indemnity as from December 1, 1922, to the control of the Chinese Government which would apply the bulk of the funds thus remitted to the creation of an endowment to be devoted to the rehabilitation and building of railroads in China and to educational purposes. The funds to which the agreement refers amounted on June 30, 1930, to 3,515,419*l.* 9*s.* 3*d.*, and the total amount of the sums payable by the Chinese Government between that date and December 31, 1945, when all payments are due to cease, will be 7,847,093*l.* 4*s.* 9*d.*

The customs receipts for 4 years were (in Haikwan taels):—

Year	Foreign Trade	Home Trade	Total	Total	Exchange
	Taels	Taels	Taels	£	Pence
1930	159,847,078	20,772,685	180,619,758	16,415,455	22½
1931	280,205,063	16,908,334	247,113,397	18,983,972	18½
1932	184,310,890	15,930,580	200,241,470	19,398,392	23½
1933	—	—	389,522,000	—	—

The public debt on January 1, 1931, amounted to the equivalent of about 152,900,000*l.*, and the internal loans on June 1, 1931, to 741,640,699 dollars, of which 191,558,860 were Peking issues and 550,081,839 were Nanking issues. Of the former, arrears of capital and interest to January 1, 1931, amounted to some 19,989,000*l.*; and of the internal loans, 488,413,139 dollars were secured on customs revenue.

Defence.

ARMY.

The organisation of the national army is based on a system of compulsory citizen service. Service is normally voluntary for three years with the active army and three years in the reserve. Recruits must be between the ages of 20 and 25. In 1929 the National Government produced a paper organisation of the national army in 114 infantry divisions, 8 cavalry divisions, 13 artillery regiments and 15 engineer battalions. This is being reduced to 65 infantry divisions, 8 cavalry brigades, 16 artillery regiments and 8 engineer regiments. The nominal strength is 800,000 men.

NAVY.

The weakening of the central power had seriously affected the efficiency of the Navy, but this has been restored to some extent since the Nanking Government was established. In July, 1929, the Government requested the services of a British Naval Mission to reorganise the training of the Fleet; the services of two officers of the Royal Navy and a number of ratings have since been lent. A number of Chinese junior naval officers are under training in the British Navy.

The largest vessel is the cruiser Hai Chi, of 4,300 tons displacement and 24 knots, carrying a main armament of 2 8-in. guns, 10 4·7-in. guns and 5 above-water torpedo tubes. The Ying Swei and the Chao Ho were built in England (1911), mainly for training purposes, each having a displacement of about 2,600 tons and a contract speed of 20 knots. The main armaments consist of 2 6-in. and 4 4-in. guns. There are also three 3,000-ton cruisers, Hai Yung, Hai Chou, and Hai Shen, built 1897-98, of 19·5 knots speed, armed with 3 6-in. and 8 4·1-in. guns; the Ning Hai and Ping Hai, built 1931-32, of 2,500 tons, armed with 6 5·5-in. and 6 3-in. guns; and the Yat Sen, built 1930, of 1,650 tons, armed with 1 6-in., 1 5·5-in., and 4 8-in. guns. In addition there are 20 steel gunboats of over 400 tons, 18 smaller river and other gunboats, 3 destroyers, 8 torpedo-boats, and various other vessels, many of which, as the result of neglect, are believed to be without fighting value.

There are no naval bases of any importance. Existing dockyards are: Foochow, Taku, Kiangnan (Shanghai), and Whampoa (Canton).

Production and Industry.

Agriculture.—China is essentially an agricultural country, and the land is mostly freehold held by families on the payment of an annual tax.

Total arable land in China is estimated at about 192,060 square miles. The holdings are in general small; irrigation is common. Chinese agriculture is intensive rather than extensive. Rotation of crops is practised. Horticulture is a favourite pursuit, and fruit trees are grown in great variety. Indeed the Chinese are gardeners rather than farmers. Vegetable culture has reached a high state of perfection. Wheat, barley, maize, and millet and other cereals, with peas and beans, are chiefly cultivated in the north, rice, sugar, and indigo in the south. In 1932, the estimated cultivated area under wheat was given as 57,049,000 acres, and the yield 487,877,000 piculs; that under rice was 53,427,000 acres yield 983,157,000 piculs. Treaties forbid the export of grain with the exception of wheat, soya beans, kaoliang, indian corn, buck-wheat, and barley from Manchuria. An embargo may be applied in case of a famine in China. China's fibre crops are also important: chief are abutilon, hemp, jute, ramie and flax.

Cotton is grown widely even as far north as the southern and central part of Chihli, the chief area of production being the Yangtse valley. In 1932 the area under cotton in the 12 principal cotton producing provinces (Liaoning, Hopei, Shantung, Shansi, Honan, Shensi, Kiangsu, Chekiang, Anhwei, Kiangsi, Hupeh, and Hunan) was given as 37,078,535 mow or 6,179,756 acres, and the yield 8,094,063 piculs of ginned cotton. The preliminary estimate for 1933 is 39,684,369 mow (6,614,061 acres) and 9,838,286 piculs. Tea is cultivated exclusively in the west and south; silk culture is one of the most successful industries of China; about 25 per cent. of the world's supply of raw silk is from China. The production of silk cocoons is estimated at 3,300,000 piculs, of which about 40 per cent. is produced in the central provinces of Kiangsu, Chekiang and Anhwei.

Pigs are raised everywhere in China, and pigs' bristles have become an important article of export. The annual output is over 100,000 piculs, valued at about 10,000,000 Hk. Tls.; about two-thirds are exported. In Mongolia, camels are raised solely for the hair they produce. The Ministry of Industry estimates that in 1933 the total number of cows and buffaloes in the country was 22,246,555; goats and sheep, 19,418,241; pigs, 94,343,894; horses, 6,089,463; donkeys and mules, 7,889,487; chickens, 338,672,158; ducks and geese, 70,122,199.

Manufacture.—An important feature in the development of Chinese industries is the erection of cotton and wool mills, and of silk filatures in Shanghai, Canton and elsewhere, while native looms are found in most dwellings. The production of cotton yarn in China during the year ended December 31, 1932, totalled 2,283,898 piculs, of which 305,977 piculs were produced in Japanese, 1,427,919 piculs in Chinese, and 550,002 piculs in British-owned mills. The production of cotton piece goods for the year amounted to 20,233,710 piculs, of which 10,190,970 piculs were manufactured in Japanese, 8,242,740 in Chinese, and 1,800,000 bales in British mills. In December 1932, 128 cotton mills in China had 4,516,898 spindles and 42,596 looms distributed as follows: 41 Japanese-owned mills (1,757,248 spindles and 19,306 looms); 84 Chinese-owned (2,589,040 spindles and 20,599 looms); 2 British-owned (160,610 spindles and 2,671 looms). At the large centres flour and rice mills are beginning to supersede native methods of treating wheat and rice. Flour milling is making rapid strides in China. There are 173 modern mills in Shanghai (of which only 18 were working in 1930), 11 mills at Tsingtao, 6 at Wusih, and 5 at Hankow. Manchuria possesses about 50 flour mills. At Hanyang, near Hankow, are large Chinese iron-works, supplied with ore from mines at Tayeh, about 60 miles distant. There are also 400 glass factories.

Mining.—Most of the 18 provinces and the 3 provinces of Manchuria contain coal, and China may be regarded as one of the first coal countries of the world. The coal-fields cover an area of 133,513 acres and the average annual coal output is estimated at 29,000,000 metric tons, of which 9 to 10 million metric tons are from native coal mines, over 7½ million metric tons from semi-modern mines, and 11,196,100 metric tons from the Fushun and Kailan coal mines. Iron ores are abundant in the anthracite field of Shansi, where the iron industry is the oldest in the world, in Chihli, in Shantung and other provinces, and iron (found in conjunction with coal) is worked in Manchuria. Three hundred million tons of ore are estimated to be in Shansi; the reserve of other deposits amounts to about 800 million tons. The Tayeh iron deposits, near Hankow, are among the richest in the world. They have an ore reserve of 35,000,000 tons. On the Upper Yangtse and in Shensi province petroleum is being worked; there are 91 wells in the country. Oil is also being extracted from shale beds in South Manchuria and Shansi Province. Tin ore is plentiful in Yunnan where the tin-mining industry has long existed. Tin is the most important mineral export; about 10,000 tons are produced annually. It is mined extensively in Yunnan, and through Mengtze it reaches Hong Kong, whence it is shipped to foreign countries. In antimony China occupies a unique position; since 1908 the country has produced more than 60 per cent. of the world's total production. More than 90 per cent. comes from Hunan; the output in 1930 was 14,700 tons. Mining for wolfram is being carried on at Swatow, and in the Kiangsi and Hunan Provinces; molybdenum ore has been found at Yungtai-hsien, in Fukien and Kiangsi; bismuth has also been worked. The total output of salt in 1933 was 2,492,866 short tons.¹

In addition to her overseas trade China has an extensive coast and river trade, in which under 'Inland Waters Steam Navigation Regulations,' steamers under foreign flags are allowed to participate. At the end of 1931, 3,430 vessels were on the register, of which 519 were foreign, and 2,911 Chinese; at the end of 1930, the figures were 544 and 2,676 respectively.

In recent years the quantities and value of the imports of tea into the United Kingdom from China, including Hong Kong, Macao, and Weihaiwei were (according to the Board of Trade returns) :—

Shipping and Navigation.

During 1932, 161,592 vessels of 135,409,496 tons entered and cleared Chinese ports. Of these 49,517 of 59,430,602 tons were British; 5,966 of 5,376,352 tons, American; 933 of 1,488,196 tons, French; 756 of 2,393,906 tons, German; 496 of 733,857 tons, Italian; 13,441 of 19,775,917 tons, Japanese; 3,085 of 6,155,406 tons, Norwegian; 4,913 of 1,196,113 tons, Portuguese; 81,023 of 33,888,168 tons, Chinese.

The nationality of the vessels (direct foreign trade) was mainly as follows:—

Nationality 1932	Entrances		Clearances
	No.	Tons	No.	Tons
British	6,942	9,317,286	7,069	9,455,261

Internal Communications.

China is traversed in all directions by numerous roads, and, though few are paved or metalled, and most are badly kept, a vast internal trade is carried on partly over them, but chiefly by means of numerous canals and navigable rivers. At the end of 1932 there were 1,801,434 miles of roads in China, and 2,040,347 miles under construction.

Chinese railway history began in 1876 when the Woosung line, built by foreign enterprise, was opened. At the end of 1930, there were 12,335 miles of railway in China (excluding 1,857 miles in Manchuria), of which about 1,300 miles have been constructed by British enterprise and British capital.

The principal railways in China are:—(1) South Manchuria Railway, from Changchun to Dairen, 774 miles [see also under Manchuria]; (2)

Peiping-Mukden line, 858 miles, including 332 miles of branch line; (3) Peiping-Suiyuan Railway, 553 miles; (4) Peiping-Hankow Railway, 816 miles; (5) Lung Hai Railway, 533 miles; (6) Shanghai-Nanking Railway, 203 miles; (7) Tientsin-Pukow Railway, 692 miles; (8) Shanghai-Hangchow-Ningpo Railway, 181 miles; (9) Hupeh-Hunan Railway, 417 miles; (10) Kiaochou-Tsinan Railway, 395 miles; (11) Yunnan Railway, from the Tonkin border to Yunnanfu, 290 miles; and (12) the Chinese Eastern Railway running eastward from Manchuli through Northern Manchuria to Suifeiñho (Russian name, Pogranichnaya), the last station in Chinese territory, where it joins the Ussuri Railway, and then runs due east to Vladivostok, and southerly from Harbin to Changchun, joining the South Manchuria Railway. This line was built by the Russians, and under agreements dated October 2, 1920, and May 31, 1924, is operated by Russians and Chinese. It runs for 1,100 miles in Chinese territory. The gauge is the Russian standard of 5 feet, whilst that of all the other railways is 4 feet 8½ inches, with the exception of the Yunnan Railway, which has a gauge of 1 metre. The total revenue of the Government railways in 1932 amounted to 149,488,423 dollars, and total expenditure 150,584,756 dollars.

China has a fairly well developed telegraph service. Telegraphs connect all the principal cities in the country, and there are lines to all the neighbouring countries. The telegraph lines in 1932 had a length of 61,614 miles. Number of telegrams transmitted by the Post-office in 1931, 26,220. Wireless Telegraph Stations have been installed at many centres.

Telephones are in use in the main cities of China, and long distance telephone communication has been introduced along the railways and in the trade areas. Wireless telephone services have also been established.

The postal work of China, formerly carried on by the Government Courier service and the native posting agencies, was gradually taken in hand by the Chinese Imperial Post Office, begun in 1897 under the management of the Maritime Customs. By Edict of November 6, 1906, the control of the Postal Service was transferred to the Ministry of Communications, and the transfer was actually effected in July, 1911. The Postal Service with Tibet has been suspended. In 1931 there were 12,523 post offices open, and the number of letters posted was 501,175,300; of postcards, 45,276,000; of newspapers, 49,941,400; of printed matter, 71,824,300; of commercial papers, 4,322,200; of samples of merchandise, 1,348,000; of trade circulars, 8,988,700; grand total of 796,017,800. The number of parcels posted in 1931 was 6,217,230. The revenue of the post office in 1931 was 39,770,960 dollars, and the expenditure 39,687,669 dollars. On June 30, 1931, the postal staff numbered 65 foreigners and 38,425 Chinese. The value of the international money orders issued in 1932 was 1,645,369 dollars, and of those cashed, 2,791,647 dollars. Domestic money orders issued in 1932 amounted to 183,716,100 dollars, and those cashed to 184,736,700 dollars. The administration is now completely under Government control. China in 1914 joined the Postal Union.

On July 1, 1930, the aerial service of the Shanghai-Nanking section of the Shanghai-Chengtou line organised by the Ministry of Communications was amalgamated with the Shanghai-Hankow air line operated by the China National Aviation Corporation with Nanking and Kiukiang as ports of call. From November 20, and December 23, respectively, aeroplanes commenced to make regular calls at Hwaining (Anking) and Wuhu. Since the extension of this line from Shanghai to Ichang on March 31, 1931, with Shasi as an additional port of call, and the inauguration of a new Nanking-Peiping route on April 15, 1931, the total length of lines operated by the China National Aviation Corporation is estimated to be 2,221 kilometres or 1,377 miles. Another aerial mail service over the Shanghai-Lupin (Manchouli) section, via Nanking, Licheng (Tsinan), Peiping, and Linsi, was inaugurated on May 31, 1931, maintaining a bi-weekly service on Wednesdays and Sundays in both directions. This aerial line, which is 2,510 kilometres (1,556 miles) in length and links up at Irkutsk with the aerial services of the U.S.S.R. Postal Administration, is operated by the Eurasia Aviation Corporation. The number of the articles of mail matter and parcels posted for air transmission during the fiscal year 1930-31 were as follows: ordinary mail matter, 1,463,100; registered mail matter, 87,700; express mail matter, 236,100; parcels, 700; total, 1,787,600.

Banking and Credit.

Banking on modern lines dates from the close of the Tai-ping rebellion in the 'sixties, when the rapid expansion of trade in Shanghai created a demand for credit facilities. In 1902, the Board of Finance established the Ta Ching Bank, with a capital of 4,000,000 Kuping Taels, which was soon raised to 10,000,000 Kuping Taels. Prompted by the success of the Ta Ching Bank, the Board of Posts, Railways, and Telegraphs launched in 1905 a scheme to organise a bank for the control of the finances of the Railways, Telegraphs, Posts and Navigations, and the management of an issue of national loan bonds for the redemption of the Peking-Hankow Railways, and this scheme finally culminated in the establishment of the Bank of Communications in 1906. The year 1905 marked also the beginning of commercial banks in China. The Chekiang Railway Company, which was then a private company, founded the National Commercial Bank in Hangchow, with a capital of 1,000,000 dollars, half of which was subscribed by the Railway itself, and the other half by its stockholders. In the same year was formed the Commercial Bank of China, in the following year, the Ningpo Commercial Bank, and in 1910, the Commercial Guarantee Bank of Chihli. In 1911, the Manchu régime collapsed, and with it the Ta Ching Bank. However, it was speedily reorganised as the Bank of China. From 1914 onwards the establishment of new banks proceeded at a rapid pace, and there are now about 150 banks with over 400 branch offices. The total capitalisation of Chinese banks approximates 400,000,000 dollars, but not more than 150,000,000 dollars have been paid up. Total reserve funds amount to about 20,000,000 dollars.

Of these banks, the Bank of China is the largest, having about 100 branches and sub-branches, and an authorised capital of 60,000,000 dollars, and a paid-up capital of 19,760,200 dollars. Next in order comes the Bank of Communications, whose capital has reached 20,000,000 dollars, 7,713,500 dollars of which are paid-up. It has about 40 branches. The Chinese Government's share in the Bank of China and the Bank of Communications has been wiped out. The Bank of China declared a net profit in 1931 of 1,837,427 dollars.

A new State bank, called the Central Bank of China, was opened in Shanghai on November 1, 1928. It is capitalised at 20,000,000 dollars and has the right to issue convertible notes, to mint and issue coins, and direct the flotation of foreign and domestic loans. The Minister of Finance is appointed Director-General of the bank. The capital is supplied by the Treasury, and though shares may be issued to the public they must never exceed 49 per cent. of the total capital.

Sino-foreign banking institutions are numerous, having grown rapidly during 1921. In 1918, the Exchange Bank of China was established with Sino-Japanese capital. It has a subscribed capital of 10,000,000 yen. The Italian Bank of China, the Sino-French Bank, the Sino-Scandinavian Bank, and numerous Sino-Japanese institutions were inaugurated in 1921. The Chinese American Bank of Commerce was established by American and Chinese capitalists, with equal interests, under a special charter issued on April 12, 1920, by the Chinese Government.

On July 1, 1924, the Manchurian Official Bank, Fengtien Industrial Bank, and the Bank of the Three Eastern Provinces were amalgamated under the name of the Government Bank of the Three Eastern Provinces, with a capital of 20,000,000 dollars.

Government ordinances governing savings banks in China were first promulgated in 1908. About May in that year a savings department was organised by the Ta Ching Bank, now Bank of China. This was followed later by the establishment of special savings banks in various provinces and other savings departments attached to commercial banks in recent years. In 1925, there were 20 such institutions with total savings deposits amounting to 33,017,942 dollars.

Post Office savings banks at 11 district head offices were opened on July 1, 1919. By June 30, 1932, there were 572 establishments with savings facilities, with 149,790 depositors, and total deposits amounting to 27,164,746 dollars.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

MONEY.

The currency of China is on a silver basis, and consists of taels, dollars, copper cash, and bank notes. The tael is really a weight of silver (about an ounce) of a certain degree of fineness. Theoretically it is divided into 10 mace; 1 mace = 10 candareens. The denominations of the dollar are: 1 dollar = 100 coppers; 1 copper = 10 cash. The tael varies in different parts of the country, the principal taels being (1) the haikwan or customs tael, weighing 583.8 grains (for average sterling equivalent during recent years, see above under Commerce, p. 755), (2) the K'up'ing tael, weighing 575.8 grains, (3) the Tsaoping tael, weighing 565.65 grains. These are all called treasury taels. The principal local taels are: (1) Peking or Kungfah tael; (2) Tientsin or Hang Ping Hua Pao tael; (3) Canton tael; (4) Newchwang tael (nominal); (5) Shanghai tael. Different taels, about 170 altogether, are in use in every province in the country.

There is unparalleled currency confusion. Although a dollar should be equal to 100 coppers, in fact it is worth almost 350 coppers in some parts of the country, varying from day to day. In the treaty of September 5, 1902, China agreed with Great Britain to take the necessary steps to provide a uniform national coinage which should be legal tender for all purposes throughout the Empire, and an Imperial Decree was issued in October, 1908, commanding the introduction of a uniform tael currency, of which the unit must be a silver tael coin of .98 touch weighing 1 K'up'ing or Treasury-scale tael or ounce. This decree was cancelled by a further decree of May 25, 1910, establishing the silver dollar (yuan) of .90 touch and weighing .72 Treasury-weight tael as the unit of currency. The touch and weight of the silver subsidiary coins (50c., 25c., 20c., and 10c.) were also definitely specified, while provision was made for further subsidiary coins (5c. nickel, 2c., 1c., $\frac{1}{2}$ c., and $\frac{1}{4}$ c. copper) of touch and weight to be laid down later. The minting of these silver coins has begun, but as they are at a discount in every province other than the one in which they are minted, confusion has been rendered more confounded. There are ten different varieties of dollars in circulation.

As from April 6, 1933, the tael was officially abolished as the commercial unit of exchange, and the silver dollar became the official currency, the rate of exchange being fixed at 1 dollar = 0.715 tael. The new dollar is 800/1000 fine, has a gross weight of 26.971 grammes, and a fine silver content of 23.493448 grammes. It will be minted at the new Central Mint established in Shanghai by the National Government.

In China, standards of weights, measures and length vary all over the country. Generally speaking, two kinds of standards are now in use, namely, the old and the new. The old standard was formulated from the Weights and Measures Law promulgated in 1914, establishing a double system, the standard metric unit and that based on ying tsao ch'ih, or 'builder's foot' for length and Kuping tael or liang for weight. The law governing the new standard was promulgated by the National Government on February 6, 1929, and it is intended to be the legal standard of weights and measures throughout China. For convenience' sake and customary usage it also established a double system; one is the standard metric unit, which came into operation in the Custom's service on February 1, 1934, and the other, which is temporary in nature and to be abolished as soon as the people are accustomed to the use of standard units, is designed only for market use. The latter is derived from the former by taking one litre of Kung Sheng as one Shih Sheng, which is nearest to the Chinese customary unit of capacity 'Sheng'; one-half kilogramme as one Shih Chin, which is the average weight of the different varieties of 'Chin' in different localities; and one-third of a metre or Kung Ch'ih as one Shih Ch'ih, which is the average length of different varieties of Chinese 'Foot' in different localities, thus constituting the so-called 1-2-3-system of Chinese weights and measures based on International metric standard. Such a system as devised by the Ministry of Industry, Commerce and Labour and proclaimed by the National Government to be put into force may also have great bearing on the users of British 'Foot-Pound' system by taking the following approximate value: 1 quart equals to 1 litre, 1 pound equals to $\frac{1}{2}$ kilogramme and 1 yard equals to 1 metre. The Russian and Japanese system can also be thus varied accordingly so as to fit themselves to the International System. The following table shows the old units of weight, capacity and length:—

WEIGHT.

10 Ssü	.	.	= 1 Hao .
10 Hao	.	.	= 1 Li .
10 Li	.	.	= 1 Fên (Candareen).
10 Fên	.	.	= 1 Ch'ien (Mace).
10 Ch'ien	.	.	= 1 Liang (Tael) = 37.301 grammes.
16 Liang	.	.	= 1 Chin (Catty) = 596.816 ..

CAPACITY.

10 Sho	.	.	= 1 Ko .
10 Ko	.	.	= 1 Sheng .
10 Sheng	.	.	= 1 Tou = 10.354688 litres.
5 Tou	.	.	= 1 Hu .
2 Hu	.	.	= 1 Tan . Commodities, even liquids, such as oil, spirits, &c., are commonly bought and sold by weight.

LENGTH.

10 Fên	.	.	= 1 Ts'un (inch).
10 Ts'un	.	.	= 1 Ch'ih (foot) = .32 metre.
10 Ch'ih	.	.	= 1 Chang = 3.2 metres.
180 Chang	.	.	= 1 Li = 576 metres = $\frac{1}{3}$ mile.

By treaty between Great Britain and China, the Ch'ih of 14 $\frac{1}{16}$ English inches has been adopted as the standard, the Tael, Catty, and Picul have been fixed at 1 $\frac{1}{2}$ oz., 1 $\frac{1}{2}$ lb., 133 $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. avoidupois respectively. 1 Mow = $\frac{1}{3}$ of an acre.

Diplomatic Representatives.

1. OF CHINA IN GREAT BRITAIN.

Envoy and Minister.—Quo Tai-chi. (Appointed August 1, 1932.)

Counsellor.—Chen Wei-chang (N. C. Chen).

First Secretaries.—Tennyson Tan and Chieh Liu.

Second Secretary.—Tsu Ming-chiu.

Third Secretary.—Tieh Tseng-li.

Attachés.—Loh Ming-sin and Fang Cheng-tien

Consul-General in London.—N. C. Chen.

2. OF GREAT BRITAIN IN CHINA.

Envoy and Minister.—The Hon. Sir Alexander Montagu George Cadogan, C.B., K.C.M.G. (Appointed September 4, 1933.)

Counsellor.—E. M. B. Ingram, C.M.G., O.B.E.

Secretaries.—A. Holman, M.C., J. N. Behrens, and H. A. Caccia.

Chinese Secretary.—Sir Eric Teichman, K.C.M.G., C.I.E.

Naval Attaché.—Captain J. G. P. Vivian, R.N. (Headquarters in Tokyo).

Military Attaché.—Lt.-Col. V. R. Burkhardt, D.S.O., O.B.E.

Commercial Counsellor.—L. B. Beale, C.B.E. (at Shanghai).

Judge.—His Honour Sir P. Grain, Kt. (at Shanghai).

There are British Consular representatives at Peking, Amoy, Canton (C.G.), Changsha, Chefoo, Chung-king, Foochow, Hankow (C.G.), Harbin, Ichang, Mukden (C.G.), Newchwang, Nanking (C.), Shanghai (C.G.), Swatow, Teng-Yueh, Tien-tsin (C.G.), Yunnan-fu (C.G.), Ningpo, Kashgar (C.G.), Tsinanfu, and Tsingtao.

Chinese Outer Territories.

Manchuria.

Manchuria, lying between the province of Chihli and the Amur river, and extending from the Hingan mountains eastwards to Korea and the Ussuri river, has an area of about 399,729 sq. miles and a population, according to the latest investigation, of 29,606,000 (16,332,000 males and 13,273,000 females) at December 31, 1930. Manchuria consists of 3 provinces:—Liaoning (Sheng-King or Feng-tien) (area, 71,489 sq. miles; population, 15,000,000), capital Mukden; Kirin (103,352 sq. miles; population, 9,200,000), capital Kirin; and Heilung-chiang or the Amur province (224,887 sq. miles; population, 5,200,000) with Tsitsihar (Heilung Hsien) for its capital. The chief towns are Mukden, the capital, with about 421,000 inhabitants, Kirin (814,600), Harbin (332,700), Antung (15,800), Changchun (133,700), Liaoyang (91,600), Yingkow (111,000), Tsitsihar (63,700), Tiehling (55,000).

There is no longer a Manchu population in Manchuria. A few scattered communities alone remain. Manchuria is primarily an agricultural country, the arable land is estimated at about 82,992,000 acres, or more than 28 per cent. of the total area. The area under cultivation is about 88,038,000 acres. Beans, millet, wheat and rice are the principal crops. In 1930 the area under wheat was 2,125,000 acres (1,552,470 tons); millet, 2,890,000 acres (3,692,000 tons); soya-beans, 7,000,000 acres (5,351,000 tons); kaoliang, 3,060,000 acres (5,136,000 tons). Formerly the whole of the wheat yield was exported, but of late years the flour industry has been growing with the increase in the wheat production. There are now some 40 mills in Manchuria, which turn out about 15,000,000 sacks annually. Extensive forests also abound; their estimated extent is 28,756,000 acres. The soil of certain districts—especially in the vicinity of Mukden and Harbin—is suitable for beet and flax growing, and the industry is slowly developing. The number of live-stock in 1930 was 1,605,000 cattle, 2,437,000 horses, 2,640,000 sheep, 7,507,000 pigs. Manchuria is rich in minerals, the output of which in 1930 was as follows (in metric tons):—coal 10,040,652, limestone 688,489, iron ore 889,421, magnesite 29,016; the output of pig iron in 1930 was 373,493 metric tons, and of coke, 485,321 metric tons.

The Russian lease of Port Arthur and Talien-wan (called Dalny by the Russians and Dairen by the Japanese), and the southern extremity of the Liao-tung peninsula and the South Manchuria Railway were transferred to Japan by the Portsmouth Peace Conference, September 5, 1905. On December 22, 1905, China gave official recognition to this transfer and granted Japan the right to extend the railway from Mukden to Antung at the mouth of the Yalu river, where it connects with the Korean railway. In 1912 a branch line (78 miles) from Changchun, the northern terminus of the Japanese South Manchuria Railway to Kirin, constructed by joint Japanese and Chinese enterprise, and operated under special convention by the South Manchuria Railway, was opened to traffic. The total length of the South Manchuria Railway is 693 miles (Dairen to Changchun, main line 438 miles; branch to Port Arthur, 29 miles; branch to Newchwang, 14 miles; Fushun coal mines, 31 miles; branch to Yentai, 10 miles; and Mukden to Antung, 171 miles). On August 1, 1917, the whole of the railway system of Korea (some 1,000 miles in length) passed under the management of the South Manchuria Railway, giving the latter a through line under its own management from Fusan, the Korean port nearest Japan, to Changchun, where connection with the railway system to Harbin and thence to Leningrad is effected. Besides the South Manchuria Railway, Manchuria is traversed by the Chinese Eastern Railway (1,078 miles), the Peiping-Mukden Railway (723 miles), the Ssuningkai-Taonan Railway (312 miles), and a number of smaller lines (2,058 miles); total length, 35,448 miles. There are 265 post offices and 550 postal agencies.

On September 18, 1931, the Japanese army occupied Mukden. A series of military operations continued, and on February 18, 1932, the three north-eastern provinces of China, Fengtien, Kirin and Heilungchiang, together with Jehol, were, with the assistance of Japan, proclaimed an independent state under the style of Manchukuo, with the capital at Hsinking. Japan has formally recognised Manchukuo, and a modus vivendi has been established with the Soviet Union. The League of Nations in 1932 sent a commission of inquiry, under the chairmanship of Lord Lytton, to inquire into the formation of Manchukuo, and in February, 1933, adopted the Lytton report. No other Power has recognised the new Manchurian Free State.

The total area of Manchukuo is given at 460,381 sq. miles and its population at 34,244,980. The Organic Law of March 9, 1932, provides for a Chief Executive, a Privy Council, and a Cabinet. In January, 1933, it was decided to make Mr. Henry Pu the Chief Executive, hereditary Emperor of Manchukuo. He was crowned on March 1, 1934.

Tibet

Tibet, extending from the Pamir region eastwards between the Himalaya and Kwen-lun mountains to the frontiers of China, has an area of 483,200 square miles with a population estimated at between 1,500,000 and 6,000,000. Probably 2,000,000 is near the mark. Lhasa, the capital, has from 15,000 to 20,000 inhabitants. The country being bleak and mountainous and strangers having been jealously excluded, wide regions are still unexplored.

Chinese authority was in the past represented by two Ambans who had charge, respectively, of foreign and military affairs. There were three Chinese commandants of troops at Lhasa, Shigatse, and Dingri where the permanent military force of about 4,600, provided by China, were mostly quartered. There were a few other Chinese officials, but the civil and religious administration of the country was left almost entirely to Tibetans. The head of the government is the Dalai Lama, who resides at the Po-ta-la (or palace) near Lhasa. He acts through a minister or regent appointed from among the chief Tibetan Lamas and assisted by five ministers. Early in 1908 the territory of Western Szechuen and the adjoining territory of Eastern Tibet were united into a new 'special administrative area,' known as the Province of Sikang, with Batang, re-named Baanfu, as capital.

The prevailing religion is Lamaism, a corrupt form of Buddhism, but along with it there exists the Bon, or Shamanistic, faith. In some places agriculture is carried on, barley and other cereals as well as pulse and vegetables being grown. In some favoured regions fruits, including peaches and even grapes, are produced. In other places the pursuits are pastoral, the domestic animals being sheep and yak (often crossed with Indian cattle), while in some regions there are buffaloes, pigs, and camels. Wool-spinning, weaving, and knitting are common, and there are many hands skilful in making images and other decorations for religious edifices. The chief minerals worked are gold, borax, and salt. There is a large trade with China and considerable traffic across the Indian frontier. A telegraph line, 144 miles long, connects Lhasa with Gyantse.

The trade between India and Tibet has to be carried through lofty passes between 14,000 and 18,000 feet high, most of which are practically impassable during seasons of heavy rain and snow. Sheep and also crosses between yaks and ordinary cattle are used as beasts of burden. The most important route into Tibet from India is from Siliguri, near Darjeeling in northern Bengal, and across the small Frontier State of Sikkim to Gyantse and Yatung in Tibet, the two leading trade marts authorised by the existing Convention. The other chief means of access to Tibet are from Almora in the northern part of the United Provinces, and from Simla over the Simla-Tibet road to Gartok in western Tibet, which is at about 14,200 feet elevation above the sea. From Almora to Gartok the direction is almost due north, and from Simla to Gartok is almost due east.

For the removal of hindrances to the Indian trade a treaty was made with China in 1890, supplemented by a second treaty in 1893, but the hindrances still remained. Consequently, in 1904, the Indian Government sent a mission with an escort to arrange matters directly with the Tibetan Government. The mission met with a good deal of armed opposition, but at length, on September 7, a convention was executed at Lhasa. The convention provides for the re-erection of boundary stones (alluding to former pastoral disputes) on the Sikkim frontier; for marts at Yatung, Gyantze, and Gartok for Tibetan and British merchants; for the demolition of forts on the trade routes; for a Tibetan commissioner to confer with British officials for the alteration of the objectionable features of the treaty of 1893 ; for the settlement of an equitable customs tariff ; for the repair of the passes and the appointment of Tibetan and British officials at the trade marts. China paid an indemnity of 2,500,000 rupees (166,666*l.*), and the evacuation of the Chumbi valley by the British began in February, 1908. Further, no Tibetan territory may be sold, leased or mortgaged to any foreign Power, nor may Tibetan affairs, or Tibetan public works, be subject to foreign management or interference without the consent of the British. The adhesion of China to this convention was secured by an agreement signed at Peking on April 27, 1906. Under the Convention of August 31, 1907, Great Britain and Russia agree not to enter into negotiation with Tibet except through the Chinese Government, nor to send representatives to Lhasa. But this engagement does not affect the provisions of the British-Tibetan convention of September 7, 1904, ratified by China in 1906. Negotiations were begun at Simla in Sept. 1907, for the conclusion of Trade Regulations between India and Tibet, and were brought to a satisfactory conclusion in April, 1908.

Sin-Kiang, or the New Dominion, consists of Chinese Turkestan, Kulja, and Kashgaria, and comprises all Chinese dependencies lying between Mongolia on the north and Tibet on the south. It is now regarded as a separate province, its Governor residing at Urumchi, or Tihwafu, the capital. Its area is estimated at about 550,340 square miles and population at about 1,200,000. The inhabitants are of various races, known as Turki (Kashgari, Kalmuk, Khirghiz, Taranchi, etc.), mostly Mohammedan and Chinese, who have of recent years greatly increased in numbers. The chief towns are Ili, Kashgar, Yarkand, Khotan, and Aksu. The country is administered under Chinese officials, residing at Urumchi, the subordinates being usually natives of the country. In regions about the Kashgar and Yarkand rivers the soil is fertile, irrigation is practised, and cereals, fruits and vegetables are grown. Other productions of the country are wool, cotton, and silk. Jade is worked, and in some districts gold is found. The whole territory is yearly increasing in population and prosperity. A trade agreement with Soviet Russia was signed in 1924.

In 1927, imports from India totalled 11,86,848 rupees, and exports to India 28,14,568 rupees; trade with Afghanistan in the same year was: imports, 8,30,500 rupees; exports, 5,47,540 rupees; with China: imports, 19,39,850 rupees; exports, 7,37,250 rupees.

British Consul-General at Kashgar.—Lieut.-Colonel R. A. Lyall.

Mongolia.

The vast and indefinite tract of country called Mongolia stretches from the Khinghan mountains on the east to the Tarbagatai mountains on the west, being intersected towards its western end by the Altai mountains and the Irtysh river. On the north it is bounded by Siberia and on the south by the outer Kan-su and other regions which are united into Sin-Kiang. The area of Mongolia is about 1,875,000 square miles, and its population about 760,000 Mongols and about 100,000 other nationalities, principally Chinese and Russians. The monks (lamas) are the most important element in the population, forming 15 per cent. of the total, and over 30 per cent. of the male population. A wide tract in the heart of this region is occupied by the Desert of Gobi which extends south-westwards into Chinese Turkestan. The inhabitants are nomadic Mongols and Kalmucks who range the desert with camels, horses, and sheep. Even in fertile districts they are little given to agriculture. But of recent years there has been a great extension of Chinese immigration, and a large area of what was known as Mongolia, extending from China proper and Manchuria to the Gobi Desert, is now indistinguishable from Chinese territory, and has in fact been absorbed within Chinese administration in Manchuria. Chinese settlers are gradually invading the Gobi Desert. Irrigation alone is needed. Inner Mongolia and portions of the adjacent provinces in China proper are now divided into three provinces, Jehol, Chahar, and Suiyuan, each of which is governed by a provincial committee, appointed by the Chinese Government. The chief town or centre of population is Urga (which, since 1924, is known as Ulan Bator Hoto, i.e. 'Town of the Red Heroes'), 170 miles due south of Kiakhta, a frontier emporium for the caravan trade carried on with China across the Gobi Desert. Urga has some 100,000 inhabitants. Kiakhta is a Siberian frontier town, and stands about 100 miles from the south end of Lake Baikal. The chief exports are livestock and animal products. The following quantities were exported in 1930: sheep's wool, 8,770 tons; pigs, 1,200,000; sheep and goats, 2,000,000. The trend of Mongolia's trade has recently changed from China to Russia, as is shown in the following table:—

	Imports		Exports
	China Trade	Russian Trade	China Trade	Russian Trade
1927	Tukhrik 27,600,000	Tukhrik 4,000,000	Tukhrik 12,080,000	Tukhrik 16,900,000
1928	25,400,000	7,100,000	10,780,000	21,000,000
1929	8,700,000	2,300,000	6,000,000	21,500,000

The foreign trade of Mongolia in recent years has been handled by Government organisations backed by Soviet capital. The chief trading concern is the Mongol Central Co-operative Society.

During the summer months motor-car services cross the Gobi desert, the journey between Kalgan and Urga (1,160 road miles) occupying 4-6 days. It was inaugurated in 1917. During 1930 work was commenced on the new railway line from Tao An to Solun.

For a history of political events in Mongolia from 1912 to 1923, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1923, p. 794.

Inner Mongolia is still part of China.

Outer Mongolia.—In 1924, on the death of the last Hutukhtu or theocratic ruler of Outer Mongolia, there was a revolution, as a result of which the Mongolian People's Revolutionary Government, run on Soviet lines, was established. According to the constitution adopted in November, 1924, which follows the Soviet model, the highest power is vested in a parliament (the Great Huraldan) which is elected by universal suffrage, male and female, over 18 years of age. It has to meet once a year at least, and alone has the power to amend the constitution. It elects from its number 30 members who form the executive committee (the Little Huraldan) which is responsible to it. This committee elects five of its members to a board which carries on current state affairs.

In 1932 the population of Outer Mongolia was estimated at 540,000, of whom about one-sixth were Russians and some 5,000 Chinese. The Mongols are mainly herdsmen, and in 1928 were estimated to have 1,340,000 horses, 270,000 camels, 1,500,000 oxen, and 10,600,000 sheep.

There are some gold mines in the country, as well as other mineral deposits of unascertained value. Wool, skins and furs are exported, chiefly to the Soviet Union. In 1925 exports from Outer Mongolia were estimated at 24,600,000 Mexican dollars; and imports at 24,000,000 Mexican dollars. A tannery, a brick-works, and a sawmill are the only industries.

Communications are chiefly by caravan route. In 1926 an agreement was reached between the Soviet Union and Outer Mongolia for the construction of a railway between Urga and Chita, but, according to the latest information, has not yet been implemented. An air service has been established between Verkhneudinsk and Urga, and there are steamer services on the Selenga and Orkhon rivers. There is telegraphic communication with the Soviet Union, and a wireless station has been established at Urga.

Since March, 1915, Mongolia has had a legal currency of its own. The present currency, introduced in 1925, is based on the Tukhrrik, a silver coin equivalent theoretically to half an American gold dollar, and divided into 100 Monqo. In 1924 a state note-issuing bank, the Commercial and Industrial Bank (Mongolbank), was founded, with a capital of 175,000 Mexican dollars, which has since been increased to 3,000,000 Mexican dollars. The Soviet State Bank holds fifty per cent. of the capital.

Buddhist Lamaism is the prevalent form of religion, the Lamas having their residence at Urga and other centres.

Tannu-Tuva (Tuvinian People's Republic) is an independent republic, under Soviet protection, to the north-west of Mongolia, between 50° and 53° N. lat., and between 90° and 100° E. long. It is bounded to the East, West and North by Siberia, and to the South by Outer Mongolia.

As Uryankhai the territory now known as Tannu-Tuva was considered part of Outer Mongolia until the Mongolian insurrection of 1911. Russian colonists had been settled there since 1870, and consequently the Imperial Russian Government at this time made claims to the territory. It was not included in autonomous Mongolia, and after a period of nominal independence, it was proclaimed a Russian protectorate on the outbreak of the Great War in 1914, and became virtually a department of the Ussinsk district of the Altai Province of Siberia.

During the Russian Civil War Uryankhai came again under Chinese jurisdiction, but after the Soviet occupation of Urga it was proclaimed an independent republic under the name of Tannu-Tuva. The Chinese Government and the Government of the Mongol Republic set up under Soviet influence protested against its separation from Outer Mongolia, and a mixed commission was appointed to settle its status. In 1926 a Treaty of Friendship was signed by Outer Mongolia and Tannu-Tuva.

According to the Constitution adopted in 1924 supreme power is vested in the Great Huruldan, which is composed of district representatives elected by all citizens of 22 years of age excepting those belonging to high noble and priestly families. The Great Huruldan meets once a year and elects a Little Huruldan of 30 members, which in turn elects a President and the members of the Government, who are responsible to it. The Little Huruldan, which is the legislative body, meets four or five times a year.

President of the Little Huruldan.—M. Tonduk.

The area of Tannu-Tuva is about 64,000 square miles. The total population is about 65,000, of whom some 50,000 are Tuvinians, 12,000 Russians, and the rest Chinese and Mongols. The Tuvinians are a Turki people, formerly ruled by hereditary or elective tribal chiefs.

Tannu-Tuva is well-watered and has much good pastoral land. The Tuvinians are mainly herdsmen and cattle farmers, and the Russians in Tannu-Tuva merchants, farmers, and gold prospectors. There are deposits of gold and asbestos. The main exports are hair, hides and wool, and the imports manufactured goods and iron. The capital city is Kysylchoto (in Russian Krasny), formerly known as Khem-Belder (Russian Bielotsarsk). It has some 10,000 inhabitants.

A Soviet steamer service along the river Yenisei maintains communication with Minussinsk, in Central Siberia. There is a telegraph line connecting Kysylchoto with Soviet Russia.

COLOMBIA.

(LA REPÚBLICA DE COLOMBIA.)

Constitution and Government.

THE Republic of Colombia, which in colonial days was called 'Vice-royalty of New Granada,' gained its independence of Spain in 1819, and was officially constituted December 17, 1819, together with the present territories of Panama, Venezuela and Ecuador, the State of 'Greater Colombia,' which continued for about twelve years. It then split up into Venezuela, Ecuador, and the Republic of New Granada in 1830. The Constitution of May 22, 1858, changed New Granada into a confederation of eight States, under the name of Confederation Granadina. May 8, 1863, saw another Constitution, and the adoption of the name of the United States of Colombia. The revolution of 1885 led the National Council of Bogotá, composed of two delegates from each State, to promulgate the Constitution of August 5, 1886, which abolished the sovereignty of the States, converting them into departments, with governors appointed by the President of the Republic, though they retained some of their old rights, such as the management of their own finances. A decree of May, 1928, abolished their right to borrow abroad without the sanction of the central Government.

The legislative power rests with a Congress of two Houses, the Senate, of about 58 members, elected for 4 years, and the House of Representatives, of about 181 members, chosen for 2 years. By the Act of 1980 the Senators are elected indirectly by departmental assemblies, at least 3 senators for each department and more according to population; the Representatives are chosen by the people in each department (one for every 50,000). Congress meets annually at Bogotá on July 20.

The President is elected by direct vote of the people for a term of 4 years, and is not eligible for re-election until 4 years afterwards. Congress elects, for a term of one year, two substitutes, one of whom occupies the presidency in the event of a vacancy during a presidential term. Public expenditures are supervised by the Controller General, who is responsible, not to the President, but to Congress.

The following is a list of Presidents since 1898 :—

Dr. Manuel Antonio Sanclemente, Aug. 7, 1898—July 31, 1900.

Dr. José Manuel Marroquín, July 31, 1900—Aug. 7, 1904.

General Rafael Reyes, Aug. 7, 1904—April, 1909. Went abroad April, 1909, and resigned on his return July 29, 1909.

General Jorge Holguín, April, 1909—Aug. 7, 1909.

Dr. Ramón González Valencia, Aug. 7, 1909—Aug. 7, 1910.

Dr. Carlos E. Restrepo, Aug. 7, 1910—Aug. 7, 1914.

Dr. José Vicente Concha, Aug. 7, 1914—Aug. 7, 1918.

Dr. Marco Fidel Suárez, Aug. 7, 1918—Nov. 11, 1921.

General Jorge Holguín, Nov. 11, 1921—Aug. 7, 1922.

General Pedro Nel Ospina, Aug. 7, 1922—Aug. 7, 1926.

Dr. Miguel Abadía Méndez, Aug. 7, 1926—Aug. 7, 1930.

Dr. Enrique Olaya-Herrera, Aug. 7, 1930—Aug. 7, 1934.

President of the Republic.—Don Alfonso Lopez. Elected February 11, 1934; holds office from August 7, 1934, to August 7, 1938.

The ministries are those of the Interior, Foreign Affairs, Finance, War, Public Instruction, Industry and Labour, Public Works, Agriculture and Commerce, and Posts and Telegraphs.

On November 3, 1903, Panama asserted its independence and was formed into a separate Republic. On April 6, 1914, Colombia signed a treaty with the United States, at Bogotá, agreeing to recognise the independence of Panama and receiving as indemnity for the Panama Canal zone 25 million dollars (5 millions sterling) and certain rights in the zone. (See Introduction of THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1915.) This Treaty was ratified by both countries in 1921. A mixed Commission is (1934) determining the boundary between the two.

A boundary dispute with Peru, which has lasted for over 100 years, was settled in 1928; but broke out again in 1932 with the seizure by Peruvian volunteers of the town of Leticia which had been incorporated in Colombia. Fighting broke out in 1933, but on May 22 of that year Peru, following Colombia's example, agreed to the League of Nations suggestions, that Güefpi be handed back to Peru and Leticia be evacuated by Peruvian troops while the two countries begin direct negotiations, a Commission from the League to maintain order, with international troops, in the Amazon region in the interim.

Area and Population.

The area of the Republic is estimated at about 447,536 square miles. It has a coastline of about 2,046 miles, of which 868 miles are on the Caribbean Sea and 1,178 miles on the Pacific Ocean. The area and population of the 14 departments, 3 intendencies and 7 commissaries were, according to the census of November 16, 1928, as follows (the capitals in brackets).

Of the total population (including Indians) in 1928, 3,937,892, or 50·16 per cent., were males, and 3,913,108, or 49·84 per cent., were females. Immigration is almost negligible; foreigners in 1928 numbered 35,251, including: German, 1,682; English, 1,436; United States, 1,607; Italian, 1,916; Syrian, 2,967; and Venezuelan, 14,743. Urban population totalled 2,437,848, or 31 per cent.; for every 1,000 townspeople there are 2,200 country people. Population over 10 years of age numbers 5,610,715, of whom 51·57 per cent. are literate. Illiterate men number 23·12 per cent., and illiterate women 25·12 per cent. of those over 10 years of age. Illiterates were 68 per cent. of the population at the 1918 census.

The bulk of the population lives at altitudes of from 4,000 to 9,000 feet above sea level.

The capital, Bogotá (census population, 1928, 235,421), lies 8,600 feet above the sea. The chief commercial towns, with their population in 1928, are Barranquilla (139,974), connected with the coast at Puerto Colombia by 17 miles of railway and by road; Cali (122,847); Medellín (120,044), a coffee and mining centre; Cartagena (92,494); Manizales (81,091); Ibagué (56,338); Cúcuta (49,279); Bucaramanga (44,083). Buenaventura, the principal port on the Pacific, was destroyed by fire in 1931; it is being rebuilt.

The language spoken is Spanish—the purest Spanish spoken in South America.

Religion, Education and Justice.

The religion of the nation is Roman Catholicism. There are 4 Catholic archbishops, viz. of Bogotá, Cartagena, Medellín, and Popayán, the first having 4 suffragans and the other three 2 each. One of the suffragan sees is Panamá, belonging to ecclesiastical province of Cartagena, and now also to the Republic of Panamá. Other forms of religion are permitted, so long as their exercise is 'not contrary to Christian morals nor to the law.'

Primary education is free but not compulsory. In 1931-32 there were 7,495 primary and secondary schools with 447,946 pupils; in 1930-31 there were 25 industrial schools with 1,392 children; 6 art schools with 399 pupils; 17 normal schools with about 1,000 pupils. The oldest University is that of Bogotá (founded 1572). This and the School of Mines at Medellín are national institutions. The other Universities are maintained by Departments; they are the Universities of Antioquia at Medellín (founded 1822), with 1,000 students, of Bolívar at Cartagena, of Cauca at Popayan, and of Narino at Pasto.

A new judicial code, published in the Diario Oficial, October 24, 1931, went into effect January 1, 1932. The Supreme Court, at Bogotá, is divided into 4 chambers—civil cassation, criminal cassation, general business and civil 'de unica instancia.' Each judicial district has a superior court of 3 judges or more. By a decree of November 12, 1932, married women were granted full control of their property, and a share of property jointly acquired since marriage.

Finance.

Ordinary revenue and expenditure for 6 fiscal years in gold pesos (normally 1 gold peso = 97 cents, U.S., but in 1931 its value was fixed at 95 cents):—

Year	Revenue	Expenditure	Year	Revenue	Expenditure
1928-29	75,514,880	52,334,199	1931-32	43,694,101	52,203,930
1929-30	75,238,923	84,025,618	1932-33 ¹	32,435,660	32,435,600

The main items of ordinary expenditure in 1933-34 were: Interior, 6,622,000 pesos; Public Debt, 8,751,000 pesos; War, 6,000,000 pesos; National Education, 1,422,000 pesos; Public Works, 2,339,000 pesos; Posts and Telegraphs, 3,746,000 pesos; Hygiene, 2,150,000 pesos.

On June 30, 1933, the external debt of the Central Government was 73,406,632 gold pesos, and the internal debt was 64,573,866 pesos. The total external debt on June 30, 1932, stood at 162,178,032 gold pesos. The national internal debt on June 30, 1932, was 44,254,571 pesos. On February 12, 1932, the Government suspended the transfer abroad of the sinking fund payments on its external debt, but continued interest transfers on the national and the bank debts; these were suspended on March 28, 1933, due to the heavy expenditure entailed by national defence. The external debts of Departments and Municipalities are in default.

Defence.

Military service is compulsory between the years of 21 and 45. Service with the colours is for 1 year. The permanent army consists of 3 divisions of 2 brigades of 2 regiments of infantry; total 12 infantry regiments; 2 cavalry regiments, each of 4 squadrons; 1 artillery regiment; 1 engineer battalion; 1 transport battalion of 3 companies. The peace effective in 1932 was 477 officers and 8,000 other ranks. In war time every fit Colombian is compelled to serve, and the war effective is about 50,000. The infantry are armed with rifles of the improved Remington pattern, with the French Gras rifle, and with the 88 pattern Mauser.

Colombia has 1 seagoing gunboat, 3 coastguard patrol vessels built in 1925, 5 river gunboats, and several motor launches for customs services. Two modern destroyers were purchased by Portugal in 1934. At the same time the services of a retired British naval officer were engaged with a view to his reorganising the Colombian Navy.

Production and Industry.

Very little of the country is under cultivation but much of the soil is fertile, and is coming into use as roads improve. Colombia is the largest producer of mild coffee, demand for which is unaffected by over-production in Brazil. Crops are grown by smallholders, and are picked all the year round. Quality is carefully guarded; the coffee census of 1932 showed 139,348 plantations with 461,236,225 producing trees and 69,781,989 young trees. Exports, 1933, 3,280,938 bags of 60 kilos. United States takes over 90 per cent. of the total. Rice, for domestic consumption, is increasingly important; output, 1932, 47,000 tons. Tobacco is also grown. Cotton area is 150,000 acres. Cocoa, sugar (about 40,000 metric tons annually), tagua (or vegetable ivory nut), and dyewoods are produced, besides wheat, maize, plantains, &c. Banana cultivation is extending; exports, 1932, 7,020,529 stems. About one-third of the bananas imported into the United Kingdom are from Colombia. The rubber tree grows wild, and its cultivation has begun. Tolu balsam is cultivated, and copaiba trees are tapped but are not cultivated. Dye and cedar woods are abundant on the Magdalena River, but little or no wood of any sort is exported. Forest lands total 150 million acres.

Colombia is rich in minerals, and gold is found in all the departments; output in 1931, 194,268 fine ounces; in 1932, 248,249 fine ounces. The richest mines are in Antioquia, Cauca, Caldas, Tolima, Nariño, Choco, and Cundinamarca. Other minerals are copper, lead, mercury, cinnabar, manganese, emeralds, and platinum (first discovered in Colombia in 1735), which was long abundant in the alluvial deposits of the Choco River but exports (1,260 kilos in 1932) are dwindling. The working of the emerald mines is a Government monopoly or Government-controlled; exports are rigidly controlled, only the finest stones being sent abroad. The chief mines are those of Muzo (Government-owned) and Chivor (American-owned). The country also has coal, iron, limestone, sand, and fireclay deposits, so that in some parts it is highly favourable for the development of metallurgical industries. The extraction of salt from the mines in Zipaquirá and the evaporation at the numerous natural salt pans along the Caribbean coast are a Government monopoly, leased to the Banco de la República; annual revenue is about 1,500,000 gold pesos. There are extensive deposits of coal of high quality, especially near Cali. Petroleum has recently been found; production has risen from 447,744 barrels in 1924 to 16,417,000 barrels in 1932, and 13,500,000 barrels in 1933. The output is piped from the oilfields to the coast.

Commerce.

Exports and imports were placed in 1931 under Government control, to protect the foreign exchange value of the gold peso.

Imports and exports for 6 years (5 gold pesos = 17.) :—

Shipping and Communications.

Owing to the mountainous character of the country, the construction of arterial roads and railways is both costly and difficult. The roads are generally simple mule tracks, though some progress has been made by the Government in the construction of main roads, railways and ropeways. The overhead ropeways connecting Mariquita with Manizales is the longest in the world. Total length of motor highways, 1,865 miles; a new road is now under construction connecting all parts of the country. Of the 2,300 mile Simon Bolivar highway which runs from Caracas in Venezuela to a point near Guayaquil in Ecuador, the Colombian portion is complete except for 210 miles due to be finished late in 1934.

In Colombia there are 15 lines of railway (11 national, and 3 British companies), with a total length (1931) of 1,432 miles; about 1,900 miles are under construction. Of the total, 614 miles have a gauge of 3 ft.; the rest a metre gauge. The national lines were placed in 1931 under the administration of a non-political council. Most of them are small disconnected lines serving principally as feeders to the Magdalena river, which is the main traffic route between the Caribbean and the interior.

A daily airplane service connects Bogotá with Barranquilla on the Atlantic coast; from there a bi-weekly service (mail and passengers), reaches New York in 3½ days.

The Magdalena river is subject to drought and despite possible minor improvements, navigation is always impeded during the dry season. That river is navigable for 900 miles; small steamers ascend to La Dorada, 592 miles from Barranquilla. A British river-transport company has contracted with the Government to convey mails and passengers to and from the interior every three days. Other companies, British, German, and native, ply on the rivers. A project is on foot to open the Bocos de Ceneiza to navigation by ocean steamers, converting Barranquilla into an ocean port.

In 1930, the post-office handled 15,286,583 letters and post-cards and 15,659,322 packets of printed matter, samples, and business papers. Number of offices, 1,075. There are 23,020 miles of Government telegraph lines; number of offices, 880. Telephone system is being extended; wireless telephony is utilized between Colombia, Chile and Argentine.

International cable service to all Latin America and the United States is furnished by the lines of All-America Cables which touch Colombia at Cartagena, Barranquilla and Buenaventura. From the last point a connecting land line, operated by the company, extends to Bogotá via Cali. The company is installing wireless telephone and telegraph stations at Bogotá and Medellín for North American and European service; the Marconi Wireless has a station in Bogotá covering points in the interior as well as abroad.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

Under the Law of June 12, 1907, the monetary unit was a gold peso equal to one-fifth of a pound sterling and of proportionate weight, the fineness being the same; it equalled 97·3 cents, U.S. After Great Britain's departure from the gold standard, the gold peso was linked to the dollar (U.S.) at the rate of 1 peso = 95·01 cents (U.S.). In 1933 the foreign exchange value ranged between 95·5 cents and 63·9 cents. Gold coins are 2½, 5, and 10 pesos. Silver coins are (900 fine) the half-peso, and 20 and 10 centavos. Nickel coins for 1, 2, and 5 centavos are legal tender. There are also notes representing gold pesos of 1, 2, 5, and 10 pesos respectively.

On June 30, 1932, the total currency of Colombia consisted:—gold coinage, 6,340,000 pesos; bullion, 2,443,000 pesos, nearly all in the Banco de la República; central bank notes, 19,153,000 pesos; Treasury notes, 7,931,000 pesos; silver and nickel coinage and certificates, 13,551,000 pesos; Treasury bonds, 34,000 pesos; other domestic specie, 51,000 pesos; foreign specie, 13,000 pesos, making a total of 49,516,000 pesos.

On July 23, 1923, the Banco de la República was inaugurated as a central bank. The capital amounts to 11,735,800 pesos. It has the exclusive privilege until 1943 of issuing banknotes in Colombia. Its note issues must be covered (law of December 1, 1931) by a reserve in gold or foreign exchange of 50 per cent. of their value (later reduced to 30 per cent.); deposits are to be covered by a special currency reserve up to 25 per cent. of their total. Other banks are required to turn their gold over to the Central Bank, which has sole power, through a Central Exchange Board, to buy and sell gold and foreign exchange. Gold reserves on September 30, 1933, were 14,313,000 pesos held at home and 3,300,000 held abroad by the Banco de la República. Note issue totalled 26,082,000 pesos.

The Agricultural Mortgage Bank of Bogotá, formed by the consolidation of the mortgage departments of 5 principal banks in 1925, was supplemented in 1931 by the Agrarian Credit Bank with capital of 10 million pesos subscribed by Government, Departments, Municipalities and others.

There are 21 commercial banks with total paid-up capital and reserves (June 30, 1932) of 36,013,000 pesos, including 4 foreign (2 English, 1 Canadian and 1 American) commercial banks and 2 native mortgage banks. This does not include the Banco de la República.

The metric system was introduced into the Republic in 1857. In custom-house business the kilogramme, equal to 2·204 avoirdupois pounds, is the standard. In ordinary commerce the arroba, of 27·5 pounds, or 12½ kilos; the quintal, of 4 arrobas, or 50 kilos; and the carga, or "mule load," of 2½ quintals, or 125 kilos, are generally used. The Colombian libra is equal to 1·102 pound avoirdupois. The Colombian vara, or 80 cm., is still in some cases the measure of length used for retailing purposes, but in liquid measure the French litre is the legal standard.

COSTA RICA.

(REPÚBLICA DE COSTA RICA.)

Constitution and Government.

THE Republic of Costa Rica (literally the 'Rich Coast'), an independent State since the year 1821, and forming from 1824 to 1829 part of the Confederation of Central America, is governed under a Constitution promulgated on December 7, 1871, and modified very frequently since that date. Practically there was no constitution, but only dictatorships, between 1870 and 1882. The legislative power is now vested in a single chamber called the Constitutional Congress, and made up of 43 deputies, one for every 8,000 inhabitants. The members of the Chamber are elected for the term of four years, one-half retiring every two years. The President is elected for four years. By the Election Law of August 18, 1913, universal suffrage was adopted for all male citizens who are of age and able to support themselves, except those deprived of civil rights, criminals, bankrupts and the insane. Voting for President, Deputies and Municipal Councillors is, by the Law of July 26, 1925, secret, direct and free. Diplomatic relations with Panama, severed since 1921, were resumed October, 1928. On December 23, 1932, Costa Rica denounced the Central American Treaty of Peace and Amity signed February 7, 1923, with El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras and Nicaragua.

President of the Republic.—Dr. Ricardo Jiménez Oreamuno, elected on February 7, 1932; assumed office May 8, 1932.

The administration normally is carried on by seven Secretaries of State, appointed by the President, who direct the departments of: Interior and Police; Foreign Affairs; Justice, and Public Worship; Education; Public Security; Finance and Commerce; Public Works, Hygiene and Public Health.

Area and Population.

The area of the Republic is estimated at 23,000 English square miles, divided into seven provinces, San José, Alajuela, Heredia, Cartago, Guanacaste, Puntarenas, and Limón. The last Census, taken in May, 1927, showed a population of 471,525, made up as follows:—

Province	Population	Province	Population
San José . . .	153,183	Guanacaste . . .	51,142
Alajuela . . .	97,577	Puntarenas . . .	23,789
Heredia . . .	38,407	Limón . . .	32,278
Cartago . . .	70,199	Total . . .	471,525 ¹

¹ There are about 3,500 aborigines (Indians).

Estimated population on January 1, 1933, was 539,654.

The vital statistics for four years were as follows:—

	Marriages	Births	Deaths	Increase	Immigration	Emigration
1929	3,098	22,662	11,829	10,833	8,506	8,024
1930	2,975	23,650	11,225	12,425	6,707	6,957
1931	2,983	23,838	12,567	11,262	5,247	4,850
1932	3,250	23,661	11,843	11,818	3,677	3,531

The population of European descent, many of them pure Spanish blood, dwell mostly around the capital, the city of San José (population, 1933, 57,047, with suburbs, 67,327), and in the towns of Alajuela (9,591), Cartago (17,577), Heredia, with suburbs (14,459), Liberia (8,606), Puntarenas (8,052), and Limón (16,133). The last-named, on the Caribbean coast, is the country's chief seaport. There are some 18,000 coloured British West Indians, mostly in Limón Province, on the banana farms. The native Indian population is dwindling.

Spanish is the language of the country.

Religion and Education.

The Roman Catholic is the religion of the State, but there is entire religious liberty under the Constitution. The Archbishop of Costa Rica has under him the Bishop of Alajuela.

Elementary instruction is compulsory and free. Elementary schools are provided and maintained by local school councils, while the national government pays the teachers, besides making subventions in aid of local funds. In July, 1933, there were 523 elementary schools with 1,938 teachers and 53,379 enrolled pupils. For secondary instruction there are at San José a lyceum for boys with 661 pupils and 39 instructors, and a college for girls with 539 pupils and 38 teachers. A normal school established in 1915 at Heredia has 422 pupils and 32 teachers. The towns of Cartago and Alajuela have each a college. Expenditure on education, 1932, 3,906,194 colones.

Justice.

Justice is administered by the Supreme Court of Justice, two Appeal Courts, and the Court of Cassation. There are also subordinate courts in the separate provinces, and local justices throughout the Republic. Capital punishment cannot be inflicted. In 1932 there were 2,854 criminal cases, of which 935 were convicted, and 5,308 cases of misdemeanour, including 2,446 drink convictions; there were 4,945 civil cases.

Finance.

The revenue and expenditure for five years have been as follows (nominally, £1 sterling = 10.45 colones; 1 colon = 46½ cents, U.S., but since 1926 it has been stabilized at 25 cents, U.S.):—

—	1930	1931	1932	1933 ¹	1934 ¹
	colones	colones	colones	colones	colones
Revenue . . .	27,468,498	24,750,462	23,095,877	23,727,289	24,382,575
Expenditure . . .	32,513,818 ²	27,570,946	25,024,858	23,765,775	24,249,428

² Excluding provision for amortizing the public debt.

Revenue in 1934, included customs revenue, 11,000,000 colones; liquor monopoly, 2,700,000; and Pacific Railway, 2,700,000 colones (gross); fixed export taxes, 2,500,000 colones. The largest items of expenditure are public debt service, 6,913,000 colones; public instruction, 4,263,000 colones, and public works and agriculture, 2,835,000 colones. Monopoly of petrol or gasoline was established in 1931.

The foreign debt of the Republic outstanding on January 1, 1933, was 90,503,200 colones, made up of gold refunding bonds, 1911, 1,419,620½; the French Loan of 1911 (in liquidation), 5,811,000 (pre-War gold) francs; a U.S. loan of 1926, 7,198,000 dollars; Pacific Railway bonds, 1,589,000 dollars (U.S.); 68,114½ due to an English construction company; and the Bonos Conversion, 1932, 1,597,956 dollars (U.S.). The internal debt amounted to 31,125,162 colones.

Defence.

Costa Rica has an army, including reserve and national guard, of 150,485 officers and men, of whom in 1929, 50,485 were enrolled and organized in 33 battalions to be called out on mobilization. The standing and active army is limited to 500 by a convention reached in 1923 by the States of Central America. Its strength in 1932 was 58 officers and 260 other ranks. The Republic has also 1 motor launch on the Atlantic side and 1 on the Pacific side for Revenue purposes.

Production and Industry.

Agriculture is the principal industry. The cultivated area is about 1,039,883 acres; grass lands cover 6,552,000 acres. There are thousands of square miles of public lands in Costa Rica that have never been cleared, on which can be found quantities of virgin rosewood, cedar, mahogany, and other cabinet woods. The principal agricultural products are coffee, of which 18,499 metric tons were exported in 1932-33, bananas, 4,313,379 stems, and cocoa, 7,305 metric tons. Coffee and bananas account for nine-tenths of the exports. Maize, sugar-cane, rice, and potatoes are commonly cultivated. About 5,000 acres are under tobacco. The distillation of spirits is a government monopoly. The live-stock, in 1929, consisted of 398,737 cattle, 84,563 horses, 83,174 pigs and 8,177 mules. The second industry of importance is that of gold and silver mining on the Pacific slope. Gold and silver output, 1932, was valued at 14,938½. There are also deposits of quartz, alabaster, granite, oil, alum, slate, onyx, and mercury; and sulphur and copper also exist, but mining in the Republic is not very fully developed.

There were (1929) officially enumerated 6,532 factories and industries in the Republic, all small, including 144 cigar and cigarette factories, 308 cheese-making establishments, 151 hydraulic sawmills, 68 candle-making factories and many coffee-drying establishments, starch, broom and wood-work factories. The most important industries are shoes, soap, and candles. Electricity, derived from water power in the highlands, is widely used as motive power; it was nationalized in 1928. The first census taken of unemployed in 1933 showed 8,863.

Commerce.

The value of imports into and exports from Costa Rica in 5 years (including coin and bullion) was as follows (at par 10·45 colones = £1, and 1 colon = 46·5 cents, U.S., but from 1926 to 1932 it was stabilized at 25 cents, U.S.; average rate, 1933, was 15·5 to the £):—

—	1928	1929	1930	1931	1932
	Colones	Colones	Colones	Colones	Colones
Imports . . .	71,570,830	79,171,543	43,386,860	34,723,124	23,995,807
Exports . . .	78,543,348	72,671,543	65,333,000	57,116,888	37,635,817

The value of the chief imports for 1931 and exports for 1932 was as follows (15·55 colones = £):—

Chief Imports	1931	Exports	1932
Cotton	283,560	Coffee	1,526,088
Iron and steel other than machinery	155,148	Bananas.	693,247
Flour	149,727	Cacao	141,743
Mineral oil and derivatives	129,046	Gold and silver bullion	14,938
Motor cars and trucks	22,954	Timber	5,690
Silk goods	50,060	Fruit and vegetables	7,817
		Hides and skins	12,305

Of the import value in 1932, 52·7 per cent. was from the United States, 11·8 per cent. from Germany, 10·9 per cent. from the United Kingdom, 7·9 per cent. from Central and South America. Of the value exported in 1932, 47·0 per cent. went to the United Kingdom, 39·0 per cent. to the United States, 7·4 to Germany, and 3·4 per cent. to Latin America.

Total trade between the United Kingdom and Costa Rica (Board of Trade Returns) for 5 years:—

—	1929	1930	1931	1932	1933
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports from Costa Rica into U.K.	2,559,687	2,796,234	2,384,834	1,321,840	1,903,779
Exports to Costa Rica from U.K.	403,661	162,341	135,021	138,730	161,282
Re-exports to Costa Rica from U.K.	8,879	4,905	4,036	4,254	3,103

Shipping and Communications.

No official figures are available as regards Costa Rican shipping. On the Atlantic coast there are several small sailing vessels and power launches, and on the Pacific coast some motor launches.

In 1932, there entered the ports of the Republic 494 ships of 1,258,510 tons, and cleared, 490 ships of 1,259,028 tons. Nearly all the steamers of the United Fruit Company are under the British flag.

The railway system connects San José with Limón, the Atlantic port, and has been extended to connect the capital with Puntarenas, the Pacific port. The length of railway is 413 miles—the Costa Rica Railway, 189 miles (main line and branches; San José to Limón, 103 miles); the Pacific Railway (state owned), 81 miles (San José to Puntarenas, 73 miles); the Northern Railway, 75 miles, and the United Fruit Co. Railway, 67 miles. When the railway system is completed, through rail communication will be established between Port Limón and the new port of Almirante in Panama. About 130 miles of motoring roads are now open.

In 1932 there were 211 post offices; air mail service between San José and Puntarenas, and with Central America and the United States was established in 1930.

There are about 3,000 miles of telegraph lines, with 205 telegraph offices. In 1932 there were about 2,560 telephones; the telephone lines had a length of about 1,387 miles. Wireless telegraphy is working from Limón to Bocas del Toro (Panama) 60 miles, and to Bluefields, in Nicaragua, and to Colon, in Republic of Panama. The Government has a large wireless station at San José, and a small one at Colorado (mouth of R. San Juan, near Nicaraguan border). There is an international wireless station at Paraiso of high power; it is open for public service.

Banking and Credit.

In October, 1914, the Banco Internacional de Costa Rica was established as a Government Bank of Issue. It was authorised (January, 1932) to issue up to 25,000,000 colones in notes to bearer (guaranteed by Government 6 per cent. Bonds, un-issued balance of Costa Rica Gold Refunding Bonds of 1911, and other Government securities). The Exchange Control Department, founded in November, 1922, was authorised to purchase and sell New York Bank drafts at a fixed rate of 400 per cent. (4 to 1), and to issue and to receive in exchange for such drafts its own notes. On May 31, 1933, the Department practically suspended operations with balances at New York bankers or in hand of 112,073 U.S. dollars gold. It was succeeded by the Exchange Control Board, created January, 1932; the rate on December 31, 1932, was 4.50 colones = 1 dollar (U.S.). The total circulation of the country on May 31, 1933, was: Banco Internacional de Costa Rica, 22,816,000 colones (with notes on hand of 4,484,574 colones); Exchange Control Department, 448,294 colones; silver certificates, 589,020 colones; silver coins, 904,693 colones; copper, 712,000 colones. Total, 25,470,507 colones.

The National Insurance Bank—a Government bank which has a monopoly of new insurance business—reported March 31, 1933, total insurance written amounting to 58,851,462 colones. The Mortgage Loan Bank is being liquidated by the Banco Internacional.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

On October 26, 1896, an Act was passed for the adoption of a gold standard, the monetary unit to be the gold colon, weighing 778 grammes, .900 fine (value about 22.9d. at par or 46.5 cents, U.S.). The colon since 1930 has been practically stabilized at 1 colon = 25 cents, U.S. Gold coins have, however, disappeared from circulation. Silver coins are: 1 colon, 50 centimos, 25 centimos. There are copper coins of 10 centimos, 5 centimos, 1 centimo, and a nickel coin of 2 centimos.

The metric system is legally established and now in use; but in the country districts the following old Spanish weights and measures are found:—

The Libra	= 1.014 lbs. avoirdupois.
„ Quintal	= 101.40 „
„ Arroba	= 25.35 „
„ Fanega	= 11 bushels (imperial bushel).

On January 15, 1921, the Republic adopted as its standard time that of the meridian 90 degrees west of Greenwich.

CUBA.

Constitution and Government.

CUBA, except for a brief period of British occupancy in 1762–63, remained a Spanish possession from the date of its discovery by Columbus until December 10, 1898, when the sovereignty was relinquished under the terms of the Treaty of Paris which ended the armed intervention of the United States in the struggle of the Cubans against Spanish rule. Cuba thus became an independent State. A convention which assembled on November 5, 1900, drew up a constitution which was adopted February 21, 1901, under which the Island assumed a republican form of government, with a President, Vice-President, a Senate and a House of Representatives. A law was passed in Washington authorising the President of the United States to hand over the government to the Cuban people upon the undertaking that they should conclude no treaty with a foreign power that would endanger the independence of Cuba, that no debts should be contracted for which the current revenue would not suffice, that the United States should have certain rights of intervention, and be granted the use of Naval Stations. On June 12, 1901, these conditions were accepted. On February 24, 1902, the election of the President and Vice-President took place, and the control of the Island was formally transferred to the national government on May 20. The coaling station of Guantanamo Bay was leased to the United States for 2,000 dollars annually, on July 2, 1903. A reciprocal commercial treaty, December 27, 1903, further strengthened the ties between Cuba and the United States. After political disturbances, an American Commission formed a provisional government in August, 1906, which was continued until January 28, 1909, when the national government was resumed after the institution of electoral reforms. A constitutional convention was convened March, 1928, and approved various changes in the constitution including a proposal to increase the President's term to 6 years without right of re-election. These changes came into effect on May 11, 1928, and, among other things, conferred upon women over 21 years of age the right to vote. A revolution broke out in 1933, culminating in the resignation and flight of President Machado on August 12, 1933, and the seizure of power by the Opposition parties, which named as Provisional President Dr. Carlos Manuel de Céspedes; the Constitutions of 1901 and 1928 were declared null, and Congress dissolved. On September 5 Dr. Céspedes was forced to resign and Dr. Ramon Grau San Martin was named by the Junta of Five to succeed him. He resigned on January 15, 1934, and was succeeded by Colonel Carlos Mendieta, whose government was recognized by Great Britain, the United States and the other powers.

Provisional President.—Colonel Carlos Mendieta. Appointed January 15, 1934; term expires May 22, 1934.

Formerly the President had a Cabinet consisting of the Secretaries of State, of Justice, of War and Marine, of the Interior, of Finance, of Agriculture and Commerce, of Labour, of Public Instruction, of Public Works, Sanitation and Charity, and of Telegraph and Posts (created in 1925).

Under the old Constitution, the National Congress was made up of a Senate of 36 members and a House of Representatives (126 members, 1 for every 25,000 of the inhabitants). The latter, like the Senators, sat for six years (one-half elected every 3 years), but after 1933 senators were to sit for nine years.

The country is divided into six provinces and 119 municipalities. The province is normally ruled by a Governor elected indirectly by the people and a Council; and the municipality by an Alcalde (Mayor), and an elected municipal council. Havana, the capital, was made a Federal District in 1931, with an Alcalde and Council appointed by the President.

Area and Population.

Cuba has an area of 44,164 square miles (41,634 square miles for the island of Cuba, 1,180 square miles for the Isle of Pines, and 1,350 square miles for the other islands), with an estimated population, on June 30, 1933, of 4,011,088. About 68 per cent. are white. The area, population, and density of population of each of the six provinces, on that date, were as follows:—

Province	Area	Population (June 30, 1933)	Pop. per sq. mile
	Square miles
Havana	3,170	992,397	313·0
Pinar del Río	5,206	347,664	66·7
Matanzas	3,256	344,020	105·6
Santa Clara	8,257	827,312	100·1
Camagüey	10,064	414,074	40·9
Oriente	14,211	1,085,621	76·3
Total	44,164	4,011,088	90·8

The language is Spanish, though English is widely understood.

The chief towns (with population, 1933) are Havana, 543,600; Cienfuegos, 87,970; Camagüey, 131,583; Santiago de Cuba, 103,497; Guantánamo, 66,059; Santa Clara, 97,181; Manzanillo, 63,211; Pinar del Río, 63,213; Sancti Spiritus, 86,495; Trinidad, 62,370; Cárdenas, 41,070.

Justice and Religion.

There is a Supreme Court in Havana and a Court of Appeal in each of the Provinces. The Provinces are divided into judicial districts, with courts for civil and criminal actions, with municipal courts for minor offences. The Civil Code guarantees aliens the same property and personal rights as are enjoyed by natives. There is no State Church, though Roman Catholics predominate.

Education.

Education is compulsory and free. In the year ending June 30, 1932, the 3,816 public schools had 7,573 teachers, and 434,279 children. There were also 67 travelling teachers who taught, in 145 communities, 3,089 children; 94 night schools for working people with 7,393 pupils. There were also 364 private schools with 1,483 teachers and 26,622 pupils. In each province the Government maintains a special Institute for advanced education, and normal schools for training teachers. Near Havana there is a special school with a staff drawn from English public schools, on which the school is modelled. University instruction is given at the University of Havana (founded on September 12, 1721). In 1929-30, it had 4,795 students, of whom 2,303 were studying medicine; it was closed in 1931, on account of political disorder.

Cuba has 58 libraries containing 622,461 volumes. There are 193 periodicals published, including 50 dailies, 44 weeklies and 46 monthlies.

Finance.

Revenue and expenditure (budget estimates) for 5 years:—

	1929-30	1930-31	1931-32	1932-33	1933-34
	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars
Revenue . .	85,450,000	76,790,000	60,381,494	51,850,000	44,142,000
Expenditure . .	85,392,151	76,777,580	60,381,494	51,848,421	41,915,592

The principal items of income anticipated in the budget for 1933-34 were:—Customs Revenue, 14,000,400 dollars; land duties, 20,913,500 dollars; National Lottery, 500,000 dollars; posts and telegraphs, 1,544,100 dollars. The principal items of expenditure were: Debt redemption and interest, 5,650,700 dollars (external) and 1,542,440 dollars (internal); War and Marine, 7,895,133 dollars; instruction, 5,932,236 dollars; public works, 2,275,287 dollars.

The debt of the Republic of Cuba on December 31, 1933, amounted to:—Foreign debt, 159,880,478 dollars, and internal debt, 7,766,500 dollars.

Defence.

The army is composed of 860 officers and 13,000 men, organized in 6 cavalry regiments, 4 infantry battalions and 3 batteries with auxiliary services. The navy consists of 2 cruisers (Cuba and Patria), 5 gunboats, an armed transport, and about a dozen coastguard vessels of small size. The strength of the navy is 1,000 men, 150 officers and 25 cadets. The air force consists of 116 men.

Production and Industry.

The staple products of Cuba are tobacco and sugar, but coffee, cocoa, cereals, and potatoes are grown, and a considerable trade is done in fruits and minerals. Cuba is the second largest producer of sugar in the world. In 1933 there were 125 sugar mills. The sugar crop was in 1930-31, 3,120,796 tons; in 1931-32, 2,593,361 tons; and in 1932-33, 2,588,850 tons. Exports in 1932 (raw and refined), 2,608,470 tons; in 1933, 2,292,114 tons. By the 'Chadbourne Agreement' of December 8, 1930, Cuba agreed to segregate its surplus stocks of 1,434,076 tons and to market for five years no more than 3,400,000 tons annually, plus 20 per cent. of its surplus. Production of raw sugar in recent crop years has been limited by presidential decree; for 1934, to 2,315,459 tons. The production of molasses in 1932-33 amounted to 112,448,133 gallons; exports, chiefly to the United States, 130,112,450 gallons. Tobacco exports in 1932:—cigars, 28,563,695; cigarettes, 41,388,247; leaf tobacco, 86,355,270 lbs.; smoking tobacco, 152,235 lbs. Leaf tobacco exports to the United States, 1931, 18,299,000 lbs.; 1932, 13,048,000 lbs. Total value of all tobacco exports in 1933, 13,395,306 dollars; in 1932, 12,928,270 dollars. Tobacco is grown principally in the famous Vuelta-Abajo district, near Pinar del Rio. Coffee production, chiefly from the Province of Oriente, is reviving; exports, 1932, 13,157,059 lbs. The principal fruits exported are pineapples, bananas, citrus fruit, and coconuts. Output of sponges, 1930, 1,111,703 dozen.

In 1933, the live stock in the island included 4,316,862 head of cattle, 585,739 horses, and 77,990 mules.

Cuba has forest lands, many of which are in private ownership: State forests total about 1,250,000 acres. These forests contain valuable cabinet woods, such as mahogany and cedar, besides dye-woods, fibres, gums, resins, and oils. Cedar is used locally for cigar-boxes, and mahogany is exported; hard woods are used for railway sleepers, carts, ploughs and other local purposes.

Iron ore abounds; total exports 1932, 35,601 tons. Copper (21,607 short tons produced in 1932), manganese (exports, 9,177 tons in 1932) and gold are also worked. Cuba has had for years a small output of petroleum, around 11,000 barrels. Six salt deposits yield about 50,000 tons annually.

Commerce.

The value of the imports and exports (including bullion and specie) for 5 years were as follows (the Cuban peso = the U.S. dollar):—

	1928	1929	1930	1931	1932
	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars
Imports . . .	212,816,812	216,215,113	162,452,268	50,111,592	52,712,259
Exports . . .	278,069,669	241,622,760	167,410,669	118,865,558	82,712,015

The imports and exports were distributed as follows:—

Countries	Imports from		Exports to
	1931	1932	1931	1932
	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars
United States	45,939,647	27,653,060	89,073,648	57,482,050

Total	80,111,592	52,712,259	118,865,558	82,712,015

The principal exports are sugar (in value about 70 per cent. of total exports) and tobacco; the principal imports foodstuffs, earths and ceramic products, machinery, metals and metal manufactures, and chemicals.

In 1932, the United Kingdom imported from Cuba 4,776,328*l.* worth of sugar, and 449,124*l.* worth of cigars; and exported to Cuba 102,344*l.* worth of cotton piece goods, and 89,698*l.* worth of coal.

Total trade between Cuba and the United Kingdom (Board of Trade returns) for five years:—

Shipping and Communications.

In 1930, 5,543 vessels of 22,997,053 gross tons entered and cleared the ports of the Republic in the foreign trade. In the coastwise trade (1930) 8,295 vessels entered and cleared.

In Cuba there were in 1932, 3,043 miles of railway—the United Railways of Havana, 1,393 miles and the Cuba Railway, 755 miles, being the greatest systems. The lines now connect the principal towns and seaports from Pinar del Rio in the west, to Santiago de Cuba in the east. The larger sugar estates have extensive private lines connecting them with the main lines.

There were 1,990 miles of Government highways open to traffic in 1930, of which 846 miles are first-class. The new and impressive Central Highway, traversing the island for 706 miles from Pinar del Rio to Santiago and costing 101,123,000 dollars, was opened February 24, 1931. There are 463 post, 346 telegraph offices, and 150 radio and radio-telegraph stations; there are ten wireless stations operated by the Government. There are 10,939 miles of telegraph wires. The telephone system (1932) had 32,769 instruments and 273,985 miles of wire. Direct telephone connection with American and European cities has been maintained since 1921. Air mail service between Cuba and Mexico, and between Cuba and New York, was established in 1930; air service between domestic points is highly developed.

Currency and Banking.

On November 7, 1914, a law was published authorising a new coinage issue in Cuba with a gold peso (equal to the U.S. gold dollar) of 1·6718 grammes (1·5046 grammes fine) as the monetary unit. The gold coins are the 20, 10, 5, 4, 2 and 1 peso pieces; the 20, 10 and 5 pesos pieces are of the same weight and value as the corresponding United States gold coins. Silver is coined in pieces of 1 peso, 40 cents, 20 cents, and 10 cents, while nickel coins of 5, 2, and 1 cent pieces are also issued.

The coinage of gold is unlimited, but silver must not be minted to the value of more than 12,000,000 pesos. The extent of the nickel coinage is determined by the National Executive. The United States coinage is legal tender.

The total amount of currency on September 30, 1933, was 29,943,491 Cuban pesos and 10,556,393 dollars in United States bank notes.

Banking is largely in the hands of the Royal Bank of Canada, the National City Bank of New York, the Chase National Bank of New York, the Bank of Nova Scotia, and the Banco del Comercio. Total number of banks and branches is 169.

The metric system of weights and measures is in use.

CZECHOSLOVAKIA.

(ČESKOSLOVENSKÁ REPUBLIKA.)

THE term Czechoslovaks comprises two branches of the same Slav nation: the Czechs (pronounced Tchechs) of Bohemia, Moravia, and Silesia, and the Slovaks of Slovakia.

The Czechoslovak State came into existence on October 28, 1918. On that day the Národní Výbor (National Council) took over the government of the Czechoslovak countries, including Bohemia, Moravia, Silesia, and Slovakia, which had hitherto belonged to the former Austro-Hungarian Monarchy. On November 14, 1918, the Czechoslovak National Assembly met in Prague, and formally declared the Czechoslovak State to be a Republic, with Professor T. G. Masaryk as its first President.

By the Treaty of Peace of September 10, 1919 (the Treaty of St. Germain), the Allied and Associated Powers formally recognized the Czechoslovak Republic, declaring that 'the peoples of Bohemia, of Moravia, and of part of Silesia, as well as the peoples of Slovakia, have decided of their own free will to unite . . . for the purpose of forming a single sovereign independent state under the title of the Czecho-Slovak Republic.' For the sake of brevity the Czecho-Slovak Republic is designated Czechoslovakia.

Constitution and Government.—The Constitution of the Czechoslovak Republic was passed by the National Assembly on February 29, 1920.

According to the terms of the Constitution, the Czechoslovak State is a democratic Republic having an elected President at its head. The territory of the Republic forms a single and indivisible unity. The National Parliament, which constitutes the only legislative body for the whole of the Republic, is composed of a Chamber of Deputies elected for a period of six years and containing 300 members, and of a Senate comprising 150 members to be renewed every eight years. The two Chambers in joint congress elect the President of the Republic for seven years. The President, as head of the State, is supreme commander of the armed forces, and can declare war with the consent of Parliament. He appoints the higher officers and officials, exercises the right of reprieve, and is himself amenable to the laws only on a charge of high treason. He also appoints and recalls Ministers. The Constitution guarantees freedom of the Press and of speech, and safeguards racial minorities, to whom it assures the maintenance of their schools. Privileges derived from sex, birth or calling are not recognised. Marriage, the family and motherhood are placed under the special protection of the law. All these guarantees and rights are protected by the Supreme Administrative Court, which sees to the legality of the public administration.

In principle the two Chambers are equal in so far that they both enjoy the right of initiative, and that even Government Bills may be first introduced in either house. Only in the case of the Budget and Army Bills must the measures first pass through the Chamber of Deputies. It is also the Chamber of Deputies alone that by a vote of non-confidence can compel the resignation of the Government. A measure passed by the Chamber of Deputies becomes law, despite an adverse decision of the Senate, if the Chamber of Deputies adheres to its first decision by an absolute majority of all its members.

The franchise for the Chamber of Deputies is open to all citizens, without distinction of sex, who are over 21, while all citizens over 30 are eligible for election. The franchise for the Senate is open to all citizens who are over 26; and all citizens over 45 are eligible for election. The electoral system is based on proportional representation.

The Constitution regulates the parliamentary elections on a 'closed scrutiny' basis, the votes being in favour of parties, not of candidates. The allocation of electoral areas is as follows:—Bohemia, 9 (for Chamber of Deputies), 5 (for Senate); Moravia and Silesia, 6 and 3; Slovakia, 7 and 4; Carpathian Ruthenia, 1 and 1.

At the elections held on October 31, 1929, the political parties were returned as follows:—

Senate (150 members):—Czechoslovak Coalition, 88 (Agrarians, 24; Clericals, 13; Social Democrats, 20; Czechoslovak Socialists, 16; National Democrats, 8; Middle Class Party, 6; League for Election Reform, 1); Slovakian Clericals, 9; German Social Democrats, 11; German Christian Socialists, 8; German National Socialists, 4; German Agrarian and Middle Class Parties, 9; Hungarian Christian Socialist, 6; Communists, 15.

Chamber of Deputies (300 members) at the elections held on October 31, 1929, is as follows:—Czech Agrarian, 46; Czech Socialist Democrats, 39; Czech National Socialists, 32; Communists, 30; Czech Clericals, 25; German Social Democrats, 21; Slovak Clericals, 19; German Agrarian and Middle Class Parties, 16; Czech National Democrats, 15; German Christian Socialists, 14; Czech Small Traders, 12; Hungarian Christian Socialists, 9; German National Socialists, 8; German Nationals, 7; Poles and Jews, 4; League for Election Reform, 3.

President.—Thomas Garrigue Masaryk (born in 1850 in Hodonín, in Moravia). Elected May 28, 1920; re-elected May 27, 1927, for a period of 7 years.

According to the Constitution, no one may be elected for more than two successive terms, but an exception has been made in the case of President Masaryk.

The Czechoslovak Government, appointed on October 30, 1932, and re-organized on February 14, 1934, consists of the following Ministers:—

Prime Minister.—J. Malypetr (Czech Agrarian).

Minister of Foreign Affairs.—Dr. Edvard Beneš (Czech National Socialist).

Minister of National Defence.—Bohumil Bradáč (Czech Agrarian).

Minister of Finance.—Karel Trápl (Non-parliamentarian).

Minister of the Interior.—Dr. Joseph Černý (Non-parliamentarian).

Minister of Health.—Dr. Franz Spina (German Agrarian).

Minister of Railways.—Rudolf Bechyně (Czech Social Democrat).

Minister of Social Welfare.—Dr. Ludwig Czech (German Social Democrat).

Minister of Education.—Dr. John Kremar.

Minister of Agriculture.—M. Hodža (Czech Agrarian).

Minister of Justice.—Dr. Ivan Dérer (Czech Social Democrat).

Minister of Posts and Telegraphs.—Dr. Emil Franke (Czech National Socialists).

Minister of Commerce.—Jan Dostálek (Czech Clerical).

Minister for the Unification of Laws.—Dr. Jan Šrámek (Czech Clerical).

Area and Population.—The Czechoslovak Republic consists of Bohemia, Moravia and Silesia, Slovakia, and Ruthenia (Sub-Carpathian Russia). Its frontiers have been defined by the Peace Treaties with Germany, Austria, and Hungary. The area and population of the various provinces, according to the census of 1921, and the preliminary results of the census December 1, 1930, are as follows :—

—	Area in square kilometres	Area in English sq. miles	Population Feb. 15, 1921	Population per square mile, 1921	Preliminary Census Dec. 1, 1930	Population per square mile, 1930
Bohemia	52,065	20,102	6,670,582	331·8	7,106,766	353·5

Of the Czechoslovak citizens 7,345,137 are Czechoslovaks, 3,088,530 Germans, 119,469 Hungarians, 458,094 Russians, 80,182 Poles, 120,277 of Jewish nationality, and 18,954 others. There were besides 238,808 aliens. (The results regarding the nationality of the Czechoslovak citizens in the province of Slovakia are not yet known.)

The population of the principal towns with more than 20,000 inhabitants at December 1, 1930 (preliminary census figures), was :—

1932	512,351	127,593	—	210,254	102,097

Religion.—The majority of the population is Catholic. In 1930 the division of the population (preliminary results) according to religion was :—Roman Catholics, 10,833,423 ; Greek and Armenian Catholics, 585,439 ; Protestants, 1,109,229 ; Orthodox, 145,683 ; Jews, 856,763 ; Old Catholics, 22,747 ; other faiths, 32,646 ; and without any religion, 853,717.

In January, 1920, the reformed clergy of Czechoslovakia decided to withdraw from the jurisdiction of the Pope and to found a Czechoslovak Church, which had, according to the Census of 1930, 793,042 adherents.

Education.—Instruction is compulsory between the age of 6 and 14. The schools may be divided as follows : (1) National Schools (Elementary and Advanced Public Schools) ; (2) Secondary Latin and Technical Schools (Gymnasias and Real-Schools); (3) Universities and Higher Technical Schools; and (4) Trade and Arts, Commercial, Mining and Agricultural, and other special schools. There are practically no illiterates except in Slovakia.

The following table contains the data for elementary and advanced schools (public and private) in Czechoslovakia as at October 31, 1932.

A Board of Audit and Control was constituted by an enactment of March 20, 1919. It is charged with the superintendence of State economy, the State property and the national debt. This Board has an equal standing with the Ministries and is independent of them. Its president is nominated, at the request of the Government, by the President of the Republic.

Defence.—Service in the army is regulated by the law of March 19, 1920. Liability to service lasts from the ages of 17 to 60, but begins normally at the age of 20. Service in the active army is for 2 years, after which the soldier passes to the first reserve until he attains the age of 40, when he passes to the second reserve, where he remains until 50. By the law of April 8, 1927, the peace strength of the army, beginning with October 1, 1927, has been fixed permanently as follows: for the period from October 1 up to March 31 at 140,000, and for the period from April 1 up to August 30 at 100,000, military persons. By the law of April 8, 1927, as from October 1, 1928, there must be elected from the recruits fit for military service a number of 70,000, with due regard to the probable decrease and increase during the first months after entering the active service. The average strength of the army in 1933 was 10,059 officers and 99,578 other ranks, with 12,657 gendarmerie. The air force numbered 6,482 all ranks, with 546 aeroplanes. The army is organised in 4 military commands, comprising 12 infantry divisions of 24 brigades, 2 mountain infantry brigades, 3 cavalry brigades, 12 light artillery brigades, 2 heavy artillery brigades and administrative services.

In the 1934 budget, 1,227 million crowns were allocated for the army.

There is a small defensive force consisting of the 200 ton patrol vessel President Masaryk and 22 armed motor launches and tugs for river service.

Production and Industry.—The Czechoslovak territory is one of the richest in Europe, both as regards natural resources and industrial development. Agriculture is highly developed and intensive farming is carried on.

For the years 1931 and 1932, the area and the yield of the crops were as follows:—

Crops	Area (in acres)		Yield (in metric tons)
	1931	1932	1931	1932
Wheat	2,059,576	2,064,301	1,122,157	1,462,486

Maize	347,269	331,243	227,314	309,283

In 1931-32, there were 139 sugar factories in the country, which produced 819,325 metric tons of sugar. Hops of excellent quality are also grown, both for export and beer production (Pilsener). In 1932, Czechoslovakia produced 7,522 metric tons of hops. The agricultural industries include also flourishing beer, spirit, malt and foodstuffs industries. In 1932, the Republic had 430 breweries producing 9,555,687 hectolitres of beer. In 1930-31, there were 920 distilleries with an output of 641,674 hectolitres of spirits.

On January 1, 1933, the number of live-stock was: Cattle, 4,341,351 (including cows, 2,476,570); horses, 707,579; pigs, 2,621,235; sheep, 465,093, and goats, 876,771.

In 1932, the fruit crop yielded 319,017 tons of apples, 193,544 tons of pears, and 363,460 tons of stone fruit.

Czechoslovakia ranks among the most richly wooded countries in Europe. The forests comprise 33 per cent. of the whole area (about 11,346,734 acres).

The mineral production of the Czechoslovak Republic comprises both soft and hard coal (chief coalfields Most, Chomutov, Teplice, Moravská Ostrava, and Falknov), iron, graphite, and garnets, silver (in Bohemia), copper and lead (in Slovakia), and rock-salt (in Eastern Slovakia and Ruthenia).

Coal production in 1933, 15,124,861 tons of lignite and 10,639,815 tons of hard coal. In 1933, there were 260 coal mines, employing 76,201 persons

The output of pig-iron in 1933 was 498,900 metric tons; raw steel, 747,300 metric tons.

The number of factories in 1931 was 11,993. Of these, 1,890 were textile mills, 2,265 glass works and stone factories, 1,852 for food production, 1,414 for furniture and bent wood manufacture, 960 machine factories, 929 for metal manufacture, 390 paper mills, 647 chemical factories.

Communications.—On December 31, 1931, there were 13,873 kilometres or 8,621 miles of railway in the Republic, of which 7,079 miles are owned by the State, 1,464 miles privately owned, 11 miles owned by foreign States, and 67 miles owned by foreign railways. Of the State railways 1,046 miles are double-tracked, and of the privately owned lines 68 miles.

In 1931, the total number of passengers carried on all Czechoslovak railways was 293,842,532 ; on the State railways, 236,538,621. Total quantity of freight, 82,572,525 tons ; on State railways only, 64,667,468 tons ; the earnings of all railways amounted to 4,760,305,352 crowns, of that on State railways, 4,362,971,922 crowns. Total expenses, 4,710,941,590 crowns, of which on State railways, 4,183,937,536 crowns.

In 1931, there were nearly 49,000 miles of road in the Republic, of which 5,300 miles are maintained by the State, 31,300 by the provinces, the remainder being interregional roads, for the upkeep of which the district authorities are responsible.

The Peace Treaty vested the Czechoslovak State with the right to use certain wharves in the ports of Hamburg and Stettin, and a strip of land on the River Elbe was, in Nov. 1929, leased to the Czechoslovakian Government for 99 years. Of the waterways of the country, the Danube is the most important ; its chief port is Bratislava (Pres-burg). On the Labe (Elbe) the two main ports are Ústí, n/L (Aussig) and Děčín (Teschen). On the Vltava and Elbe in 1932, 841,563 tons were loaded to be transported abroad, and 751,302 tons were unloaded from abroad. The inland traffic amounted to 687,291 tons. By way of the Danube 204,627 tons were loaded to be transported abroad, and 416,791 tons were unloaded from abroad. The inland traffic amounted to 50,456 tons.

In 1932 there were 13 air routes operating in the international service, and 8 in the national service. The former connect Prague with Paris, Warsaw, Constantinople, Vienna and Berlin.

In 1932, there were 4,600 post offices and 4,036 telegraph offices, and 81,766 miles of telegraph wire ; 11,682,585 telegrams were despatched and received. Number of letters handled, 1,026,290,446. In 1932, there were 143,476 telephone stations and 541,547 miles of telephone wire.

Banking and Currency.—In 1931 there were 23 joint-stock banks in Bohemia, Moravia, and Silesia with a total paid-up share capital of 1,532,600,000 crowns and with reserve funds of 1,239,200,000 crowns ; 6 Land-banks issuing their own bonds, which at the beginning of 1931 amounted to 5,025,304,000 crowns. In 1931, there were 74 small joint-stock banks in Slovakia and Podkarpatská Rus with a share capital of 309,941,000 crowns and reserve funds of 201,434,000 crowns. In 1931, there were 366 savings banks with 21,741,915,000 crowns of deposits. In 1931, there were in Bohemia, Moravia and Silesia 4,327 Reiffeisen banks with deposits amounting to 5,406,910,000 crowns. On December 31, 1932, the deposits in the Czechoslovak banks amounted to 55,658,100,000 crowns.

The monetary unit is the Koruna or Crown of 100 heller or heller.

In October, 1929, the value of the Czechoslovak crown was fixed at 44.58 milligrammes of fine gold, and the currency placed on a gold basis. On February 17, 1934, the gold content of the crown was reduced to 37.15 milligrammes, a depreciation of 16.66 per cent. The cover of notes was also reduced from 30 per cent. to 25 per cent. and to consist only of gold. The share capital of the National Bank, which was set up in 1926, was fixed at 405,000,000 Czechoslovak crowns instead of 12,000,000 dollars as hitherto.

The note circulation on January 31, 1934, amounted to 5,448,533,000 crowns; the metallic reserve was 1,707,048,000 crowns.

DANZIG.

(DIE FREIE STADT DANZIG.)

By Article 102 of the Treaty of Versailles, the Principal Allied and Associated Powers undertook to establish the Town of Danzig with the surrounding territory as a Free City, to be placed under the protection of the League of Nations. The League of Nations also appoints a High Commissioner.

High Commissioner.—Sean Lester. Appointed October 26, 1933.

The proclamation of the Freedom of the City and adjacent territory, as well as the coming into force of the Danzig-Polish Treaty, in accordance with Article 104 of the Treaty of Versailles, took place on November 9, 1920. According to this Treaty Danzig and Poland form a single customs territory. Since January 1, 1922, the Polish-German customs frontier extends to the sea, i.e., Danzig is a unit in the Polish customs administration.

The Constitution provides for a Volkstag or Diet of 72 members elected for 4 years and a Senate. This Senate consists of a President, a Vice-President and 10 Senators, whereof the President the Vice-President and 4 Senators receive salaries. The members of the Senate are elected by the Parliament (Volkstag) for an indefinite period. Election is by majority of votes. Any citizen over 25 years of age is eligible. The salaried members of the Senate may hold no other public office, nor may they without the approval of the Senate follow any other profession; the unpaid members hold no public office except with the approval of the Senate. No member may serve on a board of managers or of directors of a commercial company without the consent of the Senate. The President of the Senate directs and exercises general supervision over the work of the Administration. The Senate is the highest State authority, and its meetings are not public. Plebiscites take place if demanded by a tenth of the voters. Any alteration of the Constitution by the Volkstag can only be effected by a two-thirds majority, with at least two-thirds of the Deputies present.

Elections are universal, direct, equal, and secret on the basis of proportional representation, suffrage being granted to all men and women belonging to the State of Danzig who have attained 20 years of age. The elections for the Parliament (Volkstag) held on May 28, 1933, resulted in the return of the following parties: National Socialists, 38; Social Democrats, 13; Centre, 10; Communists, 5; German Nationalists, 4; Poles, 2; total, 72.

Area and Population.—The area of the Free City of Danzig is about 754 square miles, and population 407,517 (August, 1929).

The territory contains a total of 264 localities, of which 258 are rural communes, 2 forest-estate districts, and 4 cities. In addition to the municipality of Danzig, whose administrative district had a population in September, 1933, of 262,600, the following localities are cities:—Zoppot, 30,335 inhabitants; Neuteich, 3,160; and Tiegenhof, 3,252.

Births 1932, 8,076; marriages, 3,291; deaths (excluding still-births), 4,627.

Education.—In May, 1933, Danzig had the following schools:—8 high schools for boys, 7 for girls, and 2 for boys and girls; 10 middle schools and 294 elementary schools. In the high schools there were 5,547 pupils (2,142 girls); in the middle schools, 4,105 pupils (1,381 girls); in the elementary schools, 64,911 pupils (27,043 girls). Teachers in high schools, 848, and middle schools, 150; in elementary schools, 1,368.

The Technical University had in the summer term of 1933, 80 teachers and 1,576 students.

Finance.—For 1928, the Budget of the Free City of Danzig balanced at 117,028,590 gulden; for 1929, at 128,000,410 gulden; for 1930 at 134,842,600 gulden; for 1931 at 142,896,050 gulden; for 1932 at 128,911,640 gulden; and for 1933 at 124,812,460 gulden.

Commerce and Shipping.—For centuries Danzig has been famous as a centre for trade and shipping. Danzig's development as a fountain-head for the trade with Eastern Europe has been largely due to the exceedingly favourable situation at the mouth of the Weichsel (Vistula) River.

The most important items of export through Danzig are grain (286,500 tons in the year 1932; 180,700 tons in 1931), sawn timber, of which the largest purchaser is Great Britain (505,400 tons in 1932; 920,000 tons in 1931), and sugar (141,700 tons in 1932; 199,700 in 1931); the principal imports are salt herrings, 49,950 tons (58,611 tons in 1931), and coffee, cocoa and tea, 8,554·2 tons (10,026 tons in 1931). In 1932, 3,705,200 tons of coal (5,796,100 tons in 1931) were exported, and 93,024 tons of ores and sulphates (400,844 tons in 1931) were imported through Danzig. Sea-borne goods traffic in 1932: Imports, 428,102 tons. Exports, 5,047,949 tons.

The total registered gross tonnage on July 1 1933, was 271,393, comprising 38 steamships, 24 motor-ships, 8 sea lighters of over 250 tons burden each, 1 motor sailing-boat, and 1 other ship.

Shipping in 1932: entered, 4,637 vessels of 2,750,204 tons, and cleared 4,654 vessels of 2,773,146 tons, German shipping predominating, followed by Swedish, Danish, Polish, Norwegian, Latvian and English.

In accordance with Article 19 of the Polish-Danzig Convention of November 9, 1920, a Danzig Port and Waterways Board, composed of 5 Polish and 5 Danzig Commissioners with a President of Swiss Nationality, has been formed to administer and exploit the Port of Danzig.

Communications.—Danzig is connected with Germany by four main railway lines:—Danzig to Königsberg, 130 miles; Danzig (via Kreuz-Schneidemuehl) to Berlin, 299 miles; Danzig to Stettin, 241 miles; Danzig to Breslau (via Posen) 297 miles. Danzig is connected with Poland by three main lines:—Danzig to Warsaw, 241 miles; Danzig to Lodz, 240 miles; and Danzig to Posen, 194 miles. Besides these railway-lines there are regular connections by aeroplanes to Berlin (3 hours), to Königsberg (1 hour), to Warsaw (3 hours), to Marienburg (25 minutes), to Stolt (1 hour), to Stettin (2 hours, 20 minutes). A regular passenger-steamer service is carried on between Danzig (Zoppot) and Swinemünde, Pillau (Königsberg), and Memel. Other shipping-lines have arranged a regular passenger-service to Libau (weekly), to London-Hull (weekly), to Reval-Leningrad (weekly), to Riga and Helsingfors (weekly), to America and Canada (every third week), to Kalmar and Stockholm (every tenth day), to Copenhagen (every tenth day).

The Berlin Königsberg air line and the Polish mail air line serves Danzig. There is also a freight air service between Danzig and Warsaw.

On January 1, 1933, there were 10,289 principal and 8,139 branch telephone connections in Danzig, or a total of 18,428. Telephone calls in 1932 numbered 17,977,000, of which 1,787,500 were toll calls, the remainder being local calls.

The metric system is the sole legal system of weights and measures in Danzig.

Banking and Currency.—Since December 18, 1923, the sole legal currency in the territory in the Free City of Danzig has been the Danzig gulden, with a comparative fine gold value of 0.292895 grammes. After the separation from the German currency, the Bank of Danzig, with a paid-up share capital of 7,500,000 gulden, was founded on February 5, 1924, for the purpose of carrying out the monetary reform. The Government of the Free City of Danzig exercises State control over the bank. By the Note Bank Law, dated November 20, 1923, the Bank of Danzig has the exclusive right of issuing banknotes. The Danzig Government also has the right to issue silver and nickel coinage up to 30 gulden, and aluminium-bronze and copper coinage up to 3 gulden per head of the population for circulation. The standard of the Danzig silver currency (500/1000) corresponds to that of the German and British silver currencies.

The Bank of Danzig was legally obliged to redeem its notes at any time on presentation by cheque on the Bank of England. When the Bank of England suspended the gold basis of payment, the Danzig Government severed the connection of the Danzig currency with the £ sterling and placed the Danzig currency, on September 21, 1931, on the gold standard. Since that time the Danzig currency has been a free gold currency. The Bank of Danzig is obliged to redeem its notes in either gold or currency. Bank of Danzig Return, dated June 30, 1933, in Danzig gulden: Assets: Gold in coin or bullion, 32,050,681; currencies redeemable in gold, 2,306,416; discounts, 8,774,199; loans under securities, 778,908; Danzig current coin, 4,140,361; foreign exchanges (not redeemable in gold), 2,727,755; other balances, 42,743. Liabilities: Capital paid up, 7,500,000; reserves, 4,009,698; notes in circulation, 37,342,450; deposits on demand, 5,641,308; liabilities in foreign currencies, 1,718,073; other liabilities, 128,889.

At the end of 1932, there were 60,825 depositors in the Savings Banks with deposits amounting to 47,620,577 gulden, compared with 62,297 depositors with deposits of 48,890,725 gulden at the end of 1931.

The crown of Denmark was elective from the earliest times. In 1448 after the death of the last male scion of the Princely House of Svend Estridsen the Danish Diet elected to the throne Christian I., Count of Oldenburg, in whose family the royal dignity remained for more than four centuries, although the crown was not rendered hereditary by right till the year 1660. The direct male line of the House of Oldenburg became extinct with the sixteenth king, Frederik VII., on November 15, 1863. In view of the death of the king without direct heirs, the Great Powers of Europe, 'taking into consideration that the maintenance of the integrity of the Danish Monarchy, as connected with the general interests of the balance of power in Europe, is of high importance to the preservation of peace,' signed a treaty at London on May 8, 1852, by the terms of which the succession to the crown of Denmark was made over to Prince Christian of Schleswig-Holstein-Sonderburg-Glücksburg, and to the direct male descendants of his union with the Princess Louise of Hesse Cassel, niece of King Christian VIII. of Denmark. In accordance with this treaty, a law concerning the succession to the Danish crown was adopted by the Diet, and obtained the royal sanction July 31, 1853.

King Christian X. has a civil list of 1,000,000 kroner. Annuities to other members of the royal house amount to 72,000 kroner.

Subjoined is a list of the Kings of Denmark, with the dates of their accession, from the time of election of Christian I. of Oldenburg:—

Constitution and Government.

The present Constitution of Denmark is founded upon the 'Grundlov' (charter) of June 5, 1915, as amended on September 10, 1920. This may in many respects be said to be a further development along the lines laid down in the 'Grundlov' of June 5, 1849, the charter which introduced the Constitution in Denmark. The amendments of September 10, 1920, are mostly of a formal character, necessitated by the incorporation of parts of Slesvig in 1920.

According to the present 'Grundlov,' the legislative power lies with the King and the 'Rigsdag' (Diet) jointly. The executive power is vested in the King, who exercises his authority through the ministers. The judicial power is with the courts. The King must be a member of the Evangelical-Lutheran Church, the official Church of the State. The King has not the right of declaring war or signing peace without the consent of the 'Rigsdag.' The 'Rigsdag' is composed of two bodies: the 'Folketing' (House of Commons) and the 'Landsting' (Senate). All men and women 25 years of age and with a fixed place of abode possess the franchise and are eligible for election. The 'Folketing' is at present composed of 149 members; 117 members are elected by the method of proportional representation in 23 districts. In order to attain an equal representation of the different parties, 31 'Tillægsmandater' (additional seats) are divided among such parties not having obtained sufficient returns at the district elections. One member is elected for the Faroe Islands by simple majority. The term of the Legislature is four years, but the King has power to dissolve the 'Folketing' before the end of the four years. The members of the 'Landsting' are elected indirectly by the 'Folketing's' voters of 35 years of age in the following way. In every 'Folketing's' district electors in a number corresponding to the population are elected by the method of Proportional Representation. The whole country is divided into six 'Landsting's' districts. In each of these the electors elect a number of members of the 'Landsting,' between 10-12. In this way 56 members are elected; one is elected in the Faroe Islands. Moreover, there are 19 members elected by the former 'Landsting,' according to the system of Proportional Representation. The members of the 'Landsting' sit for a term of eight years. There are elections every fourth year for the half of those elected by the electors, while those elected by the 'Landsting' go out all at once after an eight years' term.

The members of the 'Rigsdag' receive 5,600 kr. or 7,200 kr. a year, according to whether their homes are in or outside the capital.

The Rigsdag must meet every year on the first Tuesday in October. To the Folketing all money bills must in the first instance be submitted by the Government. The Landsting, besides its legislative functions, has the duty of appointing from its midst every four years judges who, together with the ordinary members of the Høiesteret, form the Rigsret, a tribunal who can alone try parliamentary impeachments. The ministers have free access to both of the legislative assemblies, but can only vote in the chamber of which they are members.

The executive (appointed April 29, 1929), acting under the king as president, and called the State Council—Statsraadet—consists of the following departments:—

The Presidency of the Council and Ministry of Defence.—Th. Stauning.

Minister of Agriculture and Fisheries.—K. M. Bording.

Ministry of Foreign Affairs.—P. Munch.

Ministry of the Interior.—B. Dahlgaard.

Ministry of Social Affairs.—K. K. Steincke.

Ministry of Justice.—C. Th. Zahle.

Ministry of Public Instruction.—F. Borghjerg.

Ministry of Ecclesiastical Affairs.—N. P. L. Dahl.

Ministry of Public Works.—J. F. N. Friis-Skotte.

Ministry of Finance.—H. P. Hansen.

Ministry of Commerce, Industry and Navigation.—C. N. Hauge.

The ministers are individually and collectively responsible for their acts, and if impeached, and found guilty, cannot be pardoned without the consent of the Folketing.

State of parties in the Landsting, after the election of September 6, 1932:—28 Liberals, 27 Socialists, 13 Conservatives, and 8 Radicals.

Folketing, elected November 16, 1932:—62 Socialists, 39 Liberals, 27 Conservatives, 14 Radicals, 2 Communists, 1 German Party.

In the year 1920 there were incorporated into Denmark parts of Slesvig which voted for Denmark at the plebiscite held in accordance with the Versailles Treaty of June 28, 1919 (made effective Jan. 10, 1920). The Northern Zone voted on Feb. 10, 1920, and 75,431 votes were cast for Denmark, and 25,329 votes for Germany. The Southern Zone voted on March 14, 1920, and 12,800 votes were given for Denmark, and 51,724 votes for Germany. The new Slesvig territories were incorporated on July 9, 1920, being officially named 'Sønderjydske Landsdele' (South Jutland Provinces).

For administrative purposes Denmark is divided into 21 counties (Amt), each of which is administered by a Governor (Amtmand). Moreover, the county is a municipal division with a county council superintending the rural municipalities (about 1,300). There are 88 urban municipalities with a mayor and a town council. Rural as well as urban municipal councils are elected direct by universal suffrage and Proportional Representation. Copenhagen forms a district by itself, and has its own form of administration.

Area and Population.

According to the census held on November 5, 1930, the area of Denmark is 16,576 square miles (42,931 square kilometres), and the population 3,550,656, including North Slesvig with 1,500 square miles (3,882 square kilometres) and 177,696 inhabitants.

The following table gives the area and population of Denmark in 1930:—

Divisions	Area 1930 English sq. m.	Population 1930	Population 1930 per sq. m.
City of Copenhagen (Kjöbenhavn) } without suburbs	28	617,069	22,038
Islands in the Baltic	5,136	1,310,225	255
Peninsula of Jutland	11,412	1,623,362	142
Total	16,576	3,550,656	214

The area of the Faroe Islands is 540 square miles, and the population in 1930 was 24,200.

The population (excluding the Faroes) consisted of 1,736,306 males and 1,814,350 females in 1930. The total population at the census of 1925 was 3,434,555, showing an increase during 1925-30 of 0·67 per cent. per annum. In Denmark the town population has increased from 1,482,297 in 1925 to 1,558,910 in 1930; while the rural population has increased from 1,952,258 in 1925 to 1,991,746 in 1930. The population is almost entirely Scandinavian; in 1921, of the inhabitants of Denmark proper, 96·57 per cent. were born in Denmark.

Estimated population on July 1, 1933, 3,623,000.

The population of the capital, Copenhagen (Kjöbenhavn), in 1930 was 617,069, or with suburbs, 771,168; Aarhus, 81,279; Odense, 56,759; Aalborg, 44,365; Horsens, 28,363; Randers, 27,722.

The following table gives the total number of births, deaths, and marriages with the surplus of births over deaths, for three years:—

Years	Total Births (living)	Still Births	Marriages	Deaths	Surplus of Births over Deaths
1930	66,303	1,588	28,973	38,174	28,129
1931	64,266	1,574	29,027	40,578	23,688
1932	64,560	1,523	28,133	39,701	24,949

Of the births in 1930, 10·70 were illegitimate; in 1931, 10·70; in 1932, 10·56. In 1931, there were 2,472 divorces; in 1932, 2,514.

Emigrants, chiefly to the United States and to Central and South America, in 1930, 3,348; in 1931, 1,186; in 1932, 768.

Religion.

The established religion of Denmark is the Lutheran, which was introduced as early as 1536. The affairs of the National Church are under the superintendence of seven bishops, who have no political character. Complete religious toleration is extended to every sect, and no civil disabilities attach to Dissenters.

According to the census of 1921 there were 3,221,843 Protestants, 22,137 Roman Catholics (under a Vicar Apostolic resident in Copenhagen), 535 Greek Catholics, 5,947 Jews, 17,349 other or of no confession.

Education.

Elementary education has been widely diffused in Denmark since the beginning of the last century, and in 1814 it was made compulsory. The school age is from 7 to 14. In 1932 Denmark had 4,505 lower schools; of these 34 were maintained by the Government, 3,886 by the local communities and 585 were private institutions. The instruction in the public schools is mostly gratuitous. The number of pupils in the 4,505 schools was on January 1, 1932: 499,734. In 1932, 1,729 pupils were admitted to the university; of these 602 were girls. For higher instruction there are furthermore (1932): a veterinary and agricultural college at Copenhagen with 70 professors and teachers and about 700 pupils; 283 technical schools with about 31,000 pupils; 19 training colleges for teachers with about 1,700 pupils; a high school of commerce with about 550 pupils; 95 commercial schools with about 14,000 pupils; 21 agricultural or horticultural schools and 60 folkehøjskoler or popular high schools (adult schools with about 9,000 pupils); a college of pharmacy (founded 1892) with 10 teachers and about 100 students; a school for dentists with 18 teachers and about 160 pupils; a Royal academy of arts (founded 1754) with 22 teachers and about 300 pupils; a Polytechnic Institution (founded 1829) with 110 professors and teachers and about 1,000 students. The folkehøjskoler are all private, but to them and the agricultural schools the State annually makes a grant of about 1,400,000 kroner. The University of Copenhagen, founded in 1479, has about 130 professors and teachers, and about 5,000 students. The University of Aarhus, founded in 1928, and opened on September 11, 1933, has about 120 students.

Pauperism and Old Age Pensions.

Ordinary poor relief is regulated by the poor relief law of April 9, 1891 (and its amendments), under which in the financial year 1931-32, 116,486 (3·2 per cent. of the population) were relieved at a cost of approximately 40 million kroner.

A law of July 1, 1927, entering into force on October 1, 1927, grants an annual sum of money as old age pension (Aldersrente) to any person being 65 years of age and fulfilling certain conditions. The old age pension, which does not involve the loss of civil rights, is granted according to the principle of fixed rates, the law stating the sums which have to be paid under the various circumstances. The pension varies according as the commune of domicile is a town commune or a rural one, and certain deductions are made for self-earned incomes. In Copenhagen, for example, the old age pension of a married couple, both 65 years of age, without any earned income, is 1008 kroner per annum. The subvention is paid by the commune of domicile and seven-twelfths of it is refunded by the State. For the financial year ending March 31, 1932, 99,830 persons were relieved. The total expenditure was 60·9 million kroner.

According to a law of 1913, assistance without the loss of civil rights is granted to children living with their widowed mothers. The expenditure (divided between the municipalities and the State) amounted in the financial year 1931-32 to 2,132,000 kroner.

Justice and Crime.

The lowest courts of justice in Denmark are organized in 99 tribunals where cases of only small consequence are dealt with by a single judge. Cases of greater consequence are dealt with by the superior courts (Landsretterne); these courts are also courts of appeal for the above-named minor cases. Of superior courts there are three: Ostre Landsret in Copenhagen with 17 judges, Vestre Landsret in Viborg with 12 judges, and Søndre Landsret in Sønderborg with 4 judges. From this an appeal lies to the supreme court (Højesteret) in Copenhagen, composed of 13 judges. Judges under 65 years of age can be removed only by judicial sentence.

In 1930, 4,218 men and 447 women were convicted of crimes and delicts.

On March 31, 1932, 1,339 men and 29 women were in the penitentiaries of Denmark.

Finance.

By the terms of the Constitution of Denmark the annual financial budget, called the 'Finanslovsforslag,' must be laid on the table of the Folketing at the beginning of each session, i.e. at the beginning of October. As to the annual financial accounts, called 'Statsregnskab,' the Constitutional Charter prescribes them to be examined by four paid revisers, two of whom are elected by the Folketing and two by the Landsting. Their report is submitted to both Chambers which, after due consideration, pass their resolution generally to the effect that they have no remarks to make on the balance-sheet.

The following shows the actual revenue and expenditure for three years ending March 31 and the estimates for two years :—

Defence.

The Danish army is a national militia, resembling in some respects the Swiss army. Every able-bodied Danish subject is liable to serve in the army or navy, except the inhabitants of the Faroe Islands. Exemptions in Denmark are few, even clergymen having to serve.

Service commences at the age of 20 and lasts for 16 years. For the first 8 the men belong to the active army, and for the second 8 years to the reserve. At the time of joining, the recruits are continuously trained for 150 days in the infantry, 215 days in the field artillery, 245 days in the coast artillery, and 425 days in the cavalry. The engineers have 200 days, and the train 60 days' continuous training. In the case of about one-fourth of the men, their initial training is prolonged by periods ranging from 2½ to 8½ months, according to the arm of the service to which they belong. Subsequent training for all arms only takes place twice in the remaining eight years of army service, and then only for 28 days on each occasion.

The country is organised in one territorial command.

Infantry and mounted troops are armed with the Krag-Jorgensen 8 mm. rifle or carbine and the Madsen machine gun, field artillery with a Krupp gun, firing a 14·88-pound shell.

The number of recruits called up annually for training is 8,625, which with the permanent establishment, armed police and air force, made up a total of 14,136 all ranks. The military budget for 1934-35 was 35,973,480 kroner.

The naval forces have been reconstructed pursuant to the law of National Defence of August 8, 1922. The Navy, as well as the Army, is under the direction of the Minister of Defence.

The fleet is for purposes of coast-defence. It now includes two coast defence ironclads of 3,650-3,800 tons, Peder Skram, Olfert Fischer, each carrying a pair of 9·4-inch and four 6-inch guns, and one of 4,300 tons, Niels Juel, with ten 6-inch guns; 4 fishery patrol vessels (Hvidbjørnen, Islands Falk, Beskytteren and Diana), 20 torpedo boats, 8 submarines, the repair ship Henrik Gerner, and the minelayer Lossen. A sloop and 3 torpedo boats are under construction.

Production and Industry.

The soil of Denmark is greatly subdivided, owing partly to the state of the law, which interdicts the union of small farms into larger estates, but encourages, in various ways, the parcelling out of landed property, and leaves the tenant entire control of his land so long as the rent is paid.

According to the census of June 20, 1932, the extent of the cultivated area in Denmark was as follows (in thousand acres):—grain areas, 3,178; root crop, 1,280; other crop, 89; green fodder and grass, 3,156; fallow land, 107; total cultivated area, 7,812. The acreage and production of the chief crops for two years were as follows:—

Crops	Area		Production
	1931	1932	1931	1932
—	Acres	Acres	Tons	Tons
Wheat . . .	259,000	245,000	273,600	299,800

Potatoes . . .	156,400	172,000	877,300	1,304,400

On July 15, 1933, there were in Denmark 501,000 horses, 3,134,000 head of cattle, 4,407,000 swine, and about 26,000,000 hens.

According to statistics collected on July 15, 1925, there were 89,175 industrial factories and shops in Denmark, employing altogether 392,000 persons, of whom 270,000 were actual labourers. Of the total establishments 26,300 factories used mechanical power. In 1932, there were in Denmark 4 distilleries whose output of brandy reduced to 100° amounted to 7,600,000 litres. In 1932, there were produced 1,296,000 hl. of strong beer, and 709,000 hl. small beer. In the same year 181,244 tons of beet-sugar were produced at 9 sugar factories, and 73,303 tons of margarine were manufactured at 128 factories.

In the Danish fisheries the total value of the fish caught was, 1929, 2,097,000*l.*; 1930, 2,234,000*l.*; 1931, 1,890,000*l.* The fleet in 1931 consisted of 15,635 boats.

Commerce.

The following table shows the value, according to official returns, of the imports and general exports (excluding precious metal) for six years (18.16 kroner = l.):—

Shipping and Navigation.

On December 31, 1932, Denmark possessed 2,089 vessels (above 20 registered tons gross) of 1,238,200 registered tons gross in her mercantile marine, of which 610 of 721,500 tons gross were steamers, and 174 motor ships of 433,700 tons gross, 1,229 sailing vessels with motor of 72,700 tons gross, and 76 sailing vessels of 10,300 tons.

Internal Communications.

Denmark proper (exclusive of Copenhagen) has (March 31, 1933) 7,623 kilometres or 4,736 miles of road, besides 26,945 miles of by-ways. There are (1933) railways of a total length of 3,287 English miles open for traffic in the kingdom. Of this total, 1,559 English miles belong to the State. The total value of the State railways (road, buildings, cars, etc.) up to March 31, 1933, was 458,620,000 kroner. The railways have a gauge of 4 ft. 8½ inches, except 128 miles of which the gauge is 3 ft. 3½ inches.

The Post Office in the year 1932-33 carried 286,301,000 letters and post-cards, and 240,291,000 samples and printed matter. There are 1,436 post-offices. The State telegraphs in 1932-33 carried 3,452,000 messages, of which 898,000 were internal. The length of State telegraph lines (March 31, 1933) was about 10,600 English miles ; number of offices 550. At the same date the railway telegraphs had 451 offices. On Dec. 31, 1932, the length of telephonic wires of the State and the private companies was 1,142,400 English miles. In the year 1932 there were 548,695,000 telephonic conversations.

Banking and Credit.

On December 31, 1933, the accounts of the National Bank balanced at 599,608,000 kroner. The assets included 133,167,000 kroner in bullion and specie. The liabilities included 374,603,000 kroner note issue, 27,000,000 kroner of capital, and 12,034,400 kroner reserve fund. In Denmark there are 173 other banks for commercial, agricultural, industrial, and other purposes. On March 31, 1932, there were 533 savings banks, with 2,035,000 depositors, and deposits amounting to 2,168,700,000 kroner, or about 1,066 kroner to each account.

The nominal value of the coin minted (including recoinage of worn pieces) in Denmark since 1873 is given as follows :—

Years ending March 31	Gold	Silver, nickel, aluminium-bronze, bronze and iron	Total
1873-1932	Kroner 182,063,040	Kroner 51,142,102	Kroner 233,205,142

DOMINICAN REPUBLIC.

(REPÚBLICA DOMINICANA.)

Columbus in 1492 discovered the island of Santo Domingo which he called La Española, and the city of Santo Domingo, founded by his brother, Bartholomew, in 1496, was for long the centre of Spanish power in America. The country declared its independence of Spain in 1821, was invaded and held by the Haitians from 1822 to 1844 when the Dominican Republic was founded and a Constitution adopted. The country was occupied by American marines from 1916 to the adoption of a new constitution in 1924.

Constitution and Government.—The Republic is governed in general under the Constitution of 1844, and the Revised Constitution proclaimed on June 20, 1929.

Congress is composed of a senate of 12 members (1 from each of the 12 provinces, chosen by direct popular vote for 4 years) and a chamber of 33 deputies (1 for every 30,000 inhabitants or fraction above 15,000 in each province), also chosen for 4 years. Senators and deputies receive 300 dollars (U.S.) per month. Both men and women will vote in 1934 on a proposal to amend the Constitution so as to enfranchise women.

The executive functions of the Republic are vested in the President, elected for 4 years, by direct vote, who may be succeeded by the Vice-President in case of death or disability. There are 7 Secretaries of State, who are the heads of the departments of: the Presidency; Interior, Police, War and Marine; Foreign Relations; Finance; Labour and Communications; Agriculture and Commerce; Health, Social Services and Public Works.

President of the Republic.—General Rafael Leonidas Trujillo Molina. (Assumed office on August 16, 1930.)

Area and Population.—The Dominican Republic occupies the eastern portion (about two-thirds) of the island of Hispaniola, Quisqueya or Santo Domingo, the western division forming the Republic of Haiti. Area is estimated at 19,332 square miles, with 1,017 miles of coast line, 193 miles of frontier line with Haiti, and a population, according to the census of 1920, of 894,665. Total population (1932) is estimated at 1,200,000. The boundary with Haiti, long in dispute, was resurveyed under a treaty signed in 1929, but a final adjustment of points in dispute has not yet (March, 1934) been reached. The population (1921) of the 12 provinces was as follows: Santo Domingo, 146,446; Macoris, 48,612; Seybo, 58,408; Azua, 100,577; Barahona, 48,180; Samaná, 16,915; La Vega, 105,820; Duarte, 77,620; Espailat, 50,956; Santiago, 122,773; Puerto Plata, 59,025; and Monte Cristi, 67,078. Immigrants, 1932, 4,769; emigrants, 6,102.

The population contains some creoles of Spanish descent, but is mainly composed of a mixed race of European, African and Indian blood; there are, however, many Syrians, especially in Santo Domingo City, engaged chiefly in the drapery trade. The language is Spanish, but many educated Dominicans speak English. The Haitian patois is spoken to a considerable extent along the frontier.

The capital, Santo Domingo, on the left bank of the river Ozama, was destroyed in 1502 by a hurricane, and subsequently rebuilt on the right bank of the same river. It was again practically destroyed, except for a few historic buildings, by another disastrous hurricane on September 3, 1930. It has been rebuilt. According to the census of 1920, the City of Santo Domingo had 80,957 inhabitants (between 40,000 and 45,000 in 1932) and the City of Puerto Plata 7,807; Santiago de Los Caballeros 17,152; San Pedro de Macoris, 13,802; La Vega, 6,564; Samaná, 1,656; Sanchez, 3,075; Azua, 4,797; Monte Cristi, 2,580; San Francisco de Macoris, 5,188; and Moca, 3,994.

Religion and Education.—The religion of the State is Roman Catholic; other forms of religion are permitted. There is a Papal Nuncio with residence at Port-au-Prince (Haiti) as well as an Archbishop, known as the Primate of the Indies, in Santo Domingo City.

Primary instruction is gratuitous and obligatory, being supported by the communes and by central aid. The public or State schools are primary, secondary, technical schools, and normal schools. The Professional Institute was formed into a University by Presidential decree on November 29, 1914; it has 44 professors and 503 students. The 7 normal schools have 83 professors and 1,930 students. Primary schools number 522 with 1,115 teachers and 57,061 pupils (1932). There are 16 technical schools of various kinds with 70 teachers and 1,523 pupils.

Justice.—The judicial power resides in the Supreme Court of Justice, the Courts of First Instance, the Communal Courts and other tribunals created by special laws. The Supreme Court consists of a president and 6 justices chosen by the Senate, and the Solicitor-General, appointed by the executive; it supervises the lower courts. The Republic is divided into 3 departments and, in all, 12 judicial districts, each having its own Fiscal Attorney and Court of First Instance; these districts are sub-divided, in all, into 72 communes, each with a local justice (alcalde), a secretary and bailiff (alguacil). Each department has a Court of Appeal of 5 magistrates, appointed by the Senate, and a departmental Solicitor-General appointed by the President; these courts sit at Santiago, Santo Domingo City, and La Vega. The death penalty was abolished in 1924.

Finance.—The receipts and disbursements for 6 years, in U.S. dollars (adopted in 1897 as the monetary standard; 5 pesos = 1 dollar) were:—

—	Revenue	Expenditure	—	Revenue	Expenditure
	Dollars	Dollars		Dollars	Dollars
1928 . .	19,289,420	19,692,120	1931 . .	7,811,418	7,920,120
1929 . .	18,984,860	15,385,844	1932 . .	7,424,662	7,880,678

Chief sources of revenue, 1932: Customs, 2,716,232 dollars; Internal Revenue, 3,617,079 dollars; Lottery, 272,000 dollars; all others, 819,840 dollars.

In accordance with the American-Dominican Convention of 1924, which provided for a loan up to 25,000,000 dollars, an American Receiver-General of Customs supervises customs collections and controls the payment of interest and amortization of the three Dominican Bond issues. This arrangement, which dates back to the first American intervention in 1905, is to last until the loans are repaid. The total customs collected by the American Receiver-General from April, 1905, to December 31, 1932, was 110,839,298 dollars.

The bonded debt of the Republic on December 31, 1932, was 16,498,500 dollars; internal or floating debt was about 2,300,000 dollars. On November 11, 1931, the Government announced a 2-years' moratorium on annual payments of principal, though declaring that interest will be maintained. The step was attributed to lower income due to the hurricane of 1930 and the general depression. The arrears (December 31, 1932) amount to 2,230,158 dollars.

Defence.—The National Military Force consists of a native foot constabulary comprising, 2,090 men and 175 officers.

The Republic has no navy.

Production and Industry.—Agriculture is the chief source of wealth, sugar cultivation being the principal industry. Of the total area, 9,900 square miles are cultivable, and about 6,600 are under cultivation. The remainder is forest land, mostly pine-groves, and is useless for agriculture. The largest sugar estates are in the southern part of the Republic. Exports of raw sugar in 1931, 320,028 metric tons; in 1932, 439,541 metric tons. There are 21 sugar 'centrals,' mostly owned and operated by American companies, although very little of the sugar is sold to the United States. The other principal exports in 1932 were: cocoa beans, 17,361 tons; coffee, 6,413 tons; leaf tobacco, 4,436 tons; sugar cane, 23,248 tons; and molasses, 87,085 tons.

The live-stock census taken on May 15, 1921, showed 360,155 cows, 87,876 oxen, 199,127 calves, 162,800 horses, 64,860 mules, 674,232 pigs, 705,000 goats and 2,949,053 fowls; a census of cattle in 1928 showed 487,608.

Various minerals are found, principal among which are gold and copper. Iron is found in the form of black magnetic oxide of iron, and petroleum has been found in the Azua region. Coal of the lignite variety of little commercial value is known to exist in small quantities. Silver and platinum have been found, and rock salt near Neiba exists in large quantities, there being several hills of native salt covered with only a thin layer of soil. The mining laws were suspended recently by Congress and no mining is in progress.

Commerce.—The total imports into and exports from the Dominican Republic for 5 years were valued as follows in dollars (5 pesos, by law = 1 dollar U.S.):—

—	1929	1930	1931	1932	1933
	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars

British India	558,644	5.50	473,753	6.08	—	—	—	—

In 1932, the chief imports were (in dollars): cotton goods, 1,519,450; jute bags, 432,085; rice, 396,256; chemical and pharmaceutical, 375,227; petrol, 409,173; wheat flour, 263,616. Principal exports in 1932 were (in dollars): raw sugar, 6,859,474; cocoa beans, 1,026,729; tobacco leaf, 224,903; coffee, 1,255,335; molasses, 440,666; sugar cane, 549,610. Of the export of raw sugar in 1932, 4,812,018 dollars went to the United Kingdom and Ireland, and 1,568,850 dollars to France.

Total trade between the Dominican Republic and the United Kingdom for 5 years (Board of Trade Returns):—

—	1929	1930	1931	1932	1933
Imports from Dominican Republic to U.K.	£ 1,733,968	£ 1,851,296	£ 1,019,166	£ 1,694,576	£ 879,052
Exports to Dominican Republic from U.K.	256,299	152,687	103,938	97,516	163,258
Re-exports to Dominican Republic from U.K.	1,901	781	967	1,407	464

Shipping and Communications.—The merchant marine of the Republic consists of 94 vessels, two of which are steamers with a tonnage of 374 and 92 sailing vessels of 2,066 tonnage.

In 1932, 1,375 vessels of 1,864,159 tons entered the ports of the Republic and 1,339 with a tonnage of 1,879,834 cleared.

Three main trunk highways, with branches, now extend eastward from Santo Domingo City to Higüey (105 miles), northward to Santiago and Monte Cristi (180 miles), and westward to Comendador (on the Haitian border), and San Juan (161 miles). At Comendador the road joins the Haitian road to Port-au-Prince. The journey between the Haitian and Dominican capitals is now possible by motor in 12 hours. Total first-class highway mileage in 1932 was 700 miles. There are also about 600 miles of inter-communal roads.

There are two small railway lines in the Republic: (1) Samaná-Santiago line, belonging to an English company, which runs from Sanchez on the Bay of Samaná to La Vega, Moca and San Francisco de Macoris (total, 87 miles); (2) a Government line, the Dominican Central railway, which runs from Puerto Plata to Santiago and Moca (60 miles). Total length of line (1930) 147 miles. There are, besides, about 255 miles of private lines on the large estates.

Postal and telegraphic services are united; number of offices, 1930, 99.

The telegraph has a total length of about 1,034 miles, and has been leased to the All-America Cables, Incorporated, which also controls submarine cables connecting, in the north, Puerto Plata with Porto Rico and New York, and in the south, Santo Domingo with Porto Rico, Cuba and Curaçao.

The telephone system, owned by the Dominican Government, has been leased to an American Company which has installed modern apparatus. There are wireless stations in Santo Domingo City, Santiago and four other towns. Radio telegraph service with the United States was opened in 1931.

Money, Weights, and Measures.—On July 1st, 1897, the United States gold dollar was adopted as the standard of value. A small amount of debased silver coin circulates as small change at the ratio of 5 to 1, viz., 1 peso = 20 cents United States currency. On December 31, 1932, the coinage and currency held by the public and the banks was estimated as follows: gold, 175,000 dollars; Dominican silver, 200,000 dollars; U.S. silver, 300,000 dollars; notes, 2,000,000 dollars.

The metric system was adopted on August 1, 1913, but English and Spanish units are quite common in ordinary commercial transactions.

ECUADOR.

(REPÚBLICA DEL ECUADOR.)

Constitution and Government.

THE Republic of Ecuador is situated in the north-west of South America, with more than one-third of its area lying on both sides of the Equator. It is bounded on the north by Colombia, on the south by Peru and Brazil, on the east by Colombia and Brazil, and on the west by Peru and the Pacific Ocean. Was constituted May 11, 1830, following the war of independence against the Spanish power in South America. Known originally as the Presidency of Quito, it withdrew from the original Republic of Colombia, founded by Simon Bolivar by uniting the Presidency of Quito to the Vice-Royalty of New Granada (now Colombia) and the Captaincy-General of Venezuela. The Presidency of Quito became the Republic of Ecuador.

Under the present Constitution, promulgated March 26, 1929, the President is elected directly by the people for a term of four years; there is no Vice-President, but the Minister of the Interior succeeds in the event of a vacancy. The cabinet consists of six ministers, enjoying considerable power, both collectively and individually.

Congress consists of two Houses; the Upper has 32 senators (chosen for four years) elected in the following manner: one for each of the 15 well-settled provinces of the Interior and Coast; one for the 2 provinces of the 'Regional Oriental'; one representative for the Universities; one for Secondary and Special Education; two for Primary and Normal Education; one for the Press, Academies and Scientific Societies; two for Agriculture; two for Commerce; one for Industry; two for Labour; two for the country folk; one for the Army and one for the defence of the Indian race. The Chamber of Deputies (56, serving for two years) has one deputy for every 50,000 inhabitants for provinces with a population of over 100,000, and two deputies for provinces with less than 100,000 inhabitants. The Oriental provinces elect one deputy each. Electors are adults, of either sex, who are at least 21 years old and can read and write. Congress meets for a 90-day session on the 10th of August every year at Quito, the capital, without being summoned by the Government; the President may call an extraordinary session.

Privileges of rank and race are forbidden under the Constitution. Peonage, which had prevailed on many landed estates, was abolished on October 20, 1918. Since 1896 the Indians have been exempted from paying tribute, and have been admitted to citizenship, provided they could read and write.

The following is a list of the Presidents since 1897, with the date on which they took office:—

Gen. Don Elvy Alfaro, Jan. 17, 1897.
Gen. Don Leonidas G. Plaza, Sept. 1, 1901.

President.—Senor Jose Velasco Ibarra, elected December 16, 1933, following the impeachment and removal of President Mera; to serve until August 31, 1936.

The Provinces are administered by Governors, appointed by the Government, and by elected provincial councillors; their subdivisions, or cantons, by political chiefs and elected cantonal councillors; and the parishes by political lieutenants. The Galapagos Archipelago is under the administration of a Territorial Chief.

Area and Population.

Since the frontiers of Ecuador have not been settled, no definite figure of the area of the country can be given. One official estimate shows 873,844 square kilometres (337,304 square miles), including the Archipelago of Colon (the 13 Galapagos Islands) with 7,844 square kilometres (3,028 square miles). Calculations of the geographer Wolf, also officially adopted, show 714,860 square kilometres (275,936 square miles). The country is divided into 17 provinces (two comprising the 'Region Oriental') and one territory—the Archipelago of Galapagos—officially called 'Colon,' situated in the Pacific Ocean about 600 miles to the west of Ecuador; there are 69 cantons, 107 urban parishes and 411 rural parishes.

So far no exact census has been taken. It was estimated (1929) that of the total the whites are 10 per cent.; Indians, 38 per cent.; mixed, 41 per cent.; lowland Indians, 1 per cent.; Negroes, 5 per cent.; others, 5 per cent. The foreign community is composed of about 10,000 persons. The language of the country is Spanish.

The estimated population of the Republic (December 31, 1932) was distributed as follows among the provinces (capitals in brackets):—

Provinces	Area in Square Miles (Wolf's estimates)	Population (Est. 1932)	Population per Square Mile
Esmeraldas (Esmeraldas) . . .	5,464	42,366	7.7

Galapagos Islands (San Cristobal) .	2,868	2,000	0.7
Totals . . .	275,936	2,554,693	9.2

The chief towns are the capital, Quito (about 106,000 in 1932), Guayaquil (123,800), Cuenca (42,800), Riobamba (21,900), Ambato (17,300), Loja (17,200), and Latacunga (15,600).

In 1932 there were 102,945 births, 48,235 deaths and 12,428 marriages.

Religion and Education.

The State recognises no religion, but grants freedom of worship to all. The Catholic Church has one archbishop (Quito) and six suffragan bishops. Since 1895 all State appropriations for the benefit of the Church have ceased. All members of the Episcopate are required to be Ecuadorian citizens. A decree of September 24, 1927, forbade the entry into the country of all foreign clergymen of whatever faith. Civil marriages are obligatory.

Primary education is gratuitous and obligatory. Higher education is carried on in 21 secondary schools or colleges (6 private) and in the Central University at Quito (founded in the eighteenth century by the Dominicans); at the Guayas University, in Guayaquil, the Azuay University, in Cuenca, and the Law College at Loja. Private schools, both primary and secondary, are under some state supervision. Estimated expenditures for public education in 1933 are: superior education, 973,200 sucres; secondary, 1,405,780; primary, 4,486,280; special scholarships, 878,444; total, 7,304,482 sucres. Actual expenditures, 1932, totalled 6,857,754 sucres. There were (1933) 2,158 primary schools in the Republic, including 1,673 Government schools, 197 municipal, 65 farm schools, and 223 private schools. Enrolment at the primary schools (1933) was 163,185; at the 17 secondary schools, 3,589; at the Universities, 1,064. There are 4 training colleges for teachers.

Justice and Crime.

The Supreme Court in Quito is the highest tribunal and consists of 11 justices elected by Congress for a term of 6 years. Of the eight superior courts two are composed of 6 judges, the remainder of 3 judges each, all elected by Congress for 6 years. There are 496 parochial justices. The popular jury was abolished in 1928; criminal and civil cases are heard before a 'special jury' consisting of 3 members of the Ecuadorean bar, or 'three citizens of recognised integrity' appointed annually by the superior courts. Capital punishment and all forms of torture are prohibited under the Constitution. Likewise imprisonment for debt and contracts involving personal servitude or slavery.

Finance.

The budget estimates of revenue and expenditure for recent years are given as follows (at par 24·3 sucres = £1 and 5 sucres = 1 dollar U.S.; average, 1933, 21·95 sucres = £1).

	1929	1930	1931	1932	1933

Customs receipts for year ending December 31, 1932, 12,736,498 sucres.

The public debt on July 2, 1933, was:—Foreign debt, including a small loan from the Swedish Match Company of 10,000,000 sucres obtained in 1928, 24,309,897 dollars (U.S.); internal debt, 30,056,831 sucres. The 1928 Swedish Match loan was guaranteed by a match monopoly granted the company, but Congress revoked this in 1931, following the enforced resignation of President Ayora.

Defence.

The Ecuadorean regular army has an establishment of 644 officers and 4,976 men. This force is composed of 3 regiments of artillery, 10 battalions of infantry, 4 regiments of cavalry, 2 battalions of sappers, and 1 aviation company, which form the army. Military service was made compulsory on May 24, 1921, but is not enforced. The regular infantry have the Mauser rifle; the artillery have Vickers Maxim, Z.B. machine guns, old-fashioned Krupps and new Ehrards. The country is divided into 4 military districts. A military school is established at Quito. An Italian Military Mission of 3 members is at present instructing the Ecuadorean army.

The Government has established at Duran an aviation company with Ecuadorean personnel. Two new military American machines have been purchased by the Government. Flying fields are being established at Guayaquil, Quito, Latacunga, Loja, Manta and Riobamba.

Production and Industry.

Ecuador is divided into two agricultural zones: the coast regions and the lower river valleys, where tropical farming is carried on in an average temperature of 22° C.; and the hill country, the foothills, and the mountain valleys, adapted to grazing, dairying, and the production of cereals, potatoes, and the fruits and vegetables suitable to temperate climes, with an average temperature of 16° C. Of the total surface of the Republic only 11,480,000 acres are actually cultivated, rendering an annual gross production of 416,000,000 sucres. The staple produce of Ecuador is cocoa; a decline in output owing to the disease known as 'witch-broom,' has now been checked. The production of cocoa was (in quintals of 101.47 lbs.), in 1931, 28,318 metric tons (exports, 14,634 metric tons); in 1932, 30,047 metric tons (exports, 15,429 metric tons). Cocoa furnishes, in value, about 30 per cent. of total exports. Coffee is also grown; 8,027,385 kilos were exported in 1932. Rice production is increasing; output, 1930, 907,807 quintals. Wild rubber is abundant, but output has suffered from the competition of plantation rubber in the Orient. Mangrove bark (for tanning), alligator skins, and kapok (silk cotton tree fibre, Bombax ceiba) are exported in small quantities. Considerable attention is being paid to the cultivation of cotton, especially in the province of Manabí, and to sugar; ivory nuts, or tagua, are produced and exported in large quantities.

Ecuador is auriferous. In 1932, 14,545 kilos of gold (cyanide ore), valued at 6,783,299 sucres, were exported. At Pillzhum in Cañar rich silver ore is found, but is not now worked. Petroleum is found; the output in 1932 was 1,549,784 barrels. The area of oil concessions in exploitation in the Republic is 245,419 acres, located in the Santa Elena Peninsula, in the Province of Guayas. The country is known to be also rich in copper, iron, lead and coal; and sulphur exists in great quantities in the Chimborazo district and in the Galapagos Islands. Since December, 1927, all salt mined must be sold to the Government, which has a monopoly of imports, exports and sales.

Excepting the inter-Andean plateau and a few arid spots on the Pacific coast, Ecuador is a vast forest. Roughly estimated, 10,000 square miles on the Pacific slope extending from the sea to an altitude of 5,000 feet on the Andes, and the Amazon Basin below the same level containing 80,000 square miles, nearly all virgin forest, are rich in dyewoods, cinchona trees, and other valuable timber. The 'balsa wood,' renowned for its lightness and strength, is widely used in airplane construction.

Panama or 'Jipijapa' hats, made of Toquilla straw, are made very largely in Ecuador, the principal centres being Jipijapa, Monticristi, Tabacundo and Cuenca. The Government of Ecuador attempted to monopolise the hat business for its own people by placing a heavy export duty on 'paja toquilla,' but large quantities of the material still go to Peru; both Peru and Japan have become strong competitors of Ecuador in the manufacture of Panama hats. Exports in 1932 were valued at 2,714,903 sucrés. There are flour mills, 13 sugar works, breweries, chocolate factories and 20 textile factories, with capitalization of 11,500,000 sucrés.

Commerce.

The value of imports and exports for five years is given as follows in sucrés :

Shipping and Internal Communications.

Guayaquil, the chief port, is visited by the steamers passing through Magellan's Straits, as well as by steamers plying only on the Pacific coast. During 1932, 1,077 steam and sailing vessels entered, and 1,216 cleared from, Guayaquil.

Considerable progress in road improvement is being made. A motor road, 375 miles long, from the Colombian border to Babahoya, a river town near Guayaquil, was opened in 1930. There are now 1,591 miles of main trunk roads, 1,121 miles of branch roads and 2,227 miles of bridle paths. There is river communication, improved by dredging, throughout the principal agricultural districts on the low grounds to the west of the Cordillera by the rivers Guayas, Daule, and Vinces (navigable for 200 miles by river steamers in the rainy season), and other small affluents thereof.

A railway is open from Duran (opposite Guayaquil) to Quito (287 miles). The total length of the 9 Ecuadorean railways actually in operation is 763 miles. The journey from Guayaquil to Quito takes two days, with a stop at Riobamba. Railways for the development of local trade have been undertaken by several local authorities.

Quito is connected by telegraph with Guayaquil and the coast, with the Republics of Colombia and Peru, and by cable with the rest of the world. Wireless telegraphy has been installed; there are six stations in Quito, Guayaquil, Esmeraldas and other towns.

In 1933 there were 317 post offices in the country and 4,221 miles of telegraph wires.

Banking and Credit.

Ecuador having no mint, the coin of the country is minted in England and the United States.

On March 4, 1927, a decree was issued establishing at Quito the 'Central Bank of Ecuador,' with a capital of 10,000,000 sucres, the only body authorised to issue currency. It is organised to protect the country's gold reserves and its general functions resemble those of the Federal Reserve Banks of the United States. The gold holdings of the Central Bank having declined to 14,000,000 sucres, the Government on February 8, 1932, suspended the gold standard; on May 2, strict control of foreign exchange was instituted. On December 31, 1933, the Central Bank had gold in its vaults, 14,347,572 sucres; assets abroad, 4,749,553 sucres; other reserves, 1,861,253 sucres; total reserves, 20,958,378 sucres; note circulation was 35,584,705 sucres. The 17 member banks affiliated with it had an aggregate capital and reserves (November 30, 1933) of 52,175,041 sucres.

A new General Banking Law has also been enacted, creating the office of superintendent of Banks to supervise local banks. In addition, all commercial banks are required to have cash reserves equivalent to at least 25 per cent. of their demand deposits and to 10 per cent. of their time deposits.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

A new Monetary Law, prepared by the Kemmerer Financial Mission, was decreed on March 4, 1927. Under this law Ecuador returned to the gold standard with its currency stabilized at the rate of 24·3 sucres to the £ or 5 sucres per American dollar, the previous legal par value of the sucre having been 10 sucres = £1 or 1 sucre = 48·665 cents U.S. But on February 8, 1932, the Government was forced to suspend the gold backing of the sucre. The new gold sucre (named after the national hero, Marshal Antonio José de Sucre) is to contain 0·300933 grammes of pure gold, instead of the previous weight of 0·73224. It is divided into 100 centavos. Gold coins known as 'condors' (25 sucres with a fine gold content of 7·523325 grammes), and 'double condors' (50 sucres), are to be minted. Also silver 2 sucre (with a fine silver content of 7·2 grammes), 1 sucre and $\frac{1}{2}$ sucre pieces, as well as 10 centavos, 5 centavos, $2\frac{1}{2}$ centavos in nickel, and 1 centavo in copper. The currency consists almost entirely of the notes of the Central Bank in denominations of 5, 10, 20, 50 and 100 sucres.

By a law of December 6, 1856, the metric system of weights and measures was made the legal standard of the Republic; but it is not adopted by commerce, the Spanish measures being more general. The quintal is equivalent to 101.47 pounds.

The meridian of Quito has been adopted as the official time.

EGYPT.

(MISR.)

EGYPT was originally part of the Turkish Empire. On December 18, 1914, a British Protectorate over Egypt was declared, and the next day a Proclamation was issued deposing 'Abbās Hilmi, lately Khedive of Egypt, and conferring the title of Sultan of Egypt upon Hussein Kamil, eldest living prince of the family of Muhammad Ali. The British Protectorate was recognised by France, Russia, Belgium, Serbia, Greece, Portugal, and the United States of America. Sultan Hussein Kamil died in 1917, and was succeeded by his brother. The Protectorate terminated on February 28, 1922, and the Sultan was proclaimed King on March 15, 1922.

King.

Fuad I. Ahmed Fuad, G.C.B., was born on March 26, 1868, son of the Khedive Ismail; succeeded his brother as Sultan on October 9, 1917; took title of King on March 15, 1922; married (1) Princess Chivekar, daughter of his cousin, Prince Ibrahim Ahmed, on May 30, 1896; divorced in 1898; (2) Queen Nazli on May 24, 1919; offspring (first marriage) Princess Fewkieh, born Oct. 6, 1897; married May 12, 1919, to Mahmud Pasha Fakhry; (second marriage) Prince Faruk, created Emir es Said, or Prince of Upper Egypt, December 13, 1933, born February 11, 1920; Princess Fawzieh, born November 5, 1921; Princess Faiza, born November 8, 1923; Princess Faika, born June 8, 1926 and Princess Fathia, born December 17, 1930.

According to Article 150 of the Constitution, the King's Civil List is fixed at £E150,000, and the Royal Family's Allowances at £E111,512.

The present sovereign of Egypt is the ninth ruler of the dynasty of Muhammad Ali, appointed Governor of Egypt in 1805, who made himself, in 1811, absolute master of the country by force of arms. On April 13, 1922, the King issued a Rescript fixing the order of succession to the Kingdom of Egypt and declaring the Throne hereditary in the dynasty of Muhammad Ali. The Rescript confirms the King's son, Prince Faruk, as Heir Apparent, and establishes the succession of Kings in the direct male line by primogeniture. Failing such direct line, it provides that the Throne shall pass first to the King's brothers and their direct descendants by right of age, whom failing to the King's uncles and their direct descendants by right of age, it being laid down that each new King establishes a new house and that the succession is vested in his direct line.

Female members of the house and their descendants are excluded, also anyone who is not in possession of full mental powers, who is not a Moslem, or who is not the son of Moslem parents. The King's majority is fixed at 18 years, and in the event of his being a minor when he succeeds a Regency Council will be appointed either by his predecessor under a secret seal to be opened after his death and ratified by Parliament, or in default by Parliament. This Council will consist of three members chosen from Princes, ex-premiers, ministers and ex-ministers, and Presidents and ex-Presidents of whatever Houses of Parliament may exist.

Constitution and Government.

For an account of the government before 1922, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1924, pp. 834-5.

The Constitution, which was promulgated on October 22, 1930, declares Egypt to be a Sovereign State, its monarchy hereditary, and its government representative. Egyptians have equal legal, civil and political rights, irrespective of race, language, or religion. Liberty of the individual and of religious belief is guaranteed, and compulsory elementary education is established for both sexes free in Government schools. All powers emanate from the nation. The King exercises legislative powers concurrently with the Senate and Chamber of Deputies, but the right to initiate financial laws is reserved for the King. No measure can become law unless it is voted by Parliament and sanctioned by the King. The Throne is hereditary in the family of Muhammad Ali, and the succession in accordance with the existing rescript (see above). The King can dissolve the Chamber of Deputies, to which the Ministers jointly and separately are responsible. He is also commander-in-chief of the army and navy. But no war of offence may be declared without the consent of Parliament. All powers shall be exercised through the intermediary of the Ministers. No one who is not an Egyptian, and no member of the reigning dynasty, can be a Minister. The King appoints and dismisses Ministers and, on the proposal of the Foreign Minister, diplomatists. The Parliament consists of a Senate and Chamber of Deputies. The Senate consists of 100 members of whom the King nominates 60 and the remaining 40 shall be elected by universal suffrage, for a period of ten years. One half of the Senate is to be renewed every five years. The King nominates the President of the Senate. The number of Deputies shall be 150 elected by indirect universal suffrage, with a mandate for five years. Members of Parliament receive an annual allowance to be fixed by internal regulations. Taxes can only be imposed, reduced, or abolished by law, and no public loan, or undertaking committing the Treasury, may be contracted, without the consent of Parliament. The Budget must be presented to Parliament three months before the beginning of the financial year, and must first be discussed and voted in the Chamber of Deputies. The existing financial obligations incurred through the Public Debt or other international engagement cannot be modified. The strength and organisation of the army will be fixed by law.

Islam is the State religion and Arabic the official language. Cairo is the capital of Egypt. The King may exercise his powers in regard to religious establishments and pious foundations and the nomination of religious chiefs according to the laws of the country and in the absence of legislative dispositions, in accordance with current practice. The Constitution does not affect Egypt's obligations to Foreign States or the rights of foreigners acquired in Egypt by virtue of recognised treaties and customs. The provisions relative to the representative Parliamentary régime, the succession to the throne, or the principles of liberty and equality cannot be revised. The Constitution is applicable to the Kingdom of Egypt without prejudice to the rights which Egypt has in the Sudan. The King's title will be established after the status of the Sudan has been definitely fixed by negotiation.

The results of the last elections (June 1-11, 1931), were as follows:—Shaabists (the Party under the leadership of Sidky Pasha), 84; Ittahadists, 40; Nationalists, 8; Independents, 18. The Government has a majority. The forty elected Senators included only Shaabists, Ittahadists and Independents.

The Cabinet formed on September 27, 1933, is as follows:—

Prime Minister and Minister of Foreign Affairs.—Abdel Fattah Yehia Pasha.

Minister of Interior.—Mahmud Fahmy el Keissy Pasha.

Finance.—Hassan Sabry Bey.

War and Marine.—Salib Samy Bey.

Justice.—Ahmed Ali Pasha.

Agriculture.—Aly El Manzalawi Bey.

Public Works.—Abdel Azim Rashid Pasha.

Wakfs.—Mahmud Naguib El Gharabli Pasha.

Education.—Hilmy Issa Pasha.

Communications.—Ibrahim Fahmy Korem Pasha.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

The Provincial Councils were endowed in 1909 with the powers of applying bye-laws, authorising public-markets, fixing the number and pay of ghafirs (village watchmen), and authorising the creation of ezbas (hamlets). They are the local authorities in connection with elementary vernacular education and trade schools. They consist of two elected representatives from each Markaz. The Mudir is the ex-officio President of the Council.

Egypt Proper is administratively divided into 5 governorships (muhâfzas) of principal towns, and 14 mudîrias or provinces, subdivided into districts or Markazes.

In fourteen towns (Alexandria, Mansûra, Medînet el-Faiyûm, Tanta, Zagazig, Damanhûr, Beni Suêf, Mahalla el-Kubra, Minya, Mit Ghamr, Zifta, Kafr el-Zayât, Benha, and Port Said), Mixed Commissions composed of both Europeans and Egyptians in equal numbers have been formed to govern locally the towns and look after their interests.

With the exception of Alexandria, all Mixed Commissions have the power to impose taxes on all residents in the town alike, but in case of non-Egyptian residents taxes can only be obtained from those who have already given their express consent to be taxed for municipal purposes.

The Municipal Commission of Alexandria obtained in 1890 from European Powers full power to impose local taxation on all residents in the town.

In 58 other towns, another form of local commission exists with four elected members only. Foreign members, not to exceed two in number, can be nominated at the discretion of the Central Government.

These local commissions have practically the same taxing powers as the Mixed Commissions mentioned above.

A third form of local commissions was formed in 1918 under the name of Village Council and exists now in 39 towns in Egypt. This is composed of four elected members only, but without any power of nomination of Foreign members. It has more or less the same taxing power as the Mixed Commissions.

The Central Government has complete power of Veto on all decisions of every form of Commission in Egypt.

Area and Population.

The total area of Egypt proper, including the Libyan Desert, the region between the Nile and the Red Sea, and the Sinai Peninsula is about 383,000 square miles; but the cultivated and settled area, that is, the Nile Valley, Delta and Oases covers only about 13,600 square miles. Canals, roads, date plantations, &c., cover 1,900 square miles; 2,850 square miles are comprised in the surface of the Nile, marshes, and lakes. Egypt is divided into two great districts—'Wagh-el-Bahri,' or Lower Egypt, and 'El-Said,' or Upper Egypt.

The following table gives the area of the settled land surface, and the results of the census taken in 1917 and on February 18-19, 1927 :—

In 1925, Egypt ceded to Italian Cyrenaica the oasis of Jarabub. (For the new frontier between Egypt and Cyrenaica, see map in the 1927 edition of the STATESMAN'S YEAR BOOK.)

Births registered, 1931, 664,631; deaths, 397,706; 1930, births, 670,817; deaths, 367,118.

The principal towns, with their populations, according to the census of 1927, are:—Cairo, 1,064,567; Alexandria, 573,063; Port Said, 104,603; Tanta, 90,016; Mansûra, 63,676; Asyût, 57,136; Faiyûm, 52,863; Zagazig, 52,839; Damanhûr, 51,709; Mahalla el Kubra, 45,642; Minya, 44,325; Suez, 40,523; Beni Suef, 39,595; Damietta, 34,907; Benha, 28,626; Qena, 27,658; Shibîn el-Kôm, 27,440; Giza, 26,921; Sohâg, 25,289; Rosetta, 23,048; Aswân, 16,458.

Religion and Education.

In 1927, the population (excluding 40,000 Nomads) consisted of 12,929,260 Moslems; 999,170 Orthodox; 66,080 Protestants; 116,660 Latins and Uniats; 63,550 Jews; 3,144 others and unknown. Thus Moslems formed 91·19 per cent. of the population; Christians, 8·34 per cent. ; Jews, 0·45 per cent. ; others, 0·02 per cent. The principal seat of Koranic learning is the Mosque and University of El-Azhar at Cairo, founded in the year 361 of the Hegira, being 972 of the Christian era. Other centres of higher learning (Islamic Religious Institutions) are the Institutes of Alexandria (Mashiakhet 'Ulamā el Iskandariya), Tanta (Ahmadi Mosque), Ayyūt, Disūg (Mosque of El Disūgi), Dāmietta (Ashrafiya Institute and El Bahr Mosque), and Zagazig. All these institutions are under the supervision of the Council of the University of El-Azhar.

There are in Egypt large numbers of native Christians connected with the various Oriental churches ; of these, the largest and most influential are the Copts, the descendants of those ancient Egyptians who adopted Christianity in the first century of the Christian era. Their head is the Coptic Patriarch Mgr. Yoannes XIX, who was consecrated on December 16, 1928. There are three metropolitans and twelve bishops in Egypt, one metropolitan and five bishops in Abyssinia, and one bishop for Khartum ; there are also arch-priests, priests, deacons, and monks. Priests must be married before ordination, but celibacy is imposed on monks and high dignitaries. The Copts use the Diocletian (or Martyrs') calendar, which differs by 284 years from the Gregorian calendar.

Scattered throughout the country there have existed from time immemorial a number of indigenous schools called 'Maktabs.' In 1897, the Ministry of Education endeavoured to bring these independent 'Maktabs' voluntarily under Departmental supervision by means of a system of inspection and reward. Government aid was made dependent upon daily instruction being given in reading, writing, and arithmetic, apart from any religious teaching, and upon the school reaching a satisfactory level of efficiency. The extent to which the scheme has developed is shown in the following table :—

Education was made compulsory for all children between the ages of 7 and 12 by a law passed in April, 1933.

The following table gives statistics concerning the schools under the immediate direction of the Egyptian Government in 1931-32. The schools marked with an asterisk are administered by the Provincial Councils or by Departments other than the Ministry of Education.

presided over by a single judge, with civil jurisdiction in matters up to £E250 in value, and criminal jurisdiction in offences punishable by fine or by imprisonment up to three years, that is, police offences and misdemeanours; ten Central Tribunals, each of the Chambers of which consists of three judges; and two Courts of Appeal, one at Cairo and the other at Asyût. Under a law of 1904, there are also weekly sittings of the Markaz Tribunals (to the number of 29) in the Governorates of Cairo, Alexandria, Port Said, Suez, and Ismailia for the disposal of petty offences, the judge having powers up to three months' imprisonment or fine of £E10, and the prosecution being conducted by the police. Civil cases not within the competence of the Summary Tribunals are heard in first instance by the Central Tribunals, with an appeal to one of the Courts of Appeal. The Central Tribunals also hear civil and criminal appeals from the Summary Tribunals. Since 1905 serious crimes (and, under a law of 1911, and a decree of 1925, all press offences) are tried at the Central Tribunals by three judges of the Court of Appeal sitting as an Assize Court, assizes being held monthly. By a law of 1930 a separate Court of Cassation over and above the Courts of Appeal was set up. The new Court of Cassation is composed of ten Judges divided into two Chambers of 5 Judges each, one for Civil and the other for Criminal cases. The prosecution before Summary Tribunals and Assize Courts is entrusted to the Parquet, which is directed by a Chef de Parquet, having under him a Substitut or Substitut-Adjoint at each Summary Tribunal of the circumscription; the investigation of crime is ordinarily conducted by the Parquet, or by the police under the direction of the Parquet; cases going before an Assize Court are further submitted to a special committing judge. Offences against irrigation laws, &c., are tried by special administrative tribunals.

The so-called 'Cantonal' Courts (numbering approximately 240) composed of village notables, created in 1912, with a general civil jurisdiction in suits up to £5 in value and a petty criminal jurisdiction were suppressed by Law No. 34 of 1930, their jurisdiction being transferred to the Summary Tribunals.

Owing to the Capitulations, which still apply to Egypt, foreigners who are nationals of Powers possessing capitulatory rights are exempted from the jurisdiction of the local tribunals. Mixed tribunals were instituted in 1875, consisting partly of native and partly of foreign judges, with jurisdiction, in civil matters, between natives and foreigners and between foreigners of different nationalities, or even between foreigners of the same nationality if the dispute relates to land in Egypt. These Tribunals have, also, a limited penal jurisdiction, notably in cases of police offences, offences against the bankruptcy laws, and misappropriation of property seized by order of the tribunal. There are three Mixed Tribunals of First Instance, with a Court of Appeal sitting at Alexandria.

² Including interest on railways, telegraphs, and telephones' funds.

³ Including coast-guards.

The foreign debt of Egypt began in 1862, when loans amounting to 3,292,800*l.* were issued for the purpose of extinguishing the floating debt. Other issues followed in rapid succession. The dual control by England and France began in 1879. In January, 1880, the two Controllers-General reported that Egypt could not possibly meet her engagements in full, and in July the Liquidation Law, in accordance with the recommendation of an International Commission of the Great Powers, was promulgated. By this law the Unified Debt was reduced to 4 per cent. interest; further conversions were made, and the Unified Debt thus increased to 57,776,340*l.*; certain unconsolidated liabilities were added to the Preference debt, which thus rose to 22,587,800*l.*; and the Daira Sania debt was increased to 9,512,900*l.*, the interest being reduced to 4 per cent. In 1885 and subsequent years further loans and conversions were entered into.

The Daira Sania and the Domains loans were paid off on October 15, 1905, and June 1, 1913, respectively. The amount and the charge of the various debts in April, 1933, were as follows:—

	Debt	Charge
	£ sterling	£E
Guaranteed Loan, 8 per cent.	3,289,000	815,000
Privileged Debt, 8½ per cent.	30,633,980	1,072,180
Unified Debt, 4 per cent.	55,250,460	2,210,018
Total	89,073,440	3,597,207

The charges on account of debts of all kinds (including tribute), as shown in the estimates for 1933-34, amount to £E4,101,903.

In 1888 and 1890, reserve funds were established, the balances of which, in virtue of the Anglo-French Convention of April 4, 1904, were placed at the disposal of the Egyptian Government in 1905, less certain sums remaining in the hands of the Caisse de la Dette Publique for the service of the debt. The amount received by the Egyptian Government was carried to a General Reserve Fund. In this Fund on April 30, 1932, there was a balance of £E33,391,257. Of this amount £E15,187,682 represents the engaged Reserve.

Defence.

EGYPTIAN ARMY.

By the terms of the British recognition of the independence of Egypt defence is for the present reserved and remains under British control. Service in the army is compulsory, but, owing to the small contingent required, only a fraction (approximately 4 per cent.) of the men who are liable actually serve. Service is for five years with the colours and five years in the reserve. In the Sudanese battalions service is voluntary and extended. The army consists of 2 squadrons of cavalry, 4 batteries and 1 garrison company of coast-guards and artillery, 1 motor machine gun battery, 11 battalions of infantry, and various departments. A few of the higher posts are held by British officers. The strength of the army was 12,262 in 1931-32, of which 555 Egyptian officers and 14 British officers, excluding coast-guards and His Majesty's Body-guard. The strength of the latter is approximately 40 officers and 1,100 other ranks. An air force is in process of establishment.

ARMY OF OCCUPATION.

In 1933, the normal British garrison consisted of 3 regiments of cavalry, 3 batteries R.H.A., 3 batteries Light Brigade R.A., 2 companies of engineers and 6 battalions of infantry in Egypt and 2 in the Sudan, and 2 armoured car companies (as well as companies of medical, ordnance, Pay, Service, Signal, and Veterinary departments), the strength being 11,900. Egypt is also the Headquarters of the Middle East Air Command, and contains four squadrons of aeroplanes and a number of air depôts.

NAVY.

There are three patrol vessels, El Amir Farouq, Rachid, and Abdul Moneim, maintained by the Coastguard and Fisheries Department; the transports Sollum (ex-British sloop Syringa) and El Amira Fawzia, and some smaller vessels, under the Ports and Lighthouses Department; the fishery research vessel Mabahiss; and the Royal yacht Mahroussa.

Production and Industry.

The cultivable area of Egypt Proper was reckoned in 1929-30 at 8,239,185 feddâns (1 feddân = 1·038 acre), and of this 739,945 were taken up for public utility purposes and 1,950,578 were uncultivated for want of reclamation. The corvée, or forced labour, has been abolished, but the inhabitants are still called out to guard or repair the Nile banks in flood time. The agricultural population (Fellahin) forms about 62 per cent. of the whole. A large proportion of them are small landholders with under 51 feddâns, while others, almost or altogether landless, are labourers, the relation between the employers and the employed being mostly hereditary. The following table shows, on December 31, 1932, the number of landholders and the distribution of the land among foreigners and natives :—

Extensive reservoir works, consisting of a dam at Aswân, a barrage at Esna, a barrage at Nag' Hammâdi (completed in October, 1930), a barrage at Asyût, and a barrage at Zifta, have been completed. The original storage capacity of the Aswân reservoir was 1,065,000,000 cubic metres. The level of the dam has been raised by 6 metres and the capacity of the reservoir increased to 2,423,000,000 cubic metres. Another heightening by 7 metres is to be completed in 1933. The Nag' Hammâdi barrage secures the irrigation of Girga Province and part of Qena Province regardless of low flood. The barrage at Esna ensures adequate irrigation to a large area of basin land even in a year of low Nile. The Nag' Hammâdi barrage inaugurated at the end of 1930 is erected across the Nile (Upper Egypt) 588 kilometres south of Cairo. It will improve and assure basin irrigation for a vast area of land, about 580,000 feddâns, on both sides of the Nile. It will regulate the flood waters and thus save the cotton cultivated in these basins from the danger of early floods. It will in future, after the completion of the extensive reservoir works, supply an area of 363,000 feddâns on the left bank of the Nile as well as 150,000 feddâns on its right bank with perennial irrigation. North of Deirût an area of approximately half a million acres has been converted from basin to perennial irrigation in the last ten years. The area and production of cotton in six years were:—

Season	Area. Feddâns	Crop. Qantârs	Season	Area. Feddâns	Crop. Qantârs

In 1932-33, the area and yield of wheat were 1,697,413 feddâns and 9,541,218 ardebs; barley, 352,355 feddâns and 2,149,277 ardebs; beans, 592,232 feddâns and 2,883,977 ardebs; lentils, 90,982 feddâns and 357,385 ardebs; onions, 44,773 feddâns and 6,699,238 qantârs; maize, 1,868,351 feddâns and 13,799,044 ardebs; millet, 346,497 feddâns and 3,065,422 ardebs; rice, undecorticated, 481,508 feddâns and 589,067 ardebs; sugar-cane, 70,055 feddâns and 50,295,524 qantârs.

In 1933, there were in Egypt 33,998 horses, 753,346 donkeys, 18,789 mules, 912,018 cows, 856,610 buffaloes, 1,344,681 sheep, 679,749 goats, 153,749 camels, and 13,205 pigs.

The principal mineral products in 1932 were (in metric tons): phosphate rock, 349,780; petroleum, 270,792. Other products are: Ochres, sulphate of magnesia, talc, building stones, clay, gypsum, natron, nitrate of soda, salt, and turquoise. The following minerals are also known to exist, namely, alum, copper ore, beryl, granite, ornamental stones, and sulphur.

The fishing industry is of some importance. The catch of the Egyptian sea and lakes fisheries in 1932 amounted to 10,144 metric tons, and 4,699 metric tons Nile fisheries. On January 1, 1933, there were 4,695 boats licensed for fishing.

Shipping and Navigation.

In 1932, excluding warships and vessels requisitioned by the military authorities, 8,017 steamers of a net registered tonnage of 29,979,295 entered at, and 8,017 steamers of a net registered tonnage of 29,980,209 departed from, all the Egyptian ports (Alexandria, Port Said, Suez, Tor, El Qoseir, Safāga, Murghada, Abu Zenima, Sidi Barrani, Marsa Matrūh and Sollūm).

The total merchant tonnage on July 1, 1933, was 45 of 47,544 net tons.

Suez Canal.

The Suez Canal is 103 miles long (including 4 miles of approach channels for the harbours), connecting the Mediterranean with the Red Sea. It was opened for navigation November 17, 1869. The concession to the Suez Canal Company expires on November 17, 1968.

The following table shows the number and net tonnage of commercial vessels (excluding vessels requisitioned by the military authorities) of all nationalities that passed through the Canal in 1932.

The number of passengers (civil and military) who went through the canal was, in 1929, 325,855 ; 1930, 305,202 ; 1931, 270,657 ; 1932, 263,838.

Internal Communications.

In 1931, there were 3,374 miles of rails belonging to and worked by the State, including 2,489 miles of main line, 155 miles of branch line, and 734 miles of sidings. There were also 874 miles of rails of agricultural light railways owned by private companies besides 103 miles of sidings. The State railways have a gauge of 4 ft. 8½ in. inside rails (the line, 124 miles in length, from Luxor to Assuan being opened on wide gauge in Dec. 1926), except that to the Western Oases, which is 2 ft. 5½ in.

The number of passengers carried in 1931-32 was 27,971,000 ; weight of goods carried, excluding service transports, 4,568,000 tons ; and the net receipts, £E1,315,031. The working expenses, £E3,623,999 in 1931-32, represent an average of 73 per cent. of the gross receipts, which were £E4,939,030.

The telephones have belonged to the Egyptian Government since April, 1918. On April 30, 1931, the telegraphs had a length of 222,709 miles of wire, telephones and trunks 217,246, and railway telephones 4,175. The Eastern Telegraph Company, by concessions, have telegraph lines across Egypt from Alexandria via Cairo to Suez, and from Port Said to Suez, connecting their cables to England and India. The number of telegrams in 1931-32 was : local, 2,340,210 commercial and 1,870,324 service ; foreign, 138,467 forwarded, 151,552 received, and 120,439 transit. The number of telegrams forwarded and received by wireless stations in 1931-32 was 60,840.

There were, in 1931, 4,090 post offices and stations. In the inland service (1931) there passed through the post-office 120,190,426 ordinary and registered articles of correspondence ; 24,559,976 ordinary and registered articles of correspondence, and 32,322,775 were despatched and received to and from abroad respectively. Receipts £E720,022 ; expenses £E670,379.

There are two regular weekly air mail services between Egypt and Europe, between Egypt and India, and also one regular weekly air mail service between Cairo, the Sudan, and South Africa.

Banks and Credit.

The National Bank founded in 1898 has the privilege of bank-notes issue. It has a capital of 3,000,000L. with reserve funds amounting to 3,000,000L. Le Crédit Agricole d'Egypte was founded in November, 1930, with a capital of £E1,000,000 (half subscribed by the Government).

On December 31, 1931, there were six mortgage banks and nine ordinary banks working chiefly in Egypt with a total paid up capital of £E16,819,183, i.e., £E9,856,923 for the former, and £E6,962,260 for the latter. Debentures of the mortgage banks amounted to £E34,789,687. The reserve funds (including profits carried forward) of these two groups of banks amount to £E6,274,170 and £E4,533,807 respectively.

In 1901, a Post-Office Savings Bank was opened, and on December 31 of that year, it had 6,740 depositors with balances amounting to £E47,492. On December 31, 1931, the depositors numbered 329,457, and their balances amounted to £E2,483,712.

In April, 1912, a rural savings bank service was inaugurated. At the end of that year the balance of deposits in the new branch amounted to £E25,413, and the number of accounts to 127,927. On December 31, 1928, the balance amounted to £E5,983, and the number of accounts to 517. At the beginning of 1929, this service was cancelled. The balance of deposits in the savings banks of the foreign banks at the end of 1932 amounted to £E1,806,756 and the number of depositors to 30,839.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

MONEY.

By decree of October 18, 1916 (20 Zi-l-Higga 1334), the monetary unit of Egypt is the gold Egyptian pound of 100 piastres. It weighs 8·5 grammes .375 fine, and therefore contains 7·4375 grammes of fine gold. Its value in sterling is £1 0s. 6½d. A new coinage was introduced at the same time in which the Tughra of the Sultan of Turkey was superseded by that of the ruler of Egypt.

The 10-piastre silver piece weighs 14 grammes .833 fine, and therefore contains 11·67 grammes of fine silver. The piastre is worth 2·46d. in English money. It is subdivided into tenths (ushr el girsh or millièmes).

Coins in circulation are the Egyptian pound (100 piastres) and half pound in gold; 20, 10, 5, and 2 piastre pieces in silver; 1, ½, ¼ piastre pieces in nickel, ⅓ and ⅙ pieces in bronze. Silver coin is legal tender only up to £E2, and nickel or bronze coins up to 10 piastres. For some years gold coins have not been issued, and the gold circulating in Egypt and the Sudan is almost exclusively British sovereigns, which are legal tender at the rate of 97½ piastres. The gold pieces of the former Latin Monetary Union equivalent to the French 20 franc piece are permitted to circulate at a uniform rate of £E0·7715.

Bank notes are issued by the National Bank in various denominations: £E1, 5, 10, 50, 100. They are in principle not legal tender, but since the war they have been made legal tender and inconvertible. The amount in circulation at the end of December, 1933, was £E21,600,000, for which the gold cover was £E6,241,000. In 1918 the Government issued currency notes of 10 piastres and 5 piastres, but these have now been withdrawn, and the amount of currency notes in circulation has shrunk from £E1,715,000 in September, 1920, to £E50,626 at the end of December, 1932.

The principal units of Egyptian weights and measures are defined in terms of the metre of the 'Commission Internationale du mètre' by the Law No. 9 of September 26, 1914. The equivalents remain the same as were defined by the Decree of April 28, 1891.

Measures of length:	Diraa baladi	= 0 metre 58 centimetres.
"	Diraa mi' mārī	= 0 metre 75 centimetres.
"	weight: Dirhem	= 3 grams 12 centigrams.
"	capacity: Ardeb	= 198 litres.

MEASURE OF CAPACITY.

The Ardeb is equal to 48·555 gallons, or 5·44439 bushels.

The approximate weight of the ardeb is as follows:—Wheat, 334 rotls; beans, 345 rotls; barley, 267 rotls; maize, 312 rotls; cotton seed, 270 rotls.

WEIGHTS.

Oqia	=	1·3207 ounce.
Roll	=	·99049 lb.
Oke	=	2·7513 lbs.
Qantâr	{	or 100 Rotls or	}		=	99·0493 lbs.
		36 Okes

LENGTH MEASURES.

ESTONIA.

(EESTI VABARIK.)

THE Estonian Republic is situated on the Eastern shore of the Baltic Sea South of the Gulf of Finland between 57° 27' and 59° 43' North Latitude and 21° 46' and 28° 21' Longitude (Greenwich), and includes the Baltic Islands Saaremaa (Oesel), Hiiumaa (Dagö), and Muhumaa (Moon). The Eastern border towards Russia is formed by Lake Peipsi and the Southern by the Republic of Latvia.

In 1721, the country, which had belonged to Sweden since the early part of the seventeenth century, was handed over by Sweden to Russia, and remained under the rule of the latter until 1917. In 1917, after the outbreak of the Russian Revolution, Estonia regained her independence, which was declared on February 24, 1918. By the Treaty of Tartu, of February 2, 1920, Soviet Russia recognised the independence of Estonia. On January 26, 1921, the Supreme Council accorded the Republic de jure recognition.

Constitution and Government.—The first Constitution of the Estonian Republic was passed by the Constituent Assembly on June 15, 1920, and has been in force since December 21, 1920.

The second Constitution, which came into force on January 24, 1934, provides for the election by the people every 5 years of a President, who is given wide powers, including those of conducting internal and foreign policies, legislating by decree, drafting the budget, dismissing ministers, and dissolving the Diet. This Assembly is composed of 50 members, elected every 4 years on the basis of proportional representation, and by universal, direct, equal, and secret suffrage.

The national flag of Estonia is blue, black and white in horizontal stripes.

The elections for the Estonian State Assembly were held on May 20–22, 1932, and resulted in the return of the following parties:—Agrarians and Settlers, 42; National Middle Party, 23; Socialists, 22; Left Workers, 5; Russian Minority, 5; German and Sweden Minorities, 3.

The Prime Minister is called the State Head.

Pro-President and Prime Minister.—Konstantin Päts, appointed October 21, 1933.

Area and Population.—The boundary line between Estonia and Russia is defined by the Peace Treaty of February 2, 1920. The boundaries between Estonia and Latvia were settled on November 1, 1923. The total area is about 47,548 square kilometres, or 18,353 square miles.

The population of 1,124,000 (January 1, 1933) is composed as to 87·7 per cent. of Estonians, 1·7 per cent. of Germans (Balts), and 10·6 per cent. of Russians and other nationalities.

The Republic is divided into eleven districts, as follows (the capitals are given in brackets, and when two are given the second mentioned is the German name):—Harju (Tallinn-Reval), Viru (Rakvere-Vesenberg), Järva (Paide-Veissenstein), Lääne (Haapsalu), Tartu (Tartu-Dorpat), Võru (Võru), Viljandi (Viljandi-Fellin), Pärnu (Pärnu), Saaremaa-Oesel (Kuresaare-Arensburg), Petseri (Petseri), and Valga (Valk). The capital, Tallinn (Reval), was founded in 1219 at the mouth of the Gulf of Finland, and in 1932 had 134,000 inhabitants. The university town of Tartu (Dorpat) had 72,000 inhabitants. The population of the port of Pärnu, on the Gulf of Riga, was 21,000, and that of the manufacturing town of Narva 25,000.

Religion and Education.—There is no State religion in Estonia. Five-sixths of the population are Lutherans, the rest Greek Orthodox, Catholics, &c.

Elementary education is obligatory and gratuitous. In 1931–32, there were 1,259 elementary schools in the Estonian Republic. Of this number 1,231 were supported by local authorities and 28 were private schools. The number of middle schools for general education, gymnasiums, and so on, was 73, of which number 29 were private schools.

For special or professional education there are 3 teachers' seminaries, 2 navigation schools, commercial schools with three years' course, agricultural schools with a 1–3 years' course and industrial schools with a 3–6 years' course.

The minority nationals (Germans, Russians, Swedes, Jews, and Letts) receive education in their mother tongue.

For higher education there are the Tartu (Dorpat) University (founded in 1632), which on December 1, 1919, was re-opened as an Estonian seat of learning maintained by the Government; number of students (1932), 3,048 (2,097 men and 951 women).

Justice.—The supreme judicial power is invested in the State Court of Justice, which is elected by the State Assembly and sits in Tartu (Dorpat).

The laws are being gradually revised by the State Assembly.

Finance.—Revenue and expenditure for five years were as follows (in thousand Estonian kroons):—

	1928-29	1929-30	1930-31	1931-32	1932-33 ^a
Revenue ¹ ...	96,915	97,111	96,968	85,059	82,256

¹ Including receipts from loans (1929-30, 1,367, 4,600; 1930-31, 7,215; 1931-32, 3,900).

The foreign debt of Estonia (January 1, 1933) was as follows:—17,203,743 dollars to the United States, 1,201,981 $\frac{1}{2}$ to United Kingdom, 8,216,914 kronor to Sweden. Financial reform loan (1927), 3,771,500 dollars and 664,300 $\frac{1}{2}$.

Defence.—Military service is compulsory. The period of service in the active army is 1 year. The army is organised in 3 divisions. The peace strength in 1931 was 1,290 officers and 12,245 other ranks, and the mobilizable strength 90,000. Military aeroplanes, 74. The military budget for 1932-33 was 16,475,907 kroons; for 1933-34, 12,300,000 kroons.

The naval forces consist of one torpedo boat, four gunboats, and over a dozen smaller craft.

Production.—Agriculture and dairy farming are the chief occupations. There are 133,357 allotments on which about 70 per cent. of the total population is engaged. The total area is about 10,851,648 acres, divided as follows: forest land, 2,337,324 acres (21·5 per cent.); fields, 2,549,046 acres (23·5 per cent.); meadows, 2,249,686 acres (20·7 per cent.); pastures, 1,754,174 acres (16·2 per cent.); untillable land, 1,631,978 acres; (15·0 per cent.), including a peat bog of 329,440 acres.

The principal crops, with acreage and yield, are shown as follows:—

	Acreage		Yield in metric tons.
Rye	363,617	373,375	147,833	180,670

Shipping and Communications.—During 1932, 2,292 vessels of 796,066 tons entered and 2,351 vessels of 794,504 tons cleared the ports of Estonia. The principal port is Tallinn (Reval). On January 1, 1933, the merchant marine consisted of 109 steamers of 97,266 tons, 20 motor ships of 3,418 tons, and 249 sailing vessels of 25,200 tons, with a total tonnage of 125,884 tons.

Estonia had a total railway mileage in 1932 of 1,443 kilometres, or 896 miles.

In 1931 the post office handled 17,121,585 letters and 5,159,438 postcards in the internal service; received 3,843,939 letters and 1,161,828 postcards from abroad and sent 2,735,460 letters and 1,136,629 postcards abroad.

In 1932 there were 436 kilometres of telegraph lines, 607 offices. The number of telegrams sent (1931), 108,103 internal and 284,154 foreign. Number of telephone circuits, 361; length of telephone line, 4,532 kilometres; number of inter-urban conversations, 15,848,738.

Banking and Currency.

The Bank of Estonia (Eesti Pank) was founded on February 24, 1919, and began operations on May 3, 1919. Its capital was 10,000,000 Estonian marks, increased in 1921 to 250,000,000 marks. The functions of the Bank, the management of which was controlled by the Government, were to issue and regulate currency and transact ordinary banking business.

It was only on January 1, 1923 that the Bank on reorganisation, obtained the sole right of issue when the existing treasury notes were merged with the bank notes of the Bank of Estonia, and the currency placed on a gold standard.

Three institutions supply the long-term credit needs of agriculture and industry: the Estonian Hypothecary Bank, the Land Bank of Estonia (Maa Pank) and the National Mortgage Bank (Pikalaenu Pank).

A State Savings Bank was established on January 1, 1928. On December 31, 1932, total deposits amounted to 5,450,535 crowns, the number of depositors being 11,913.

There are two central institutions for co-operative banks: the Estonian People's Bank and the Farmers' Central Bank.

There are besides the above 12 joint stock, one private and 2 municipal banks.

Since January 1, 1928, the unit of currency is the Kroon, which is the same as a Swedish gold krona, and has a gold content of 0.403226 gramme of pure gold. This is subdivided into 100 sents, each sent being equivalent to one of the old Estonian marks. Abbreviation for internal use Kr. for 'Kroon,' for international use Ekr. for 'Estonian Kroon,' and 'S.' for internal and international uses for 'sent.'

On June 28, 1933, by a decision of the Government, the Estonian kroon was devaluated to a level not below that of the Swedish kroon, i.e. to 66.5 per cent. of its former exchange value.

On January 23, 1934, there were in circulation 31,876,000 kroons in bank notes; at the same date the bank held 20,133,000 kroons of coin and bullion. The denominations of the currency are: paper notes, 50, 10, 5, 1 kroon; nickel and copper coins, 25, 10, 5, 3 and 1 sent pieces; silver coins, 2 kroon and 1 kroon.

The metric system of weights and measures has been in force since January 1, 1929.

FINLAND.

(SUOMEN TASAVALLA.)

Constitution and Government.

CENTRAL GOVERNMENT.

Finland is a Republic according to the Constitutional Law of July 17, 1919.

From 1809 Finland was united to the Russian Empire as an autonomous Grand-Duchy. On December 6, 1917, the House of Representatives unanimously proclaimed Finland an independent and sovereign State, and she has been recognised as such by the Powers. According to the Constitutional Law of 1906, the House of Representatives consists of one Chamber of 200 members chosen by direct and proportional election, in which all who are entitled to vote have an equal vote. The suffrage is possessed, with the usual exceptions, by every Finnish citizen (man or woman) who has reached his or her 24th year. There are 16 electoral districts with a representation proportioned to the population, a rearrangement being required every 10 years. Each district is divided into voting circuits. The voting system, devised with a view to proportional representation, provides for the formation of voters' associations which prepare lists of candidates, the votes for whom are in a falling scale according to the order in which the voter has placed them on the list voted for. There may, within limits, be compacts between associations, and joint candidates may be entered in competing lists, while any voter may either support an association list or vote for any candidate he pleases. Every citizen entitled to vote is eligible to the House of Representatives, which is elected for 3 years.

The President is elected for 6 years by the votes of the citizens. He receives a salary of 700,000 marks and 170,000 marks for allowances. The Council of State (Ministry), appointed by the President, must enjoy the confidence of the House of Representatives.

At the elections held on July 1 and 2, 1933, the following parties were returned: Social-Democrats, 78; Agrarian, 53; Finnish Coalition Party, 18; Swedish People's Party, 21; Patriotic National Movement, 14; Finnish Progressive Party, 11; Small Farmers' Party, 4; National Party, 2.

President of Finland.—Dr. Pehr Evind Svinhufvud (born 1861; elected February 16, 1931).

The Council of State, appointed on December 14, 1932, is composed as follows:—

Prime Minister.—Prof. T. M. Kivimäki (Progress Party).

Minister for Foreign Affairs.—A. V. Hackzell (Coalition Party).

Minister of Finance.—Dr. H. M. J. Relander (Coalition Party).

Minister of the Interior.—Dr. Y. W. Puhakka (Coalition Party).

Minister of Defence.—A. A. Oksala (Coalition Party).

Minister of Justice.—E. Serlachius (Swedish People's Party).

Minister of Education.—Dr. O. Mantere (Progress Party).

Minister of Agriculture.—Prof. K. T. Jutila (Agrarian).

Minister of Commerce and Industries.—F. Killinen (Coalition Party).

Minister of Communications.—K. E. Linna (Progress Party).

Minister of Social Affairs.—Dr. E. Hynninen (Agrarian).

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

For administrative purposes Finland is divided into nine departments. The provincial administration is entrusted in each of the departments to a prefect, who is appointed by the President. The unit of local government is the commune. Each rural parish and each town forms a commune in which all men and all women of 21 years of age who have paid the local taxes for the preceding two years are voters. In all communes a communal council is elected to decide questions of administration and local economy. The executive power is vested in rural communes in a college formed by the head of the commune and four or more aldermen elected by the council. In towns the executive authority is the magistrates with the burgomaster as president and other members elected by the council. There were, in 1932, 38 towns, 25 boroughs, and 538 rural communes in Finland. As executive officers of the Prefects there are the bailiffs of 54 and sub-bailiffs of 302 districts.

The department of Åland has a county council (landsting) consisting of one chamber which is elected on the basis of the same suffrage as the Parliament. The county council settles the internal affairs of the government. The executive authority is with an executive council, of which the lantråd is president.

Area and Population.

The area and population of Finland, according to the census taken on December 31, 1920, and that taken on December 31, 1930, were as follows (Swedish names are given in brackets):—

Departments	Area ¹ English sq. miles	Popula- tion Dec. 31, 1920	Popula- tion Dec. 31, 1930	Popula- tion per sq. mile, 1930
Uusimaa (Nyland)	4,388	446,329	507,708	115.7
Turku-Pori (Åbo-Björneborg)	8,397	495,561	522,222	62.2
Åhvenanmaa (Åland)	551	26,911	27,375	49.7
Häme (Tavastehus)	6,787	360,528	390,056	57.7
Viipuri (Viborg)	12,072	559,202	622,553	51.6
Mikkeli (St.-Michel)	6,414	204,425	208,901	32.6

¹ Excluding water area, which amounts to an additional 17,314 square miles.

Of the total on December 31, 1930, 1,809,068 were males and 1,857,999 females. In 1930, 3,022,257 spoke Finnish, 342,916 Swedish, 8,216 Russian, 3,719 German, 2,113 Laponic.

The growth of the population is shown as follows:—

Years	In Towns	In Country	Total	Percentage in towns
1800	46,604	786,055	832,659	5.60
1900	339,618	2,372,949	2,712,567	12.52
1930	671,845	2,995,222	3,667,067	18.32
1931	707,159	2,990,346	3,697,505	19.13
1932	725,855	2,994,897	3,720,752	19.51

According to the census of December 31, 1930, the population was divided according to occupations as follows: agriculture, 2,014,788 (60 per cent.); industry, 569,505 (17 per cent.); communications, 127,995 (4 per cent.); commerce, 145,361 (4 per cent.); public administration, 67,526 (2 per cent.); professions, 71,201 (2 per cent.); others, 384,372 (11 per cent.).

The movement of the population for four years was as follows:—

Year	Living Births	Of which illegitimate	Stillborn	Marriages	Deaths (exclusive of stillborn)	Excess of Births
1929	76,011	6,182	2,027	25,060	54,489	21,522

Emigration: 1927, 6,088; 1928, 5,055; 1929, 6,333; 1930, 3,964; 1931, 741; 1932, 1,161; 1933, 1,030.

The principal towns, with the number of their inhabitants at end of 1932, are: Helsinki (Helsingfors), 265,391; Turku (Åbo), 63,460; Tampere (Tammerfors), 57,838; Viipuri (Viborg), 59,955; Vaasa (Vasa), 26,980; Oulu (Uleåborg), 25,070; Kuopio, 23,823; Pori (Björneborg), 18,921; and Kotka, 18,852.

Religion and Education.

The National Church is Evangelical Lutheran religion, but entire liberty of conscience is guaranteed to the members of all religions and confessions. Ecclesiastically (the Evangelical Church of Finland is divided into 5 bishoprics (Turku being the archiepiscopal see), 56 provostships, and 598 parishes.

Of the total population there were at end of 1932: Lutherans, 3,580,027; Greek-Catholics and Raskolnics, 68,426; Roman Catholics, 1,391; Baptists, etc., 9,749; Jews, 1,750; Mohammedans, 310; belonging to the civil-register, 59,099. The Greek-Catholics are under an archbishop, resident at Sortavala.

Finland has 8 universities: at Helsinki (founded in 1640 at Turku, and removed to Helsinki after having been burned down in 1827), with (1933) 841 teachers and 6,215 students (2,370 women); at Turku (Swedish, opened 1919), with 45 teachers and 220 students (61 women); and at Turku (Finnish, opened 1922), with 27 teachers and 403 students (208 women). In 1933, there were also 1 technical school at Helsinki, with 92 teachers and 824 students (70 women), and 3 commercial schools, one Finnish with 19 teachers and 225 students, and the others Swedish with 33 teachers and 248 students.

For secondary education there were, in 1932, 136 lyceums, leading to university, 2,515 teachers and 40,379 pupils (20,233 girls); 80 middle schools (with a curriculum of 5 years), with 668 teachers and 9,457 pupils. There were 8 training colleges for elementary school teachers, with 104 teachers and 1,289 students; and 4 for infant school teachers, with 265 students. There were also 57 high schools for the people, with 429 teachers and 2,588 pupils (1,678 females). For elementary education (1932) there were in the country 5,295 elementary schools, with 224,227 pupils (109,947 girls); 4,860 lower elementary schools, with 111,160 pupils. In the towns there were (1932) 1,386 classes of higher elementary schools, with 44,101 pupils (21,402 girls). There were besides 6 navigation schools, with 207 pupils; 44 commercial schools, with 3,252 pupils; 10 industrial schools, with 1,312 pupils; 2 technical schools, with 236 pupils; 157 schools for arts and crafts, with 7,739 pupils; 52 agricultural schools, with 2,005 pupils; 4 dairy schools, with 102 pupils; 43 cattle-management schools, with 1,579 pupils; 43 household schools, with 1,841 pupils; 6 horticultural schools, with 102 pupils; and 5 forestry schools, with 165 pupils. The school age in primary schools is from 7 to 15 years.

In 1930, only 0.9 per cent. of persons who have completed their 15th year could neither read nor write.

In 1932, there were published 539 newspapers and reviews in Finnish, 108 in Swedish, 74 in Finnish and Swedish, and 11 in other languages.

Justice and Crime.

The administration of justice is independent of the Government. The lowest courts of justice in Finland are those of the District. In towns these district courts are held by the burgomaster and his assessors; in the country by a judge and 12 jurors—peasant proprietors, the judge alone deciding, unless the jurors unanimously differ from him, when their decision prevails. From these courts an appeal lies to the Superior Court (Hovioikeus) in Turku, Vaasa and Viipuri. The Supreme Court of Judicature (Korkein oikeus) sits in Helsinki. Judges can be removed only by judicial sentence.

Two functionaries, the Oikeuskansleri or the Chancellor of Justice, and the Oikeusasiamies, or the Attorney-General, exercise control over the administration of justice. The former acts also as counsel and public prosecutor for the Government; while the latter, who is appointed by the Parliament, has to extend a general supervision over all the courts of law.

At the end of 1931, the prison population numbered 7,273 men and 803 women, while the number of sentences pronounced in 1930 was 127,016 for crimes and 55,225 in civil cases.

Pauperism.

The number of paupers in 1931 supported by the towns and the village communities was 182,706 (4·9 per cent. of the population); and the total cost was 362,657,088 marks.

Defence.ARMY.

The military forces of Finland consist of: (1) the army, air force and naval defence, recruited on the principle of universal service, (2) the Civic Protective Guards Organisation, recruited from the voluntarily enrolled citizens.

The President of the Republic is Commander-in-Chief of the Finnish military forces, but during war he may invest a general with that authority. In peace time the Minister of Defence appointed by the President is responsible for the military administration. The Chief of the Army, assisted by the General Staff, directs the commanding affairs of the army, air force and coast defence.

Every citizen is liable to serve from the age of 17 to the age of 60. The conscripts are divided into troops of the line and the "landwehr."

The troops of the line consist of the standing army and the reserve. All young men who have reached the age of 21 years are summoned to active service. The period of service is generally 350 days, and 440 days for those who are appointed to be trained as officers or non-commissioned officers of reserve. At the end of this service the soldier remains in the first reserve to the age of 40 years. The first reserve contains periods of active training, in all 40 to 60 days.

The "landwehr" is divided into three classes; to the first class belong the conscripts who after their service in the reserve are relegated to the second reserve (men of 40-60 years); to the second, the conscripts who are considered as incapable for active service in peace time (men of 21-60 years), and the third, young men who cannot on account of their youth yet be enrolled as conscripts (17-21 years).

The effectives in 1934 amounted to 1,738 officers and 28,600 other ranks, organised in 3 divisions.

The Air Force comprises 2 squadrons, 1 air school and 1 seaplane station, with a personnel of 1,910 all ranks.

The Coast Defence consists of the coast artillery and the coast fleet.

The Civic Guards are an essential part of the plan of defence. For the administration the Commander-in-Chief of the Guards appointed by the President is subordinated to the Minister of Defence, and directly responsible to the President with regard to his command. The number of the Protective Guards is about 100,000.

The military budget for 1933 amounted to 486,054,200 Finnish marks.

NAVY.

The naval forces consist of 2 coast defence ironclads of 4,000 tons, each armed with 4 10-inch and 8 4-inch guns; 6 gun-boats, 7 motor-torpedo-boats, 2 mine-layers, 4 submarines and a number of small vessels.

A retired British naval officer is attached to the Ministry of Defence in an advisory capacity.

Production and Industry.

Agriculture is the chief occupation of the people in Finland, although the cultivated area only covers 6.6 per cent. of the land. The land was divided in 1929 into 285,390 farms, and the landed property was distributed as follows:—Less than 3 hectares cultivated, number of farms, 109,155; 3-10 hectares, farms 108,642; 10-25 hectares, farms 51,683; 25-100 hectares, farms 15,083; over 100 hectares, farms 827 (1 hectare = 2.47 acres).

The principal crops of 1932 were as follows:—rye, 538,510 acres, yielding 329,355 tons; barley, 308,441 acres, yielding 178,919 tons; oats, 1,124,012 acres, yielding 669,462 tons; potatoes, 190,353 acres, yielding 983,400 tons; hay, 3,005,535 acres. Total land under cultivation, 1932, 5,868,308 acres. Butter production in 1932 was 25,921 tons.

Domestic animals in 1932 :—Horses, 360,378 ; horned cattle, 1,806,075 ; sheep, 964,593 ; goats, 10,872 ; pigs, 414,869.

The total forest land amounts to 62,429,000 acres, of which 24,835,000 acres belong to the State. The productive forest land covers 49,764,000 acres, of which 17,570,000 acres belong to the State.

Finland had, in 1932, 3,371 large factories, employing an aggregate of 127,222 workers, and yielding an aggregate product of 9,556 million marks. The chief were :—

On the air lines Helsinki-Reval and Helsinki-Turku-Stockholm, 5,056 passengers and 97,224 kilos goods and mail were transported in 1932.

Internal Communications.

For internal communications Finland has a remarkable system of lakes connected with each other and with the Gulf of Finland by canals, navigable at a length of about 2,500 miles. The number of vessels which passed along the canals in 1932 was 34,505, and the number of timber-rafts 8,612; the receipts from vessels, 8,031,200 marks.

In 1932, there were 19,372 miles of high roads and 18,206 miles of other public roads.

Railway history in Finland begins in 1860, when the State built a line 66 miles long between Helsinki and Hämeenlinna. On December 31, 1932, there were 3,404 miles of railways, all but 158 miles belonging to the State. The gauge is 1.524 metres (4.9 feet). The traffic upon the State railways in 1932 was 18,657,000 passengers and 8,761,000 tons of goods. The total cost of the State railways to the end of 1932 was 6,250 million marks. The total revenue in 1932 was 677,083,000 marks, and the total expenditure 682,108,000 marks.

Finland had 3,322 post and telegraph-offices in 1932, and revenue and expenditure of posts and telegraphs combined were respectively 173,172,000 and 152,556,000 marks. The number of letters and postcards was 63,938,000; ordinary and printed packages, 18,294,000; newspapers, 175,502,000; money-orders, 1,712,000; total, 259,446,000.

There were in 1932, 20,580 miles of telegraph and 23,002 miles of telephone wires belonging to the State in Finland. The number of telegraph messages sent in the year 1932 was 889,712. The telegraph system and part of the telephone system are State property.

Banking, Money, Weights, &c.

The Bank of Finland (founded in 1811) is the State Bank and the only bank of issue. The Bank is under the guarantee of the House of Representatives; its capital and reserves are fixed by its constitution, and its note circulation is limited by the value of its metallic stock and foreign correspondents, and the additional right of issue 1,200 million marks. Notes in circulation are: 1,000, 500, 100, 50, 20, 10 and 5 markkaa. The paper currency of the Bank of Finland on January 23, 1934, was 1,103 million marks, against which the bank held a stock of gold of 823 million marks, and foreign currency 1,339 million marks. Finland had in 1931, besides the State bank, 12 joint stock banks with 511 offices. The deposits of all the State banks on November 30, 1933, were 6,372 million marks.

The number of ordinary savings banks at the end of 1932 was 480; number of depositors 811,000, who had to their credit 4,113.4 million marks; in the Post Office savings banks 132,113 depositors had 298.9 million marks; and on Consumers' Co-operative Societies' Savings Account 384.2 million marks were deposited.

The markka of 100 pennä is stabilized at the current rate of exchange for the dollar of 39.7, and is of the value of 1.24*d*.

According to the new monetary law gold coin is to be struck of the value of 100 and 200 markkaa. The former will contain 4.21053 grammes of gold, 900 fine; the latter 8.42105 grammes, 900 fine. Aluminium bronze coins are 20, 10 and 5 markkaa, and nickel coins 1, $\frac{1}{2}$, and $\frac{1}{4}$ markkaa pieces. Copper coins 10 and 5 penni pieces.

Because of the exceptional conditions on the international money market, the gold standard was, however, temporarily suspended on October 12, 1931, whereby bank notes will not have to be redeemed in gold. Since March, 1933, the exchange has been stable at a rate of 227 marks to 1*l*.

The metric system of weights and measures is officially and universally employed in Finland.

FRANCE.

. Constitution and Government.

CENTRAL.

SINCE the overthrow of Napoleon III. on September 4, 1870, France has been under a Republican form of government, confirmed on February 25, and July 16, 1875, by a constitutional law, which has been partially modified in June, 1879, August, 1884, June, 1885, and July, 1889. It vests the legislative power in the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate, and the executive in the President of the Republic and the Ministry.

The President is elected for seven years, by an absolute majority of votes, by the Senate and Chamber of Deputies united in a National Assembly, or Congress. He promulgates the laws voted by both Chambers, and ensures their execution. He selects a Ministry from the two Chambers, but may, and sometimes does, choose ministers who are not members of either Chamber (e.g. a general as Minister for War, an admiral as Minister of Marine, a civilian as Minister for Foreign Affairs); he appoints to all civil and military posts, has the right of individual pardon, and is responsible only in case of high treason. The President concludes treaties with foreign Powers, but treaties which affect the area of France or of French colonies must be approved by the Legislature, and he cannot declare war without the previous assent of both Chambers. Every act of the President has to be countersigned by a Minister. With the consent of the Senate he can dissolve the Chamber of Deputies. In case of vacancy, the two Chambers united immediately elect a new President.

President of the Republic.—Albert Lebrun; born August 29, 1871; elected May 10, 1932.

The Ministers or Secretaries of State, the number of whom varies, are usually, but not necessarily, members of the Senate or Chamber of Deputies. The President of the Council (Premier) chooses his colleagues in concert with the President of the Republic. Each Minister has the direction of one of the great administrative departments and each is responsible to the Chambers for his acts, while the Ministry as a whole is responsible for the general policy of the Government.

The Ministry consists of the following members, appointed February 9, 1934.

Prime Minister.—*M. Gaston Doumergue (Senator).
Minister without Portfolio.—*M. André Tardieu.
Minister without Portfolio.—*M. Edouard Herriot.
Minister of Foreign Affairs.—*M. Louis Barthou (Senator).
Minister of Justice.—M. Henri Chéron (Senator).
Minister of Interior.—*M. Albert Sarraut (Senator).

The Chamber of Deputies is elected for four years, by manhood suffrage, and each citizen 21 years old, not actually in military service, who can prove a six months' residence in any one town or commune, and not otherwise disqualified, has the right of vote. Deputies must be citizens and not under 25 years of age. The manner of election of Deputies has been modified several times since 1871. The scrutin de liste, under which each elector votes for as many Deputies as the entire department has to elect, was introduced in 1871. In 1876 it was replaced by the scrutin d'arrondissement, under which each department is divided into a number of arrondissements, each elector voting for one Deputy only; in 1885 there was a return to the scrutin de liste, in 1889 the unimpartial vote was reintroduced; in 1919 the scrutin de liste, with proportional representation, was again adopted; but in 1927 (July 12) the old system of scrutin d'arrondissement was once more introduced. In each constituency the votes are cast up and the Deputy proclaimed elected by a commission of Councillors-General appointed by the prefect of the department. The Chamber is now composed of 615 Deputies.

Chamber of Deputies, elected May 1-8, 1932:—Communists and Socialists-Communists, 20; Socialists, 130; Republican Socialists and French Socialists, 33; Radicals and Radical Socialists, 153; Independent Radicals, 74; Republicans of the Left, 48; Democrats, 15; Democratic Republican Union, Democratic and Social Action, Independents, 127; Others, 15.

The Senate is composed of 314 members, elected for nine years from citizens 40 years old, one-third retiring every three years. The election of the Senators is indirect, and is made by an electoral body composed (1) of delegates chosen by the Municipal Council of each commune in proportion to the population; and (2) of the Deputies, Councillors-General, and District Councillors of the department. Besides the 225 Departmental Senators elected in this way, there were, according to the law of 1875, 75 Senators elected for life by the united two Chambers; but by the Senate Bill of 1884 it was enacted that vacancies arising among the Life Senatorships would be filled by the election of ordinary nine-years Senators, the department which should have the right to the vacant seat to be determined by lot. The Princes of deposed dynasties are precluded from sitting in either House.

Senate, one-third elected on October 16, 1932: Socialists, 17; Gauche Démocratique, 161; Union Républicaine, 69; Gauche Républicaine, 16; Right, 6; Union Démocratique, 32; Independents, 13.

The Senate and Chamber of Deputies assemble every year on the second Tuesday in January, unless a previous summons is made by the President of the Republic, and they must remain in session at least five months out of the twelve. The President is bound to convoke them if the demand is made by one-half of the number of members composing each Chamber. The President can adjourn the Chambers, but the adjournment cannot exceed the term of a month, nor occur more than twice in the same session.

Bills may be presented either in the Chamber or Senate by the Government, or on the initiative of private members. In the first case they are remitted to the bureaux for examination; in the second, they are first submitted to a commission of parliamentary initiative. Financial laws must be first presented to and voted by the Chamber of Deputies.

The Senate, constituted as a High Court of Justice, tries cases of attempt against the safety of the State or of plotting to change the form of government.

Senators and Deputies are paid 62,000 francs a year and the Presidents of the two Chambers receive allowances for the expense of entertainment. Members of both Chambers travel free on all railways by means of a small annual payment. The dotation of the President of the Republic is 1,800,000 francs, with a further allowance of 1,800,000 francs for his expenses. On January 1, 1905, a fund was instituted for pensions to ex-Deputies, or their widows and orphans. It is supported by contributions from Deputies (deducted from their pay) as well as by gifts and legacies.

France has, besides, a special institution under the name of Conseil d'État, which was introduced by Napoleon I., and has been maintained since. It is presided over by the Minister of Justice or (in his absence) by a vice-president, and is composed of Councillors, Masters of Requests (Maîtres des Requêtes), and Auditors, all appointed by the President of the Republic. Its duty is to give opinion upon such questions, chiefly those connected with administration, as may be submitted to it by the Government. It is judge in the last resort in administrative suits, and it prepares the rules for the public administration.

II. LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

For administrative purposes France is divided into 90 departments including the 'territory of Belfort' (remnant of the department of Haut-Rhin). Since 1881, the three departments of Algeria are also treated for most purposes, as part of France proper. The department has representatives of all the Ministries, and is placed under a Prefect, nominated by Government, and having wide and undefined functions. He is assisted by a Prefecture Council, an administrative body, whose advice he may take without being bound to follow it. The Prefect is a representative of the Executive, and, as such, supervises the execution of the laws, issues police regulations, supplies information on matters which concern the department, nominates subordinate officials, and has under his control all officials of the State. There is a Sub-Prefect in every arrondissement, except in those containing the capitals of departments and the department of the Seine.

The unit of local government is the commune, the size and population of which vary very much. There were, in 1931, in the 90 departments into which France was divided, 38,004 communes. Most of them (33,960) had less than 1,500 inhabitants, and 22,491 have even less than 500; while 173 communes only have more than 20,000 inhabitants. The local affairs of the commune are under a Municipal Council, composed of from 10 to 36 members, elected by universal suffrage, and by the scrutin de liste for 6 years by Frenchmen after 21 years and 6 months' residence; but each act of the Council must receive the approval of the Prefect, while many must be submitted to the Council General or even to the President of the Republic, before becoming lawful. Even the commune's quota of direct taxation is settled by persons (répartiteurs) chosen by the Prefect from among the lists of candidates drawn up by the Municipal Council.

Each Municipal Council elects a Mayor, who is both the representative of the commune and the agent of the central government. He is the head of the local police and, with his assistants, acts under the orders of the Prefect.

In Paris the Municipal Council is composed of 80 members; each of the 20 arrondissements into which the city is subdivided has its own Mayor. The place of the Mayor of Paris is taken by the Prefect of the Seine, and, in part, by the Prefect of Police. Lyons has an elected Mayor, but the control of the police is vested in the Prefect of the department of the Rhone.

The next unit is the canton (3,024 in 1931), which is composed of an average of 12 communes, although some of the largest communes are, on the contrary, divided into several cantons. It is a seat of a justice of the peace (juge de paix), but is not an administrative unit.

The district, or arrondissement (279 in 1931), has an elected conseil d'arrondissement, with as many members as there are cantons, its chief function being to allot among the communes their respective parts in the direct taxes assigned to each arrondissement by the Council General. That body stands under the control of the Sub-Prefect. A varying number of arrondissements form a department, which has its conseil général renewed by universal suffrage to the extent of one-half every three years (one Councillor for each canton). These conseils deliberate upon all economical affairs of the department, the repartition of the direct taxes among the arrondissements, the roads, normal schools, and undertakings for the relief of the poor. Their decisions are controlled by the Prefect, and may be annulled by the President of the Republic.

According to the Peace Treaty with Germany (June 28, 1919) Alsace-Lorraine has been transferred to France, to date from the Armistice of November 11, 1918. The districts of Lower Alsace, Upper Alsace and Lorraine have become the departments of Bas-Rhin (1,848 square miles and population 688,242); Haut-Rhin (1,354 square miles, population 516,726), and Moselle (2,403 square miles, population 693,408). Thus the total area added to France is 5,605 square miles, population (1931) 1,898,376.

In 1926 the rural population was 20,759,131 and the urban population 19,984,766.

According to the Treaty of Versailles (article 45), France obtained from Germany as a compensation for the destruction of the coal mines in the North of France, the exclusive rights of exploitation of the coal mines situated in the Saar Basin. The area of this district is about 751 square miles, and the population 657,870. For 15 years the Saar Basin is to be governed by a Commission of Five, chosen by the League of Nations. At the end of 15 years the population will decide by vote one of three alternatives, viz., the maintenance of the rule set up by the Treaty, union with France, or union with Germany.

In the following table, the third, fourth, and fifth columns give [in brackets] for the first five censuses the population, its density, and its average annual increase of France, excluding Alsace-Lorraine, and are thus comparable with the data for the censuses posterior to the loss of Alsace and Lorraine (1872-1911).

III. PRINCIPAL TOWNS.

The following towns, according to the census of 1931, have each a population of over 100,000 (figures for census of 1926 added for comparison):—

Paris	2,891,020	2,871,429

For fiscal and electoral purposes the population of each commune is divided into agglomerated, scattered, and separated (comptée à part); the first two constitute the municipal population, and the third consists of garrison, college, prison, and hospital population. Different from this is the distinction between urban and rural population, a commune being urban where the agglomerated population is over 2,000, and rural where under 2,000.

Religion.

No religion is recognised by the State.

Under the law promulgated on December 9, 1905, the Churches were separated from the State, the adherents of all creeds were authorised to form associations for public worship (associations cultuelles). As transitory measures, ecclesiastics over 45 years of age and of over 25 years of service remunerated by the State were entitled to a pension, and all other ecclesiastics were to receive a grant during a period of from four to eight years. All buildings actually used for public worship and as dwellings in that connection were to be made over, after an inventory was taken, to the associations for public worship: the places of worship for the total period of the existence of these associations, the ecclesiastical dwellings for a time.

The law of January 2, 1907, provides (among other things) that, failing associations cultuelles, the buildings for public worship, together with their furniture, will continue at the disposition of the ministers of religion and the worshippers for the exercise of their religion; but, in each case, there is required an administrative act drawn up by the préfet as regards buildings belonging to the State or the Departments, and by the maire as regards buildings belonging to the Communes. Forms of the documents necessary under the new law have been supplied by the Government.

There are 17 archbishops and 68 bishops of the Roman Catholic Church in France, not including Alsace and Lorraine, Algeria or the colonies, in addition to 51,000 clergy of various grades. The Protestants of the Augsburg Confession are, in their religious affairs, governed by a General Consistory, while the Reformed Church is under a Council of Administration, the seat of which is at Paris. There are about a million Protestants in France.

The Associations law, passed July 1, 1901, requires religious communities to be authorised by the State, and no monastic association can be authorised without a special law in each particular case. Before the passing of that law there were 910 recognised associations, and 753 not recognised; the establishments, mostly not recognised, numbered 19,514, and their members 159,628 (30,136 men and 129,492 women). After the passing of the law, of the 753 associations not recognised, 305 dissolved themselves and 448 asked for authorisation, which was refused by the Chambers to the majority of them.

Education.

The public schools constitute the University of France and are divided into three classes, primary, secondary, and superior. The Superior Council of 52 members has deliberative, administrative, and judiciary functions, and a Consultative Committee advises respecting the working of the school system, but the inspectors-general are in direct communication with the Minister. For local educational administration France is divided into 17 circumscriptions, called Academies, each of which has an Academic Council whose members comprise a certain number elected by the professors or teachers. The Academic Councils deal with all grades of instruction. Each is under a Rector, and each is provided with academy inspectors, one for each department except Nord which has two (one being for primary instruction), and Seine which has eight (one being director of primary instruction), besides primary inspectors of schools, usually one for each arrondissement, 20 inspectors (male or female) for the department of the Seine. Each department has a council for primary educational matters, the prefect being president, and this body has large powers with respect to the inspection, management and maintenance of schools and the opening of free schools.

The law of August 9, 1879, rendered obligatory for each department the maintenance of two primary normal schools, one for school-masters, the other for school-mistresses. Certain departments, however, are authorised to maintain an inter-departmental normal school. In 1932-33, there were in the 90 departments 87 normal schools for male teachers (6,696 students), and 86 normal schools for female teachers (6,775 students). There are two higher normal schools of primary instruction: one at Fontenay-aux-Roses for professors for normal schools for school-mistresses, the other at St. Cloud for professors for normal schools for school-masters. The law of June 16, 1881, made instruction absolutely free in all primary public schools; that of March 28, 1882, rendered it obligatory for all children from 6 completed to 13 years of age. The law of October 30, 1886, is the organic law of primary instruction now in force; it established that teachers should be lay; for infant schools it substituted écoles maternelles instead of salles d'asile; it fixed the programmes of instruction, and established freedom of private schools under the supervision of the school authorities.

On November 15, 1931, there were 328 higher elementary schools for boys and 240 for girls. The number of pupils was on November 15, 1931, 38,934 boys and 39,079 girls, compared with 37,000 boys and 37,782 girls on November 15, 1930.

Courses of instruction for adults are conducted in the evening by teachers in their schools.

Secondary Instruction : Boys.—Secondary instruction is supplied in two types of schools—by the State in the lycées, and by the communes in the colleges, by associations and by private individuals in free establishments (écoles libres). The course of study extends over 7 years.

The number of public secondary schools for boys and the number of pupils for 3 years were as follows :—

Higher Instruction is supplied by the State in the universities and in special schools, and by private individuals in the private faculties and schools. The freedom of higher instruction was established by the law of July 12, 1875, modified by that of March 18, 1880, which reserved to the State faculties the exclusive right to confer degrees. A decree of December 28, 1885, created a general council of the faculties, and the creation of universities, each consisting of several faculties, was accomplished in 1897, in virtue of the law of July 10, 1896.

There are 17 Universities in France. The following table shows the year of foundation and the total number of students on July 31, 1931 :—

¹ Including 350 students in the two faculties of Theology.

The faculties are of four kinds : 15 faculties of Law (Paris, Aix, Bordeaux, Caen, Dijon, Grenoble, Lille, Lyon, Montpellier, Nancy, Poitiers, Rennes, Strasbourg, Toulouse, and Algiers); 9 faculties of Medicine (Paris, Montpellier, Bordeaux, Lille, Lyon, Toulouse, Nancy, Strasbourg, and Algiers); 17 faculties of Science (Paris, Besançon, Bordeaux, Caen, Clermont, Dijon, Grenoble, Lille, Lyon, Marseille, Montpellier, Nancy, Poitiers, Rennes, Toulouse, Strasbourg, and Algiers); 17 faculties of letters (at the towns last named); 4 faculties of medicine and 4 faculties of pharmacy (Paris, Montpellier, Nancy, Strasbourg), and 5 mixed faculties of medicine and pharmacy (Algiers, Bordeaux, Lille, Lyons, Toulouse); 15 schools with full functions and preparatory schools of medicine and pharmacy.

The following statement shows the number of students by faculties or schools in July, for 3 years:—

There are free faculties: at Paris (the Catholic Institute of Paris comprising theology, law and advanced scientific and literary studies); Angers (theology, law, sciences, letters, agriculture); Lille (theology, law, medicine and pharmacy, sciences, letters, social sciences and politics); Lyon (theology, law, sciences, letters); Marseilles (law); Toulouse (the Catholic Institute with theological, literary, and scientific instruction). There is, besides, in Paris a large institution for free higher instruction in political science, the Ecole libre des Sciences Politiques, and also one for the study of international law, the Institut des Hautes Études Internationales.

The State faculties confer the degrees of bachelor, of licentiate, and of doctor. Yearly competitive examinations in the various branches of teaching (agrégations) are open to holders of the degree of licencié, or doctor in the case of law and medicine, and lead to the title of professeur agrégé in secondary and higher (law and medicine) instruction.

The other higher institutions dependent on the Ministry of Public Instruction are the Collège de France (founded by Francis I. in 1530), which has courses of study bearing on various subjects, literature and language, archæology, mathematical, natural, mental and social science (political economy, &c.); the Museum of Natural History giving instruction in the sciences and nature; the École Pratique des Hautes Études (history and philology, mathematical and physico-chemical sciences, and the sciences of nature and of religion), having its seat at the Sorbonne; the École Normale Supérieure, which prepares teachers for secondary instruction and, since 1904, follows the curricula of the Sorbonne without special teachers of its own; the École des Chartes, which trains the archivist paleographers; the École des Langues Orientales vivantes; the École du Louvre, devoted to art and archæology; the École des Beaux-Arts, and the Bureau des Longitudes, the Central Meteorological Bureau; the Observatoire of Paris; and the French Schools at Athens, Rome, Cairo and Indo-China, besides a school for Morocco.

Outside Paris there are eight observatories (Mendon, Besançon, Bordeaux, &c.). The observatory at Nice is dependent on the Academy of Sciences.

Professional and Technical Instruction.—The principal institutions of higher or technical instruction dependent on other ministries are: the Conservatoire des Arts et Métiers at Paris (with 20 evening courses on the applied sciences and social economy), the École Centrale des Arts et Manufactures, the École des Hautes Études Commerciales, 18 higher schools of commerce with 8,552 pupils (1931), dependent on the Ministry of Public Instruction; the National Agronomic Institute at Paris, the Veterinary school at Alfort, a school of forestry at Nancy, the higher national school of colonial agriculture, national agricultural schools at Grignon, Rennes, Montpellier, 44 schools of Agriculture, &c., dependent on the Ministry of Agriculture; the École Supérieure de Guerre, the École Polytechnique, the military school at St. Cyr, the École d'Artillerie at Fontainebleau, the École de Cavalerie at Saumur, and other schools dependent on the Ministry of War; the Naval School at Brest dependent on the Ministry of Marine; the School of Mines at Paris, the School of Bridges and Roads at Paris, the School of Mines at St. Etienne, and the Schools of Miners at Alais and Douai; with other schools dependent on the Ministry of Public Works; the École Coloniale at Paris, dependent on the Ministry of the Colonies. The École des Beaux Arts, the École Nationale des Arts Décoratifs, and the Conservatoire de Musique et de Déclamation depend on the department of Fine Arts, which is attached to the Ministry of Public Instruction. The municipal school of Industrial Physics and Chemistry is dependent on the City of Paris. In the provinces there are National schools of fine arts, and schools of music, and also several municipal schools as well as free subventioned schools, etc.

Technical schools of a somewhat lower grade (dependent on the Ministry of Public Instruction) are very numerous, comprising (in 1931—the latest available figures) seven national schools of arts and trades (Aix, Angers, Chalons, Cluny, Lille, Paris, Strasbourg), two schools of horology, twelve national professional schools, 206 practical schools of commerce and industry (of which 49 are for girls) with 37,684 pupils (11,694 girls).

Justice and Crime.

The Courts of lowest jurisdiction in France are those of the Justices of Peace (juges de paix, one in each canton) who try small civil cases and act also as judges of Police Courts, where all petty offences (contraventions) are disposed of. The Correctional Courts pronounce upon all graver offences (délits), including cases involving imprisonment up to 5 years. They have no jury, and consist of 3 judges belonging to the civil tribunals of first instance. In all cases of a délit or a crime the preliminary inquiry is made in secrecy by an examining magistrate (juge d'instruction), who may either dismiss the case or send it for trial before a court where a public prosecutor (Procureur) endeavours to prove the charge. The Court of Assizes is assisted by 12 jurors, who decide by simple majority on the fact with respect to offences amounting to crimes. The highest courts are the 26 Courts of Appeal, composed each of one President and a variable number of members, for all criminal cases which have been tried without a jury; and one Court of Cassation which sits at Paris, for all criminal cases tried by jury, so far as regards matters of law.

Until 1926 there was a tribunal of first instance in each arrondissement for civil cases, wherein the amount in dispute is between 200 and 1,500 francs, but the decree of September 3, 1926, suppressed the tribunals other than those in the capital of the department; a certain number of tribunals in the arrondissement have been re-established since then. These tribunals may be divided into several sections. Above these are the Appeal Courts and the Court of Cassation. For commercial cases there are, in 226 towns, Tribunals of Commerce and Councils of experts (prud'hommes). In the towns are police courts.

All Judges are nominated by the President of the Republic. They can be removed only by a decision of the Court of Cassation constituted as the Conseil Supérieur of the magistracy.

The French penal institutions consist, first, of Houses of Arrest (3,585 chambres de sûreté and dépôts de sûreté at the end of 1927). Next come Departmental Prisons (52 in 1927), also styled maisons d'arrêt, de justice and de correction, where both persons awaiting trial and those condemned to less than one year's imprisonment are kept, as also a number of boys and girls transferred from, or going to be transferred to, reformatories. The reformatories are 7 for boys and 5 for girls. The Central Prisons (maisons de force et de correction), where all prisoners condemned to more than one year's imprisonment are kept, provided with large industrial establishments for the work of prisoners, are 9 for men and 3 for women. The average population in 1928 of all penal establishments was 20,184 men and 3,306 women.

All persons condemned to hard labour and many condemned to 'reclusion' are sent to Guiana (military and récidivistes); the dépôt de forçats of St. Martin-de-Ré is a dépôt for transferred hard-labour convicts.

Pauperism, Relief of Old Age and Social Insurance.

In France the poor are assisted partly through public 'bureaux de bienfaisance' and partly by private and ecclesiastical charity. The funds of the 'bureaux de bienfaisance' are partly derived from endowments, partly from communal contributions, and partly from public and private charity. In 1930, the bureaux expended 197,842,200 francs and assisted 784,900 persons. Public assistance is rendered to poor or destitute children. At the end of 1930 the institutions for this purpose contained 170,616 children; the expenditure during the year amounted to 220,102,300 francs. In 1930 the hospitals for the sick, infirm, aged, or infants, numbered 2,048; and at the end of the year had 100,943 patients, besides 91,261 aged and infirm inmates; their expenditure for 1930 amounted to 1,435,133,700 francs. In the same year 784,900 persons received gratuitous medical assistance at home and 320,408 in hospitals, the expenditure for such purposes amounting to 378,928,300 francs. At the end of 1930 the asylums for imbeciles, national, departmental, and private, had 88,427 patients.

An Act was passed in 1905, for the relief of the aged poor, age limit, 70, the infirm, and the permanently incurable. The Act of 1905 provided that the cost of the scheme should be borne by the communes, the departments, and the State. The number of persons registered for relief on December 31, 1930, was 572,127. The cost to the State for 1930, was 487,144,800 francs. The Old-Age Pensions Law of April 5, 1910, as amended on February 27, 1912, provides for all wage-earners old-age pensions towards which both employers and workers contribute. Contributions are to be paid up to the 60th year of the worker's life, and the State will contribute 100 francs. This sum will be increased by one-tenth for every insured worker who has brought up 3 children of the age of 16. The pensions paid in 1930 amounted to 2,525,250,000 francs.

49,734 infants were placed in 87 departments. In 1913, two further laws were introduced: that of June 17 to give relief, varying from 0·50 to 1·50 francs or more per day, to women in confinement, and that of July 14 amended in 1925 and 1926, to give relief to families with numerous children. The rate is a minimum of 22·5 francs per month for every child beyond the third. In 1930, the number of women so aided was 350,353, and the amount of relief 48,540,100 francs. Supplementary relief to nursing mothers, under the law of October 24, 1914, amounted in 1930 to 68,262,400 francs. In 1930, the number of families assisted was 46,418, at an expense of 10,744,800 francs, of which 4,244,800 francs were contributed by the State. Since 1922 it has been customary, in accordance with the law of June 29, 1918, to award prizes for large families. By law of April 29, 1926, 360 francs per annum is granted to every French family which has more than 3 children living for every child beyond the third under 13.

The law providing for compulsory social insurance which was passed on April 5, 1928, came into force on July 1, 1930.

The law provides for the compulsory insurance of all wage earners whose wages do not exceed 15,000 francs per annum (13,000 francs in the larger cities), against sickness, incapacity, old age and death, and also extends maternity and unemployment benefits. The cost of the insurance is borne by the employer, worker and the state, the amount of contribution from the worker varying in accordance with the remuneration. The assessment amounts to about 8 per cent. for industrial workers and about 2 per cent. for agricultural workers, half to be paid by the worker and half by the employer. The yields from this assessment amounted to 3·56 milliard francs in 1931, and 3·26 milliard francs in 1932.

The accounts of revenue and expenditure of the Government officials are examined by a special administrative tribunal (Cour des Comptes), instituted in 1807. In 1930 and 1931, the financial year commenced on April 1, but on October 17, 1931, it was decided to revert to the calendar year. The latest budget estimates relate, therefore, to the period April 1 to December 31, 1932.

Defence.

I. LAND DEFENCES.

France has a coastline of 1,760 miles, 1,304 on the Atlantic and 456 on the Mediterranean. Its land frontier extends over 1,665 miles, of which 1,246 miles are along the Belgian, German, Swiss, and Italian frontiers, and 419 along the Spanish frontier.

In consequence of the reduction of the term of service in the regular army to one year, France has constructed a trench system of defence, based on the experiences of the Great War, along her Eastern Frontier between the Rhine and Luxembourg and on the Italian frontier. Behind this system are the former German fortresses of Strassburg, Metz, and Thionville and the first-class fortresses of Verdun, Toul, Epinal, and Belfort. On the coast Toulon, Rochefort, Lorient, Brest, and Cherbourg are naval harbours surrounded by forts.

II. ARMY.

The French Army is divided into the Metropolitan and the Colonial Armies; both are under the War Minister, but the estimates for Colonial troops other than those maintained in Algeria, Tunis, and Morocco are included in the budget of the Minister for the Colonies. The Metropolitan Army is divided into the Active Army, the Reserve Troops and the Territorial Army. The Army is localised and territorialised in the military government of Paris and 20 Army Corps areas. The normal composition of a French Army Corps is 2 infantry divisions, 1 regiment of cavalry, 1 artillery brigade of three regiments, 1 battalion of engineers, 1 group and 1 company of observation balloons, and administrative services.

The infantry division consists of 3 regiments of infantry each of 3 battalions, and 1 regiment of artillery of 3 groups each of 3 batteries. The cavalry division consists of 3 cavalry brigades each of 2 regiments, 1 group of horse artillery, and 1 group of cyclist chasseurs.

The peace establishment of the French Army provides for 5 Cavalry divisions and 25 divisions of the Active Metropolitan Army. The establishment of the Active Metropolitan Army by units for 1932-33 is as follows :—

	Regiments	Independent Battalions	Independent Companies	Independent Groups	Independent Sections	Independent Squadrons
Infantry	78	21	—	—	—	—
Tanks	10	3	—	—	—	—
Cavalry	29	5 ¹	—	—	—	12 ¹
Artillery	68	13	10	2	—	—
Engineers	11	—	—	—	2	—

The peace establishment of the Active Metropolitan Army for 1932-33 is 330,147, of whom 258,147 are allocated for Home Defence, and 72,000 form a mobile reserve for the overseas garrisons. Enlistment for the Metropolitan Army is regulated by the law of March 28, 1928, and is on a compulsory basis, but liberal exemptions are allowed. Service in the active army is for 1 year, and begins at the age of 21, the first half of the annual contingent joining in November, the second half in the following May. The total duration of service in active army and reserve is 28 years. Provision is made for the enlistment of 106,000 long service professional soldiers, 76,000 for the Metropolitan and 30,000 in the Colonial Army. After serving for 1 year, the soldier remains immediately available for military service for 3 years. In his fourth year of service he joins the first line of reserve for 16 years, and in his twentieth year the Territorial Army in which he remains for 8 years.

The Reserve Troops form divisions corresponding to those in the Active Army on mobilisation, in the same districts as those to which the Active divisions belong. The Territorial Army forms a second line and is similarly organised in divisions on mobilisation. The Customs Corps is organised in battalions as are the Chasseurs Forestiers, these are both recruited from men who have passed into the Territorial Army.

The Gendarmerie is a police force recruited from the Army but performing civil duties in time of peace. There is a legion in each military district. The strength of the Gendarmerie is 33,380, of whom about one-third are mounted.

The Garde Républicaine is also a police force and performs duties in Paris similar to those performed by the Gendarmerie in the districts. Its strength is 2,968.

The Colonial Army is distinct from the Metropolitan, and consists partly of white troops and partly of native troops. The Colonial establishment for 1932-38 was 256,103, exclusive of Colonial troops in France and of certain native troops administered by the Ministry of the Colonies. The total peace establishment of the French Army, exclusive of Gendarmerie, is 330,147 + 256,103 = 586,250. The Colonial white troops are recruited either by voluntary enlistment, or by voluntary transfer from the Metropolitan Army.

The organisation of the extra-European troops by units is as follows:—

	Regiments	Independent Battalions	Independent Companies	Independent Groups	Independent Sections	Independent Squadrons
Infantry	55	14	11	—	—	—
Tanks	—	3	—	—	4	—
Cavalry	14	—	7	—	—	8
Artillery	10	1	—	2	12	—
Engineers	—	8	4	—	—	—
Air Force	2	—	—	4	—	—

The administration of the French Army consists of a General Staff and of a number of departments, all under the War Minister. In questions of strategy and of higher military policy the War Minister is assisted by a Council called the Conseil Supérieur de la Guerre, consisting of himself as President, the Marshals of France and twelve selected generals, of whom one must be Chief of the General Staff.

In September, 1919, it was decided that the uniform of the Army should be the horizon-blue dress with kepi. The Chasseurs or Light Infantry battalions were, however, permitted to keep their distinctive dark blue uniform. Khaki was adopted for Colonial and North African troops, and navy blue for the Air Force.

The French infantry is armed with the Lebel magazine rifle: calibre .315. The French field gun is the 7.5 cm. (2.95 in.) Q.F., shielded gun. The French howitzer is the 10.5 cm. (3.35 in.) howitzer, and as the result of the war the French Army possesses a large variety of heavy guns of all calibres.

Army estimates for 1933, 6,260,400,000 francs.

III. NAVY.

Under the Washington Treaty, whose provisions affected her very slightly, France was allowed to retain ten capital ships, but the France was lost in Quiberon Bay on August 25, 1922, and the nine remaining displace 185,925 metric tons. By the provisions of the London Treaty, she retains the right to lay down additional capital ships up to a total of 105,000 tons during 1931-36. So far, the laying down in 1932 of the 26,500-ton battle cruiser Dunkerque is all that has been done towards effecting this tonnage replacement. Although the design of this ship has not been finally settled, it is understood that she will be given a main armament of eight 13 in. guns in quadruple turrets.

The current shipbuilding programme (1931-32) comprises 4 cruisers of 7,600 tons (George Leygues, Gloire, Marseillaise, Montcalm); 1 flotilla leader; 1 destroyer; 4 escort gunboats; and 1 surveying vessel. In hand from previous programmes there are the battle cruiser Dunkerque (mentioned above); 2 cruisers of 7,600 tons (Jean de Vienne, La Galissonière); 6 flotilla leaders of 2,569 tons; 13 submarines; 1 netlayer of 2,330 tons; and 8 escort gunboats. The air service, which works in close touch with the Navy, is also being developed. The coast defences are now under the control of the Navy, and have been reorganized in four coast 'naval frontier' districts, in relation to 4 divisions of aircraft (40 flotillas), while a fifth division (10 flotillas) is attached to the active fleet. The naval frontier districts include considerable forces of destroyers, submarines, and minelayers. The chief stations are Dunkirk, Cherbourg, Brest, Rochefort, Toulon, Corsica, Bizerta, Oran, Algiers, and Bona.

Navy estimates for 1934 were 2,742,084,616 francs. Naval construction covered by this vote includes a second capital ship of the Dunkerque type, of 26,500 tons, a flotilla leader, and 2 submarines.

The Navy is under the supreme direction of the Minister of Marine, assisted by a Chief of the Staff. The latter has charge of all that concerns preparation for war, and is commander-in-chief designate. There are two sub-chiefs of the staff, of whom one is in charge of various sections, and the other of the work of the Military Cabinet. The central administration embraces the directorates of personnel, matériel, and artillery, the works section, the finance department, the services of submarine defences, hydrography, and a central flying service. In addition to these are the Superior Council of the Navy, which advises the Minister on high policy, and several special committees. For purposes of administration the French coasts are divided into five maritime arrondissements, having their headquarters at the naval ports of Cherbourg, Brest, Lorient, Rochefort, and Toulon, each under a vice-admiral, but Lorient and Rochefort are being reduced. Two flag-officers are inspectors-general and commanders-in-chief designate in the Channel and Mediterranean.

The French navy is manned partly by conscription and partly by voluntary enlistment. By the channel of the 'Inscription Maritime,' which was introduced by Colbert, and on the lists of which are the names of all male individuals of the 'maritime population,' France was formerly provided with a reserve of 114,000 men, of whom about 25,500 were usually serving with the fleet; now large numbers are taken from the shore for engine-room and other duties. The active personnel in 1932 numbered 3,777 officers and 53,750 men.

The following is a summary of the strength of the fleet at the periods shown:—

	Complete at end of

Below is a list of the principal ships in service or completing at the end of 1932. Instead of being replaced as proposed under the Washington agreement, the 6 first-class battleships are being modernised to a certain extent and will all be adapted to burn oil fuel.

In the flotillas are included 24 flotilla leaders of 2,126–2,441 tons and 26 destroyers of about 1,350 tons, with speeds ranging from 33 to 40 knots ; 55 ocean-going submarines, of which 8 are minelayers ; and 40 coastal submarines. Most of these are of recent design and construction.

IV. AIR FORCE.

The French Air Force is under the Air Ministry and is controlled by the Supreme Air Council, of which the Air Minister is President, the other members being the Inspector General, the Chief of the Air Staff, and 5 general officers of the Air Services. The strength of the Air Force in 1932–33 was :—

Home:—Military, 26,913; naval, 4,299. Overseas:—Military, 7,413; naval, 1,159; total, 39,984.

The number of aircraft in service was:—

Home:—Military, 1,847, reserve machines, 474; naval, 109, reserve machines, 26. Overseas:—Military, 439, reserve machines, 131; total, 3,026.

There are in addition 3 dirigibles.

The Military Air Force in the Home County is organized in 3 divisions, with headquarters at Metz, Paris and Tours; 5 air brigades and 2 bombing brigades. These units comprise: 11 air regiments; 2 air bases; 2 balloon regiments; 1 independent group; 16 groups of air mechanics; 1 independent company of mechanics.

The Air Force Overseas is organized in 2 aviation regiments (Morocco, Levant); 4 independent groups (Algeria, Tunis); 3 squadrons (Indo-China, West Africa, Madagascar).

The budget of the Air Ministry for 1933-34 was 2,139,200,000 francs.

Production and Industry.

I. AGRICULTURE.

Of the total area of France, including Alsace and Lorraine (134,379,755 acres), 25,615,023 acres were under forests in 1930, 12,412,835 acres were returned as moor and uncultivated land, and 87,849,470 acres, of which 53,823,868 acres were arable, were returned as under crops, fallow and grass.

The following tables show the area under the leading crops and the production (1 metric ton = 2205 lbs.) for three years:—

Crop	Area (1,000 acres)			Produce (1,000 metric tons)
	1931	1932	1933	1931	1932	1933

The production of fruits (other than for cider making) and nuts for 1932, is given in metric tons, as follows (figures for 1931 in brackets):—Apples and pears 206,500 (212,300), plums 33,000 (37,600), peaches 43,100 (35,100), apricots 17,100 (8,000), nuts 40,700 (67,100), cherries 49,400 (64,700).

On December 31, 1932, the numbers of farm animals were: Horses,

2,900,500; mules, 185,450; asses, 227,910; cattle, 15,648,430; sheep and lambs, 9,762,160; pigs, 6,488,290; goats, 1,462,990.

Silk culture, with Government encouragement (primes), is carried on in 22 departments of France—most extensively in Gard, Drôme, Ardèche, Var and Vaucluse. Silk production for 4 years:—

Year	Number of producers	Quantities of eggs put into incubation	Total production	Total value of produce

The output of iron and steel products was as follows (in thousands of metric tons): pig iron, 1931, 8,250; 1932, 5,549; 1933, 6,328; crude steel, 1931, 7,812; 1932, 5,604; 1933, 6,519.

III. MANUFACTURES.

Sugar.—In 1931–32, there were 106 sugar works, employing 28,567 men, 1,019 women, and 298 children. The yield of sugar during 12 years (expressed in metric tons of refined sugar) was:—

Years	Tons	Years	Tons	Years	Tons	Years	Tons
1914–15	302,961	1923–24	446,773	1926–27	641,393	1929–30	825,333

Alcohol.—In 1906, 59,616 thousands of gallons of alcohol were produced; in 1927, 37,348; in 1928, 47,360; in 1929, 55,480; in 1930–31, 67,584; in 1931–32, 75,899; and in 1932–33, 92,765.

Cotton.—In 1931, there were 11,671,200 spindles, 199,700 looms and 285 textile printing machines used in the cotton industry which employed a total number of 236,250 operatives, and produced 217,000 tons of yarns and 1,119,000,000 metres of piece goods.

IV. FISHERIES.

For the French fisheries, including those of Algeria, the following are statistics for 1931 (the latest available):—Persons employed, 137,711; sailing-boats, 15,638; steamers, 565; motor boats, 8,787; value of products, 1,146,935,000 francs.

Commerce.

In French statistics General Trade includes all goods entering or leaving France, while Special Trade includes only imports for home use and exports of French origin.

The chief subdivisions of the special trade in thousands of francs and in tons were for two years :—

	Imports				Exports
	1932		1933		1932		1933

Internal Communications.

I. RIVERS, RAILWAYS, ETC.

In 1931, there were in France 49,809 miles of national roads, 3,477 miles of departmental roads, 338,205 miles of local roads, making a total of 391,491 miles.

In 1930, there were 6,088 miles of navigable waterways with a total traffic of 53,297,331 tons.

By a law of July 11, 1842, the construction of railways was left mainly to companies, superintended, and if necessary assisted, by the State; which now constructs lines which the companies work, and works on its own account one important State system. There are lines of local interest subvented by the State or by the departments. The concessions granted to the six great companies expire at various dates from 1950 to 1960, till when (by a Convention made on June 28, 1921), the State guarantees to them working expenses and the interest and redemption of capital and loans.

The length of principal lines open for traffic on January 1, 1932 was 26,113 miles, made up as follows: State, 5,673 miles; Nord, 2,378 miles; Est 3,115 miles; Paris-Orléans, 4,691 miles; Paris-Lyons-Mediterranean, 6,157 miles; Midi, 2,664 miles; Alsace-Lorraine, 1,435 miles. The total receipts for 1933 of all the seven companies was 11,367,702,000 francs; for 1932, 12,070,011,000 francs.

The electrification of the French railways is now a settled policy. On September 1, 1931, there was a total length of 1,043 miles electrified. The State railway has 60 miles (Paris suburbs); the Orléans railway 147 miles (Paris-Vierzon 127 miles); the P.L.M. 62 miles (Chambéry to the Modana section of the Culoz-Modana line), and the Midi about 754 miles.

The following table gives particulars of air traffic for 4 years:—

Years	Mileage flown (in thousands of miles)	Passengers carried	Freight (1,000 lbs.)	Mail (1,000 lbs.)
1929	5,602	25,269	3,532	314
1930	5,849	28,985	3,078	478
1931	5,945	34,238	3,895	504
1932	5,685	36,792	2,554	380

II. POSTS, TELEGRAPHS AND TELEPHONES.

From April 1, 1931, to March 31, 1932, the receipts on account of posts, telegraphs, and telephones amounted to 3,643 million francs; the expenditure to 3,828 million francs. The number of ordinary letters carried in 1931, was 1,674 millions, and of registered letters 75 millions.

The total length of the telegraphic lines in 1931, was 223,526 miles. In 1931, there were despatched 42,344,171 telegrams, of which 27,927,059 were internal and 6,562,407 international. In 1931, gross telegraph receipts were 275,219,000 francs.

In 1930, the telephone systems in France had 132,900 miles of line, and 3,958,400 miles of wire; number of subscribers (1931) 1,185,000; number of conversations 837,917,106.

Money and Credit.

The nominal value of the French money coined in France during the past years was :—

Year	Gold	Silver	Nickel and Bronze	Nickel and Aluminium	Total
	Francs	Francs	Francs	Francs	Francs
1914-1929	165,062,990	813,186,341	1,087,330,240	8,984,231	2,074,503,802
1930	—	869,861,630	10,900,444	—	380,763,074
1931	—	354,075,830	12,176,463	50,925,911	417,178,204
1932	—	402,876,670	12,178,303	102,073,372	517,128,345
1933	—	—	—	—	1,664,567,769

The ordinary savings-banks numbered 560 (with about 1,800 branch offices) on December 31, 1931; the number of depositors was 9,829,022, with deposits to the value of 30,282,252,670 francs, representing an average of francs 3,080·90 to each depositor.

The National savings-banks, on December 31, 1931, held deposits and interest amounting to 20,685,742,000 francs due to 9,381,586 depositors, representing an average of 2,205 francs per account.

The Bank of France, founded in 1800, and placed under State control in 1806, has the monopoly (since 1848) of issuing bank notes. The present privileges of the Bank were last renewed on December 20, 1918, for a further 25 years, i.e., until December 31, 1945. The capital of the Bank is fixed at 182,500,000 francs.

The situation of the Bank on February 9, 1934, was :—

	February 9, 1934
	1000 francs
Gold	74,882,707
Sight deposits abroad	14,040
Advances to the Public	8,003,675
Advances to the State	3,200,000
Notes in circulation	81,392,539
Current accounts and deposits	12,618,967

At the outbreak of war the maximum note issue of the Bank of France was 6,800 million francs; on August 5, 1914, it was raised to 12,000 million francs; the amount was increased on successive occasions. By the Monetary Law of June 24, 1928, the maximum limit on note issue was cancelled.

The following are the principal banks :—The Crédit Foncier de France, founded in 1852, which lends money on mortgage; the Crédit Lyonnais, founded in 1863; the Société Générale, founded in 1864; the Comptoir National d'Escompte de Paris; Banque de Paris et des Pays Bas; and the Banque Nationale de Crédit.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The Franc of 100 centimes was in normal pre-war conditions of the value of 9½*d.* or 25·225 francs to the pound sterling.

A new Monetary Law was introduced on June 24, 1928, stabilising the franc on a gold basis. According to this law, the franc, the French monetary unit, consists of 65½ milligrammes of gold, 900/1,000 fine. The Bank of France is bound to convert its notes into gold on demand, and to keep a reserve of gold bullion and coin equal to at least 35 per cent. of the combined total of the notes in circulation and of the credit current accounts. The Mint will strike gold coins of 100 francs, 900/1,000 fine, and these coins shall be unlimited legal tender. To replace the 5, 10 and 20 franc notes of the Bank of France, which will be withdrawn from circulation before December 31, 1932 (from which date they will cease to be legal tender), the Mint, on behalf of the State, will issue silver coins 880/1,000 fine, of a nominal value of 10 and 20 francs. The total issue of such coins must not exceed 3 milliard francs.

The weight of the 10-franc silver coins is fixed at 10 grammes and of the 20-franc piece at 20 grammes, with a margin of five-thousandths both as regards weight and fineness.

The metric system of weights and measures is in general use in France.

ANDORRA.

The independence of the valleys of Andorra was of Carolingian origin. Their political status was regulated by the Paréage of 1278, according to which they were placed under the joint suzerainty of the head of the French state and of the Spanish Bishop of Urgel. The country consists of gorges, narrow valleys and defiles, surrounded by high mountain peaks of the Eastern Pyrenees. Its maximum length is 17 miles, and its width 18 miles; it has an area of 191 square miles and a population of 5,231, scattered in 6 villages. The surface of the country is rough and irregular, with an altitude varying between 6,562 and 10,171 feet. Until July, 1933, it was governed by a council of twenty-four members elected for four years by the heads of families in each of the six parishes; half of the council was re-elected every two years. The council nominated a First Syndic (Syndic procureur des Vallées) to preside over its deliberations; in the First Syndic was vested the executive power. A Second Syndic was also nominated as deputy of the First Syndic. But on August 31, 1933, an election based on universal suffrage was held for a new Council of 34 members. The vote is given to all youths of 25, while those who have reached the age of 30 are eligible for office. The judicial power is exercised in civil matters in the first instance by 2 civil judges (Bayles) appointed by the Bishop and by France respectively. There is a Court of Appeal and also a Supreme Court of Andorra at Perpignan. This, and the Ecclesiastical Court of the Bishop, are the highest appeal courts. For criminal suits two magistrates (le Viguier de France and le Viguier Episcopal) preside over a criminal court at Andorra-la-Vieille. The valleys of Andorra pay an annual due of 960 francs to France and 460 pesetas to the Bishop. A permanent delegate, the Prefect of the Pyrénées Orientales, moreover, has charge of the interests of France and his department controls the public services established by France, such as education, posts and telegraphs. On August 29, 1933, the Bishop of Urgel was appointed Spanish diplomatic representative in Andorra. A good road runs from Urgel to Andorra, and from there to Encamp. Catalan is the language spoken. Education is in a backward state. In January, 1934, an army was established. French and Spanish currency are both in use.

Colonies and Dependencies.

The colonies and dependencies of France (including Algeria and Tunis) have an area which is given officially as about 11,049,711 sq. kilometres, or 4,265,188 square miles, with a population of 63,374,000. Algeria, however, is under the jurisdiction of the Ministry of the Interior, and Tunis and Morocco are attached to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. For Syria, Togo, and Cameroon France holds mandates under the League of Nations. The administration of the colonies is directed or controlled by the Ministry of the Colonies, which was organised as a separate department in 1894. Most of them enjoy some measure of self-government and have elective councils to assist the governor. The older colonies have also direct representation in the French legislature, Réunion, Martinique and Guadeloupe sending each a senator and two deputies, French India a senator and a deputy, Senegal, Guiana, and Cochín-China each a deputy, while most of the others are represented on the 'Conseil Supérieur des Colonies.' This council consists of the senators and deputies of colonies, delegates from other colonies, and officials and other persons appointed on account of their special knowledge or qualifications. Some only of the colonies have a revenue sufficient for the cost of administration. In 1931-32, France spent on the colonial service 714,362,472 francs.

The area and population of the colonial domain of France are as follows :

ASIA.

FRENCH INDIA.

The chief French possession in India is Pondicherry. It was founded by the French in 1674, taken by the Dutch in 1693, and restored in 1699. The English took it in 1761, restored it in 1765, re-took it in 1778, restored it a second time in 1785; re-took it a third time in 1793, and restored it in 1814.

As established by the treaties of 1814, and 1815, the French possessions in India consist of five separate colonies, which cover an aggregate of 50,803 hectares (about 196 square miles), and had on February 26, 1931, the following estimated populations:—

*Pondichéry . . . 43,499	Modéliarpeth . . . 14,846	Nédoukadou . . . 5,617
Oulgaret . . . 28,899	Ariancoupom . . . 20,636	Cotchéry . . . 6,605
Villépour . . . 23,489	*Karikal . . . 17,558	*Chandernagor . . . 27,262
Tiroubouvané . . . 20,963	Tirmoular . . . 12,558	*Mahé . . . 12,430
Bahour . . . 18,352	Grande Aldée . . . 8,817	*Yanaon . . . 5,249
Nettapacom . . . 12,871	Neravy . . . 7,259	Total . . . 286,410

In 1931, the population of the Provinces was as follows:—Pondichéry, 183,555; Karikal, 57,914; Chandernagor, 27,262; Mahé, 12,430; Yanaon, 5,249.

The colonies are divided into five dépendances (the chief towns of which are marked with an asterisk in the above table) and seventeen communes, having municipal institutions. There is also an elective general council. The Governor of the colonies resides at Pondichéry. The colonies are represented in the Parliament at Paris by one senator and one deputy. In the colonies the birth-rate in 1932, was 0.40 per cent. for Europeans and mixed, and 3.72 per cent. for Indians; and the death-rate 0.78 per cent. for Europeans and mixed, and 3.81 per cent. for Indians. There were in 1932, 62 primary schools and 5 colleges, all maintained by the Government, with 307 teachers and 12,099 pupils. Local revenue (budget, 1933) was 3,049,585 rupees and expenditure, 2,763,199 rupees. The principal crops are paddy, rice, manioc, ground-nuts. On December 31, 1932, there were 86,045 cattle, 34,830 sheep, and 31,012 goats. There are at Pondichéry 3 cotton mills, and at Chandernagor 1 jute mill; the cotton mills have, in all, 1,335 looms and 72,067 spindles, employing 8,245 persons. There are also at work a few oil presses for ground-nuts, and one ice factory. At the ports of Pondichéry, Karikal, Mahé, and Yanaon in 1932, the imports amounted to 85,637,000 francs, and the exports to 134,971,000 francs. At these four ports in 1932, 272 vessels entered and cleared. Railway open, 43 miles, Pondichéry to Villapuram, and Peralam to Karikal. The Banque de l'Indochine has a branch in Pondichéry.

FRENCH INDO-CHINA.

CENTRAL GOVERNMENT.

Governor-General.—René Robin (February 27, 1934).

Secretary General.—M. Graffenil (November 4, 1928).

Government, Area and Population.—French Indo-China, with an area of about 285,000 square miles and a population, in 1931, of 21,652,000, of whom 43,839 were European (including military forces), consists of 5 States: the Colony of Cochin-China, the Protectorates of Annam, Cambodia (including the territory around Battambang ceded by Siam in 1907) Tonking and Laos; and Kwang-Chau-Wan, leased from China. The whole country is under a Governor-General, assisted by a Secretary-General, and each of the States has at its head an official bearing the title of Resident-Superior, except in the case of Cochin-China, which, being a direct French Colony while the others are only Protectorates, has a Governor at its head. There is a Grand Council for Economic Affairs and a Government Council for the whole of Indo-China, a Colonial Council in Cochin-China, a Protectorate Council, and a Council for Economic Affairs for each of the Protectorate States.

Education.—Instruction is given in public and private schools. The system of education is like that of France, and instruction is given in elementary schools and in the three lycées at Hanoi, Saigon and Balat (Annam). For native children there were, in 1932, 5,030 elementary schools, with 319,792 pupils and 9,053 teachers, and 14 high schools (11 lycées for boys with 4,894 pupils, and 3 colleges for girls with 343 pupils). The Indo-Chinese University of Hanoi (organised in 1917) had 554 Indo-Chinese students in 1932, and a school of Medicine and Pharmacy (established in 1923) had 114 students.

Justice.—In Cochin-China justice is administered by French magistrates for both Europeans and natives, but in the Protectorates there are native tribunals for matters affecting natives, and French courts for matters affecting Europeans and Chinese. From the native tribunals there is an appeal to courts at Saigon and Hanoi. In these appeal courts European judges, in matters affecting natives, are assisted by Annamite mandarins.

Finance.—There is a common budget for the whole of Indo-China, and also a separate budget for each of the States. The Provinces have also their budget, as have the municipalities. The general budget is supported by receipts from customs, Government monopolies, indirect contributions, posts, telegraphs, and railways in all the countries of the union, and besides maintaining these, provides for military and judicial services, public works, and other matters relating to the whole of the union. For 1933 the revenue and expenditure of the general budget balanced at 78,457,490 piastres. The outstanding debt of Indo-China on January 1, 1931, amounted to 1,436,228,000 francs and 11,020,000 piastres.

Defence.—The military force consists of two divisions and an independent brigade. Effective strength on July 1, 1932, was 844 officers, and 22,166 other ranks (18,073 natives). The naval force on December 31 comprised 3 sloops, 3 gun-boats, 2 submarines, and 3 surveying vessels.

Production.—Indo-China is divided into three main economic areas:—(1) The territory tributary to Saigon (Cochin-China, Cambodia, Southern Laos, and Annam South of Cape Varella), which, apart from the fisheries on the Coast and the interior lakes, is almost entirely agricultural, being one of the great rice regions of the world. (2) The region tributary to Haiphong (Tonking and the three northern districts of Annam), which is devoted to agriculture, mining and manufacture. (3) Central Annam (the region between Porte d'Annam and Cape Varella), with Tourane as the principal port, which is mainly agricultural, but is not a great rice-growing district; its main exports are cinnamon, sugar and tea. The minerals of Indo-China are coal (output in 1931, 1,726,000 tons), phosphates (12,871 tons), zinc (18,725 tons), tin (1,688 tons), chrome (2,780 tons), graphite and lead.

Commerce.—In 1887, the French possessions in Indo-China, including Annam, Tonking, Cochin-China and Cambodia, were united into a Customs Union. In 1932, the total imports amounted to 970,000,000 francs, and exports to 1,620,600,000 francs. The chief export is rice, 961,206 tons in 1931, and 1,191,649 tons in 1932. Other exports are rubber, fish, coal, pepper, cattle and hides, corn, zinc and tin ore. The principal imports are cotton and silk tissues, metal goods, kerosene and motor cars.

In 1933, the imports into Great Britain from Indo-China amounted to 129,100*l.*, and the exports from Great Britain, 145,286*l.*; re-exports to Indo-China from U.K. were 1,357*l.*

Communications.—There are 5,252 miles of colonial routes and 10,222 miles of local roads (December 31, 1931).

The principal railways are from Saigon to Mytho (43½ miles); from Hanoi to Nacham (111 miles); from Hanoi to Tourane (497 miles); from Saigon to Khanh-Hoa (264 miles); from Haiphong to Yunanfou (534 miles); and from Tourcham to Dalat (38½ miles). Total length of line, two-thirds Government, 1,490 miles. There were 422 principal post offices and more than 700 rural post offices (1931).

In 1931 there were 6,443 kilometres of telephone lines in Indo-China, and 37,273 kilometres of wire. The number of calls made was 11,757,000, the number of subscribers 7,599. There is a radio-telephonic service to Europe from Saigon and from Phnom Penh. The length of telegraph line in 1931 was 19,000 kilometres; number of inland telegrams sent, 1,109,000.

Money and Banking.—According to a decree of May 31, 1930, the piastre was legally established on a gold basis, the rate of stabilisation being 10 francs = 1 piastre. The piastre will have a gold content of 855 milligrams (10·0308 grains) of fine gold and will be 900 fine.

The Bank of Indo-China has the monopoly of note issue in Indo-China. This privilege was renewed for a period of 25 years by the law of March, 1931. Its capital is 120,000,000 francs. Notes in circulation, October 31, 1932, 98,156,956 piastres.

British Consul-General at Saigon.—F. G. Gorton.

British Vice-Consul at Haiphong.—A. Mercadier.

STATES AND PROTECTORATES.

Cochin-China.

Cochin-China was ceded by the King of Annam to France in 1862. Its area is estimated at 26,476 square miles. The whole is divided into 21 provinces. The towns of Saigon, Cholon, Cantho, Bac-lieu and Ranhgia have been formed into municipalities and a new administrative division, named 'Région Saigon-Cholon' has been created. The Colonial Council contains 24 members (12 French, 12 native). The colony is represented in France by one deputy. The population consists mainly of Annamites, Chinese and foreigners. In 1932, the total population was put at 4,473,576, of whom 18,382 were French and 647 European foreigners (excluding the military forces, about 3,000 troops). Saigon had, in 1932, a population of 118,169, of whom 13,154 were French and 509 other Europeans. The town of Cholon has 122,818 inhabitants, of whom 880 are French and 28 other Europeans. There are about 1,513 schools, with 4,258 teachers, and 133,971 pupils.

Of the total area, 2,390,570 hectares (5,976,425 acres) are cultivated (1932). The chief culture is rice, of which the production in 1932 was 2,019,067 metric tons from 2,106,282 hectares. Other crops are maize, beans, sweet potatoes, earth-nuts, cotton, rubber, sugar-cane, tobacco, coffee, coco-nuts, betel-nuts, pepper, oranges, bananas, etc. The farm animals in 1932 comprised 11,961 horses, 439,981 buffaloes, 579,700 pigs, 5,090 sheep and goats.

River and coast fishing is actively carried on; the fishery products are valued at 1,500,000 francs yearly. There are 55 rice mills in Saigon and Cholon, turning out 3,705 tons of rice a day. In these towns are also 8 saw-mills, 6 soap factories, and a varnish factory. Commerce is mostly in the hands of Europeans and Chinese, but about 18,000 Annamites are small traders. The total exports in 1932 amounted to 812,024,000 francs, and imports to 553,281,000 francs. The chief exports in 1932 were rice (1,182,059 metric tons), dried and salted fish (22,504 metric tons), fat and fish oil (2,361 metric tons), pepper (3,134 metric tons), cotton (338 metric tons), copra (4,438 metric tons), rubber (14,580 metric tons). During 1932, 340 steamers of 804,762 tons and 2,039 sailing vessels of 108,147 tons entered at the port of Saigon. The vessels of the Messageries-Maritimes and of the Chargeurs-Réunis Companies visit Saigon regularly. There is also constant communication with Hong Kong and Singapore by British, Norwegian, Japanese and Chinese vessels. (For railways see Indo-China.)

At Saigon there are 10 banks or bank-agencies, but the two chief ones are the Franco-Chinese Bank and the Indo-China Bank.

In 1932, the local budget balanced at 15,550,000 piastres.

Annam.

French intervention in the affairs of Annam, which began as early as 1787, was terminated by a treaty, signed on June 6, 1884, and ratified at Hué on February 23, 1886, by which a French protectorate has been established over Annam. The King Bao-Dai succeeded to the throne on January 8, 1926. The King governs the country, assisted by a Council of Ministers, in accordance with the wishes of the French Government, represented by a Resident Supérieur. A Chamber of representatives of the people was established in 1926. The ports of Tourane and Qui-Nhon are opened to European commerce, and the customs revenue conceded to France; French troops occupy part of the citadel (called Mang-Ca) of Hué, the capital (population in 1931, 31,885). Province of Binh-Dinh had 557,126 inhabitants in 1931. Annamite functionaries, under the control of the French Government, administer all the internal affairs of Annam. The area of the protectorate is about 39,758 square miles, with a population in 1932, of 5,119,801. There were 2,854 Europeans, 591,705 Moïs, 9,878 Chinese, and 242 Japanese and Indians. The population is Annamite in the towns and along the coast, and consists of various tribes of Moïs in the hilly tracts. There were in 1933, 1,082 preparatory schools with 44,585 pupils; 126 elementary schools with 10,025 pupils; 60 secondary schools with 13,744 pupils; one higher secondary school for boys at Hué, with 554 pupils, one at Vinh with 137 pupils and one at Quinhon with 389 pupils; one higher secondary school for native girls at Đông-Khanh with 506 pupils, and one at Tanh-Hoá with 60 pupils; one professional school with 169 pupils; one normal school for boys, and one for girls, both at Hué. Local budget, 1933, balanced at 8,989,350 piastres. The Phanrang river has been utilised to irrigate about 10,000 acres, and similar works, on a smaller scale, have been carried out in Central Annam. Rice is the most important product. Others are cotton, maize, and other cereals, the areca nut, mulberry, cinnamon, tobacco, sugar, betel, manioc, bamboo; excellent timber abounds, also caoutchouc, cardamoms, coffee, dye, and medicinal plants. Raw silk is produced. There are about 804,000 head of cattle in Annam, and cattle rearing is of some importance. There are copper, zinc, and gold in the province of Quang-nam; the mines are worked by natives. An important seam of haematite iron is worked about 9 kilometres from Thanhhoa. At Nongson, near Tourane, coal mines are worked. In North, Central, and Southern Annam there are salt works. The chief imports are cotton-yarn, cottons, tea, petroleum, paper goods, and tobacco; chief exports, sugar, rice, cotton and silk tissues, cinnamon, tea, and paper. In 1932, 195 French ships of 947,072 tons, 33 Chinese of 31,439 tons, and 13 ships (25,024 tons) of other nationalities cleared the port of Tourane, the total tonnage being 1,003,535 tons. The number of native junks entering the port were 2,335, of a tonnage of 21,092.

Cambodia.

Cambodia is bounded on the south by Cochin-China, on the east by Annam, on the north by Laos and Siam, on the west by Siam, and on the south-west by the Gulf of Siam. The French Protectorate was established in 1863.

Area, 67,550 square miles; population according to the census of 1931 :

2,806,000, of whom 2,000 were Europeans (excluding the military forces), 176,000 Annamites, 148,000 Chinese, 2,475,000 Cambodians, Sino-Cambodians, Malaysians, and Laotians, and 5,000 of various races. The present King, Sisowathmonivong, succeeded his late father, Sisowath, on August 9, 1927, and was crowned on July 22, 1928. The country is divided into 14 provinces. The four chief towns are Phnôm-Penh (population 96,000), the capital of the territory, located at the crossing of Tonlé-Sap and Mékong rivers, Battambang, 180 miles further north-west, Kampot (92 miles from the capital), a seaport on the Gulf of Siam, but not accessible for sea-going vessels, and Kompong-Cham. The budget for 1933 balanced at 7,942,000 piastres, including a sum of 728,000 piastres allowed for the civil list of the king and princes. There were (1932) 410 French-native schools, besides one college and one professional school, and a school of Applied Arts. Total number of pupils in attendance was (1932) 26,000 Cambodian, Annamite and Chinese.

The soil is fertile, but only a part of it is under cultivation owing to shortage of labour. The chief product of Cambodia is rice which is exported by way of Cholon where the rice is milled, and Saigon where it is shipped. Amongst the other products are tobacco, kapok, cotton, pepper, maize, palm sugar, rubber and silk. Pepper is especially grown in the country of Kampot, the export in 1931 was 3,100 metric tons. Maize growing is extending; the production of maize is estimated at 70,000 tons, the whole of which is exported. Cattle breeding is a flourishing native industry, especially between Phnôm-Penh and Manila. Other native industries are: weaving of silk and cotton, pottery and making of rush mats. There is a cotton-ginning mill, a silk factory and rice-mills at Phnôm-Penh. Valuable forests cover an area of about 10,000,000 acres. Phosphate is the principal mineral, but not worked very extensively. The overflow of the Mekong river fills up the Great Lake, which occupies the middle of Western Cambodia. With the low-water season the lake slowly empties and leaves innumerable ponds on the ground it covered during the high-water season. These ponds are filled with an enormous quantity of fish suitable for salting and smoking. This is the principal native industry. Imports in 1931: 17,500,000 piastres; exports, 23,500,000 piastres. The imports comprise salt, beverages, textiles, chemicals, cigarettes, iron and opium; the exports comprise rice, salted fish, pepper, maize, cotton, tobacco, fish-oil, palm-sugar, sticklac, kapok, wood, resin, hides, and cattle. This last trade is carried between Phnôm-Penh and Manila.

Cambodia possesses two little sea-harbours, Kep and Réam, both on the Gulf of Siam and connected to Bangkok and Saigon by the steamers of the 'Siam Steam Navigation Company.' The Mékong and the Great Lake, with their affluents, give a total of 875 miles of waterways, of which about 370 are not navigable to launches during the low-water season. River-steamers easily reach Phnôm-Penh, which has good quays and embankments.

Cambodia possessed in 1930, 1,430 miles of good metalled roads and nearly 188 miles of unmetalled roads and 50 miles of roads in course of construction. The chief roads are from Saigon to the Siamese frontier, via Phnôm-Penh and Battambang, from Phnôm-Penh to the Gulf of Siam, and Mount Bokor (hill-station), from Saigon to Kratie, and from Phnôm-Penh to Angkor via Kompong-Thom. A railway between Phnôm-Penh and Battambang is in operation and will shortly be connected up with the Siamese railway system.

Of all the countries of the Far East, Cambodia is among the richest in ancient monuments. The ruins of Angkor are specially famous.

Tonking.

This territory, brought under France's protectorate in 1884, has an area of 40,530 square miles, and is divided into 23 provinces, and 4 military territories, with 10,885 villages and a population in 1933 of 8,503,870, of whom 10,365 were French (exclusive of military forces) and 357 other Europeans. The King of Annam was formerly represented in Tonking by a viceroy, but, in July, 1897, he consented to the suppression of the vicerealty and the creation of a French residency in its place. Chief town Hanoi, a fine and large modern town, with a population of 127,404 in 1933 (French, 5,004; other Europeans, 72; natives, 118,630; and Chinese, 3,698). This town on January 1, 1902, became the capital of Indo-China, instead of Saigon. In 1933, there were 13 native primary schools (6,139 pupils), 1 native normal college (106 students), 1 high primary school for French and native girls (184 pupils), 1 native college (670 students), 1 school of applied arts (130 students), 1 French primary school for girls (244 pupils), 2 French High Schools (582 pupils), and 1 French Lycée (1,000 pupils). The local budget for 1933 balanced at 11,788,171 piastres. The chief crop is rice (total production 1932, 1,797,264 tons). Other products are maize, arrow-root, sugar-cane, coffee, tea, various fruit trees, and tobacco. A large quantity of raw silk is produced annually, most of which is used in native weaving and the remainder exported. There are rich limestone quarries, calamine and tin mines, and also rich hard coal beds.

Imports in 1932, 363,266,000 francs; exports, 180,445,000 francs.

Chief imports are metal tools and machinery, yarn and tissues, beverages; chief exports, rice, maize, and animal products. The principal port is Haiphong, which is visited regularly by the steamers of three French lines.

The Laos territory, under French protectorate since 1893, has an area of 231,400 square kilometres, or 89,320 square miles; the population in 1932 was 974,875. The capital is Vientiane. In the country there is a protected state, Luang Prabang, which has a capital of the same name, the residence of the King, who is assisted in his government by a French Administrator. The soil is fertile, producing rice (average output about 350,000 tons annually), cotton, indigo, tobacco and fruits, and bearing teak forests, from which the logs are now floated down the Mekong to Saigon. Gold, tin, lead and precious stones are found, and concessions have been granted to several French mining companies. It can be entered by the Mekong, which is barred at Khone by rapids, and by two new roads from Vinh to Thakhek and from Quang Tri to Savannakhet. A new road following the Mekong connects Thakhek to Pakse, and thence to Saigon. A railway, four miles in length, has been constructed across Khone island, and by means of it several steam launches have been transported to the upper waters, where they now ply. Motor launches ply between Vientiane, Luang Prabang and Houei-Sai. A telegraph line connects Hué in Annam with the towns on the Mekong, and these with Saigon and Hanoi. The local budget for 1933 balanced at 3,744,100 piastres.

In 1900, the territory of Kwang Chau Wan on the coast of China, leased from China in 1898, and increased in 1899, by the addition of 2 islands in the bay, was placed under the authority of the Governor-General of Indo-China. The territory has been divided into 3 administrative circumscriptions, including 1 Municipality, Tchekham, a commercial centre, but the Chinese organisation is maintained. Fort-Bayard is the seat of the local Administration. Its area is about 190 square miles and its population 250,000. The imports are chiefly cotton yarns, petroleum, matches, refined sugar, cunao (for tinctorial purposes); the exports are straw sacks, swine, cattle, brown sugar, and ground-nuts. Imports in 1932, 10,279,250 piastres; exports, 6,870,871 piastres. The port is free. The territory is regularly visited by the vessels of French, Portuguese, Chinese and English companies; in 1932, 187 vessels of 159,992 tons entered. The local budget for 1933 balanced at 580,000 piastres.

MANDATED STATES IN ASIA: SYRIA AND LEBANON.

Syria and Lebanon have been recognised as independent States to be placed under a Mandatory Power. By decision of the Supreme Council of the Allied Powers at San Remo (April 25, 1920), France has been assigned the Mandate for Syria, which was confirmed by the League of Nations on July 24, 1922 (Declaration of London).

High Commissioner.—M. le Comte de Martel (took office October 12, 1933).

Area and Population.—The territory under the French Mandate is bounded by the Mediterranean on the west, by Palestine on the south, by Iraq on the east, and by Turkey on the north.

For details of the frontier between Syria and Iraq and Palestine, see the STATESMAN'S YEAR BOOK, 1928, p. 893. The frontier between Syria and Turkey (Nisibin-Jeziret ibn Omar), was settled by the Franco-Turkish agreement of June 22, 1929.

The country was originally organised into 5 territories (états), but since January 1, 1925, two of these, viz. Damascus and Aleppo, were united to form the single State, now the Republic of Syria (Sanjaks of Hama, Homs, Damascus, Hauran, Aleppo, Alexandretta and Deir ez Zor). The remaining territories are those of Latakia, formerly the Alawiyya (Sanjaks of Latakia and Tartus); of Lebanon (Sanjaks of North Lebanon, Mount Lebanon, South Lebanon and Bekaa); of Jebel Druze (south of Hauran). The autonomous Sanjak of Alexandretta, set up January 1, 1925, is part of the Syrian Republic.

THE SYRIAN REPUBLIC.—The Constitution of May 14, 1930, provides for a President, elected by the Legislature for 5 years; the Legislature itself, which consists of 69 members, is elected for 4 years. The first general election, which is in two degrees, was held in December, 1931, and January, 1932. The capital is Damascus. The present Head of the Syrian State is Mohamed Ali Bek el Abed, and the Prime Minister is Hakky Bek el Azm. There are four other Ministers in the Cabinet.

THE LEBANESE REPUBLIC, was proclaimed a State on September 1, 1920. It has the following frontiers:—North, the Nahr-el-Kebir; south, the frontier of Palestine; west, the coast; and east, the heights of Anti-Lebanon. Beirut is the seat of the Government. Habib Pasha es Saad took office as President of the Republic on January 28, 1934, for one year under a Provisional Constitution. There is a Secretary of State but no Cabinet Ministers.

THE GOVERNMENT OF LATAKIA was established under that name on May 14, 1930. Capital, Latakia. Governor.—M. E. Schoeffler.

THE GOVERNMENT OF JEBEL DRUZE has its seat at Es Suweidih. The Governor, Gen. Massiet, is assisted by a Cabinet of three Ministers.

The total area subject to the French Mandate may be estimated at 60,000 square miles. The total population of this area in 1929 was 2,831,622. The population of the 4 territories was as follows:—Syria, 1,696,638; Lebanon, 862,618 (of whom 342,388 were Christians and 292,247 Moslems); Latakia, 286,920; and Jebel Druze, 51,780. Arabic is the prevailing language, with many dialectical varieties. But there is a large influx of foreign elements, including Turks, Turkomans, Kurds, Circassians, Armenians, Persians, Jews, and a certain number of Europeans. The principal towns are Damascus, population 193,912; Aleppo, 177,313; Beirut, 134,655; Homs, 52,792; Hama, 39,960; Tripolis, 37,260; Antioch, 28,000; Latakia, 21,404; Alexandretta, 13,997; and Zahlah in Lebanon, 20,985. There are no statistics of births and deaths.

Religion and Education.—The population is composed mainly of Moslems, of whom there are 1,514,755. The majority are Sunni Moslems (1,075,816). The Druzes number about 86,125, the Alawiyya 227,930, and Ismailians 14,882. There have been Christians in Syria since the earliest times. They number at present 505,419, of whom 186,676 are Maronites, 66,762 Greek Catholics (Uniat), 7,305 Armenian Catholics (Uniat), 32,859 Armenians, 8,887 Protestants, 28,885 Melkites, and 151,826 belong to the Orthodox Church. There are also 16,526 Jews. There are now one Orthodox, one Gregorian Armenian, one Latin, and three Uniat Patriarchs (Melkite, Syrian, and Maronite) of Antioch, none of whom reside in that city. Apart from this there are in French Mandated territory 9 Orthodox Dioceses, one Armenian Uniat Archbishop, six Melkite (Uniat) Archbishops and six Bishops, three Syrian (Uniat) Archbishops, five Maronite (Uniat) Archbishops and four Bishops, one Latin Apostolic Delegate, a Grand Mufti and a Grand Rabbi.

There were in the whole of the mandated territory in 1932, 685 public schools with 70,035 pupils, 1,080 private schools with 81,909 pupils, and 614 foreign schools with 55,720 pupils.

At Damascus there is a Syrian university (founded June 15, 1923), with (in 1932) a faculty of medicine (165 students), a faculty of law (218 students), pharmacy (19 students), dentistry (24 students), and arts (46 students). There is also an Arab Academy, founded in 1913, and amply endowed, and also agricultural colleges at Sclémié and Bekaa.

There are also two universities in Beirut, one French and one American. The American university contains a faculty of medicine and several schools, with a total of 413 students in 1932. The French university (founded in 1875) has a faculty of medicine with 200 students, and several schools, total students, 634 in 1932.

Finance.—The revenue and expenditure for four years were as follows in Syrian pounds (Syrian pound = Francs 20):—

	1930	1931	1932	1933 ¹
	Syrian Pounds	Syrian Pounds	Syrian Pounds	Syrian Pounds
Revenue . . .	18,604,923	19,413,936	13,505,904	15,453,882

¹ Estimates.

The Budget for 1932 and estimates for 1933 were distributed as follows in Syrian pounds, paper:—

	1932 Receipts	1932 Expenditure	1933 Receipts and Expenditure estimates
	Syrian Pounds	Syrian Pounds	Syrian Pounds
Syrian Republic	7,043,569	6,924,437	8,464,587
Alexandretta Sanjak	1,088,215	895,942	900,600
Lebanon	4,029,374	4,200,554	4,613,500
Latakia	987,689	888,900	1,271,000
Jebel Druze	357,057	359,933	304,195
Total	13,505,904	13,249,766	15,458,882

Defence.—A French army is in occupation of the whole country. On January 1, 1933, the effective strength was 306 officers (126 French) and 13,782 other ranks (292 French).

Production and Industry.—Syria is essentially an agricultural country, the bulk of the population being engaged in the cultivation of the soil and in cattle breeding; the total area cultivated in 1931–32 was 1,300,000 acres. The principal products in 1931–32 were: wheat, 283,544 metric tons; barley, 204,969 metric tons; maize, 34,420 metric tons; sorghum, 39,780 metric tons; oats, 13,520 metric tons; olives, 30,570 metric tons; silk cocoons, 1,762 metric tons (2,760 in 1931); and cotton, 876 metric tons. Sesamé, from which oil is produced, is one of the most valued crops, but is very uncertain. Chickpeas, lentils, beans, vetches, and lupins are largely cultivated, production of chickpeas in 1931–32 was 10,566 metric tons, and of lentils, 42,703 metric tons. About 9,304 acres in Latakia, Aleppo, Beirut, and Damascus produced 2,115 metric tons of tobacco in 1931–32. The cultivation of cotton has been considerably extended during the last two years. The chief cotton-growing centre is the Aleppo district. In 1931–32 the total area under cotton was 19,982 acres. Hemp and sugarcane are also cultivated. The most important fruit trees are the olive, vine, mulberry, lemon, banana, and orange. In 1931–32, there were 188,782 acres under olive trees, against 183,242 in 1930–31. The yield of olive oil in 1931 was 160,000 metric quintals. There were also produced 20,800 metric tons of apricots, 72,000 metric tons of grapes, 29,892 metric tons of figs, and 33,150 metric tons of oranges, lemons, and mandarines. The white mulberry is largely cultivated in Northern Syria for feeding silk-worms. There were 2,320,000 sheep, 1,070,000 goats, 182,000 camels, 260,000 oxen, and 80,000 asses on December 31, 1932.

Syria is poorer in minerals than in other resources, but this may be due to insufficient exploration. Northern Lebanon has been worked for iron in ancient and modern times. At Majerba the ore is rich, and the iron good. There is a comparatively rich mine of lignite in South Lebanon. There are indications of petroleum in various places. The work of laying of a pipeline to Tripoli was begun in 1932. There are indications of phosphates, lead, copper, antimony, nickel, chrome; gypsum is widely distributed. There is abundance of marble and good building stone.

The industries of Syria are on a very small scale. Flour, oil, soap, and silk thread are the most important. The chief centres of the silk industry are Beirut, Aleppo, Tripoli, and Latakia. There were 90 spinning factories in 1927. Wine and tobacco are also produced.

Commerce.—The imports and exports for five years (in thousands of Syrian pounds, paper) were as follows:—

	1928	1929	1930	1931	1932
	1,000 Syrian pounds	1,000 Syrian pounds	1,000 Syrian pounds	1,000 Syrian pounds	1,000 Syrian pounds
Imports .	66,002	72,008	63,526	57,069	48,500
Exports .	26,741	34,237	30,616	20,892	17,125

The principal imports in 1932 were (in thousands of Syrian pounds paper):—textiles, 14,506; metal and metal work, 3,742; animal produce, 3,704; colonial produce, 5,493; chemicals and allied products, 1,970. Principal exports were:—animal produce, 1,887; fruit, vegetables, etc., 2,899; textiles, 7,499.

The distribution of trade in 1932 was as follows (in thousands Syrian paper pounds):—Imports from France, 7,065; Great Britain, 5,247; United States, 3,083; Italy, 3,064; Turkey, 3,144; Japan, 3,240; Germany, 2,306; Persia, 4,571; Belgium, 2,798. Exports to Egypt, 811; France, 2,013; Palestine, 3,301; Iraq, 2,763; United States, 3,549; Great Britain, 1,020.

According to Board of Trade Returns the imports from Syria into Great Britain amounted to 214,277*l.* in 1932, and 130,101*l.* in 1933, while the exports to Syria amounted to 882,112*l.* in 1932, and 923,813*l.* in 1933. Re-exports to Syria from U.K. were 15,828*l.* in 1932, and 29,208*l.* in 1933.

Communications.—Most of the ports of Syria are visited regularly by the steamers of various shipping companies. In 1932, 1,534 vessels of 3,595,584 tons entered the ports of Lebanon and Syria. Beirut was the principal port of call.

In 1932, the number of postal packets handled was 24,071,300, of which 7,198,700 were on the inland service, and 16,872,600 on the international service. In 1932, there were 3,971 miles of telephone line, 51 telephone stations, 3,108 subscribers, and 645,622 conversations.

In 1927, there were 2,240 miles of macadam roads and 2,754 miles of dirt and gravel roads. Syria is comparatively well provided with railways, and new lines and branches are proposed. The following railways are open:—standard gauge from Rayak to Aleppo and Rajn (Turkish frontier) 260 miles; Homs to Tripolis, 64 miles; narrow gauge Beirut to Damascus, 93 miles; Beirut to Mameltein, 11 miles; Damascus to El Hammé, 120 miles. Three companies operate passenger routes across the Syrian Desert between Beirut and Baghdad. An air mail service between Beirut and Marseilles has been in operation since June, 1929.

Currency.—The official currency as from May 1, 1920, is the Syrian Bank Note, issued by the Bank of Syria, under French Treasury control. The monetary unit is the Syrian pound, divided into 100 piastres (1 piastre = 20 centimes), which are exchangeable in Paris at the fixed rate of 20 francs to the pound. On February 28, 1933, the notes in circulation amounted to 11,350,000*l.* (Syrian). In some parts of the country the Turkish pre-war mejidihs are still current.

There is a Consul-General at Beirut (Mr. G. T. Harvard), and Consuls at Aleppo and Damascus.

Government.

The government and administration of Algeria are centralised at Algiers under the authority of the Governor-General, who represents the Government of the Republic throughout Algerian territory. With the exception of the non-Mussulman services of Justice, Public Instruction, Worship, and the Treasury, which are under the appropriate ministries in Paris, all the services are under his direction. He has to prepare a special budget for Algeria, he grants concessions for works, and he contracts loans in the name of the Colony.

The budget of Algeria which, since 1901, has been entirely distinct from that of France, comprises under revenue the imposts of every sort which are collected within the Colony and under expenditure the whole of the civil disbursements. The expenditure on War and Marine is still at the cost of the mother country. The budget, prepared by the Governor under the control of the Minister of the Interior, is discussed and voted by the Financial Delegations and the Superior Council. These Delegations were instituted in 1898 to enable the body of tax-payers to state their views on questions of imposts by means of elected delegates. There are three Delegations representing respectively the French colonists, the French tax-payers other than colonists, and the Mussulman natives. The Superior Council is composed of elected members and of high officials. Lastly, the Governor is assisted in the exercise of his functions by a purely consultative council of government.

The territories of the South, forming a separate colony, are each under a military command which directs all the administrative and civil services under the authority of the Governor. They have a budget distinct from that of Algeria. The natives are represented on the communal administration. By the law of February 4, 1919, the position of French citizens is accorded to natives, above the age of 25 and monogamous, who served in the war, who are proprietors or farmers, who can read or write or hold a French decoration.

The French Chambers alone have the right of legislating for Algeria, while such matters as do not come within the legislative power are regulated by decree of the President of the Republic. Each department sends one senator and, since 1928, three deputies to the National Assembly.

Governor-General.—M. Jules Carde, appointed October 3, 1930.

Area and Population.

The census of March 8, 1931, which is the last taken, showed a population (including the military forces) amounting to 6,553,451 (of whom 920,788 were Europeans, 5,632,663 natives), on an area of 847,500 sq. miles. The colony has been organised in 2 great divisions called respectively Northern (80,117 sq. miles) and Southern Algeria (767,435 sq. miles). Northern Algeria consists as formerly of Civil Territory and Territoire de Commandement, but the Civil Territory has been extended, while the Territoire de Commandement has been diminished and will before long be completely merged in the Civil Territory. Northern Algeria contains 17 arrondissements, 304 communes, and 78 mixed communes, in the Civil Territory. Southern Algeria consists of the 4 Territories of Ain-Sefra, Ghardaia, Touggourt and the Saharan Oases, organised under decree of August 14, 1905. These territories contain 13 communes, of which 7 are mixed and 6 native.

Population, including military forces, according to the revised figures of the census of March 8, 1931 :—

	Municipal Population			Population numbered separately			Grand Total
	European	Native	Total	European	Native	Total
Northern Territory	875,686	5,026,388	5,902,019	36,521	40,293	76,814	5,978,833

Grand Total . . .		6,553,451

In 1931, of the total European population of 920,788, the French numbered 762,852 and foreigners, 157,936.

The chief towns with population in 1931 were: Algiers, 257,122;

Oran, 163,743; Constantine, 104,902; Bona, 68,778; Sidibel-Abbes, 45,902; Philippeville, 47,750; Mascara, 31,449; Tlemçen, 46,060; Sétif, 37,253; Mostaganem, 28,357; Blida, 39,371; Bougie, 25,261; Tizi Ouzon, 38,291.

Religion and Education.

The native population is entirely Mussulman, the Jews being now regarded as French citizens. The Roman Catholic Church has an archbishop and 2 bishops, with some 400 officiating clergymen. There are 13 Protestant pastors and 6 Jewish rabbis sharing in Government grants.

At Algiers (city) there is a University, attended (July 31, 1931) by 2,090 students (871 for Law, 549 Medicine and Pharmacy, 319 Science, 351 Arts). There are also special schools for commerce, the fine arts, hydrography, and agriculture. In 1931 there were also 586 Mussulman schools with 52,088 pupils (560 for boys, 51,528 pupils; and 26 for girls, 3,830 pupils). There are higher Mussulman schools (médersas) at Algiers, Tlemçen, and Constantine, with 151 students (November 5, 1931) (128 Arabs, 23 Kabyles). There were, on November 5, 1931, 11 establishments for secondary education for boys with 7,678 pupils (6,683 French, 832 natives and 163 foreigners) and 6 establishments for girls with 3,240 pupils (3,075 French, 89 natives and 76 foreigners). In 1931 there were 1,187 primary and infant schools, public and private, with 129,198 pupils (66,630 boys and 62,568 girls). There were (1931) two normal schools for men teachers with 34 professors and 273 students, and three normal schools for women teachers with 29 professors and 243 students.

Justice and Crime.

There is an Appeal Court at Algiers, and in the arrondissements are 17 courts of first instance. There are also commercial courts and justices of the peace with extensive powers. Criminal justice is organised as in France for Europeans. Since 1902, there have been criminal courts and special repressive tribunals for trying natives accused of crime.

Mussulman justice is administered to natives by Justices of the Peace and Cadis in the first instance with an appeal to French courts.

The average prison population in 1931 was 7,091, compared with 6,766 in 1930.

Finance.

Europeans and natives pay the same direct and indirect taxes. The departments of War and Marine are excluded from the estimates, but the proceeds of the Military tax, the Government monopolies, and some other revenues are paid to France. The total expenditure (including military and extraordinary disbursements) exceeds the Algerian revenue by about 75,000,000 francs.

The budget estimates (including extraordinary budget) for five years were as follows (in francs):—

The extraordinary budget for 1932 showed revenues of 821,790,165 francs, and expenditure of 821,790,165 francs.

There is a separate Post Office budget which is estimated to balance revenue and expenditure at 135,981,963 francs for 1932–33.

Defence.

The military force in Algeria and Tunis comprises the XIXth Army Corps, which includes 3 divisions. French residents are under the same obligation to serve as in France; natives are under the obligation to serve 2 years with the colours and can be called up as reservists in case of mobilisation. The troops may be stationed in North Africa or employed on Colonial expeditions, but they belong to the 'Metropolitan,' not to the Colonial Army. There are 6 regiments of zouaves, each of 3 battalions, of 5 companies; 6 regiments of cavalry (Chasseurs d'Afrique), of several squadrons; 3 groups of field and 1 of heavy artillery; 1 battalion of engineers; and 1 regiment of the Flying Corps. These are all European troops, and in the case of the artillery and engineers their recruiting depôts are in France. The Foreign Legion of 4 regiments of a varying number of battalions is recruited from foreigners of any nationality, but officered chiefly by Frenchmen; the headquarters of the regiments are in Sidi-Bel-Abbes, in Oran, but battalions are sent to any colony where they may be required. The Natives are 12 regiments of Algerian Tirailleurs each of 3 battalions, and 6 regiments of Spahis (Arab cavalry) each of several squadrons. The officers and a proportion of the non-commissioned officers of the native regiments are French. In 1933, the strength of the garrison of Algeria and of Tunis was 3,034 officers and 73,234 men. The air force comprises 2,077 all ranks organised in 4 groups.

Agriculture and Industry.

There exists in Algeria a small area of highly fertile plains and valleys in the neighbourhood of the coast, mainly owned by Europeans, which is cultivated scientifically, and where profitable returns are obtained from vineyards, cereals, &c., but the greater part of Algeria is of limited value for agricultural purposes. The northern portion is mountainous and generally better adapted to grazing and forestry than agriculture, and a large portion of the native population is quite poor. In spite of the many excellent roads built by the Government, a considerable area of the mountainous region is without adequate means of communication and is accessible only with difficulty.

The soil is, under various systems, held by proprietors, by farmers, and by métayers or khammés. Most of the State lands have been appropriated to colonists. The area under cultivation is 24,474,350 acres, of which 5,793,797 acres are owned by European farmers and the balance by native farmers. The chief crops in 1931 were wheat, 3,613,459 acres with a yield of 695,058 metric tons; barley 3,127,630 acres with a yield of 589,063 metric tons; and oats, 557,242 acres with a yield of 119,198 metric tons; maize, potatoes, artichokes, beans, peas and tomatoes. Flax, silk, and tobacco (the cultivation of the latter being most remunerative) are also produced. In 1931 there were 15,859 tobacco planters, the area under cultivation was 56,676 acres, and the yield 18,077 metric tons. Sericulture is in an experimental stage and subsidised by the government. There were 326 growers in 1926, 186 in 1927, and 104 in 1929. In 1929, 6,142 pounds of cocoons were produced as against 16,160 in 1928.

In 1932, the yield of wine was 402,927,624 gallons from an area of 869,321 acres compared with 348,846,718 gallons from 760,605 acres in 1931. Date, banana, pomegranate, almond, fig, and many other fruits grow abundantly. The production of olive oil amounted to 5,499,250 gallons. The area under cotton in 1931 was 12,355 acres. Yield in 1931 was 1,500 metric tons of fibre. State forests (1931), 5,418,164 acres, and, for the most part, belong to the State and communes. The greater part is mere brushwood, but on 1,111,980 acres are cork-oak trees, 1,691,950 acres Aleppo pine, 1,627,730 acres evergreen oak, and 97,812 acres cedar. The dwarf-palm and alfa are worked on the plains. Timber is cut for firewood, also for industrial purposes, for railway sleepers, telegraph poles, &c., and for bark for tanning. Considerable portions of the forest area are also leased for tillage, or for pasturage for cattle, sheep, or pigs. The forest revenue in 1930 was 16,745,721 francs.

On December 31, 1933, there were in Algeria 188,000 horses, 175,000 mules, 332,000 asses, 896,000 cattle, 5,262,000 sheep, 2,654,000 goats, 66,000 pigs, and 169,000 camels. The wool-clip in 1931 was 20,000 metric tons.

There are extensive fisheries for sardines, allaches, anchovies, sprats, tunny-fish, &c., and also shell-fish. In 1931, 1,088 boats of 4,717 metric tons, and 4,128 persons were employed in fishing, and the quantity of fish taken amounted to 20,275,221 kilos. The yield of coral and sponges, 247 kilos.

Algeria possesses deposits of iron, zinc, lead, mercury, copper and antimony. The mineral output in 1931 was as follows: iron ore, 895,000 metric tons; lead, 9,852 metric tons; zinc, 7,727 metric tons; phosphate rock, 459,077 metric tons. Kaolin, marble and onyx, salt, coal, and antimony are also found.

Commerce.

The foreign trade of Algiers in recent years has been as follows (in 1,000 francs):—

—	Imports	Exports	—	Imports	Exports
	1,000 francs	1,000 francs		1,000 francs	1,000 francs
1927	4,404,544	3,522,018	1930	5,711,000	4,272,000

Shipping and Communications.

In 1931, 4,859 ships of 8,055,111 tons entered the ports of Algeria, discharging 4,836,936 tons of merchandise, and ships of 7,605,959 tons cleared after loading 5,170,459 tons of merchandise.

On January 1, 1931, the mercantile marine of Algeria consisted of 14 vessels of 32,232 tons (overseas trade); 160 coasting vessels of 43,248 tons; and 512 harbour craft of 21,231 tons.

There were 28 national roads in 1932, with a length of 4,037 miles, 41 miles of Departmental roads, 7,592 miles of main roads and 19,740 miles of by-roads.

On January 1, 1931, there were 3,023 miles of railway open for traffic (exclusive of lines on Tunisian territory), the railway receipts (1933) amounting to 250,877,000 francs. There is a regular postal air service between Algiers and Marseilles (800 kilometres).

The postal receipts in 1931-32 were 38,178,001 francs, and there were 749 post offices. The telegraphic receipts were 16,333,695 francs, and those from telephones 28,773,402 francs.

There were on January 1, 1932, 30,041 telephone subscribers, 896 public telephone offices, and 23,806 miles of inter-urban line.

Postal cheque accounts were opened at Algiers on February 1, 1921, and on December 31, 1931, there were 16,049 accounts with a total balance of 137,126,434 francs.

Banking, Money, Weights, and Measures.

The Bank of Algeria is a bank of issue, with a capital of 20,000,000 francs. By the law of April 9, 1932, its note circulation was limited (as a temporary measure) to 3,000 million francs. Several co-operative agricultural banks, assisted by Government funds, are in operation. Barclay's Bank (Overseas), Ltd., have branches at Algiers and Oran.

The money, weights, and measures of France only are used.

TUNIS.

(AFRIKIYA ; TUNISIE.)

Government.—Sidi Ahmed Bey, born 1862, succeeded his cousin, Sidi Mohamed el Habib Bey, July 10, 1929.

The reigning family of Tunis, occupants of the throne since 1705, descend from Hussein ben Ali, commonly believed to be a native of the Isle of Crete, who made himself master of the country, acknowledging, however, the suzerainty of the Sultan of Turkey.

After the French invasion of the country in the spring of 1881, the treaty of Kasr-es-Said (May 12, 1881), confirmed by convention signed June 8, 1883, placed Tunis under the protectorate of France. The government is carried on under the direction of the French Foreign Office, which has a special department for Tunisian affairs, under the control of a French Minister Resident-General, who is also Minister of Foreign Affairs, and a ministry of 11 heads of departments, 8 of the ministers being French and 3 Tunisian. The country is divided into 19 districts (contrôles civils), and 6 military circles; the district governors (contrôleurs) are French; the subordinate officials (Caids, Kahias and Sheiks) are Native. French tribunals administer justice between subjects of European powers, and also between them and natives; there are Native courts for cases between natives (tribunals at Ouzara and Charaâ). In 1914, the Tunisian penal law was codified. French administration in Tunis has been confirmed by conventions with all the European Powers regulating the status and the conditions of trade of their respective citizens within the Regency.

French Resident-General.—M. Peyrillon (appointed July 23, 1933).

Area and Population.—The present boundaries are: on the north and east the Mediterranean Sea, on the west the Algerian province of Constantine, and on the south the great desert of the Sahara and Libya. The area is about 48,300 English square miles, including that portion of the Sahara which is to the east of the Djerid, extending towards Gadamés.

According to the census held on March 22, 1931, the total European population was 195,293, composed of 91,427 French (exclusive of the army of occupation and of the navy), 91,178 Italians, 8,643 Maltese, 449 Spaniards, 463 Greeks, and 3,133 other foreigners. The total native population, according to the census held on March 22, 1931, was 2,215,399, of whom 2,159,151 were Arabs and Bedouins, and 56,242 Jews. Grand total was 2,410,692.

The capital, the city of Tunis, had, in 1931, a population of 202,405, of whom 89,801 were Moslems, and 25,399 Jews, besides 33,649 French, 46,457 Italians, 5,529 Maltese, and 1,570 other Europeans. By means of the channel, which was opened in 1893, Tunis is directly accessible to ocean-going vessels. Other towns are Bizerta with 23,206 inhabitants (7,971 Europeans); Sousse with 25,324; Sfax with 39,969; Kaisouan, the Holy City of the Moslems, with 21,532 natives exclusively; Ferryville with 6,123 (5,227 Europeans), and Tindja, 1,655 inhabitants.

The bulk of the population is Mohammedan under the Sheik-ul-Islam, and the revenue from the 'Habus' lands, like that from the 'Wakf' lands in Egypt, is applied to religious, educational, and charitable purposes. There are about 195,000 Roman Catholics, under the ministration of the Archbishop of Carthage, and about 125 other clergymen. The Greek Church (400), the French Protestants, and the English Church are also represented, and there are 80 English Protestant missionaries at work.

Education.—Within the Regency there are (1932) some 484 public schools, including 8 lycées and colleges, and 32 private schools (of which 6 Jewish schools are provided for by the Government). In the schools there are 86,554 pupils, of whom 57,107 are boys. Of the total number of pupils, 20,762 are French; 37,995 Mussulman; 9,131 Jews; 9,528 Italian; 1,104 Maltese and 8,034 others. In the Great Mosque at Tunis there is a Mohammedan university. In the city are 78 and in the interior 1,254 Mussulman primary schools, some of them assisted by Government funds. 24 Moslem apprenticeship-schools have been created during the last few years numbering 490 native pupils. Many private schools have recently sprung up at Tunis and Sfax. The abolition of congregational teaching decreed in France has been extended to the Regency as regards French children. The Italian Government and certain Italian societies still maintain Italian schools at Tunis and other large towns.

At the end of 1930, the Tunisian Public Debt amounted to 538,958,000 francs. The yearly charge for interest, together with sinking fund, 1,088,536*l*. In normal conditions the 1903 loan (1,000,000*l*.) will be extinguished in 1968 and the rest in 1988.

Defence.—The army of occupation consists of 25,000 men, including 1,145 officers, supported by native regiments (tirailleurs and spahis), and the Foreign Legion.

Production and Industry.—Tunis may be divided into five districts—the north, characterised by its mountainous formation, having large and fertile valleys (e.g., the valley of the Medjerdah, and the plains of Mornag, Mateur, and Beja); the north-east, with the peninsula of Cap Bon, the soil being specially suited for the cultivation of oranges, lemons, and citrus fruits; the Sahel, where olive trees abound; the centre, the region of high table lands and pastures; and the south, famous for its oases and gardens, where dates grow in profusion. The chief industry is agriculture, and large estates predominate. The area of the country is divided as follows:—7,446,980 acres of tillage land; 2,509,520 acres of cork and pine forest, 122,265 acres of vineyards (the production in 1932 was 37,620,000 gallons); and 11,238,500 acres of stockland.* The area of wheat in 1932 was 2,390,960 acres; the production was 475,000 tons; of barley 1,506,700 acres, and the production 340,000 tons; of oats 51,870 acres, and the production 23,000 tons. There were 16,997,229 olive trees; and the production was 60,500 tons of oil. In the south of Tunis date palms abound; there were 2,598,131 date palms, of which 1,241,601 produced 14,400 tons of dates. Other products are almonds, oranges, lemons, shaddocks, pistachios, alfa grass, henna, and cork. Considerable areas of agricultural land have been acquired either on lease or by purchase by immigrant.

In 1932, the farm animals were:—horses, 102,232; asses, 186,604; mules, 50,692; cattle, 542,878; sheep, 2,931,041; goats, 1,668,469; camels, 169,485; pigs, 23,814.

In 1932, 34 mines were worked; value of the mineral output in 1932, 110,000,000 francs. By far the greatest development has been in phosphates, the output of which is increasing yearly. Mineral output in 1932 (in metric tons):—lead ore, 11,020 (24,200 in 1931); iron ore, 209,000 (447,000); phosphate rock, 1,678,000 (2,143,000).

Native industries are the spinning and weaving of wool for garments, carpet weaving, leather embroidery, saddle making, the manufacture of slippers, pottery (in ancient style), and matting; tanning and silk weaving are declining.

The fisheries are principally in the hands of Italians and Tunisians. In 1932, 3,525 boats (7,397 tons) were engaged in this industry, with a total of 11,302 men. Sardines, anchovies, allaches, tunny (8,227 tons of fish) were caught.

Commerce.—The imports and exports for 4 years were as follows:—

	1929	1930	1931	1932
	Francs	Francs	Francs	Francs
Imports . . .	1,984,456,000	2,107,455,000	1,935,562,000	1,771,517,000

In the year 1932, there entered the ports of the Regency 7,382 vessels.

Good roads to the length of 3,524 miles have been constructed between 1882 and 1932.

Length of railways, 1,282 miles in 1933 (469 miles broad gauge and 813 miles narrow).

There were in 1932, 3,454 miles of telegraphs; 285 telegraph offices; messages received and transmitted 1,010,653. The telephone systems had 12,261 miles of subscribers' lines and 16,878 miles of inter-urban lines in 1932, the number of subscribers being 13,199. There were in 1932, 549 post offices; letters sent and received, 89,601,500; parcels received and despatched, 806,241. Operating receipts from the three services in 1932 were 23,726,369 francs, expenditure, 33,156,341 francs. There were 5,198 savings accounts in the Postal Savings Bank in 1932, deposits at the end of that year standing at 118,939,778 francs.

Money, Weights, and Measures.—The Banque d'Algérie has begun operations in the Regency and issues Tunisian bank notes.

The legal coinage since 1892 consists of pieces similar to the French, the pieces being coined in France.

The ounce = 31·487 grammes; the multiples of the ounce are the various denominations of the Rottolo, which contains from 16 to 42 ounces.

The Kaffis (of 16 whibas, each of 12 sahs) = 16 bushels.

The principal measure of length is the pik: the pik Arbi for linen = ·5392 yd.; the pik Turki for silk = ·7058 yd.; the pik Andoulsi for cloth = ·7094 yd.

French weights and measures have almost entirely taken the place of those of Tunis, but corn is still sold in kaffis and whibas.

British Consul-General at Tunis.—Sir Harold Eustace Satow.

There is a Consul at Bizerta, and Vice-Consuls at Sfax and Susa; and Consular Agents at Mehdiä, Monastir, Gabes, and Djerba.

FRENCH EQUATORIAL AFRICA (FRENCH CONGO).

The French Congo extends along the Atlantic coast between Cameroon and the territories of the Belgian Congo, with the exception of the Spanish territory on the coast from the Muni river on 1° N. lat. to Cameroon, and inland to the meridian of 11° 20' E. of Greenwich, and the Kabinda region, which is Portuguese. Inland it is bounded by the Congo and Ubanghi rivers and stretches northwards to the Bahr-el-Ghazal and Lake Chad. French acquisition began on the Gabun river in 1841; Libreville was founded in 1849; Cape Lopez was gained in 1862, and the French possessions extended along the coast for about 200 miles. Since then the territories have been increased by exploration and military occupation and their limits have been defined in a series of international conventions. The boundary between French Equatorial Africa and the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan was fixed by a protocol signed on February 28, 1924.

By decree of January 15, 1910, the French Congo was divided into three circumscriptions which form three colonies, viz.:—the Gabun Colony (capital Libreville), the Middle Congo Colony (capital Brazzaville), and the Ubangi-Shari Colony (capital Bangui). The Chad Territory, which was formerly a dependency of the Ubangi-Shari Colony, was, by decree issued on March 17, 1920, made a separate colony. It extends from Lake Chad across the Eastern Sudan and includes Wadai. Capital, Fort Lamy.

By decrees issued on January 15, 1910, the name of the French Congo was changed into French Equatorial Africa, which extends over the Gabun, the Middle Congo, the Ubangi-Shari and Chad Colonies.

The area is about 912,049 square miles, containing a population which at the 1931 census numbered 3,192,282; the Europeans numbered 3,300. The area and population of the separate colonies are shown as follows for 1931:—

Colony	Area in square miles	Men	Women	Boys	Ghls	Total
Gabun . . .	104,320	117,783	158,180	60,164	51,201	387,283
Middle Congo . . .	172,411	191,795	250,964	119,687	99,463	661,909
Ubangi-Shari . . .	236,368	341,431	383,248	186,195	179,210	1,090,084
Total . . .	912,049	996,567	1,135,988	553,586	506,191	3,192,282

The Colonies have each a Lieutenant-Governor; they all have financial and administrative autonomy, and each has an administrative council; the Lieutenant-Governors are under the Governor-General of French Equatorial Africa, having his headquarters at Brazzaville, who is assisted by a Secretary-General and a Council of Government. There are a general budget for the whole of French Equatorial Africa, and also separate budgets for the colonies. Local revenues accrue chiefly from customs duties; there are native poll taxes. The sale of alcohol to natives is restricted. The budgets showed the following figures :—

—	1931	1932	1933
General Budget—	Francs	Francs	Francs
French Equatorial Africa . . .	73,100,000	86,875,000	97,238,000
Local Budget—
Gabon	21,530,000	17,185,000	17,143,000
Middle Congo	23,500,000	23,600,000	21,313,000
Ubangi-Shari	17,000,000	17,800,000	16,000,000
Chad	16,500,000	17,048,200	18,971,000

In the colony there were in 1932, 67 native schools with 5,352 pupils, and 36 European teachers with 92 native assistants. There were also 2 schools for European children with 50 pupils and 2 teachers. Private schools in 1932 numbered 81 with 5,864 pupils. These schools are run by the religious missions.

The resources of French Equatorial Africa are quite undeveloped. There are about 300,000 square miles of tropical forest extending to the Gabon coast, containing many species of trees of industrial value. Wild rubber is the most important. Palm oil is produced to some extent. Coffee, cacao and cotton are also cultivated. In the Chad Colony large numbers of cattle, sheep, asses, camels, horses, and ostriches are raised, but there are no facilities for export. Ivory is an important article of export. Copper, zinc, and lead are found.

Imports and exports for 1931 and 1932 were as follows :—

Colony	Imports		Exports
	1931	1932	1931	1932
	Francs	Francs	Francs	Francs
Middle Congo	136,112,188	149,395,000	10,261,756	11,149,000
Gabon	46,065,757	37,884,000	84,713,735	82,881,000
Ubangi-Shari	25,237,000	23,516,000	15,955,000	22,390,000
Chad	17,511,592	11,498,000	8,221,879	3,869,000
Totals	224,926,537	222,273,000	119,152,370	120,280,000

There is considerable shipping at Port Gentil, Libreville and Pointe-Noire, the chief ports at which in 1929, 574 vessels of 1,821,739 tons entered and 572 vessels of 1,803,596 tons cleared. At Loango steamers must anchor about three miles off the coast. Whale fishing commenced in 1922.

On February 6, 1921, a new railway was commenced to connect Brazzaville with the Atlantic at Pointe-Noire, and was completed in 1930.

The Central African telegraph line connects Brazzaville with Pointe-Noire, the terminus of the French cable from Brest via Dakar and Libreville, and is in communication with the English Atlantic cable. Wireless telegraphy connects Brazzaville and the head of the Southern Railway in the Loango Region, a distance of 300 miles, and also Brazzaville and Leopoldville, and a radio service with France was inaugurated in 1927. In the Chad region there are several stations connecting Fort Lamy, Ati, Faya, and Maô. A line has been laid to connect Brazzaville with Bangui, and another to connect Bangui with Fort Lamy. The total length of telegraph line in operation is about 3,253 miles.

On the north-east of Lake Chad is the state of Kanem, which was completely subjected to France in 1903, and is now only a district of the Colony of Chad with Maô for its capital. Wadai, to the east of Kanem, with an area of about 170,000 square miles, and a semi-civilised population of about 1,000,000, accepted the French Protectorate in the summer of 1903. In 1911 a French force occupied Arada, some miles to the north of the capital, Abeshr, which is in communication with Benghazi, on the coast of Tripoli, by caravans, and in 1913 Ain-Galakka.

The principal banks are Banque de l'Afrique Occidentale, Banque Commerciale Africaine and Banque Belge d'Afrique.

MADAGASCAR.

Government.

The last native sovereign of Madagascar, Rânavalona III. (born 1861, died 1916), succeeded in 1883. The French having claimed a portion of the north-west coast as having been transferred to them by local chiefs, hostilities were carried on in 1882-84 against the Hovas, who refused to recognise the cession. In 1885 peace was made, Diégo Suarez having been surrendered to France. A French Resident-General was received at the capital, and the foreign relations of the country were claimed to be regulated by France. By the Anglo-French agreement of August 5, 1890, the protectorate of France over Madagascar was recognised by Great Britain; but the Native Government having refused to carry out the clauses of the treaty of 1885, a French expedition was despatched in May, 1895, to enforce the claims of France, and on October 1, the capital having been occupied, a treaty was signed whereby the Queen recognised and accepted the protectorate. By a unilateral convention made in January, 1896, Madagascar became a French possession, and by law promulgated August 6, 1896, the island and its dependencies were declared a French colony.

Governor-General.—Leon Cayla (appointed February 10, 1930).

A Consultative Council of Administration has been established at Antananarivo. The Colony is not represented in the French Parliament, but there is an Economic and Financial Delegation, composed of 24 French citizens and 24 natives. The former are elected by the Chambers of Commerce, Industry and Agriculture and the Municipal Councils. The native members are chosen by the votes of a body of representatives itself elected by the chiefs of the villages. This delegation meets once a year for examination of the budget proposals. Four Europeans and two native members of the Council of Administration also take part in the meetings of this assembly. Madagascar is divided into 8 Regions and 90 Districts. Natives are employed to a large extent in subordinate positions both in the civil and military administration. In all parts of the island the natives are allowed to choose chiefs who represent them in their relations with the Government.

Area and Population.

Madagascar is situated to the south-east coast of Africa, from which it is separated by the Mozambique Channel, the least distance between island and continent being 240 miles; its length is 980 miles; greatest breadth, 360 miles, and it has a coast line of over 3,000 miles. The area is estimated at 241,094 square miles. According to the last census (1931) the population (including that of the Mayotte and Comoro islands) was 3,701,770 (19.9 per sq. mile), of whom 3,665,234 were Malagasy, 23,076 were French and 13,460 foreigners, including Europeans and others.

The Malagasy races or tribes are very numerous, the more important being the Hova (910,000), the Betsileo (520,000), the Betsimisaraka (438,400), the Tanala (187,300), the Sakalava (214,000), and the Bara (182,000). Hindus, Chinese, Arabs, and other Asiatics carry on small retail trade. The most intelligent and enterprising tribe is the Hova or Merina, whose language, allied to the Malayan and Oceanic tongues, is understood over a large part of the island. The people are divided into a great many clans, who seldom inter-marry.

The slave trade was nominally abolished in 1877; slavery in Imerina and in all parts under French authority was abolished by proclamation on September 27, 1896. The system of forced labour in the public service was abolished on January 1, 1901, but the personal tax due from 16 to 60 years of age, formerly 5 francs, has been increased to 10, 15, in some provinces 20, and in Antananarivo to 30 francs. The populations of the chief towns were, in 1931, the capital, Antananarivo, in the centre of the island, 92,475 (6,700 Europeans and 300 Asiatics); Tamatave, 15,022; Fianarantsoa, 12,575; Antsirabe, 8,300; Majunga, 20,000; Diégo Suarez, 12,300; Tulear, 12,300; Mananjary, 11,000; Sainte-Marie, 7,922; Nosy-Bé, 12,000. The principal ports are Tamatave, on the east coast, Majunga on the north-west coast, Diégo-Suarez in the north, and Tulear in the south-west.

In 1896, Diégo-Suarez (a French colony from 1885), the island of Nosy-Bé (area 130 sq. miles) on the west coast, and the island of Ste. Marie on the east coast (area 64 sq. miles), and in 1914 the Comoro Islands, were placed under the authority of the Governor-General of Madagascar.

Religion, Education, Justice.

Up to 1895, a large portion of the Hova and of the other tribes in the central districts had been Christianised. The Christian population was estimated at 450,000 Protestants, and 150,000 Roman Catholics. There are many missionary societies at work, French (Catholic and Protestant), British (the London Missionary Society, the Friends' Mission, and the Anglican Mission); there is also a Norwegian Lutheran Mission and an American Mission. There are in the Colony 1,867 Roman Catholic churches, 3,493 Protestant (high and low), churches and 75 Mosques. The outlying tribes are still mostly heathen.

Education is compulsory from 8 to 14 years of age. On January 1, 1932, there were 2 lycées, more than 1,000 official schools for European and native children, with 112,000 pupils and 2,000 teachers, and 600 private schools, with 67,000 pupils and 1,144 teachers. Children are required to learn the French language. At Antananarivo there are a school of native medicine, an administrative and commercial school, a normal school, and a school of agriculture.

For the administration of French justice there are a Parquet consisting of a Procureur-Général and other officials, a court of appeal, 4 courts of first instance in the principal towns, and justice of peace courts at 17 centres. For native justice there are tribunals in the districts, and the natives have the right of appeal from lower to higher tribunals. There were also arbitration courts for settling labour disputes.

Finance.

The local revenue of Madagascar is derived chiefly from direct taxation (including a poll tax and taxes on land, cattle, and houses), from customs and other indirect taxes, from colonial lands, from posts and telegraphs, markets, and miscellaneous sources. The chief branches of expenditure are general administration, public works, the post office, and the public debt. The budget estimates for the calendar year 1931 balanced at 267,604,000 francs, those for 1932 at 253,643,000 francs, and those for 1933 at 249,931,000 francs.

The colony has since 1897 contracted debt to the amount of 4,200,000L (principally for public works) at the average yearly rate of interest of 3·02 per cent. The 1932 budget makes provision for debt revenue, 12,700,000 francs, and the 1933 budget for 17,791,000 francs.

Defence.

In peace time the troops in Madagascar (including the forces at Diégo-Suarez) consist of 1,580 Europeans, and 3,720 natives. The police and militia, consisting of 3,300 natives, are maintained on the local budget.

Production and Industry.

In 1896, on the completion of the French occupation of the Island, the Malagasy system of land tenure was modified on the model of the Torrens Act of Australia. Since then, a decree issued in 1926, specifies that the French State is presumed to be the owner of any land not under cultivation, exploited nor put under registration. And in 1929 there was issued a new regulation concerning the native property and providing reserved zones for the local communities. The principal crops are rice, sugar, coffee, manioc, cotton, cacao, vanilla, tobacco, butter beans, lima beans, cloves, mulberry trees, and rubber trees. The latest statistics give the following acreage:—rice, 1,392,425 acres; manioc, 682,925 acres; maize, 213,540 acres; sweet potatoes, 244,825 acres; haricot beans, 91,097 acres; potatoes, 77,207 acres; coffee, 113,537 acres; vanilla, 53,260 acres. Sericulture is encouraged. The forests contain many valuable woods, while caoutchouc, gum, resins, and plants for textile, tanning, dyeing, and medicinal purposes abound.

Cattle breeding and agriculture are the chief occupations of the natives. There were on December 31, 1931, 9,000,000 cattle in the island; 3,000 horses; 255,000 sheep; 70,000 goats; 2,000 ostriches, and 500,000 pigs.

Silk and cotton weaving are carried on, and the working of metal and the making of panama and other straw hats. The preparation of sugar, rice, soap, tapioca, &c., is being undertaken by Europeans, as well as the canning of meat. There are large meat-preserving factories at Bo-anamary (Majunga), Diégo-Suarez, Tamatave, Antananarivo and Antsirabe.

The value of the total output of minerals in 1932 was 10,690,000 francs, graphite (2,146 tons) accounting for 3,005,000 francs, gold (301 kilos) for 4,672,000 francs, and mica (129 tons) for 1,315,000 francs. The production of phosphates (700 tons) was valued at 1,400,000 francs, that of precious stones at 288,000 francs. Madagascar produces also industrial stones, corundum, radio-active minerals (betafite and euxenite) and zircon.

Commerce.

The trade of Madagascar has been as follows in five years:—

—	1928	1929	1930	1931	1932
Imports . . .	688,561,841	807,354,929	602,782,842	507,322,279	844,777,730

France supplies the bulk of the imports (260,809,555 francs in 1932), and that country also receives the bulk of the exports (262,858,711 francs in 1932).

According to Board of Trade returns, the imports from Madagascar into Great Britain in 1933 amounted to 294,834*l.*, and in 1932 to 293,777*l.*, and the exports from Great Britain amounted to 64,975*l.* in 1933 and 55,540*l.* in 1932. Re-exports to Madagascar from U.K. were 542*l.* in 1933, and 566*l.* in 1932.

Shipping and Communications.

Tamatave, the principal seaport of the island, is visited by the steamers of two French shipping companies, and the principal ports are connected with each other by coasting steamers plying regularly. In 1932, 7,487 vessels of 3,370,891 tons entered and 7,521 vessels of 3,366,063 tons cleared at the ports of Madagascar. Of the total vessels entering, 5,609 were French and 1,898 were British; and of those clearing, 5,601 were French and 1,441 British.

At the end of 1926, there were 1,800 miles of roads. Three railways are at present worked in Madagascar. The first is the through railway line between Antananarivo and Tamatave (229 miles) which was opened for traffic on March 9, 1913. The second is the railway between Antananarivo and Antsirabe (noted for its thermal springs), 98 miles south of Antananarivo, opened for traffic on October 15, 1923. The third is the branch line of the Tamatave railway, from Moramanga to the Antsihanaka Districts, towards the north of the island, which was opened for traffic in October, 1917, a distance of 103 miles. Total railway mileage (including narrow-gauge local lines) on December 31, 1927, 430 miles. A new line from Fianarantsoa to the east coast of the island (105 miles) is being constructed. There is also a motor-car service with a network of routes covering more than 800 miles.

There is postal communication throughout the island. There were in 1931, 185 ordinary post offices and 500 rural offices. The telegraph line has (1931) a length of 9,207 miles. There is cable communication to Mozambique, Mauritius, Réunion, and Aden. In 1931 there were 1,490 miles of urban and inter-urban telephone line, and eleven Government wireless telegraph stations. The important wireless station at Antananarivo, forming part of the French inter-colonial network of wireless stations, was opened towards the end of 1924.

Money and Banks.

By the decree of 22 December, 1925, a Bank of Issue was established—the Bank of Madagascar, with a capital of 200 million francs. The Comptoir National d'Escompte de Paris has agencies at Antananarivo, Tamatave, Diégo-Suarez, Mananjary, Majunga and Tuléar. The Crédit Foncier de Madagascar and La Banque de l'Océan Indien are also established in the island. On January 1, 1920, a Savings Bank was established.

The monetary system is the same as that of France, and all coins and notes which are legal tender in France are also legal tender in the Colony. The Bank of Madagascar issues notes which are legal Tender in the island and its dependencies.

MAYOTTE AND THE COMORO ISLANDS.

The archipelago of the Comoro Islands is formed by the islands of Mayotte, Anjouan, Grande Comore and Moheli. Before 1912, Anjouan, Moheli and Grande Comore were only under French protection; Mayotte alone being a colony. But by a law of July 25, 1912, and a decree of February 23, 1914, the whole archipelago has become a colony, attached to the general government of Madagascar, of which it forms a Region under the command of a Lieutenant-Governor.

In 1931, the combined population was 130,253, including 501 Europeans.

The island of Mayotte (140 square miles) had a population (1931) of 12,690. There is an increasing emigration to Zanzibar and Madagascar. The chief product was formerly sugar, but the cultivation of vanilla has now superseded that of the sugar-cane. There are now only two sugar works and two distilleries for rum. Besides vanilla and sugar, cacao, aloes and perfume plants (citronella, ylang-ylang, patchouli, &c.) are cultivated.

Grande Comore, Moheli, Anjouan, and a number of smaller islands, have an area of about 650 square miles and population in 1931 of 109,563. Grande Comore itself is about 40 miles long and 18 miles at its broadest points. Vanilla, cacao and perfume plants are successfully cultivated. Grande Comore has a fine forest and exports timber for building and for railway sleepers.

The principal imports are cotton fabrics, metals, and rice; the principal exports, hides, sugar, copra, sisal, and vanilla.

The other dependencies surrounding Madagascar are the islands: Europa, Juan de Nova, Barren, Bassas da India, Glorifenses. Then half-way between Cape of Good-Hope and Australia lie Amsterdam and St. Paul, also the archipelago of Kerguelen, whaling and fishing stations, and near the Antarctic pole Crozet islands and Terre Adelie. Amsterdam, St. Paul, Kerguelen, Crozet and Terre Adelie were made dependencies of Madagascar by decrees of March 26 and November 27, 1924.

Consular and other Representatives.

Consul at Antananarivo.—J. Helm Smith.

There is also a Vice-Consul at Majunga and at Tamatave.

RÉUNION.

Réunion (or Bourbon), about 420 miles east of Madagascar, has belonged to France since 1643. It is administered by a Governor assisted by a Privy Council, and an elective Council-General, and is represented in the French Parliament by a Senator and two Deputies. It has an area of 970 square miles and population (1931) of 197,933, of whom 194,272 were French; there were also 196 British Indians, 921 natives of Madagascar, 302 Africans, 2,242 Chinese. The chief towns are: St. Denis, with 26,807 inhabitants in 1931; St. Pierre, 22,048; St. Paul, 22,679; St. Louis, 17,237. The towns are under the French municipal law. Réunion has a lycée with (1932) 25 teachers and 560 pupils. Primary education is given at St. Denis in two schools, one for boys with 722 pupils and 14 teachers, and one for girls with 815 pupils and 20 teachers. There are besides three infant schools under State supervision, and three private establishments. In the rest of the island, primary education is given in 175 schools by 381 teachers, and in 31 private schools. The number of pupils attending school in the island is (1932) 23,579. There is a teachers' training course at the lycée attended by 45 pupils with 2 teachers. The chief port, Pointe-des-Galets, is connected by a coast railway of 80 miles with St. Benoît on the one hand, and St. Pierre on the other. In 1888 this railway was taken over by the State. The chief productions are sugar (62,000 acres), rum, manioc (12,000 acres), tapioca, vanilla, essences. The forests occupy about 150,000 acres. The production of spirits (expressed as 100 per cent. alcohol) in 1931 amounted to 764,209 litres (168,126 gallons) in industrial distilleries and 3,460,875 litres (761,392 gallons) in other works. The sugar production in 1931-32 was 42,921 metric tons. The chief imports are rice (valued at 22,051,798 francs in 1931), grain, cotton goods (11,205,673 francs in 1931), &c.; the chief exports are sugar (51,883 metric tons valued at 72,461,032 francs in 1931), and spirits (4,847,926 litres valued at 29,797,979 francs in 1931). Total value of imports in 1932, 160,700,000 francs. of exports, 121,900,000 francs. In 1931, 154 vessels entered and cleared at the ports of the island. There are about 80 miles of railway. The Tamatave-Réunion-Mauritius Telegraph Cable is open for traffic. The wireless station is also open for public traffic. During the year 1931, there were 164,741 telephone conversations and 78,871 telegraph communications. There are 61 post offices and 677 central telephone offices. The budget for 1931 showed 57,375,928 francs for receipts and expenditure. The currency of Réunion consists of local bank notes and token nickel coinage. It has nominally the same value as that of France. The Bank of Réunion has a capital of 6 million francs.

FRENCH SOMALILAND.

The colony of the Somali Coast lies between the Italian Colony of Eritrea and British Somaliland. On the north it is bounded by Cape Doumeirah, which separates it from the Italian possessions; on the south by a line drawn from the wells of Hadou to Gueldessa, which separates it from the British possessions; the inland boundary towards Abyssinia being, by convention of March 20, 1897, at a distance of 90 kilometres (about 56 miles) from the coast. It is administered by a Governor, assisted by an Administrative Council. The port of Obock was acquired for France in 1862, but it was not till 1884 that its active occupation began. In 1884,

922 FRANCE:—FRENCH WEST AFRICA AND THE SAHARA

Sagallo and Tajurah were ceded to France; in 1885, Ambado; in 1888 the territory was delimited by agreement with Great Britain; in 1888, a port was created at Djibouti, now the seat of government. The territory has an area of about 8,880 square miles, and the native population was estimated in 1931 at 68,965, made up as follows: Somali, 46,687; Arabs, 2,992; Danakils, 18,552; Jews, 78; Abyssinians, 157; Hindus, 499. Djibouti has (1931) 11,366 inhabitants, of whom 628 are European (356 French).

There are two schools for elementary education, one public and the other private. The local budget for 1931 balanced at 14,171,374 francs. The country has scarcely any industries, but with the coast fisheries and inland trade there is considerable traffic. The mineral wealth of the country is imperfectly known. Salt has been mined since 1912; in 1931, 22,000 metric tons were exported; other minerals supposed to exist are: gypsum, mica, amethyst, sulphur and petrol. The chief imports are cotton goods, butter, coal, sugar; the chief exports were coffee, ivory, hides and skins. The total imports in 1932 amounted to 152,388,000 francs, and the total exports to 163,228,000 francs. Much of the traffic with Abyssinia which formerly passed by Zailah now goes by railway from Djibouti to Addis Ababa (485 miles). In 1931 there entered at Djibouti 546 steam merchant vessels of 2,053,600 tons. Of these vessels, 226 were French, 178 English, 50 Italian, 2 Dutch, 10 Norwegian, 80 German, 3 Swedish, 1 American, and 1 Belgian.

FRENCH WEST AFRICA AND THE SAHARA.

French West Africa comprises the following colonies:—(1) Senegal, (2) French Guinea, (3) the Ivory Coast, (4) Dahomey, (5) French Sudan, (6) Mauritania, (7) Niger, and (8) Circumscription of Dakar and Dependencies.

The approximate area and population of French West Africa in 1932 are shown as follows:—

Colony	Area (in Square Miles)	Population 1932
		Total	Including Europeans	Including French
Senegal	74,112	1,587,944	6,639	4,226

By decree of September 5, 1932, which came into force on January 1, 1933, Upper Volta ceased to be a colony; its territory and population were distributed as follows: to Niger, 27,290 square miles and 268,239 inhabitants; to French Sudan, 20,226 square miles and 713,167 inhabitants; and to Ivory Coast, 59,212 square miles and 2,018,837 inhabitants.

The principal tribes are the Oulofs in Senegal (about 603,000, mostly Moslems); Bambaras and Mandingos in the Sudan (about 1,200,000); Fenhls Faubés in the Sudan, Upper Volta, Niger and Guinea (about 2,000,000); the Mossi in the Upper Volta (about 1,300,000), and the Kroumen on the Ivory Coast.

A treaty of October 19, 1906, determines the course of the Anglo-French boundary from the Gulf of Guinea to the Niger. The delineation of the boundary was completed in 1912, and approved by the two governments in 1914. The British government has leased to France for purposes of commerce two pieces of land, one on the right bank of the Niger between Lealaba and the confluence of the rivers Moussa and Niger, and the other on one of the mouths of the Niger, each to form one block of from 25 to 120 acres with a river frontage not exceeding 436 yards; the lease, at first, to be for 30 years. It is further stipulated that, within the boundaries indicated in the convention, British and French as regards persons and merchandise shall enjoy for 30 years the same treatment in all matters of river navigation, of commerce, and of tariff and fiscal treatment and taxes of all kinds.

Under the Anglo-French Convention of April 8, 1904, the river port of Yarbata on the Gambia (belonging to the British colony of Gambia), with all its landing places, was ceded to France, and, if this port should prove inaccessible to sea-going merchantmen, access to the river will be granted to France at an accessible point lower down. At the same time the Los Islands were ceded to France.

By a Convention between Great Britain and France the former recognised the right of France to all territory west of the Nile basin, which practically includes the whole of the Sahara (exclusive of the Libyan Desert), and the State of Wadai. The French Sahara may be roughly estimated at about 1½ million square miles.

Over the whole of French West Africa there is a Governor-General, who is assisted by a Council, the seat of the general government being at Dakar. The Colonies are each under a Lieutenant-Governor, the Circumscription of Dakar and Dependencies under a Governor of Colonies, all subject to the direction of the Governor-General, who has been relieved of the direct administration of any portion of his Government, and is free to devote the whole of his attention to directing and controlling the common interests of all the Colonies. To facilitate this object a General Budget has been created, drawn up by the Governor-General, which provides for all the services which are common to all the Colonies, particularly public works and social services, and the funds for which are provided by the customs and shipping dues of each of the Colonies, which have now only their internal revenues to depend upon for their local budgets, which have, however, been relieved of the cost of all the general services.

There were in 1931-32, 156 preparatory schools with 28,839 pupils (2,235 girls); 87 elementary schools with 11,730 pupils (992 girls); 90 urban schools with 5,298 pupils (1,134 girls); 8 higher primary schools with 1,002 pupils (7 girls); 10 technical schools with 672 pupils. There were besides 196 evening schools for adults with 8,420 pupils, 9 orphan schools with 185 boys and 175 girls, and 2 'medersas' or Mussulman schools with 209 pupils; also 2 Lycées with 510 pupils. There were 66 private schools with 4,752 boys and 3,067 girls. The expenditure on education was 25,000,000 francs.

The following are the financial estimates for 1933:—

	General Budget	Local Budgets	Supplementary Budgets	Total
	francs	francs	francs	francs
Revenue . . .	179,728,000	409,832,548	125,103,000	714,663,548
Expenditure . . .	179,728,000	409,832,548	125,103,000	714,663,548

924 FRANCE:—FRENCH WEST AFRICA AND THE SAHARA

The military forces in 1932-33 consisted of 16,653 men, of whom 3,259 were Europeans. In 1932-33 there were 7,000 recruits. The police force numbers 7,620.

The principal agricultural products are ground-nuts (194,101 tons exported in 1932), cocoa (25,792 tons in 1932), and cotton (1,376 tons in 1932).

The imports into French West Africa are mostly food substances, textiles, mechanical implements, and beverages; the exports from these colonies are chiefly fruits, oils and oil seeds, as well as rubber, cotton, cocoa and timber.

The following is a comparative table in thousand francs of the imports and exports during 1931 and 1932 for each of the colonies:—

Colonies	Imports		Exports
	1931	1932	1931	1932

¹ A good deal of the trade of these Colonies passes through the ports of the remaining Colonies of French West Africa and is included in local trade returns.

Of the imports, 388,209,645 francs in 1931 and 277,006,234 francs in 1932 were from France; of the exports, 399,357,133 francs in 1931 and 299,704,626 francs in 1932 went to France.

Total trade between Great Britain and French West Africa,¹ according to Board of Trade Returns for three years, was as follows:—

	1931	1932	1933
Imports from French West Africa into U.K. . .	519,315	212,998	91,181
Exports to French West Africa from U.K. . .	783,080	1,140,886	1,138,106
Re-exports to French West Africa from U.K. . .	52,272	51,065	52,282

In 1932, 9,581 vessels of 8,902,256 tons entered and cleared the ports of French West Africa.

There were (January 1, 1933) 2,148 miles of railway in operation and 98 miles under construction; 22,126 miles of telegraph. In 1933 there were 242 post offices, divided as follows:—Senegal, 47; French Sudan, 42; Guinea, 85; Ivory Coast, 48; Dahomey, 31; Mauritania, 15; and Niger, 24.

A savings bank was established by a decree of July 22, 1920, and began to function on October 1, 1922, with a single office at Dakar. There are now 4 branch offices at Saint-Louis, Conakry, Porto-Novo, and Niamey. On January 1, 1933, there were 15,382 depositors with 35,571,700 francs to their credit. The Banque de l'Afrique Occidentale Française has the exclusive right to issue notes. It has branches at Dakar, St. Louis, Rufisque, Bamako, Grand-Bassam, Porto Novo, Lome and Kaolack. Its capital is 35,000,000 francs. The Banque Commerciale Africaine is also an important banking institution in French West Africa. The use of French weights and measures, and money, is compulsory throughout French West Africa.

Governor-General of French West Africa.—M. J. Brévié. Appointed 1930.

The colony of Senegal was reorganised by the decree of December 4, 1920, and March 30, 1925. The capital is St. Louis, an old town founded in 1658 (population, 1932, 22,368, Europeans, 955). The other important towns are Dakar, a fortified naval station, and the seat of the Government General of French West Africa (population, 1932, 69,102, European, 7,639), Rufisque (population, 1932, 13,722, European, 165), Kaolack (13,177), Diourbel (15,187), Thiès (14,342). By a decree of December, 1924, Dakar and its suburbs were formed into a special territory called circonscription de Dakar et Dependances. Goree, a small island situated in front of Dakar (population, 998), was amalgamated with Dakar in April, 1929. There are three municipal communes governed by a mayor and corporation, St. Louis, Dakar and Rufisque.

The total area is 74,112 square miles, and the total population in 1932 was put at 1,587,944. The natives of the four towns and their descendants are French citizens, and other natives are French subjects.

The Colony is represented in the French Parliament by a deputy.

The Colony is administered by a Lieutenant-Governor, assisted by a Colonial Council of 40 members, 26 elected by French citizens and 14 by representatives of native chiefs of cantons and provinces. The Colony is divided into 13 'circles,' each under the rule of an administrator. The local budget for 1933 was 99,063,000 francs.

For primary education there were in 1933, 51 preparatory schools, 12 elementary schools and 13 regional schools. There were also 4 urban schools at St. Louis and 2 at Rufisque, which give the same instruction as the French primary schools, modified to suit local requirements. At Dakar there are grouped superior technical schools common to all the colonies, a normal school for teachers, a professional school, a commercial and administrative school, a school of medicine. At St. Louis a superior primary school has 200 pupils. Secondary education is provided at Dakar and at St. Louis (320 pupils in 1931). In 1931, 2,200,000 francs were provided for secondary education. There is a large hospital for natives at Dakar, and for Europeans and natives at St. Louis.

The soil is generally sandy. In 1931, there were 840,000 sheep and goats; 491,000 cattle; 70,000 asses; and 47,000 horses. The natives cultivate ground-nuts (production, 1931, 453,841 tons), millet, maize, and some rice; other products are castor beans, some coco-nuts, gum from Mauritania, and rubber from the Casamance river. Ground-nuts form the bulk of the exports. A salt industry is being developed. Native industries comprise weaving, pottery, brick-making and jewellery.

Imports in 1932, 330,299,000 francs; exports, 198,021,000 francs. The chief imports are cottons, foodstuffs, metal-work, and coal. The chief exports in 1932 were ground-nuts (191,468 tons), turtles, hides and skins, ground-nut oil (563 tons), gums (4,059 tons).

In 1933 the colony possessed 1,653 miles of telegraph and 1,625 miles of telephone lines. There are 2 French submarine cables, Brest-Dakar and Brest-Casablanca-Dakar. There are three other cables, one Spanish, one French West African, and the third belonging to a South American company.

One railway connects Dakar, Rufisque and St. Louis (165-miles) and Louga-Linguère; another one Thiès, Kayes and Bamako (French Sudan), 450 miles.

There is a river service on the Senegal from St. Louis to Podor (140 miles) open throughout the year. During the rainy season there is a service from Dakar to Kayes (484 miles). The Senegal river is closed to foreign flags. Dakar, the principal port, is in regular communication with French ports by the steamers of 6 French lines, and with Liverpool by a British line. La Banque de l'Afrique Occidentale (established June 29, 1901 and reorganised by a law of January 29, 1929), with a capital of 50,000,000 francs, and reserve funds 17,500,000 francs, was founded for the purpose of carrying on financial, industrial, or commercial operations; it has a branch at Dakar, and agencies at St. Louis, and Kaolack. La Banque Belge d'Afrique has an agency at Dakar. The Banque Commerciale Africaine has agencies at Dakar, Rufisque and Kaolack.

H. B. M.'s Consul-General at Dakar (for French Western Africa, including the Sudan).—R. C. F. Maugham.

French Guinea lies on the coast between Portuguese Guinea and the British colony of Sierra Leone, and extends inland so as to include the territories of Koubia, Siguiri, Kouroussa, Kankan, Kissidougou, Dabola, Beyla, Macenta, Boffa, Boké, Conakry, Forécariah, Kindia, Labé, Mamou, Pita, Gueckédou, and N'zérékoré. The area is about 89,436 square miles, and the population (1932) was 2,176,281, including 3,469 Europeans (1,429 French). A regular system of Government lay schools has recently been introduced all over French West Africa. The principal products are palm oil and nuts, rubber, millet, earth-nuts, rice, gum, bananas, pineapples, and coffee, which is grown in the Rio Nunez Fouta and military regions. There is an experimental garden at Camayenne near Conakry (the capital), where the culture of bananas, pineapples, rubber trees, and other plants is being tried. Fouta Djallon contains cattle in abundance. In 1932 there were 611,000 cattle, 140,650 sheep, 209,530 goats, 3,064 horses, and 153 asses. Gold is found in the river Tinkisso and in the Bouré and Siecke districts. Imports in 1932, 55,398,000 francs; exports, 56,654,000 francs. The principal exports in 1932 were rubber, 476,574 francs; cattle, 601,028 francs; ground-nuts, 814,616 francs; hides, 2,751,480 francs; bananas, 6,779,614 francs; and palm kernels, 6,521,221 francs; animal wax, 1,761,653 francs; palm oil, 118,918 francs. The principal imports in 1932 were cotton fabrics, 17,383,186 francs; metal goods, 5,880,867 francs; petrol, 2,047,697 francs; wines, 2,109,601 francs; salt, 490,614 francs. A network of roads is being made to connect with the railway station from Conakry to the Niger. The French Guinea railway which runs from Conakry on the coast to the Milo at Kankan (664 kilometres long) was opened in January, 1911, and in August, 1914, was continued to Kankan (412 miles from Conakry). The jetty 1,066 feet long, at Conakry has been completed. In the colony there were (1930) 2,836 miles of telegraph line. The Colony is connected by cable with France and Pernambuco; also with Freetown, Monrovia, and Grand Bassam. There is a wireless station at Conakry affording communication with Dakar (Senegal), Bamako (French Sudan) and Grand Bassam (Ivory Coast). Conakry is visited regularly by the steamers of four French companies and one English company. The budget of the colony provided for 1933 the sum of 50,558,727 francs.

The Ivory Coast lies between Liberia and the British Gold Coast Colony. It has common frontiers with French Guinea, and French Sudan. France asserted and obtained rights on the coast about 1842, but did not actively and continuously occupy the territory till 1882. On January 1, 1933, a portion of Upper Volta was added to the Ivory Coast. Area about 180,802 square miles; native population (1932 census), 3,842,944; Europeans, 2,802; total, 3,845,746. The seat of administration, shortly to be transferred to Abidjan, is Bingerville, the capital, formerly called Adjamé (population 1,358, European 111). There is a central school group at Bingerville, and a number of Government schools in the districts. The chief ports, in respect of population and commerce, are Abidjan-Port-Bouet (population 17,335), Grand-Bassam (population 7,276), Assinie, Grand Lahou (4,222), Sassandra, and Tabou. The natives cultivate maize, rice, plantains, pineapples, and many other fruits. They have also been taught to grow cocoa, the export of which increased from an average of 4 tons in 1904-1908 to 25,776 tons in 1932. The cultivation of cotton is being developed. Coco-nuts and rubber are collected. The mahogany forests inland are worked. Gold is found near Grand-Bassam in Baoulé, on the Comoé and Bia Rivers, and in Indenié. Manganese deposits have also been located. The imports in 1932 amounted to 88,928,249 francs, and the exports to 115,437,823 francs. Chief imports in 1932 were: tissues, 22,584,339 francs; petrol, 4,333,868 francs; wines, 4,285,620 francs; metal work. Chief exports were: palm kernels, 8,065,318 metric tons; palm oil, 3,378,234 metric tons; cacao, 25,776,263 metric tons; coffee, 1,327,525 metric tons; cabinet woods, 21,157 metric tons; cotton, 730,277 metric tons. Number of vessels entered in 1931, 1,026 of 3,818,084 tons, and cleared 1,028 vessels, of 3,323,295 tons. From Abidjan, on the north side of the lagoon, a railway has been constructed, running between Abidjan and Peni (470 miles). There is a large network of roads suitable for motor traffic, total length about 3,564 miles. At the end of 1930, there were 2,658 miles of telegraphic and 395 miles of telephonic lines. The telegraph connects the principal towns and extends to adjoining colonies. Telephonic communication exists between Bassam, Bingerville, Abidjan, Aboisso, Assinie, and Dabou. There are five wireless stations in the colony. The budget of the colony for 1934 has been fixed at 90,626,000 francs.

Dahomey stretches from the coast between Togoland on the west and the British possessions of Lagos and Nigeria on the east, and is bounded on the north-east by the river Niger, on the north-west by the colony of the Ivory Coast, and on the north by the colony of Niger. France obtained a footing on the coast in 1851, and gradually extended her power until in 1894 the whole kingdom of Dahomey was annexed. The colony has only about 70 miles of coast, but opens out northwards into a wide hinterland. The area is about 41,302 square miles, and the population, according to the latest census of 1932, 1,132,239, including 1,078 Europeans. The seat of government is Porto Novo (the chief business centre, with Kotonu the biggest port of the colony), which has about 26,724 inhabitants. Village, regional, and urban schools are instituted under the new West African educational system. In 1932, 2,889,539 francs were spent on education. The natives are of pure Negro stock, and belong to the Fon branch of the Ewe family. They are industrious agriculturists in the coast region, and grow maize, manioc, yams, and potatoes. In 1932, there were 2,500 horses; 550 asses; 93,000 cattle; 213,000 sheep; 251,000 goats; and 133,500 pigs. The forests contain oil palms, which have been profitably utilized. These furnish the chief exports—kernels and oil. Cotton cultivation has recently been successfully introduced in the central provinces; coffee cultivation has given good results in the south provinces. Imports in 1932, 62,985,000 francs; exports, 43,373,000 francs. The principal exports (1932), were palm kernels, 28,748,000 francs; palm oil, 9,097,000 francs, and cotton 1,571,000 francs. The principal imports in 1932 were, cotton goods, 16,224,000 francs; metal goods, 12,000,000 francs.

A metalled road, called the East Road (297 miles in length), for motor traffic runs from Savé to Malanville on the Niger. There is also a road from Dassa-Zoumé to Porga (281 miles), called the North-west Road. Other roads are: Kotonu—Dassa-Zoumé—Savé (198 miles), Kotonu to Anecho (68 miles), Abomey to Ketou (75 miles). There are now altogether more than 2,711 miles of carriage road, of which 871 miles are first-class roads. At Kotonu an iron pier has been erected, and from that port a railway runs into the interior to Chaoru or Tchaourou (227 miles), with a branch line to Whydah and Segborué on Lake Aheme (36 miles). The gauge is a metre. A metre gauge railway has also been constructed from Porto Novo to Pobé (50 miles) along the Lagos frontier. Another line has been constructed from Grand-Popo to Lokossa along the Togoland frontier (30 miles). A new railway linking the Capital with the port of Kotonu was opened to traffic on June 1, 1930 (22 miles). A telegraph line connects Kotonu with Abomey, Togoland, the Niger, and Senegal. In the colony there were (in 1932) 1,800 miles of telegraph line, and 565 miles of telephone line. In 1932, 398 vessels entered and cleared the ports of Dahomey. French coins only are in circulation. The local budget for 1933 was 462,717,000 francs.

The Colony of French Sudan was formed in 1904, from the Territories of Senegambia and the Niger, less the Senegal Protectorate, which was restored to Senegal. Its old name of Upper Senegal-Niger was changed to French Sudan by decree of December 4, 1920. On January 1, 1933, a portion of Upper Volta was added to it.

The Colony is bounded on the north by the Algerian sphere; on the west by Mauritania, the Falmé river, and the frontier of French Guinea; on the south by the frontier of the Ivory Coast, and on the east by the Colony of the Niger. The area is 380,557 square miles, with a population of about 3,568,825 in 1933.

The whole of the French Sudan is under civil administration, with the same judicial and educational systems as the other Colonies comprised in the Government General. The budget of the Colony for 1933 provided for 68,054,500 francs.

The following are the most important towns in the French Sudan with population in 1932 shown in parentheses: Bamako, the capital (25,129), Segon (8,644), Kayes (12,003), Djeuné (5,994), Timbuktu (5,837), Goundam (6,144), Niore (3,481), Sikasso (10,225), San (3,481), Mofti (4,568), Kita (3,709), Gao (5,006). All the principal towns have regional or urban schools; Bamako has a professional school, a junior high school, a veterinary school and a school for artisans; there is a Mussulman superior school at Timbuktu with 110 pupils, called a médersa (official).

The natives cultivate ground-nuts, millet, maize, rice, cotton, sesame; other products are rubber, gum arabic and kariti. Large stocks of cattle abound in the colony. Three European concerns cultivate sisal.

Native industries comprise pottery, brick-making, jewellery, weaving, leather-making. Chief imports are cottons, food-stuffs, automobiles, petrol, building material, sugar, salt, beer; total in 1932, 21,149,000 francs. Chief exports are ground-nuts, cattle, gum, kopak, skins, cotton, wool, sisal, kariti and wax; total in 1932, 7,018,000 francs.

There is a very complete system of telegraphs throughout the Colony from Kayes to Niamey, Zinder, and Lake Tchad.

Since the completion of the section from Thiès to Kayes (January, 1924), French Sudan is connected with the coast by a railway 760 miles in length, stretching from Dakar to Koulikoro by way of Thiès, Kayes and Bamako. For about seven months in the year small steamboats perform the service from Koulikoro to Timbuktu and Gao, and from Bamako to Kourroussa.

Wireless telegraph connects Kabara, Kidal and Bamako with the Eiffel Tower in Paris, and with Dakar, Rufisque, Conakry, Abidjan, Kotonu, Brazzaville.

Mauritania, formed into a Protectorate in May, 1903, converted into a special 'Civilian Territory' in October, 1904, became a Colony on January 1, 1921, with a Lieutenant-Governor at its head. It consists of the districts of Trarza, Brakna, Gorgol, Assaba, Guidimaka, Adrar, Levrier Bay, Akjoujt, and Tagant, with a total area of 347,400 square miles. The native population (census, January, 1933) numbers 348,929, mostly Moorish Mussulmans; European population, 276. The northern limit of the Colony is approximate, and the foregoing area is obtained by taking the latitude 23° 3' N. as the northern boundary.

The budget of the Colony for 1933 was 19,066,750 francs.

The Colony of the Niger was formed by a decree of October 13, 1922. On January 1, 1933, a portion of Upper Volta was added to it. Estimated area, 490,490 square miles; population (1933), 1,758,392. The country is composed of a zone in the north, which is largely desolate country; a central strip which is wooded; and the southern zone, richly wooded and abounding in cattle. By a decree dated December 28, 1926, the circle of Say and part of the circle of Dori were transferred from the Colony of Upper-Volta to the Colony of the Niger. On January 1, 1932, there were, including the new territories, 70,101 horses, 877,911 oxen, 2,694,129 sheep and goats, 162,632 asses, 40,940 camels. In the southern zone rice, cotton, wheat, tobacco, maize, barley and indigo can be produced. In 1932 the chief agricultural products were, millet (530,000 tons), earth-nuts (13,600 tons), manioc (35,000 tons), dates (600 tons), cotton (790 tons), and beans (97,235 tons). The whole colony lacks water, with the exception of (1) the western districts which are watered by the Niger and its tributaries, (2) part of the southern zone where there are a number of wells, (3) the extreme south-east touching Lake Tchad. Local budget in 1932, 24,906,100 francs. Niamey is the capital.

MANDATED TERRITORIES IN AFRICA: TOGO AND CAMEROON.

Togo.—Togo, the former German Colony, lies between the Gold Coast Colony on the west and French Dahomey on the east. It was surrendered unconditionally by the Germans to British and French forces in August, 1914, and is now divided between the French and British. The Mandate was approved by the League of Nations on July 20, 1922. Of the total area of 33,700 square miles, the French have obtained about two-thirds, 21,893 square miles, the boundary running from the north-east in a generally south-east and south direction to Lomé, in such a manner that no part of the coast is included in the British sphere. Lomé (population in 1932, 10,424 natives and 384 Europeans) is the seat of the administration. The total population of the whole of Togo in 1932 was 749,419 natives and 646 Europeans.

The southern half of Togoland is peopled by natives using 30 different languages, of which the principal is Ewe—these may be regarded as an offshoot of the Bantu peoples. The northern half contains, ethnologically, a totally different population descended largely from Hamitic tribes and speaking in all 16 languages, of which Dagomba and Tim are the most important. The majority of the natives are pagans, but many profess Mohammedanism, while Christianity has, latterly, been making some progress in the coast districts. In 1932, 47,000 natives had adopted the Roman Catholic, and 13,500 the Protestant faith.

In 1932, there was 1 high school at Lomé with 34 pupils; 2 boarding-schools (32 pupils); 1 professional school at Sokodé (45 pupils); 1 normal school at Lomé (13 pupils); 6 district schools (1,600 native pupils); 23 village schools (960 pupils); 7 adult courses (300 students); 2 domestic science schools (380 pupils). Total number of teachers, 16 European and 92 natives. In 1932, 2,253,200 francs were voted towards public education.

Inland the country is hilly, rising to 3,600 feet, with streams and waterfalls. There are long stretches of forest and brushwood, while dry plains alternate with cultivable land. Maize, yams, cassada, plantains, ground-nuts, etc., are cultivated by the natives; oil palms, caoutchouc, and dye-woods grow in the forests; but the main commerce is the barter trade for palm oil, palm kernels, coco, rubber and copra carried on with the European factories. There are considerable plantations of oil and coco palms, coffee, coco, kola, and cassada. During recent years the natives have been increasingly engaged in the cultivation of cocoa and cotton. Production of cotton amounted to 2,044 metric tons in 1929, 1,909 metric tons in 1930, and 1,419 metric tons in 1931. Production of cocoa amounted to 5,449 metric tons in 1929, 6,166 metric tons in 1930, and 7,679 metric tons in 1931. Other products in 1931 were, palm oil, 1,479 metric tons; palm kernels, 7,953 metric tons. In the Sokodé and Sansane-Mangu districts in the French sphere there are about 65,000 head of cattle; in some districts horses of small size are bred. Native industries are: weaving, pottery, smith-work, straw-plaiting, wood-cutting, etc. There is no mining by Europeans, but the natives in the Sokodé and Klouto districts smelt iron, in which this Colony is very rich. For 1932, imports amounted to 65,485,652 francs, and exports to 29,238,788 francs. The principal exports were, palm kernels, 6,239,443 francs; cocoa, 11,288,644 francs; ginned cotton, 4,489,359 francs; copra, 1,707,854 francs; dried fish, 1,816,340 francs. The local budget for 1932 balanced at 34,800,000 francs. There was also a railway budget, 16,667,000 francs; and a budget for public health and native medical services, 5,885,000 francs.

There are good roads, connecting the more important centres of the Colony. There are three railways connecting Lomé with Anecho (Little Popo) (27 miles), with Palime (74 miles), and with Atakpame (103 miles). Total, 204 miles, with 5 stations and sub-stations. There are 13 post and telegraph stations and 4 sub-stations, connected by telegraph and telephone with the Gold Coast Colony, French Dahomey, and with Europe.

The port of Lomé has a wharf with a capacity of 600 tons of traffic daily. At Anecho the embarkation is made by means of surf boats. In 1931, 397 vessels cleared at the two ports.

Cameroon.—The former German Colony of Kamerun, including the area of French Equatorial Africa ceded by France to Germany, was occupied by French and British troops in 1916. The greater portion of the territory has been placed under French administration, and a strip on the southern border of Nigeria under British. The total area allotted to France amounts to 166,489 square miles, excluding the 107,270 square miles ceded to Germany in 1911, which is now included in French Equatorial Africa. Population in 1932 was 2,222,408, of whom 773,987 were men, 781,704 women, and 666,717 children. The Europeans numbered 2,159, of whom 1,378 were men, 519 women and 267 children. The portion of Cameroon placed under the Mandate of France by the Treaty of Versailles has, by decrees of March 23, 1921, and February 21, 1925, been constituted an autonomous territory both administratively and financially. The seat of government is Yaoundé. In 1932, there were 1 high school at Yaoundé (73 pupils), 7 regional schools (1,953 pupils), 56 village schools (4,531 pupils), 2 schools for domestic science (90 pupils), 2 urban schools (36 pupils), and 2 professional schools (850 pupils), a total attendance of 7,033 pupils. There were 22 European teachers and 122 native teachers. There were also 70 private schools with 8,120 pupils and 128 teachers. The budget (1932) provided for 2,063,066 francs for public education. General budget for 1932 balances at 60,438,920 francs; special railway budget, 17,650,000 francs; special medical budget, 14,414,592 francs. Chief products are ground-nuts, palm oil, almonds, hides, timber, cacao and ivory. In 1932, there were 504,000 oxen; 19,500 horses; 12,650 asses; 320,000 sheep; 346,000 goats; and 50,000 pigs. Imports in 1932 amounted to 72,598,000 francs, and exports to 83,116,000 francs. In 1932, 463 vessels entered at the ports of Douala, Kibiri, Campo and Garoula. The country has 2,690 miles of roads, and 292 miles of railway.

AMERICA.

GUADELOUPE AND DEPENDENCIES.

Guadeloupe, situated in the Lesser Antilles, consists of two islands separated by a narrow channel, called 'Rivière Salée.' That on the west is called Guadeloupe proper, the principal town of which is Basse-Terre, the capital of the colony, and that to the east Grande-Terre; they have a united area of 1,380 square kilometres (532 square miles), and a circumference of 275 miles. There are five dependencies consisting of the smaller islands, Marie Galante, Les Saintes, Désirade, St. Barthélemy, and St. Martin; the total area with these is 688 square miles. The colony is under a Governor and an elected council, and is represented by a senator and two deputies. Population (1932) 267,407. Instruction (1931-32) is given in 1 lycée at Pointe-à-Pitre, with 495 pupils, a junior school at Basse-Terre with 80 pupils, and a secondary course for girls at Pointe-à-Pitre, with 360 pupils, and 129 public and private elementary schools. The public elementary schools have 420 teachers and 18,820 pupils, and the private have 1,308 pupils. The seat of government is Basse-Terre (9,268 inhabitants). Pointe-à-Pitre (30,465 inhabitants) has a fine harbour. Revenue and expenditure balanced at 66,220,864 francs for 1932. Outstanding debt, December 31, 1932, 3,312,282 francs.

Chief products are sugar, bananas, coffee, cocoa, and rum. For local consumption there are grown sweet potatoes, manioc, tobacco, indian corn, and vegetables.

In 1932, the imports were 156,500,000 francs; exports, 183,800,000 francs. The principal exports in 1931 were sugar, 17,301 tons; coffee, 495 tons; rum, 115,618 hectolitres; cacao, 154 tons; vanilla, 1,100 kilogrammes; bananas, 4,290 tons. Guadeloupe is in direct communication with France by means of two steam navigation companies. A new wireless station at Destrellan was opened in 1918. Within the islands traffic is carried on by means of roads, of which there were 344 miles in 1931. The Bank of Guadeloupe, with a capital of 3,000,000 francs, and reserve funds amounting to 6,122,090 francs, advances loans chiefly for agricultural purposes. The Royal Bank of Canada has also established a branch. There is likewise another bank, the Crédit Guadaloupéen, but this is a private institution; the Banque de la Guadeloupe is the official banking institution of the colony, enjoying the privilege of issuing bank notes. Silver coin has disappeared from circulation; nickel treasury tokens (bons) of 1 franc and of 50, 25, 10 and 5 centimes are authorised up to total emission of 1,000,000 francs.

British Consul at Guadeloupe.—J. E. Devaux.

GUIANA.

The colony of French Guiana, on the north-east coast of South America, is administered by a Governor, assisted by a Privy Council of 7 members. The colony has a Council-General of 8 members elected by French citizens resident in Guiana, and is represented in the French Parliament by one deputy. Area about 84,740 square miles, and population, census of 1931, 22,169. Cayenne, the chief town, has a population of 10,744, and the other 14 communes have 11,425. These figures are exclusive of the population of the penal settlement of Maroni, of the floating population of miners without any fixed abode, as also officials, troops, and native tribes. At Cayenne there are a court of first instance, a court of appeal, and justices of the peace, with jurisdiction in other localities. The military force consists of 310 officers and men of the Colonial Infantry. Primary education is given gratuitously since 1889 in lay schools for the two sexes in the communes and many villages. There is also (1932-33) a college for secondary (80 pupils) and higher primary education (47 students), and a normal course for teachers (26 students). There are also several Congregational schools (520 pupils) and a number of private schools (175 pupils). The school population in 1932-33 was 8,320. The penal settlement also has 3 schools with 258 pupils. The budget for 1931 balanced at 16,755,676 francs. The country has immense forests rich in many kinds of timber. There is little agriculture in the colony; only about 7,900 acres are under cultivation. The crops consist of rice, maize, manioc, cocoa, coffee, and sugar-cane. The most important industry is gold-mining (placer). The exports consist of cocoa, phosphates, various woods, gold, fish glue, rum, rosewood essence, balata, and hides. The total imports in 1932 were valued at 43,511,384 francs, and the exports at 25,937,069 francs. There are three ports—Cayenne, Saint-Laurent-du-Maroni, and Oyapoc. Cayenne and Saint-Laurent are visited once a month by a packet boat of the Compagnie Général Transatlantique. There is also steamboat communication between the capital and the other towns of the colony. There are three chief and many secondary roads connecting the capital with various centres of population in the interior with motor-car services. There is a telegraph system connecting Cayenne with Macouria, Kourou, Sinnamary and Iracoubo, as well as with the penal settlement. There are wireless stations at Cayenne, Oyapoc, Regina, St. Laurent, La Forestière.

Since 1854, Cayenne has had a penal settlement for habitual criminals and convicts sentenced to hard labour. In 1931 the penal population consisted of 5,954 men.

The Bank of Guiana, under Government control, with a capital of 1,200,000 francs, with statutory reserve fund amounting to 300,000 francs, advances loans for agricultural and other purposes.

MARTINIQUE.

The colony is under a Governor assisted by a Privy Council. An elected General Council votes the Budget, and elective municipal councils administer the communes. It is represented by a senator and two deputies in the French Chamber. Area 385 square miles, divided into 32 communes; population (census 1931) 234,695. The military force consists of one company of infantry and a battery of artillery. There is a law school (at Fort-de-France) with (1931) 65 students; a lycée for boys, with 1,080 pupils; a high school for girls with 1,000 pupils; primary schools, with 24,000 pupils (including 7 private schools); a commercial school with 80 pupils, and a school of arts and crafts (89 pupils). Chief commercial town, Fort-de-France (population, 43,338). The budget for 1933 balanced at 97,665,730 francs. Sugar and rum are the chief productions, then come cocoa, pine-apple, bananas, coffee and tobacco. There are 40,000 hectares under sugar-cane and food-producing crops. There are 19 sugar works with distilleries attached, 134 agricultural distilleries, 2 industrial distilleries devoted to the production of rum, and 12 industrial establishments. In 1932, 48,400 metric tons of sugar, 3,550,844 gallons of rum, 4,548 metric tons of bananas, 409 metric tons of preserved pineapple and 287 metric tons of cocoa beans were exported. The total imports in 1932 were valued at 191,237,000 francs, and the exports at 201,516,000 francs. Vessels entered in 1932, 603 of 1,134,032 tons; vessels cleared, 598 of 1,097,372 tons. The island is visited regularly by the steamers of French and American companies. For local traffic there are subsidised mail coaches and motor-cars; and subsidised steamers ply along the coast. The colony is in telegraphic communication with the rest of the world by telegraph cables and wireless. The Bank of Martinique at Fort-de-France with a capital of 3,000,000 francs, the Crédit Martiniquais with a capital of 3,500,000 francs, and a branch of the Royal Bank of Canada advance loans for agricultural and other purposes.

ST. PIERRE AND MIQUELON.

The largest islands of two small groups close to the south coast of Newfoundland. Area of St. Pierre group, 10 sq. miles; population in 1931, 3,743; area of Miquelon group, 83 sq. miles; population, 578; total area, 93 sq. miles; total population, 4,321. An administrator organises and regulates the various branches of the public service. He is assisted by a consultative council of administration and municipal councils. Chief town, St. Pierre. Primary instruction is free. There are 3 public schools for boys, and 3 for girls, with (in all) 16 teachers and 899 pupils. There are, besides, infant schools, 'salles d'asile,' frequented by 140 children. There are a private boarding school and two private schools.

The islands, being mostly barren rock, are unsuited for agriculture. The chief industry is cod-fishing. Imports in 1932, 189,019,609 francs; exports, 183,557,858 francs. The imports comprise textiles, salt, wines, foodstuffs, meat; and the exports, cod, dried and fresh, and fish products. St. Pierre is in regular steam communication with North Sydney and Halifax; and is connected by telegraph cable with Europe and the American continent. Local budget for 1933: Receipts, 14,619,848 francs; Expenditure, 14,619,848 francs.

AUSTRALASIA AND OCEANIA.

NEW CALEDONIA AND DEPENDENCIES.

Governor.—L. Jore (1932).

New Caledonia is administered by a Governor assisted by a Privy Council consisting of the Secretary-General, the Procureur-Général (the head of the Judicial administration), the Superior Commandant of the Troops, the head of the Department of Domains and Colonisation, and two notables of the colony appointed by the President of the Republic. The colony has also an elective Council-General of 15 members. Nouméa, the capital, has a municipality; other centres of population are locally administered by municipal commissions.

The island is situated between the 20° 1' and 22° 28' parallels south latitude, and 161° 30' and 144° 40' east longitude. It has a total length exceeding 248 miles and an average breadth of 31 miles. Area, 8,548 square miles. According to the census of July 1, 1926, the population was 57,165, of whom 15,795 were free, 623 of convict origin, and 28,502 Melanesians and Polynesians. On July 1, 1931, the native population was 27,777. Nouméa had (1931) 10,708 inhabitants, of whom 7,038 were free. The immigrants from France are not numerous. Other immigrants (July 1, 1931) were 5,000 Javanese, 6,000 Tonkinese, 40 Indians, and 164 islanders from the New Hebrides. Primary instruction is provided in public and also in private elementary schools, the former being assisted by the local budget. In 1933, there were 48 public and private primary schools with 2,604 pupils (1,303 being girls), and 67 native schools with 3,735 pupils. In Nouméa the 'Collège La Pérouse' gives classical tuition to 200 pupils and professional instruction (iron and wood) to 37 pupils. Local budget for 1933 balanced at 29,579,175 francs. Of the total area more than half is mountainous or not cultivable; about 1,600 square miles are pasture land; about the same area is cultivated or cultivable; and about 500 square miles contain forest which is being worked. The land is divided into 2 domains: that of the state (in which gratuitous concessions may be made); and that of the native reserve. The chief agricultural products are coffee, copra, cotton, manioc (cassava), maize, tobacco, bananas, pineapples. There are 100,000 cattle and about 50,000 sheep. The mineral resources are very great; chrome, cobalt, nickel, iron, and manganese abound; antimony, mercury, cinnabar, silver, gold, lead, and copper have all been obtained. The nickel deposits are of special value, being without arsenic. About 151,000 hectares of mining land are owned, and 109,000 hectares have been granted for prospecting. In 1932, the blast furnaces produced 3,915 tons matte of nickel valued at 19,488,300 francs. Local industries are developing; there are a grain storage and cleaning dépôt, meat preserving works, barking mills for coffee and cotton, and two blast furnaces melting nickel ore. A hydro-electric factory was established in 1926. The imports in 1932 were valued at 48,174,058 francs, and the exports at 40,483,851 francs. The imports comprise wine, coal, flour, rice; the exports, minerals, coffee, copra, cotton and preserved meats. In 1932, 91 vessels of 177,719 tons entered and 95 of 185,475 tons cleared at the ports of New Caledonia. Of those which entered, 71 (116,332 tons) were French. Nouméa is connected once monthly with Sydney in New South Wales by regular steamers sailing monthly, and by other vessels sailing irregularly. There is a mail service by steamer along the coast. There is a narrow-gauge railway (single line) from Nouméa to Paita, about 20 miles long. The proposed extension to Bourail, 105 miles from Nouméa, has, however, been postponed. There is a daily motor road service for passengers from Nouméa to Voh on good roads; the rest of the Colony's roads are only suitable for horseback transport. There are 825 miles of telegraph line and 1,345 miles of telephone line.

Dependencies of New Caledonia are:

1. The Isle of Pines, 30 miles to the south-east, with an area of 58 square miles and a population of about 600.

2. The Wallis Archipelago, north-east of Fiji, with an area of 40 square miles and about 4,500 inhabitants. The islands were placed under the French protectorate in 1842. There is a French Resident, and the archipelago is in regular communication with Nouméa. Budget for 1933, 359,812 francs.

3. Futuna and Alofi, south of the Wallis Islands, with about 1,500 inhabitants, were annexed by France in 1888.

4. The Loyalty Islands, 60 miles east of New Caledonia, consisting of 3 large islands, Maré, Lifou, and Uvéa, and many small islands with a total area of about 800 square miles. The chief culture in the islands is that of coconuts; the chief export, copra and rubber.

5. The Huon Islands, 170 miles north-west of New Caledonia, a most barren group.

The New Hebrides, in accordance with the Anglo-French convention of February (ratified in October), 1906, are jointly administered by the High Commissioners of His Britannic Majesty and the French Republic. In 1914 an Anglo-French conference was appointed to devise means of remedying the defects of the condominium. Population (census of May 1, 1924), 2,161. In 1925 there were 746 French and 322 English. There are French and English courts, and a mixed court with a judge foreign to both nations. Local budget for 1933, 7,782,600 francs. Exports in 1932 amounted to 9,735,209 francs, of which 7,625,904 were French trade, and 2,109,305 francs British trade; imports were 10,116,807 francs, of which 6,535,259 francs were in French trade, and 3,581,548 in British trade. Maize, coffee, cotton, cocoa, vanilla, coconut trees are grown, and are the chief articles of export. In some places sulphur is abundant. In 1932, 58 vessels of 127,128 tons entered, and 56 vessels of 123,620 tons cleared the ports. Of those entering 15 were British (19,673 tons), and 35 French (94,375 tons). Of those clearing 14 were British (19,025 tons), and 34 French (91,515 tons).

FRENCH ESTABLISHMENTS IN OCEANIA.

Governor.—Michel-Lucien Montagne (appointed June 17, 1933).

These, scattered over a wide area in the Eastern Pacific, are administered by a governor with an Administrative Council consisting of certain officials, the maire of Papeete, and the Presidents of the Chambers of Commerce and Agriculture. The establishments consist of the Society Islands, the most important of which are Tahiti and Moorea, the former with an area of about 600 square miles and (census 1931) 9,720 inhabitants, the latter with an area of 50 square miles and 2,011 inhabitants; the principal product is phosphate (annual production, 80,000 metric tons). Other groups are the Marquesas Islands, with a total area of 480 square miles and 2,283 inhabitants, the two largest islands being Nukahiva and Hivaoo; the Tuamotu group, consisting of two parallel ranges of islands from King George's Island on the north to Gloucester Island on the south, their total population being 4,771; the Leeward Islands (Iles sous le Vent) (8,705 inhabitants), of which the more important are Huahiné (pop. 1,676), Raiatée and Tahaa (pop. 5,416), and Bora-Bora-Maupiti (pop. 1,586); the Gambier, Tubuai, and Rapa Islands; the Gambier group (of which Mangareva is the principal) having six square miles of area and 501 inhabitants; the Tubuai (or southern) Islands, of which Rurutu is the largest, Raivavae (or Vavitu), Rimatara, and, far to the south, Rapa, having together an area of 115 square miles and 3,063 inhabitants; Makatea, 1,160 inhabitants; Island of Maiao, 117 inhabitants. The total area of the Establishments is estimated at 1,520 square miles, and their population, according to the census of 1931, was 40,392, of whom 29,757 were natives. There were 5,290 French, 307 English, 4,059 Chinese, 169

Americans, 15 Germans, 10 Chileans, 2 Belgians, 1 Dutch, 3 Spanish, 5 Italians, 319 Indo-Chinese, 41 Japanese, 14 Danes, 15 Swedes, 5 Russian, 7 Swiss, 43 Czech, 1 Austrian, 2 Portuguese, 7 Norwegians. In 1903 it was decreed that separate islands or groups should no longer be regarded as distinct Establishments, but that all should be united to form a homogeneous colony. Budget for 1933 balanced at 15,400,000 francs.

The most important of the islands is Tahiti, whose chief town is Papeete with 7,061 inhabitants (1931 census), of whom 4,848 are French. A higher primary school, with a normal school, has been established at Papeete, and there are (1925) 63 primary schools, with 91 teachers and 3,750 pupils. Pearls and mother-o'-pearl are important products. The island is mountainous and picturesque with a fertile coastland bearing coconut, banana, and orange trees, sugar-cane, vanilla, and other tropical fruits, besides vegetables grown in temperate climates. The chief industries are the preparation of copra, sugar, and rum. Value of imports (1932) 24,717,626 francs, exports 21,011,298 francs. The chief imports are tissues, wheat, flour, metal work. The chief exports were copra (19,044 tons), mother-o'-pearl (215 tons), vanilla (55 tons), and phosphates. The export of phosphates in 1929 was 250,914 tons; in 1930, 172,059 tons; in 1931, 114,432 tons; in 1932, 120,649 tons. The New Zealand company (with a French subvention) has a monthly service connecting San Francisco, New Zealand and Australia with Papeete. The shipping between the islands is carried on by sailing boats.

GERMANY.

(DEUTSCHES REICH.)

On November 9, 1918, the abdication of the German Emperor was announced, and from that date Germany became a Republic.

(For the constitution of the Empire and its rulers see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1918, pp. 881-884.)

Constitution and Government.

The Council of People's Commissioners in Berlin took over the Government of the country; the reigning princes of the Federal States were either deposed or abdicated, the existing Imperial Parliament was declared dissolved, and arrangements were made for summoning a National Assembly. The elections for the body (for which all Germans, men and women, over 20 years of age voted) were held in January, 1919, and resulted, on the basis of proportional representation, in the return of the following parties:—Majority Socialists, 165; Centre (Catholic) Party, 90; Democrats, 75; Conservatives, 42; Independent Socialists, 22; German People's Party, 22; and minor parties, 7; total, 423. The National Assembly was summoned to meet at Weimar on February 6 and on February 11, 1919, it elected the first President of the Republic, Friedrich Ebert, who held office from February 11, 1919, until his death on February 28, 1925.

President of the Republic.—Paul von Hindenburg. Elected the second President on April 26, 1925; assumed office on May 12, 1925. Re-elected on April 10, 1932.

The President is elected by the direct vote of all citizens, male and female, over 20 years of age. The election must be held either on Sunday or on a day of public rest. The President holds office for 7 years.

The Cabinet, originally appointed on January 30, 1933, is composed as follows:—

Chancellor.—Adolf Hitler.

Vice-Chancellor.—Franz von Papen.

Minister of the Interior.—Dr. Wilhelm Frick.

Minister for Foreign Affairs.—Konstantin Count von Neurath.

Minister of Defence.—General Werner von Blomberg.

Minister of Finance.—Ludwig Count Schwerin von Krosigk.

Minister of Food and Agriculture.—Dr. Walther Darré.

Minister of Economic Affairs.—Dr. Kurt Schmitt.

Minister of Labour.—Franz Seldte.

Minister of Communications and Posts.—Paul Baron von Eltz-Rübenach.

Minister for Aviation.—Hermann Göring.

Minister of Justice.—Dr. Franz Gürtner.

Minister for National Enlightenment and Propaganda.—Dr. Joseph Goebbels.

Ministers without Portfolio.—Rudolf Hess and Ernst Röhm.

The Constitution of the Republic was adopted on July 31, 1919, by the National Assembly at Weimar, and promulgated on August 11, 1919. (For details of the Weimar Constitution, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1933, p. 927.)

The Reichstag elected on March 5, 1933, which met on March 23, virtually, though not de jure, set aside the Weimar Constitution by giving absolute power to the Chancellor and his Cabinet. The Enabling Act of March 24, 1933, provides that the Cabinet may make laws by ordinance, even including such laws as are not in accord with the Weimar Constitution (which has not yet been formally abrogated). The rights of the President are not affected by the Enabling Act.

Deriving authority from the Enabling Act, Chancellor Hitler and his Cabinet have unified Germany, but at the same time have set up a personal dictatorship of the Chancellor, in which all the activities of the country—political, economic, industrial, commercial, cultural, etc.—have been gleichgeschaltet (totalitarianized), freedom of speech and of thought, and of the press abolished, equality before the law limited by the so-called 'Aryan paragraph' which arbitrarily grants full citizen rights only to 'Aryans,' and personal freedom from arrest, owing to the activities of an officially recognised secret police, curtailed. No political parties are tolerated except only the National Socialist German Workers' (Nazi) Party (Nationalsozialistische Deutsche Arbeiterpartei). There is only one Legislative Assembly in Germany, the Reichstag, elected according to the provisions of the Weimar Constitution, by universal, equal, direct and secret votes of male and female voters, and composed entirely of the supporters of Hitler, who insists on the principle of Leadership in all matters appertaining to the life of the country, from the highest to the least significant.

Accordingly, the working constitution of Germany provides for a President, who is the supreme commander of the Army and who appoints all officials, and for a Reichskanzler who is the 'Leader' in all political activities in Germany, both in the Reich and in the States. By the side of the Chancellor stand the ministers, who together compose the Cabinet, which, within the ambit of the Enabling Act possess unlimited powers of legislation. The Reichstag enjoys only advisory functions. In matters of supreme import to the nation, a Referendum is provided for.

The Unification Act of April 8, 1933, brought the Federal States under the rule of Reichsstatthalter or Governors directly responsible to Herr Hitler, with the power to appoint and dismiss State premiers and other high State officials (including judges), and to promulgate laws. By the law reforming the Reich, of February 1, 1934, the sovereign rights formerly possessed by the Federal States passed into the hands of the Reich Cabinet; the Reichsstatthalter passed under the jurisdiction of the Minister of the Interior, and the Reich Cabinet abrogated to itself the promulgation of new constitutional laws for the Federal States. Germany is thus a unified and centralized State.

Area and Population.

I. PROGRESS AND PRESENT CONDITIONS.

The following table gives the area and population of the present States (Länder) of Germany in the order of their magnitude, embodying the returns of the census of June 16, 1933 :—

¹ The figures for the population of the Saar District are those of the census taken on July 19, 1927.

According to the Treaty of Versailles (June 28, 1919) Germany agreed to the following territorial arrangements:—(1) Alsace-Lorraine ceded to France, (2) the greater part of the Provinces of West Prussia and Posen ceded to Poland, (3) a part of Upper Silesia and of East Prussia likewise to Poland, (4) a portion of Upper Silesia to Czechoslovakia, (5) Memel to Lithuania, (6) Danzig, a Free State under the protection of the League of Nations, (7) Eupen and Malmedy to Belgium, (8) a part of Schleswig to Denmark.

Provision was made in the Treaty to settle the ultimate fate of the following areas by plébiscite:—(1) The Saar Basin (after 15 years), (2) Schleswig (in two zones), (3) districts in Southern East Prussia, in West Prussia and in Upper Silesia. Results of the plébiscites:—Schleswig (March, 1920), northern zone for Denmark, southern zone for Germany; East and West Prussia (July, 1920) for Germany; Upper Silesia (March, 1921) for Germany.

An estimate of the actual areas and populations (according to the Census of 1910) lost to pre-war Germany has been made as follows: Alsace-Lorraine, 5,607 square miles, population 1,874,014; ceded to Belgium, 400 square miles, population 59,945; ceded to Poland, 17,816 square miles, population 3,854,961; Memel, 1,026 square miles, population 141,238; Danzig, 739 square miles, population 330,630; ceded to Denmark, 1,542 square miles, population 166,348; ceded to Czechoslovakia, 122 square miles, population 48,446; total 27,252 square miles, population 6,475,582.

The Saar Basin, which has been placed under the government of the League of Nations for 15 years, has an area of 738 square miles and a population (1927) of 770,030.

The following table shows the increase in population at various periods, with the annual rate of increase per cent.

The number of foreigners in Germany, according to the census of June 16, 1925, was 957,096, or 15·3 per 1,000 of the total population of the country. Poles numbered 259,804, Austrians 128,859, Czechoslovaks 222,521, British 6,977, and French 7,290.

II. MOVEMENT OF THE POPULATION.

The following table shows the movement of the population of the Republic during four years :—

Year	Marriages	Total Births	Stillborn	Illegitimate	Total Deaths	Surplus of Births
1929	589,611	1,183,728	36,270	144,595	842,232	+341,496

1932	509,591	1,007,636	29,475	—	727,370	+280,266

Of the children born in 1930, 600,349 were boys, and 563,032 girls; in 1931, 549,484 were boys, and 514,437 girls.

The number of divorces in Germany was in 1930, 40,722 being 63·3 per 100,000 inhabitants; in 1931, 39,971 or 61·8; in 1932, 42,202 or 65·0.

The following table shows the annual number of German emigrants for five years :—

III. PRINCIPAL TOWNS.

German towns are distinguished as large towns (with 100,000 inhabitants and upwards); medium towns (20,000–100,000 inhabitants); small towns (5,000–20,000 inhabitants), and country towns (2,000–5,000 inhabitants). In 1933, 2 towns had over 1,000,000 inhabitants; 22 others over 250,000; 28 others over 100,000; 48 between 50,000 and 100,000; and 164 between 20,000 and 50,000. According to the results of the census of June 16, 1933, the population of the principal towns at that date was :—

Religion.

According to the census of June 16, 1925, there were in Germany 40,014,677 Protestants (64·1 per cent. of the total population), 20,193,384 Catholics (32·4 per cent.), 87,580 other Christians (0·1 per cent.), 564,879 Jews (0·9 per cent.), and 1,550,649 adherents of other professions of religion (2·5 per cent.).

The Constitution provides for entire liberty of conscience. There is no State Church. Every religious community manages its own affairs, and makes appointments to its offices without interference from the State.

The Evangelical Churches are now united in the German Evangelical Church under the direction of a Reich bishop, who is 'called' by the National Synod at the nomination of the heads of the regional Churches. The National Synod is to be formed of 60 members, 40 sent by the regional Churches from their own synods and 20 to be chosen from persons 'who have prominently proved themselves in the service of the Church.'

There are 6 Roman Catholic archbishoprics, 17 suffragan bishoprics, 1 bishopric immediately subject to Rome, 2 parts of bishoprics attached to non-German bishoprics, and 1 apostolic administration. The 'Old Catholics' have a bishop at Bonn.

The Jewish congregations are federated in the 'Deutsch-Israelitischer Gemeinde-Bund.'

Education.

Education is general throughout Germany, all children between the ages of 6 and 14 being bound to attend some recognized school. The teachers in German schools are required to hold a Government certificate, and to have undergone a period of training and probation.

According to a school census taken in 1931-32 there were in that year 52,961 public elementary schools in Germany with 190,281 teachers (141,584 males and 48,697 females), and 7,590,073 pupils (3,842,611 boys and 3,747,462 girls). There were in 1931-32, 679 private schools with 49,828 pupils (20,903 boys and 28,925 girls).

According to the law of April 28, 1920, German children are all bound to receive a four years' course of instruction in the 'Foundation School' (Grundschule). The next highest school for elementary education is the 'People's School' (Volksschule), which, like the Grundschule, is supported partly by the State (mostly for personnel), and partly by the municipalities (mostly for school buildings, etc.). Children who have left the Volksschule and entered on some calling must by law attend Continuation Schools or Trade Schools until they are eighteen years of age. In 1931-32 there were 16,462 Continuation Schools with 338,837 scholars, and 5,171 Trade Schools with 1,236,373 scholars (829,616 males and 406,757 females). There are also 1,671 public technical schools with 177,731 scholars. Besides the Volkschule there is found the 'Middle School' (mittlere Schule), which differs from the former in that instruction is provided in English and French. In 1931-32 there were 1,472 mittlere Schulen with 11,517 teachers and 229,671 pupils (107,192 boys and 122,479 girls). Apprentices and young people at work must attend Continuation Schools for 6 to 8 hours weekly during working hours.

To prepare for the Universities and for admission into certain professions, there are several kinds of secondary schools with a course of study extending in the main over 9 years. Of these the oldest is the Gymnasium, which specializes in classical studies; side by side with this is the Realgymnasium, which specializes in mathematics, natural science and modern languages, but also teaches classical subjects. The Gymnasien are the most fully developed classical schools; the Progymnasien differ from these only in not having the highest classes. The Oberrealschulen give instruction in mathematics, natural science and modern languages, but not in classics. Experimentally two other kinds of schools have been established—the German High School (Deutsche Oberschule) and the Aufbauschule, the former to stress German subjects (besides modern languages), and the latter to provide an intensive and curtailed high school education for the bright scholars of elementary schools.

For girls there are Lyceen, Oberlyceen and certain other educational institutions which prepare for the universities.

In 1931-32 the number of secondary schools was as follows:—For boys, 1,699 with 530,578 pupils (including 35,628 girls). Total number of teachers, 30,187. For girls, High Schools, 779; with 14,715 teachers and 247,862 pupils (including 849 boys). Other higher schools for girls are attended by 9,365 pupils.

There are 10 fully-equipped Technical High Schools, with the right of granting degrees. They are all aided by the States to which they respectively belong. The statistics for the Summer session 1932 were as follows:—

There are, besides, the following (number of students in 1932 shown in brackets): 2 Veterinary Colleges (1,090), 3 Agricultural Colleges (994),

2 Afforestation Academies (133), 2 Mining Academies (360), 5 Commercial High Schools (3,481), 1 Academy for Practical Medicine (432), 11 Schools of Art (1,490), and 10 Colleges of Music (3,440). There are also 9 Training Colleges for elementary school teachers at the following centres (students in 1932 in brackets):—Beuthen (75), Bonn (76), Dortmund (299), Elbing (384), Frankfurt-on-Main (166), Halle (222), Kiel (296), Mainz (428), Rostock (80), making a total of 2,026 students.

There are 23 universities in the German Republic, besides the Philosophical and Theological High Schools at Braunsberg, with number of students in the summer term of 1932 (95), Paderborn (322), Frankfurt-on-Main (218), Fulda (139), Trier (267), Mainz (108), Augsburg (78), Bamberg (129), Dillingen (190), Eichstätt (145), Freising (172), Passau (174), and Regensburg (254), which have only faculties of theology (Roman Catholic) and philosophy (Augsburg has philosophy only).

In three universities, namely, Freiburg, Munich, and Würzburg, the faculties of theology are Roman Catholic; four are mixed, both Protestant and Roman Catholic—Bonn, Breslau, Münster, and Tübingen; and the rest are Protestant. Cologne, Frankfurt, and Hamburg have no theological faculties.

Justice and Crime.

A uniform system of law courts exists throughout Germany, though, with the exception of the Reichsgericht, all courts are directly subject to the Government of the special State in which they exercise jurisdiction, and not to the Central Government. The appointment of the judges other than those of the Reichsgericht is also a State function, and not that of the Central Government.

The lowest courts of first instance are the Amtsgerichte (1,646 on January 1, 1933), competent to try petty civil and criminal cases. Cases relating to property in which the amount involved does not exceed 1,000 marks are usually tried by a single judge. In the trial of more serious criminal cases the judge is assisted by two assessors (laymen) (Schöffengericht). The Amtsgerichte deal also with guardianships, estates and official records. The Landgerichte (155 on January 1, 1933) contain both civil and criminal chambers. The former, consisting of three judges, are competent to deal in first instance with all civil cases in as far as they have not been referred to the Amtsgerichte, especially with divorces, and also exercise a revisory jurisdiction over the Amtsgerichte. For trying commercial cases there are further commercial chambers, consisting of one judge and two laymen. The Criminal Chamber decides as court of first instance in the majority of criminal cases, that is to say, if they do not come within the competence of the Amtsgerichte or of the Reichsgerichte. But even the latter may be brought before the Criminal Chamber at the request of the Public Prosecutor. The Criminal Chamber consists of 3 judges and 2 lay assessors. It also hears appeals from the Amtsgerichte in criminal cases. For the trial of capital cases, the Landgerichte are transformed into Schwurgerichte, consisting of three judges and six laymen. The Amtsgerichte and Landgerichte have as superior court the Oberlandesgerichte. There are twenty-six such courts in Germany. The Oberlandesgerichte contain criminal and civil senates consisting of three judges. They exercise appellate jurisdiction over the Landgerichte in civil cases, and over the 'small chambers' (and in some cases over the 'large chambers') in criminal cases. The total number of judges on the bench in all the courts above mentioned was 10,069 (Jan. 1, 1933). The supreme court is the Reichsgericht, which sits at Leipzig, and has 102 judges. This court exercises an appellate jurisdiction over all inferior courts, and also an original and final jurisdiction in cases of treason. It has 6 criminal and 7 civil senates, consisting of 5 judges each.

Number of persons condemned after trial, 1930. 596,127 ; 1931, 566,139.

Special courts exist for all civil disputes arising from the relationship between employers and employed (Arbeitsgerichte, Landesarbeitsgerichte, and the Reichsarbeitsgericht). Qualified judges are appointed to these judicial bodies and they are attended by representatives of employers and employed. In 1932 there were 452 Arbeitsgerichte, 60 Landesarbeitsgerichte and the Reichsarbeitsgericht. The Arbeitsgerichte gave decisions (1932) in 371,592 cases, and settled by arbitration 4,075 cases. The Landesarbeitsgerichte dealt with 17,220 appeals. The Reichsarbeitsgericht received 881 cases for revision.

Public Assistance (including Poor Relief and Welfare for Children and Juveniles).

Before the war the public assistance for the poor was regulated by the law of June 6, 1870 (Gesetz über den Unterstützungswohnsitz). At the beginning of this century this law, however, was found insufficient for social work that must accommodate itself to the changed social conditions brought about by the economic development (industrialization, urbanization).

When, as a result of the war and the inflation period, substantial parts of the population became distressed, new measures for social welfare had become urgently necessary to meet the economic depression. The various rules and orders in this direction, however, could not be codified uniformly for the whole Reich until after the stabilization of the German currency under the Verordnung über die Fürsorgepflicht of February 13, 1924.

The public assistance, in the sense of the law, includes social relief for disabled soldiers, dependents of those killed in the war and those persons who, according to the Versorgungsgesetze, are entitled to benefit, for persons in receipt of Invalidity Insurance for wage earners and Salaried Employees, Old Age Insurance (Rentenempfänger der Invaliden- und Angestelltenversicherung), for persons being out of work, minors in need of help and other poor. Public assistance is administered by the local authorities called Bezirks- und Landesfürsorgeverbände.

Public assistance to juveniles includes all public measures for the promotion of youth welfare, firstly enacted in the Reichsjugendwohlfahrtsgesetz of July 9, 1922. This law contains, inter alia, regulations relating to education of children (maternity and child welfare, care of young children), co-operation of local authorities regarding supervision of boarded-out children, guardianship, probation and Juvenile Court assistance. By the Jugendgerichtsgesetz of February 16, 1923, protection is granted to juvenile offenders.

Only by this law—which appears to be its outstanding feature—the legal right of education is granted to all juveniles for physical, spiritual and social fitness. Children whose parents or legal representatives are found neglecting their educational duties are taken care of by the Juvenile Boards (Jugendämter).

In 1927, for the first time, total figures of relief were published by the Official Statistic of Public Assistance (Reichsfürsorgestatistik), and Official Statistics of Public Assistance to Juveniles (Reichsstatistik der öffentlichen Jugendhilfe). In 1932–33 (financial year), 4,676,974 heads of families received permanently ordinary out relief (3,854,520 in 1931–32), by 979 Public Assistance District Committees (Bezirksfürsorgeverbände). Furthermore, 1,425,625 persons were in receipt of institutional relief in 1931–32. The total expenditure for relief in money and kind granted by Public Assistance District Committees in 1931–32 amounted to 1,909,990,000 RM. (1,492,256,000 RM. in 1930–31).

Moreover, the Public Assistance State Committees (Landesfürsorgeverbände) were granting relief—especially institutional relief—to 210,381 persons in 1931–32, the expenditure for which amounted to 131,740,300 RM.

Besides these payments for direct relief the Public Assistance Authorities expended various amounts for grants to own institutions, private welfare work, administration expenses, etc. The balance of the total expenditure and income of Public Assistance Authorities in 1931–32 amounted to 1,993,796,800 RM.

On March 31, 1932, 698,453 children were chargeable to 1,238 Juvenile Boards; 638,629 minors were under public guardianship, and 73,014 under protective care of juveniles. (Latest available statistics.)

The above-mentioned amounts expended in 1931–32 include the expenses for public assistance to juveniles, also expenses in connection with education and bringing-up of minors, juvenile care and physical training, amounting to 11,327,000 RM., furthermore, contributions to orphans' asylums, children's homes, etc., amounting to 5,745,000 RM., day nurseries, kindergarten and similar institutions, amounting to 6,209,000 RM., according to data compiled from the Public Assistance District Committees.

Additional data furnished by the Public Assistance State Committees show total amounts for public assistance to juveniles, 27,250,500 RM., and 3,950,900 RM. for other purposes connected therewith.

In addition to the above given ordinary expenditure on public assistance there must be noticed government grants with which local authorities were supplied to meet all requirements regarding public welfare.

Thus, the whole charge to the community incurred by the administration of public assistance for the Reich amounted to 2,239,160,000 RM. in 1931-32 (1,894,700,000 RM. in 1930-31), or 35.88 RM. per head of estimated population in 1931-32 (30.36 RM. in 1930-31).

Compulsory Insurance.

Social insurance has existed in Germany since 1883. It comprises compulsory insurance of workmen and employees against sickness (including maternity), accidents, unemployment, old age and infirmity.

Under a law of 1883 and amending Acts, workmen and employees with an annual income up to 3,600 marks must be insured against sickness, and must themselves pay two-thirds of the contributions, their employers paying one-third. For accident insurance, under an Act of 1884 and amending Acts, the contributions are paid entirely by the employers, and they, for mutual protection, have been obliged to unite into associations according to the nature of the industries in which they are engaged. The working of these insurance associations is controlled by Government. For invalidity and old age insurances, under an Act of 1889 and amending Acts, the contributions are paid half by the workmen and half by their employers, while towards each pension the Government grants an annual subsidy. The employers are responsible both for their own and the workmen's contributions. The latter must be deducted from wages and paid subsequently. Insurance for old age pensions for employees was introduced by law of December 20, 1911, and amending Acts, 65 being the pensionable age. Unemployment insurance was introduced by the law of July 16, 1927, to take the place of the Unemployment Welfare which had been in existence since the end of the war.

The State makes a grant for invalidity and old age insurance, also provides for maternity benefit.

For the year 1932 the average of those insured against sickness was 18,712,000. Of this total, 17,076,000 (10,613,000 men and 6,463,000 women) were insured in ordinary societies, and 578,000 in Knappschaften or societies for miners, and 1,636,000 in supplementary offices. In 1931, about 22,500,000 persons were insured against accident in 66 industrial and 40 agricultural societies.

The total receipts in 1932 of the ordinary societies were 1,078,348,000 RM., of the Knappschaften 57,528,000 RM., and of the supplementary offices 155,471,000 RM. The total expenditure of the ordinary societies was 1,064,800,000 RM., of the Knappschaften 59,411,000 RM., and of the supplementary offices 152,240,000 RM. The number of cases and days of sickness amounted with the ordinary societies to 6,775,000, and 193,537,000, and with the Knappschaften to 321,000, and 10,208,000 respectively. For accident insurance the receipts (1932) were 300,000,000 RM., and the expenditure 332,400,000 RM. For invalidity and old age insurance the receipts in 1931 were 1,334 million RM., and the expenditure was 1,520 million RM.; including state subsidy of 418 million RM., appropriations for pensions 970 million RM., other appropriations 69 million marks. The deficit was in 1931, 186 million RM., total resources 1,451 million RM. On January 1, 1933, the current benefits for old age, invalidity and sickness amounted to 2,346,000, and pensions to widows and orphans to 562,000 and 349,000, respectively; for the insurance of employees the receipts in 1932 were 446 million RM. and the expenditure 264 million RM. There is in addition compulsory insurance for clerical workers. The number insured is not known exactly; on the basis of the monthly contributions paid it can be estimated at 3.0 million persons at the end of 1932. As insurance of employees is comparatively new, the number of beneficiaries is increasing considerably from year to year. At the end of 1932 there were 183,444 persons receiving old-age pensions (18.0 per cent. increase over 1931), 80,938 widows' pensions (11.7 per cent. increase), and 26,607 orphans' pensions (33.9 per cent. decrease). Contributions in 1932 totalled 287,731,000 RM., total receipts 446,364,000 RM.; pensions accounted for an expenditure of 217,180,000 RM., health insurance benefits 21,923,000 RM.; other benefits 12,414,000 RM., and administration expenses 11,977,000 RM. The excess of receipts over expenditure was, in 1932, 183 million RM.

For the miners' societies the receipts and the expenditure in 1932 were 200 million RM.; for unemployment insurance the contributions in 1932 were 1,029 million RM. and the expenditure 875 million RM.

Finance.

The following table shows the revenue and expenditure for five years, ending March 31 (in millions of Reichsmarks):—

	1930-31	1931-32	1932-33	1933-34 ¹	1934-35 ¹

The floating debt on December 31, 1933, was 2,932,600,000 Reichsmarks, compared with 1,836,200,000 Reichsmarks on December 31, 1932.

Defence.

I. ARMY.

Under the terms of the Treaty of Versailles, and in accordance with the law of March 23, 1921, enlistment is voluntary and for 12 years. Officers have to engage to serve for 25 consecutive years on appointment. The Reichswehr is organized in 7 divisions of infantry and 3 divisions of cavalry, with two army corps headquarter staffs. The strength of an army corps staff is 30 officers and 150 N.C.O.'s and men; of an infantry division, 410 officers and 10,830 men; of a cavalry division, 275 officers and 5,250 men. The total strength of the army in 1932 was 4,500 officers and 96,000 other ranks. The President is the supreme head of all land and sea forces. Under his orders the Minister of National Defence exercises actual command through the medium of a General Officer appointed Chief of the Army Direction, organized as follows :—

By June, 1921, the fortresses specified in the Treaty of Versailles, and also the coast defences of Kiel and Heligoland had been razed. The fortifications on the southern and eastern frontiers may remain in the condition in which they were when the Treaty of Versailles became operative, but according to the request of London (May 5, 1921), all German fortresses had to surrender their equipment, with the exception of Königsberg, which was permitted to retain 83 guns. The maximum armaments authorised are 132,000 rifles, 18,000 carbines, 828 heavy machine guns, 1,418 light machine guns, 63 trench mortars, 189 light trench mortars, 204 7·7 cm. field guns, and 84

10.5 cm. howitzers. No heavy artillery, tanks, or military aircraft are permitted.

The estimates of the Defence Department (Army and Navy) for 1933-34 amounted to 671,000,000 gold marks (485 millions for the army and 186 millions for the navy).

II. NAVY.

The German Navy is directed and administered by the Chief of the Naval Direction, under the Minister of National Defence. In addition to the central administrative division are the Office of Naval Command (staff), the General Naval Office (supply and research), the Constructional Division, also the Naval Administrative Office, and some departments dealing with the relations of the Navy to the Defence Ministry, which also controls the Army.

The Treaty allows to the German Government the right of maintaining a navy, recruited and maintained on a volunteer basis. The fleet consists of five pre-Dreadnoughts completed between 1906 and 1908, each displacing approximately 13,000 tons and mounting four 11-inch and from twelve to fourteen 6.7 or 6-inch guns. These are the Hannover, Hessen, Schlesien, Elsass, and Schleswig-Holstein. They possess little fighting value, though a certain amount of money has been spent in modernising them. The 26-knot battleships Deutschland and Admiral Scheer, each of 10,000 tons, driven by Diesel engines, have now been completed. Each is armed with six 11-inch and eight 6-inch guns, and is claimed to have a radius of action of 10,000 miles at 20 knots. A third ship of this type was laid down in October, 1932. It is proposed to lay down a fourth unit in 1934. These vessels are officially rated as 'armoured ships.' The cruisers include the Berlin, of 3,650 tons, completed 1904, and mounting 8 4.1-inch guns; the still older Amazone and Hamburg; the Emden, of 5,600 tons, completed at the end of 1925, armed with 8 6-inch guns; the Königsberg, Karlsruhe, Köln, and Leipzig of 6,000 tons, completed 1929-31, armed with 9 6-inch guns. By treaty the cruisers built since the war are limited to a standard displacement of 6,000 tons. There are also 32 destroyers and torpedo-boats, 20 of which date from 1907-13; the remainder were built in 1926-29 to replace worn-out vessels. No submarines or naval aircraft are permitted. The battleship Elsass, cruisers Amazone and Hamburg and 3 torpedo-boats have been removed from the Navy List preparatory to disposal.

The battleships, cruisers and torpedo-boats are divided equally to constitute squadrons severally in the North Sea and the Baltic. The cruisers Karlsruhe and Emden are training ships, and have recently made extensive cruises with naval cadets and men.

The total personnel may not exceed 15,000, including a maximum of 1,500 officers and warrant officers. Its present strength is 1,104 officers and petty officers and 13,896 men. The officers and warrant officers engage for a minimum of twenty-five consecutive years, and the petty officers and men for twelve years. The vessels of war are to have a fixed allowance of arms, munitions, and material.

Naval estimates: 1930-31, 194,334,000 marks; 1931-32, 195,897,200 marks; 1933-34, 187,339,700 marks.

Production and Industry.

I. AGRICULTURE.

Generally speaking, small estates and peasant proprietorship prevail in the West and South German States, while large estates prevail in the north-east.

The subdivision of the soil, according to the latest official returns for Germany, without the Saar, at the beginning of June, 1933, was as follows (in acres):—Arable land, 51,195,032; grass, meadows, pasture, 20,373,827; vineyards, 208,430; orchards, market gardens, etc., 1,635,825; total area under cultivation, 73,413,114 acres.

The areas under the principal crops, in acres, and the yields, in metric tons (1 metric ton = 2,204 lbs. or .984 an English ton), were for three years as follows:—

In 1932 the area devoted to vines was 178,765 acres, the wine yield 37,877,444 gallons. Area devoted to tobacco, 1932, 27,115 acres; 1933, 29,912 acres; yield 1932, 28,224,052 kilos; 1931, 23,180,805 kilos. Sugar production, 1932-33, 1,088,445 tons; 1931-32, 1,596,293 tons. In 1932 the hop production was 4,957 tons; in 1931, 7,780 tons.

A census of fruit trees taken in the spring of 1933 shows the following results (in thousands):—Apple trees, 69,685; pear trees, 26,283; plum trees, 36,547; cherry trees, 18,650; apricot trees, 330; peach trees, 2,222; total (including all others), 155,200.

The number of domestic animals in Germany according to the census of December 1, 1932, was:—

States	Horses ¹	Cattle	Sheep	Swine	Goats
Prussia . . .	2,340,020	10,871,126	2,245,636	15,568,852	1,465,597

II. FORESTRY.

Forestry in Germany is an industry of great importance, conducted under the care of the State on scientific methods. The forest area of Germany in its present extent was put in 1927 at 31,635,443 acres, State and partly State forests, 10,328,563 acres; communal forests, 4,914,498 acres; private forests, 15,129,785 acres, and forests belonging to various associations or foundations, 1,262,597 acres. Of the whole forest area 9,110,040 acres are under deciduous trees, oak, birch, ash, beech, etc., and 22,525,403 acres bear pine, larch, red and white fir, etc. The forest area in 1933 was 31,950,255 acres, or 27 per cent. of the total area of Germany.

III. MINING.

The great bulk of the minerals raised in Germany is produced in Prussia, where the chief mining districts are Westphalia, Rhenish Prussia, and Silesia, for coal, iron and metal smelting works, Central Germany for brown coal, the Harz for iron and copper ore, and the Westerwald for iron ore. Saxony has coal mines.

In 1925 there were 2,942 mines in Germany employing 808,593 persons (797,350 men, and 11,243 women). Number of blast furnaces in 1932, 154; in 1931, 155.

The quantities of the principal minerals raised were as follows in metric tons :—

—	1930	1931	1932
Coal	142,698,728	118,640,113	104,740,540
Lignite	146,010,044	133,310,720	122,646,629

Petroleum	174,826	228,931	229,735

Coal output, 1933, 109,920,682 tons; lignite, 126,795,999 tons.

In 1913 the total output of pig iron was 16,763,809 metric tons; in 1932, 3,932,511 tons; in 1933, 5,266,769 tons. Ingot steel production (including castings from steel-works) in 1913 totalled 17,147,360 metric tons; in 1932, 5,746,856 tons; in 1933, 7,585,722 tons. In 1931, the output of coke was 23,189,836 tons; in 1932, 19,127,675 tons; in 1933, 20,713,502 tons.

IV. FISHERIES.

In 1932 the yield of the North Sea fisheries was 302,139,000 kilos of fish; and of the Baltic fisheries, 36,865,800 kilos of fish.

V. MANUFACTURES.

The chief seat of the German iron production is the Ruhr: to a less extent also in Sieg, Lahn, and Dill districts. Steel is chiefly made in the Ruhr. The manufacture of both iron and steel is carried on in the vicinity of the coal mines in the district of the Lower Rhine, and in Westphalia. The electrical industry is found principally in Berlin. The chemical industry is centred on the Rhine, near Mannheim, the Main and Cologne, and in Prussian Saxony. Saxony (Free State) is the leading State in the production of textiles, but Silesia and Westphalia also produce linen; Saxony (Free State), Rhenish Prussia, Westphalia, Württemberg, and Bavaria produce cotton goods. Woollens are manufactured in several Prussian provinces, also in Saxony, Bavaria, and Thuringia; silk in Rhenish Prussia and Baden. Beetroot sugar is an important manufacture in Prussia, chiefly in the provinces of Saxony, Silesia, Hanover, and Pomerania. Potash is produced mainly in Prussian Saxony, Thuringia, and Hanover. Glass, porcelain, and earthenware in Silesia, Thuringia, Bavaria, and Saxony; clocks and wooden ware in Baden, Württemberg, and Bavaria; and beer principally in Bavaria.

The following are the statistics of the beet sugar manufacture in Germany:—

Years beginning 1 September	Number of Factories	Beetroot used in Metric Tons	Production in Metric Tons		No. of Kgs. Beetroot to produce 1 Kg. of Sugar

During the calendar year 1932 there passed in transit through the Kaiser Wilhelm (Kiel) Canal 48,074 merchant vessels, aggregating 12,911,117 net tons.

Internal Communications.

I. RAILWAYS.

On April 1, 1920, all the various German State railways were transferred to the Central Government. On October 11, 1924, as a result of the adoption of the Dawes Scheme, the German railway system was transferred to a private company—the Deutsche Reichsbahn-Gesellschaft—which manages and administers the system. The railways, however, remain the property of the State. The total length of railway line was 58,388 kilometres, or 36,281 miles on December 31, 1932. Of this total 53,856 kilometres, or 33,465 miles are State lines.

In 1932, 280,376,089 tons of merchandise including free-hauled were carried by the Deutsche Reichsbahn-Gesellschaft. The number of passengers (including military) was 1,305 million, who travelled 30,811 million kilometres, an average of 23·6 kilometres per journey per passenger.

On December 31, 1932, there were in operation 3,293 miles of tramway, and 6,237 miles of light local railways.

II. CANALS AND NAVIGATION AND AIRWAYS.

The length of inland waterways in 1932 was 7,506 kilometres, or 4,665 miles. The inland waterways fleet at the end of 1932 comprised 17,785 vessels of 6,439,351 tons. In 1932, 73,619,000 tons of goods were carried on the inland waterways.

Air traffic for 3 years:—

Year	Miles Flown	Passengers	Passenger Miles	Goods Traffic	Air Mail
				Tons	Tons
1930	6,750,653	93,677	14,799,898	2,176·0	481·0

1932	5,768,871	98,489	17,530,094	2,118·7	384·2

III. POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS.

The postal and telegraphic services are retained in the hands of the Central Government.

Statistics for 1932:— Employees, 350,814; total number of post, telegraph, telephone, and radio offices, 61,528.

The following are the telegraph and telephone statistics for the year 1932:—Length of telegraph lines, 159,456 kilometres or 99,082 miles; of wire, 5,519,193 kilometres or 3,429,497 miles; number of foreign telegrams, 10,304,000; of inland telegrams, 12,479,000, including official service telegrams. Length of telephone lines, 223,063 kilometres or 138,606 miles; of wire, 18,814,483 kilometres or 11,690,879 miles; number of telephone boxes, 2,960,401; of telephone connections, 2,165,745,000.

International cable service is provided by the Deutsch-Atlantischen Telegraphengesellschaft, which operates cables via Emden, the Azores, and Emden-Vigo.

Currency, Banking and Credit.

By the Currency Law of August 30, 1924, which came into operation on October 11, 1924, the currency was once more established on a gold basis, with the following gold coins as legal tender: 20 and 10 Reichsmark pieces. Provision was also made for silver coins of 1, 2, 3 and 5 marks, and for 1, 2, 4 5, 10, and 50 pfennig. The notes of the Reichsbank (10 marks and upwards) are likewise legal tender; they have a minimum cover of 40 per cent. of their face value in gold and foreign exchange; three-quarters of this cover must consist of gold and the remainder of good commercial paper, complying with specified conditions. For the present the convertibility of these notes is practically suspended. Besides the Reichsbank there are the four so-called 'private note banks': (1) Bayerische Notenbank, in Munich; (2) Sächsische Bank, in Dresden; (3) Württembergische Notenbank, in Stuttgart; and (4) Badische Bank, in Karlsruhe, which also have the right of issuing notes (50 marks and upwards), on the same terms as the Reichsbank. They may issue notes up to a total of 194 million Reichsmarks.

On October 16, 1923, a proposal was adopted for the setting up of a Renten Bank to issue notes (Rentenmark) secured (since August 30, 1924) by first mortgages in gold marks on the entire German landed property.

On September 30, 1933, there were in circulation Reichsbank notes to the value of 3,617·2 million marks; 'Private Bank' notes (see above), 175·4 million marks; notes of the Rentenbank (all of which must be withdrawn by the Reichsbank within 10 years), 391·9 million marks; and coins 1,546·5 million marks; making a total of 5,730·9 million marks.

The condition of the Reichsbank of Germany on February 15, 1934, is shown as follows (in thousands of marks):—

Assets	Amount February 15, 1934	Liabilities	Amount February 15, 1934
Gold	333,307	Capital and reserves	623,151
Bills and cheques	2,675,608	Notes	3,204,851
Loans	63,397	Other liabilities	723,283

By the Bank Law of August 30, 1924, the privileges of the Reichsbank were renewed for 50 years.

The Renten Bank commenced operations on November 15, 1923; it is now in liquidation and the process is expected to be completed by April 11, 1935 at latest. On September 30, 1933, its only credits outstanding were those to the Central Government, which amounted to 408·9 million Rentenmarks. The Renten Bank had issued notes to the value of 408·9 million Rentenmarks, of which the Reichsbank had 17·1 million Rentenmarks, cash in hand, and the rest (391·9 million Rentenmarks) were in general circulation.

By a law of March 19, 1924, there was established the German Gold Discount Bank (Deutsche Golddiscountbank) for the purpose of providing foreign currencies for German business. The capital of the institution is 10 millions sterling, one half provided by the Reichsbank (with the aid of English credits); the other half, from private sources, is not wholly paid up. On August 31, 1933, the German Savings Banks had deposits amounting to 10,545·4 million Reichsmarks.

The capital of the Reichsbank is 150,000,000 Reichsmarks.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The Reichsmark, of 100 Reichspfennig, is of the normal value of 11½*d.*, or 20·43 Reichsmark to the pound sterling. It contains 0·358423 grammes of gold. The metric system of weights and measures is in force.

THE SAAR.

According to paragraph 49 of the Treaty of Versailles, the Saar Basin was placed under the control of the League of Nations. In 1935, the population will decide, by plebiscite, what nationality they desire. Meanwhile the district is governed by a commission of 5 nominated by the League, of whom 1 is French, 1 resident of the Saar, and 3 others. There is also a Landesrat of 30 members, which co-operates with the Government in an advisory capacity.

Area : Prussian Saar district, 573 sq. miles ; Bavarian Saar, 164 sq. miles ; total, 737 sq. miles.

Population (census of July 19, 1927) : Prussian portion, 670,019 ; Bavarian portion, 100,011 ; total, 770,030 (385,679 males, and 384,351 females). Estimated population on January 1, 1932, 815,907 (409,709 males, and 406,198 females).

In 1927, there were in the area 558,857 Catholics, 201,354 Protestants, 4,038 Jews, and 5,781 others.

Principal towns (census of 1927) : Saarbrücken (125,020) ; Neunkirchen (41,031) ; Dudweiler (23,647) ; Sulzbach (22,402) ; St. Ingbert (20,817) ; Saarlouis (15,836) ; Friedrichstal (13,908) ; Homburg (11,201).

Number of schools (May 1, 1932), 456 ; scholars, 117,949 ; teachers, 2,528.

Revenue and expenditure, 1932, balanced at 529,166,226 francs.

STATES OF GERMANY.

ANHALT.

(FREISTAAT ANHALT.)

The Constitution of the Free State of Anhalt bears date July 18, 1919.

Under the National-Socialist (Nazi) régime, popular government and the Diet have been abolished. By a law of the Government of the Reich of April 7, 1933, the State is under the absolute rule of a Statthalter, or Governor, who is the personal representative of Chancellor Hitler.

Governor (Statthalter).—Wilhelm Friedrich Loeper. (Also in Brunswick.)

Area, 893 square miles. Population, June 16, 1933, 365,824 (177,341 males and 188,483 females). The capital, Dessau, 78,634 inhabitants on June 16, 1933; Bernburg, 38,328; Köthen, 26,695; Zerbst, 20,155; Rosslau, 12,845; Coswig, 10,562. Population by religion, June 16, 1925: Protestants, 320,850; Catholics, 14,129; Jews, 1,140; other Christian confessions, 248; the rest, principally free-thinkers, 14,678.

Estimated income and expenditure, 1933-34, 24,485,000 marks. Public debt, December 31, 1932, 17,168,765 marks; State property, December 31, 1932, 310,800,000 marks.

BADEN.

(FREISTAAT BADEN.)

Until 1771, Baden was a Margraviate divided into two or more lines; it was then united, and subsequently received various additions, and its ruler took the title of Elector in 1803, and of Grand-Duke in 1806. On November 22, 1918, the Grand-Duke abdicated, and the Provisional Government proclaimed Baden a Republic.

Under the National-Socialist (Nazi) régime, the Constitution was set aside, and the Diet and popular government abolished. By the law of the Government of the Reich of April 7, 1933, the State is under the absolute rule of a Statthalter, or Governor, who is the personal representative of Chancellor Hitler.

Governor (Statthalter).—Robert Wagner.

For general administrative purposes there are (since April 1, 1924) 40 'Amtsbezirke,' superintended by four general commissioners (Landes-Kommissäre). For local government there are 11 circles (Kreise), and 1,532 communes (Gemeinden), 123 communal cities, and 1,409 parishes.

Area and Population:—

District	Area: Square miles	Population		Pop. per square mile 1933

Pforzheim . 79,816	Offenburg . 17,860	Rastatt . 14,208

Marriages, 1932, 16,301; births, 38,487; deaths, 26,172; stillbirths, 1,072; divorces, 1,163.

Religion and Education.—In 1925 there were 1,350,479 Catholics, 910,324 Protestants, 8,058 other Christians, 24,064 Jews, and 19,537 others.

All religious denominations enjoy equality and self-government, appointing their own clergy. The Protestant Church is under a Bishop. The Roman Catholic Church has an Archbishop (at Freiburg), whose 4 suffragans are outside Baden. The Catholic Foundations Council (Oberstiftungsrat) manages the property of the Catholic Church. The Jews, whose ecclesiastical affairs are managed by the 'Oberrat der Israeliten,' have 15 rabbimates.

Instruction is general, free, and compulsory. Schools are under the authority of the State. Religious instruction, however, is provided by each denomination, but there is no compulsion to give or to receive religious instruction. Baden has 2 universities (Heidelberg and Freiburg), 1 technical high school (Karlsruhe), 1 Academy of Arts (Karlsruhe), 1 commercial high school (Heidelberg), 17 gymnasia, 15 Realgymnasia, 23 Ober-realschulen, 14 Realschulen, 15 high schools for girls, 3 training colleges for teachers, and a number of technical and special schools.

Finance.—The budget for 1932 and 1933 fixes the revenue at 425,508,700 marks, and expenditure at 431,041,100 marks (excluding arrears of revenue from previous budgets amounting to 2,903,000 marks, and expenditure to 4,290,400 marks). Debt, March 31, 1932, 139,400,000 marks.

Production and Industry.—Of the total area, 2,040,807 acres are cultivable land and 1,450,914 acres are forests. In 1933 the area under cultivation was 2,064,980 acres. Oats, barley, wheat, rye and potatoes are grown. Vines in 1932, 30,630 acres, yield 7,276,752 gallons of wine; beetroot, turnips, hemp, hops and chicory are also grown. Tobacco area in 1933, 14,242 acres. The corn crop in 1933 was 427,263 metric tons. The number of animals in 1932 was: cattle, 643,465; pigs, 531,410; sheep, 37,915; goats, 104,481; horses, 63,735. Mineral produce almost solely salt, potash and building-stone.

Principal manufactures: Tiles, cigars, jewellery, machinery, clocks, musical instruments, chemicals, silk ribbons, cotton tissues, paper and cardboard, leather, wood-work, and brushes.

BAVARIA.

(FREISTAAT BAYERN.)

Bavaria was for over a century a kingdom, ruled by descendants of the ancient Counts of Wittelsbach, who flourished in the twelfth century. Duke Maximilian I. of Bavaria was elevated to the rank of Elector of the Holy Roman Empire in the Thirty Years' War; and Elector Maximilian Joseph was raised to the rank of king by Napoleon I. in 1805. On November 22, 1918, the dynasty was deposed, and Bavaria was declared a Republic.

Under the National-Socialist (Nazi) régime, the Constitution was set aside, and the Diet and popular government abolished. By the law of the Government of the Reich of April 7, 1933, the State is under the absolute rule of a Statthalter, or Governor, who is the personal representative of Chancellor Hitler.

Governor (Statthalter).—General Franz von Epp. (Appointed April 11, 1933.)

PRUSSIA.

(FREISTAAT PREUSSEN.)

On November 13, 1918, Prussia was proclaimed a Republic.

Until that date the country was ruled by sovereigns of the Hohenzollern family, the last of the line being William II (1888-1918). For an account of the rise of Prussia, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR BOOK for 1922, p. 973.

Constitution and Government. ..

The Constitution, adopted on November 30, 1920, gave a vote to every citizen, male and female, over 20 years of age in general, equal, secret, and direct suffrage. Prussia was declared to be a Republic. Besides the Diet (Landtag) there was a State Council (Staatsrat) elected by the Provincial Assemblies on the basis of one representative for every 500,000 inhabitants.

The National-Socialists (Nazis) seized the Government of Prussia on January 30, 1933. Under their régime the Constitution has been set aside, and popular government and the Diet abolished. By a law of the Government of the Reich of April 7, 1933, Prussia is under the absolute rule of a Statthalter, or Governor, who appoints the Cabinet.

Governor (Statthalter).—Adolf Hitler.

Prime Minister.—Hermann Göring (appointed April 11, 1933).

For local government Prussia is divided into 14 Provinces, Government districts (Regierungsbezirke), urban circles (Stadtkreise), and rural circles (Landkreise). Urban circles consist of towns of over 25,000 inhabitants; rural circles consist of the smaller towns and rural communes (Landgemeinden). In provinces and rural circles the government is in the hands of an official appointed by the Prime Minister. Each province has a governor (Oberpräsident); each government district has a president, and deals chiefly with local affairs of State concern. In towns the deliberative authority used to be the town council (Stadtverordnetenversammlung), elected on the system of proportional suffrage. This has been abolished under Nazi rule, and the towns are under the absolute authority of an official appointed by the Prime Minister.

Religion.

Absolute religious liberty is guaranteed in the Republic. According to the census of 1925 there were in Prussia 24,804,018 Protestants (65·0 per cent.), 11,943,264 Catholics (31·3 per cent.), 54,664 other Christians (0·1 per cent.), 404,446 Jews (1·1 per cent.), and 969,597 others (2·5 per cent.).

The Evangelical or Protestant Church has since October 31, 1817, consisted of a fusion of the Lutheran and Calvinistic bodies, from which, however, there are still a few dissenters. It is governed since 1933 by a bishop. The constitution of the Catholic Church differs in the various provinces. As a result of the Concordat of July, 1929, Berlin has its own Roman Catholic bishop. There are approximately half a million Catholics in Greater Berlin out of a population of 4½ millions. Altogether in Prussia there are two archbishops and ten bishops.

Education.

Education in Prussia is compulsory. Every town, or community in town or country, must maintain a school supported by local rates, supplemented by the State, and administered by the local authorities. All parents are compelled to have their children properly taught or to send them to one of these elementary schools, in which all fees are now abolished. No compulsion exists in reference to a higher educational institution than elementary schools, but parents who send more than one child to any school supported by the community have, in many cases, a reduction made in the charge, and a limited number of pupils (about 10 per cent.) whose parents cannot afford to pay the full rate, either enjoy this reduction or are admitted entirely free, at the discretion of the authorities. The school age is from 6 to 14 years.

The following table gives the educational statistics of Prussia :—

SAXONY.

(FREISTAAT SACHSEN.)

The former Kingdom of Saxony was proclaimed a Republic on November 9, 1918.

Under the National-Socialist (Nazi) régime, the Constitution was set aside, and popular government and the Diet abolished. By a law of the Government of the Reich of April 7, 1933, the State is under the absolute rule of a Statthalter, or Governor, who is the personal representative of Chancellor Hitler.

Governor (Statthalter).—Herr Mutschmann.

SCHAUMBURG-LIPPE.

(FREISTAAT SCHAUMBURG-LIPPE.)

Schaumburg-Lippe was proclaimed a Republic in November, 1918. The Constitution bears date February 24, 1922.

Under the National-Socialist (Nazi) régime, the Constitution was set aside, and popular government and the Diet abolished. By a law of the Government of the Reich of April 7, 1933, the State is under the absolute rule of a Statthalter, or Governor, who is the personal representative of Chancellor Hitler.

Governor (Statthalter).—Dr. Alfred Meyer. (Appointed May 17, 1933; also for Lippe.)

Area, 131 sq. miles; population (1933), 50,469 (24,440 males and 26,029 females).

For the financial year 1933 the budget balanced at 2,506,476 Reichsmarks. Public debt: April 1, 1932, 2,170,000 Reichsmarks.

Except 715 Catholics and 230 Jews, the inhabitants are Protestant. Bückeburg, the capital, had, in 1932, 6,500 inhabitants.

THURINGIA.

(LAND THÜRINGEN.)

The seven Thuringian States after much negotiation, which commenced in May, 1919, and ended on December 24, 1919, combined into one State. The two Republics of Reuss had by a law of April 4, 1919, already been merged into the one People's State of Reuss, and Coburg had elected to merge with Bavaria. On March 31, 1922, the 'Administrative Districts' (Gebietsregierungen) of Thuringia were abolished, and instead the country was divided into 10 town and 15 country Districts (Kreise) and one sub-district (Kreisabteilung).

Under the National-Socialist (Nazi) régime, the Constitution was actually, though not de jure, set aside, popular government abolished, and the Diet suspended. By a law of the Government of the Reich of April 7, 1933, the State is under the absolute rule of a Statthalter, or Governor, who is the personal representative of Chancellor Hitler.

Governor (Statthalter).—Herr Sauckel.

WÜRTTEMBERG.

(VOLKSSTAAT WÜRTTEMBERG.)

Württemberg was proclaimed a People's Republic in November, 1918. Its Constitution bore date September 25, 1919. But under the National-Socialist (Nazi) régime, the Constitution was actually, though not de jure, set aside popular government abolished, and the Diet suspended. By a law of the Government of the Reich of April 7, 1933, the State is under the absolute rule of a Statthalter or Governor, who is the personal representative of Chancellor Hitler.

Governor (Statthalter).—Herr Murr.

For administrative purposes the country is divided into the City of Stuttgart, 61 districts (Oberämter), and 1,870 communes (Gemeinden).

GREECE.

(HELLENIC REPUBLIC.)

GREECE gained her independence from Turkey in 1821-29, and by the Protocol of London, of February 3, 1830, was declared a kingdom, under the guarantee of Great Britain, France, and Russia. The crown was accepted by Prince Otto of Bavaria, who ascended the throne January 25, 1833, being under the age of eighteen. He was expelled the Kingdom, after a reign of 29 years, in October, 1862, which event was followed by the election, in 1863, under the directing guidance of the three guaranteeing Powers, of Prince William, younger son of Christian, IX, King of Denmark as King George I. George I., who was assassinated on March 18, 1913, was succeeded by his son Constantine, who reigned until June 11, 1917, when he was excluded from the throne by the allied Powers. Alexandros, second son of King Constantine, then reigned till his death on October 25, 1920. Constantine returned to Greece on December 19, 1920, reigned until his abdication on September 27, 1922, and died in exile on January 11, 1923. He was succeeded by his eldest son George II, who was forced to leave Greece on December 18, 1923.

Constitution and Government.

By a plébiscite on April 13, 1924, the Republic was established. In the voting 758,742 votes were for a Republic and 325,322 votes against. A new Constitution was published on September 22, 1926. It was revised by the Chamber elected on November 7, 1926. The new constitution was published on June 3, 1927. According to the constitution the President of the Republic is elected every five years by the Chamber and the Senate. The Chamber of deputies is composed of 200 to 250 members elected every four years by universal suffrage. The Senate is composed of 120 Senators, of whom nine-twelfths, at least, are elected by the people every nine years, the remainder may be elected by the Chamber and the Senate in a common meeting. By a decree dated January 31, 1930, women were granted the right to vote at municipal elections.

President of the Republic.—Alexander Zaimis (elected December 14, 1929).

Elections to the Chamber were held on March 5, 1933, with the following result: Liberals and National Union (Venezelist), 111; Popular Party, 135.

The Ministry, constituted on March 10, 1933, and modified March 21, 1934, is as follows:—

Premier.—P. Tsaldaris.

Minister of Finance.—Spyridion Loverdos.

Minister for Foreign Affairs.—D. Maximos.

Minister of War.—General George Kondylis.

Minister of Marine.—Admiral Alexander Hajikyriakos.

Minister of the Interior.—M. Yannopoulos.

Minister of Agriculture.—Jean Theotokis.

Minister of Justice.—S. Taliadouros.

Minister of National Economy.—George Pesmazoglou.

Minister of Communications.—Peter Kallis.

Minister of Aviation.—Jean Rallis.

Minister of Education.—T. Turkovassilis

Minister of Public Welfare and Minister of Health.—J. Makropoulos.

Area and Population.

The total area of the country is 130,199 square kilometres or 50,257 square miles, of which the mainland accounts for 41,641 square miles and the islands account for 8,616 square miles.

The population of the country, according to the Census of May 16, 1928, is as follows by geographical and administrative divisions.

There were 3,076,235 males and 3,128,449 females according to the 1928 census, while the urban population was shown as 33 per cent., and rural population 67 per cent. On December 31, 1932, the population was estimated at 6,567,000.

Mount Athos, the easternmost of the three prongs of the peninsula of Chalcidice, is inhabited by the monks of Greek (17), Russian (1), Bulgarian (1), and Serbian (1) monasteries and hermitages (Sketai). The monks and the novices till the fields, tend the vineyards, take in the harvest, fish, weave, transact business in their own shops, and, indeed, carry on the secular duties of the community as well as the sacred. Originally inhabited by one mediæval ascetic, Peter the Athonite, it has in the course of time grown to a religious colony of 4,858 males (Census of 1928), distributed in 20 monasteries with their respective dependencies; and after having passed in the fifteenth century from the sovereignty of the Greek Emperors of Byzantium to that of the Sultans it fell again into the hands of the Greeks, who occupied it in November, 1912. Each of the 20 monasteries is a sort of little republic in itself, those of the 'coenobitic' category being ruled by abbots elected by the brethren of the monastery, while the 'idiorrhhythmic' monasteries are administered by a board of overseers (epitropoi) elected for a certain term of years. For centuries the peninsula was administered by a Council of 4 members, and an Assembly of 20 members, the latter consisting of 1 deputy from each monastery. The Greek government on September 10, 1926, recognized the autonomous form of government existing in Mount Athos for centuries and ratified it by Articles 106-109 of the Constitution. It has also sanctioned by a law the Charter of Mount Athos, which was drawn up at the extraordinary double meeting held by representatives of its 20 monasteries on May 20, 1924.

Since 1925, there has been a fiscal Free Zone in the town of Salonika covering an area of 245,180 square yards on land and 188,968 square yards on water. Since 1924 there has been a Yugoslav Free Zone in the port of Salonika with an area of 73,536 square yards on land and 40,119 square yards on water with 909 miles of railway.

Vital statistics for 3 years:—

Year	Living Births	Marriages	Deaths	Surplus of births over deaths
1930	100,565	44,649	108,811	95,754
1931	109,243	45,617	114,869	84,874
1932	188,689	39,199	110,605	67,034

Religion.

According to the census of 1928, there were 5,961,529 adherents of the Greek Orthodox Church, 35,182 Catholics, 9,003 Protestants, 126,017 Mussulmans, 72,791 Jews and 162 belonging to other religions. By the terms of the Constitution of 1864, the Greek Orthodox Church was declared the religion of the State, but complete toleration and liberty of worship was guaranteed to all other sects. The government of the Orthodox Church is at present vested in a permanent council, called the Holy Synod, consisting of the Metropolitan of Athens as president and 12 bishops, who must during their year of office reside at Athens. The Orthodox Church has 32 archbishops in the old territory and 41 archbishops and 7 bishops in the new territories. By agreement with the Œcumenical Patriarchate of Constantinople in 1929 the sees within the spiritual jurisdiction of the latter in the new territories were provisionally attached to that of the Holy Synod of Athens for convenience in administration.

Education.

All children between the ages of seven and twelve years must attend school, but the law is not well enforced in country districts.

There were (1930-31) 539 infant schools with 542 teachers and 28,209 pupils (14,619 boys and 13,590 girls); 7,659 primary schools with 13,533 teachers and 748,337 pupils (416,562 boys and 331,775 girls). There were also 56 private infant schools with 57 teachers and 3,048 pupils (1,629 boys and 1,419 girls), and 242 private primary schools with 959 teachers and 21,083 pupils (11,654 boys and 9,429 girls). For secondary education there were 436 high schools with 3,008 teachers and 66,574 pupils (48,681 boys and 17,893 girls). There were also 24 private secondary schools with 623 teachers and 6,599 pupils (3,267 boys and 3,332 girls). There were 22 commercial schools with 241 teachers and 2,869 pupils (1,979 boys and 790 girls). There are 45 agricultural schools with 157 teachers and 1,106 pupils. There were also 8 seminaries with 94 teachers and 561 pupils. There were also 1 commercial high school with 21 professors and teachers and 465 students (440 boys and 25 girls), 1 agricultural high school with 18 professors and teachers and 178 students (177 men and 1 woman), 4 military colleges with 95 professors and teachers and 718 students, 11 practical schools for officers with 154 teachers and 499 students, and 4 other inferior military schools with 77 teachers and 1,504 pupils. Also 3 naval colleges with 46 professors and teachers and 236 students, and 14 other inferior naval schools with 119 teachers and 2,216 pupils. There were also 2 aviation schools with 20 teachers and professors and 95 pupils. There are 2 universities in Athens, the National University (founded 1836) and the Capodistria University, with 131 professors and 6,088 students (5,573 men and 515 women); and 1 at Salonika (founded in 1925), with 44 professors and 751 students (671 men and 80 women). The Polytechnic, with 5 faculties, 107 professors and 528 students (524 men and 4 women), provides instruction in electricity, chemistry, mechanics, architecture, surveying. To the Polytechnic are annexed inferior schools, providing instruction in surveying with 28 professors and teachers and 248 pupils (207 boys and 41 girls). The School of Fine Arts provides instruction in painting, sculpture, etc., with 12 professors and 189 students (110 boys and 79 girls).

The Ministry of Education is also charged with the Service of Antiquities, managed by an Archæological Council, which is responsible for the conservation and reparation of ancient monuments of all periods (Prehistoric, Classical, Byzantine and Mediæval), the upkeep of museums and the conduct of excavations.

British scholarship is represented in Athens by the British School of Archæology, which, by the aid of grants from the Government, universities, and private subscribers, is able to encourage and carry out scientific research of all kinds, but especially art, archæology and history. Members of the school have in recent years been responsible for the excavations at Knossos, in Crete, in Melos, at Sparta, in Thessaly, at Mycenæ, and elsewhere. There are also similar French, American, Italian, Austrian and German institutions.

The total public debt of Greece amounted on December 31, 1931, to 42,844,123,795 drachmai, distributed as follows: Loans in gold, 29,504,401,111 drachmai; loans in banknotes, 5,904,143,758; floating debt, 4,686,474,692; railroad debt, 2,735,568,000 drachmai, and liabilities according to the treaty of Lausanne 13,536,235 drachmai. The service on this debt during the fiscal year ended March 31, 1931, is estimated at 3,728,861,412 drachmai.

In accordance with the peace preliminaries between Greece and Turkey and the Greek Law of Control of March, 1893, the financial commission of delegates representing France, Great Britain, and Italy (the mediating Powers) is established at Athens in direct relation with the Greek Minister of Finance. The public debt of Greece is in large measure under the control of this commission. To this commission were assigned, for the payment of the interest on the external debt, the revenues (for the most part in Old Greece) from certain Government monopolies, the stamp duty, and the import duties at the port of the Piræus. The total income from these sources was, 1932, 201,210,275 drachmai from monopolies, and 881,672,069 from the Piræus customs.

The payments made by the commission in 1931 for the service of Greek foreign debts totalled 1,181,837,574 drachmai as compared with 1,472,468,080 drachmai in 1930.

The collection of the assigned revenues and the administration of the monopolies are entrusted to a Greek Company, called the 'Société de Régie des Revenues affectés au Service de la Dette Publique,' which is under the control of the international commission.

Defence.

I. ARMY.

Military service in Greece is compulsory and universal. It commences in the 21st year, and lasts up to the 50th. The normal term of service in the active army is 18 months for all arms, followed by 19 years in the first reserve of the active army and 8 years in the second. The normal annual contingent of recruits is about 60,000. Each annual contingent is called up for service in the active army in two batches on May 1 and September 1.

The country is divided into 12 military areas. To these correspond 12 divisions and 1 brigade. Moreover there are two brigades of cavalry and a number of units (telegraphists, railwaymen and engineers), as well as of Army Service Corps directly under the Minister of War. Each division contains 2 or 3 regiments of infantry (6 battalions) and one regiment of Mountain Artillery (3 or 4 batteries). The Air Force consists of 3 flying regiments each of 4 flights with 174 aeroplanes.

The effective strength in 1933 was 4,995 officers and the number of other ranks serving was 48,048.

The infantry is armed with the Mannlicher-Schönauer and the Lebel rifle, the polybole guns, Hotchkiss as well as French ones, and the mitrailleuses Schwargloze, St. Etienne and Hotchkiss. The artillery is armed with mountain guns of 65 mm. and Schneider 75 and 105 m. 1919 and by field guns Schneider, M.P.O.F. and Krupp as well as with heavy short guns, Schneider 155. The budget expenditure for the army for 1932-33 amounted to 1,184,800,000 drachmai.

II. NAVY.

The Greek Navy is not a force of any considerable importance. The principal vessels are as follows:—

—	Launched	Displacement Tons	Armour		Principal Armament	Torpedo Tubes	Horse Power	Max. Speed Knots
			Belt In.	Gun In.
Giorgios Averoff.	1910	9,960	8	8-6½	4 9-2; 8 7-5in.; 16 3in	3	19,000	22-5

¹ Cruiser purchased 1914, originally built for China. Now fitted for minelaying.

There are 12 destroyers, 9 torpedo boats, 4 minelayers, 6 submarines, and a variety of miscellaneous craft. The Giorgios Averoff and Helle have been completely refitted and modernized.

The principal dockyard at Salamis has recently been extended, new docks and workshops being added. On the coast of Scaramanga, opposite Salamis, new buildings have been erected for the Torpedo and Mining School.

The services of a British naval mission to reorganize the Greek fleet were lent by the Admiralty from time to time between 1910 and 1932.

Production and Industry.

Greece is mainly an agricultural country. Of the total area only one-fifth is cultivable. The total area under cultivation in 1931 was 1,931,905 hectares (4,829,763 acres). Forest area is 2,406,502 hectares (5,944,059 acres), of which 4,121,119 acres were State owned.

By the draining of Lake Copais, an area of about 53,000 acres has been acquired for agricultural purposes. Irrigation and drainage canals, farm roads and buildings are being constructed, tree planting is undertaken, and the breed of cattle is being improved.

The acreage and production of the chief crops for two years were as follows:—

	Area in Acres		Production in Metric Tons
	1932	1933 ¹	1932	1933 ¹

Olives are abundant, about 380,000 acres being under cultivation: olive oil production in 1932 was 134,320 metric tons, valued at 1,962,876,798 drachmai, as compared with 103,699 metric tons, valued at 1,216,661,071 drachmai in 1931. Fruit production in 1932 was: lemons, 67,829,000, valued at 29,239,092 drachmai; oranges, 87,522,000 (35,828,288 drachmai); mandarins, 106,046,000 (32,369,182 drachmai); apples, 60,506 metric quintals (17,358,974 drachmai); pears, 196,136 metric quintals (35,311,728 drachmai); figs (dried), 158,105 metric quintals (66,265,795 drachmai). Rice is cultivated in Greek Macedonia—Vodena, near Salonika, being the principal centre. Two kinds of cheese are produced in Greece—sliced cheese in brine (commercially known as Fetta cheese) and head cheese.

There were in Greece (1932) 324,234 horses, 160,388 mules, 363,705 asses, 875,275 cattle, 6,926,960 sheep, 4,677,525 goats, and 471,740 pigs.

Greece has a great variety of mineral deposits. The ore and other minerals worked include iron, iron-pyrites, emery, copper, zinc, lead, silver, manganese, aluminium, antimony, nickel, magnesite ore, lignite, sulphur ochre, bitumen, marble (white and coloured), and various other earths. The Laurium district, Thessaly, Euboea, the Aegean islands and other parts of Greece yield a large output of ores and earths.

The principal mineral output of Greece for three years is given as follows (in metric tons):—

—	1930	1931	1932	—	1930	1931	1932

Industry in Greece is making considerable progress. The leading industrial products are olive oil, wine, textiles, chemicals, articles of food. In 1931 the value of the production of industries was 6,079,838,000 drachmai, as compared with 6,671,221,300 drachmai in 1930.

Commerce.

Value of the commerce of Greece (in thousands of drachmai) for five years was as follows:—

—	1928	1929	1930	1931	1932

Navigation and Shipping.

The merchant navy of Greece on June 30, 1933, had 565 steam and motor ships of 1,457,903 tons. In the year 1932, 5,727,241 tons of shipping in the foreign trade entered the ports of Greece, while 5,595,802 tons cleared.

Internal Communications.

There are about 8,611 miles of roads in Old and New Greece, and 570 miles under construction. There is a canal (opened November 9, 1893) across the Isthmus of Corinth (about 4 miles). In 1932, 4,459 steamers of 2,232,912 tons and 1,906 sailing vessels of 50,313 tons passed through the canal.

Railways were open for traffic in 1931 for a length of 1,663 miles, of which 823 miles were operated by the State. The operating revenues of the State railways in 1931 reached 312,057,125 drachmai, while operating expenses were 335,745,282 drachmai.

The telegraph lines on December 31, 1932, had a length of 13,662 miles, with 33,625 miles of wire. The number of offices was 4,298. They handled 3,715,985 inland telegrams, and 746,742 international, of which 326,798 were despatched abroad and 419,944 were received.

In 1931 there were 236 miles of urban telephone lines with 2,430 miles of wire, and 4,586 miles of inter-urban lines with 15,394 miles of wire. The number of subscribers was 9,500, and the number of offices 25.

There were 1,296 post offices at the end of 1932, and there passed through the post in that year:—Inland post:—letters, 47,991,617; post-cards, 1,740,585; printed matter, journals and samples, 33,385,670; postal orders, 1,265,968, of a total value of drachmai 1,136,250,481; parcels, 525,986. Foreign postal service (despatched):—letters, 10,349,227; post-cards, 12,214,255; printed matter and journals, 2,870,536; parcels, 18,316. Foreign postal service (received):—letters, 12,214,255; post-cards, 1,087,458; journals and other printed paper, 4,390,580; parcels, 65,612; money orders, 17,750, of a total value of drachmai 27,395,850.

Banking, Money, Weights and Measures.

The National Bank (founded in 1841) was authorised to issue bank notes, the amount being increased each time the privilege of the bank was extended. According to a decree of May 12, 1928, the note-issuing privilege of the National Bank was transferred to the new issuing bank, the Bank of Greece, as from May 14, 1928, in accordance with the conditions of the Geneva Protocol of September 15, 1927. By the same decree, the drachma was stabilised, its gold content being fixed at 0·01952634 grammes of gold, corresponding to 77·02 drachmai to the U.S. dollar, but the stabilisation has been suspended since April 26, 1932. On February 7, 1934, the total bank-note circulation amounted to 5,161,931,000 drachmai; total gold, 4,045,213,000 drachmai.

On March 31, 1932, there were 33 banks in Greece with deposits amounting to 16,319 million drachmai, and capital, 4,294 million drachmai.

The Drachma consists of 100 lepta. Nickel coinage in circulation consists of 10, 20 and 50 lepta, 1 and 2 drachmai; there are also pieces of 5, 10, and 20 drachmai, made of silver and nickel.

In 1920 the metric system was made compulsory. The use of the Gregorian Calendar has been authorised as from March 1, 1923.

The old weights and measures are still met with. The principal are:—

- 1 oke = 400 drams = 2·832 lbs.
- 1 kantar = 44 okes = 124·608 lbs.
- 1 pik = 27 inches.
- 1 stremma = ·2471 acres.

GUATEMALA.

(REPÚBLICA DE GUATEMALA.)

Constitution and Government.

THE Republic of Guatemala, established on March 21, 1847, after having formed for twenty-six years part of the Confederation of Central America, is governed under a Constitution proclaimed December, 1879, and modified in 1887, 1897, 1913, and finally in July, 1927. The present Constitution came into effect January 1, 1928. The legislative power is vested in a single-chambered National Assembly, consisting of representatives (one for every 30,000 inhabitants) chosen by universal suffrage for 4 years. In addition a Council of State of 7 members, 3 elected by the National Assembly, and 4 appointed by the President of the Republic, has supervision of public concessions and contracts, and large advisory powers. The President is elected for 6 years, and barred from re-election for a period of 12 years.

On May 27, 1927, the Foreign Ministers of Guatemala, Honduras and Salvador signed a convention binding the three countries to a unified foreign policy in the recognition of governments, declarations of war and other matters; this has been ratified by Salvador. Guatemala, with Honduras and Nicaragua, still adheres (1934) to the Arbitration Treaty of Peace and Amity of February 7, 1923, which has been denounced by Costa Rica and Salvador.

President of the Republic.—General Jorge Ubico (February 14, 1931).

The administration is carried on, under the President, by the heads of seven departments—of Foreign Affairs, Government and Justice, Finance and Public Credit, Public Instruction, Public Works, War, and Agriculture.

Area and Population.

The area is officially given as 42,367 square miles. The boundary with Honduras, long in dispute, has been settled and the marking of the frontier is now in progress. The population, according to the 1920 census, was 2,004,900; on December 31, 1932, it was estimated at 2,195,242. About 60 per cent. are pure Indians, of 21 different groups descended from the Maya-Quiché tribe; most of the remainder are mixed Indian and Spanish (ladinos); the ruling classes are of European descent. There are about 25,000 foreigners. A system of peonage prevails on the large plantations. Guatemala is administratively divided into 22 departments, each with a governor appointed by the President.

The capital is Guatemala City, with 115,928 inhabitants, almost all ladinos or descendants of Europeans. Other towns are Quezaltenango, 30,125, Coban, 26,774, and Zacapa, 18,094.

Religion and Education.

Roman Catholicism is the prevailing religion; but all other creeds have complete liberty of worship. Guatemala has an archbishopric.

On June 30, 1932, there were 1,984 primary schools with 3,431 teachers, and 88,219 pupils and 25 professional, normal, secondary and special schools with an enrolment of 3,498. The Bureau of Indian Education maintains (1932) 367 rural and ranch schools. The University of Guatemala (714 students in 1931) was established in 1910. The National Central Institute confers degrees which are recognised in all the Central American Republics. Among the other institutions are a School of Handicraft for Women, a National Conservatoire of Music, a School of Art, and a College of Pharmacy and Natural Sciences. The national library contains 20,000 volumes.

Justice and Crime.

Justice is administered in a supreme court, 6 appeal courts, and 28 courts of first instance. All judges, under the 1927 constitution, are appointed by the National Assembly. In all the municipalities there are Justices of Peace.

Finance.

Ordinary revenue and expenditure in currency (1 quetzal = 1 U.S. dollar):—

—	1927-28	1928-29	1929-30	1930-31	1932 ¹
Revenue . .	Quetzales 14,265,761	Quetzales 15,398,825	Quetzales 13,468,870	Quetzales 10,226,191	Quetzales 8,466,415

Customs duties (imports and exports) provided 4,558,821 quetzales in 1932, or somewhat less than 50 per cent. of the revenue. Actual expenditure on public debt in 1932 took 1,365,267 quetzales.

On December 31, 1932, the external funded debt was 12,455,725 quetzales; in addition there was an interest-bearing internal debt of 2,739,088, and a floating debt of 4,440,882. Total, 19,595,695 quetzales, including English debt of 1,540,860.

Defence.

Military service is compulsory between the ages of 18 and 50. Service in the active army is for 1 year. The effectives for 1932 were 315 officers and 6,334 other ranks, organised in 2 infantry corps of 14 companies and 4 groups of artillery. The military estimates for 1933-34 were 1,780,000 quetzales.

Production and Industry.

The Cordilleras divide Guatemala into two unequal drainage areas, of which the Atlantic is much the greater. The Pacific slope, though comparatively narrow, is exceptionally well watered and fertile between the altitudes of 1,000 and 5,000 feet, and is the most densely settled part of the Republic. The Atlantic slope is sparsely populated and has little of commercial importance beyond the chicle and timber cutting of the Petén, coffee cultivation of Coban region, and banana raising of the Motagua Valley and Lake Izabal district.

The soil in general is exceedingly fertile and agriculture is the most important industry. The principal crop is coffee, accounting for nearly 75 per cent. of total exports; coffee exports in 1930, 853,093 bags; in 1931-32, 681,895 bags. Germans own and control between 30 and 40 per cent. of the coffee plantations of Guatemala. Next to coffee, banana is the most important export crop; exports, 1931-32, 5,248,182 stems; sugar is also increasing in production (export of sugar in 1933 was forbidden); maize, beans and rice, forming the diet of the population, are the most important domestic crops. Guatemala has almost a monopoly of the chicle gum used for chewing in the United States; exports in 1931-32 were valued at 141,130 dollars (gold). Crop diversification is encouraged by agricultural experiment stations maintained jointly by the International Railways of Central America and the United Fruit Company. Cattle-grounds (potreros) occupy about 758,640 acres. Census of 1932 showed 369,258 cattle, 165,631 sheep, 89,416 pigs, 65,136 horses, 17,945 goats and 30,996 mules and asses.

The forest area has an extent of 1,816,482 acres. The department of Petén is rich in mahogany and dye woods, for which there is a ready market in the United States.

There are silver, gold, copper, iron and lead mines, but owing to the lack of transport, mining is little developed. Chrome was discovered in 1916.

Commerce.

Value of the commerce for 5 years (1 quetzal = 1 dollar, U.S.):—

	1928	1929	1930	1931	1932
Imports	Quetzales 21,464,924	Quetzales 30,899,067	Quetzales 16,473,970	Quetzales 12,971,234	Quetzales 5,742,228
Exports	28,211,572	24,928,229	28,577,819	15,167,386	10,660,736

In 1931-32, 52 per cent. of the imports came from the United States, 11 per cent. from Great Britain, 12 per cent. from Germany, 2.5 per cent. from France, and 6 per cent. from Sweden; 37 per cent. of the exports went to the United States, 28 per cent. to Germany, 16 to Holland, and less than 5 per cent. to Great Britain. Other exports are hides and honey.

Total trade between Guatemala and the U.K. for 5 years (according to Board of Trade Returns):—

	1929	1930	1931	1932	1933
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports from Guatemala to U.K.	89,580	57,748	87,942	208,607	187,458
Exports to Guatemala from U.K.	437,098	230,906	195,787	174,925	199,281
Re-exports to Guatemala from U.K.	7,818	4,158	2,399	2,097	1,982

Shipping and Communications.

The chief ports on the Atlantic side are Puerto Barrios and Livingston; on the Pacific side, San José and Champerico.

The principal railway system is the American owned International Railways of Central America which represents a consolidation of the Guatemala Railway (198 miles), the Guatemala Central Railway (139 miles), the Occidental Railway (51 miles), and the Ocos Railway (22 miles). Total mileage, 652. The lines extend from Puerto Barrios to Guatemala City, a distance of 198 miles, thence to San José de Guatemala, on the Pacific Ocean, a distance of 74 miles. This route carries both freight and passengers from the Atlantic to the Pacific more quickly than the Panama Canal. The system extends northward to Ayutla on the Mexican border where it connects with the Pan-American Railway of Mexico. All roads are of 3 ft. gauge. Total mileage of all lines in 1932 was 737 miles. In 1930 the Government completed the first national electric railway in Central America; it connects Quezaltenango with San Felipe.

There are (1931) 1,396 miles of highways. Motor traffic is possible almost everywhere during nine months of the year.

There are (1931) 336 post-offices. The national telegraph lines have a length of 4,049 miles, and the telephones, 3,782 miles. There are 224 telegraph offices and 13 central and 57 subordinate telephone stations; number of telephones in use, 1,992. Radio stations have been opened at Quezaltenango, Guatemala City, Petén, Puerto Barrios, and Livingston. There is a Government broadcasting station at Guatemala City.

Air-mail and passenger service connects Guatemala City with Puerto Barrios, Quezaltenango, Mazatenango, Flores (Petén), Coban, Tela (Honduras), San Salvador, Managua, Panama and Mexico City.

Banking, Money, Weights and Measures.

The creation of the Central Bank of Guatemala, with an authorised capital of 10,000,000 quetzales (1,874,960 quetzales paid up in 1930), and the exclusive right to issue paper money for 10 years, was decreed on June 30, 1926. This ended a paper money regime which had lasted since 1897. Total circulation of banknotes (backed by a gold reserve of 40 per cent.) on December 31, 1932, was 5,086,802 quetzales, exclusive of 286,850 quetzales representing notes of the old banks not yet called in and cancelled. Gold coin in circulation totalled 303,200 quetzales. By a decree of May 12, 1932, silver coinage is limited to 2,000,000 quetzales, and copper-nickel to 500,000 quetzales.

The unit of currency is the gold quetzal, established May 7, 1925, equal to the United States dollar (containing 1·504665 grammes of fine gold), named after the national bird (emblematic of liberty). Gold coins in circulation, 20, 10, and 5 quetzales; quetzal notes in circulation, 20, 10, 5, 2, 1 and 50 centavos. Silver coins are in circulation (since May 1, 1933) of the value of 25-centavo, 10-centavo and 5-centavo, and also new 2-centavo, 1-centavo and half-centavo copper-nickel coins. Old notes in circulation (no longer issued) are for 500, 100, 50, 25, 20, 5 and 1 pesos; the 'peso,' stabilized at the rate of 60 pesos = 1 quetzal (U.S. dollar), is no longer an authorised unit of currency, but the countryman still habitually calculates in terms of 'pesos.'

The Spanish Libra of 16 ounces . . .	= 1·014 lbs. avoirdupois.
„ Arroba of 25 libras . . .	= 25·35 lbs. „
„ Quintal of 4 arrobas . . .	= 101·40 lbs. „
„ Tonelada of 20 quintals . . .	= 18·10 cwt.
„ Fanega	= 1½ imperial bushels.
„ Caballeria	= 110 acres.

The metric system has been officially adopted.

HAITI.

(RÉPUBLIQUE D'HAÏTI.)

Constitution and Government.

THE Republic of Haiti, formerly a French colony, was proclaimed independent January 1, 1804, and is now governed under a Constitution ratified on July 15, 1932. After being in abeyance since 1917 (their functions performed by the Council of State, nominated by the President) the Senate and Chamber were revived in October, 1930, to sit until 1936. The President is now elected by the 36 deputies and 20 senators, sitting as a National Assembly, for a period of six years. Deputies are elected for 4 years by popular vote; senators (4 years) are chosen by electoral colleges in each department.

President of the Republic.—Sténio Vincent; elected November 18, 1930; term expires May 15, 1936.

The administration of the Republic is carried on, under the President, by ten departments supervised by at least five Secretaries of State and one Under-Secretary of State, for the Department of the Interior and Justice. The President may not immediately succeed himself.

In November, 1915, both Houses of the Haitian Congress ratified a treaty with the United States by which the latter agreed to assist in the establishment of responsible, orderly government. The treaty, which expires in 1936, provided for a number of American Advisers to the Haitian Government, appointed by the President of Haiti on the recommendation of the President of the United States; by an agreement signed at Port-au-Prince on August 7, 1933, the constabulary is to be completely Haitianized and turned over to Haitian officers on October 1, 1934, and on January 1, 1934, the Financial Adviser-General Receiver and his assistants are to be succeeded by a Fiscal Representative, appointed by the President of Haiti on the nomination of the President of the United States, to supervise the customs on behalf of holders of Haitian bonds.

Area and Population.

The area of the Republic, which embraces the western portion of the island of Hispaniola, formerly known as Haiti—the larger but less populated eastern division forming the Dominican Republic—is estimated at 10,204 English square miles. On January 1, 1929, the estimated population was 2,550,000, excluding 3,000 white foreign residents and the military forces of the United States. The majority of the population are Negroes; there are also great numbers of Mulatto Haitians, the descendants of the former French settlers. Capital, Port-au-Prince, with about 125,000 inhabitants, situated on a large bay and possessed of an excellent harbour. Cap-Haïtien has an estimated population of 22,000; Cayes and Jacmel, 12,000 each; Gonaïves, 10,000; Port de Paix, 5,000. The official language of the country is French, though most of the common people speak a dialect known as Creole French. The cultural focus of the educated classes is Paris.

Religion and Education.

The religion is Roman Catholicism. There is an archbishop with 4 suffragan bishops. The Catholic clergy are French (mostly Bretons).

Public elementary education is free, the country being divided into 24 inspectors' districts. In 1910 education was made compulsory. The sum allotted for public instruction amounts to nearly 1,000,000 dollars annually, chiefly for agricultural education, but the educational system is still very imperfect, especially in rural districts. In the 6 national lycées in 1925-26 there were 1,042 pupils, in 11 private secondary schools, 3,219 pupils; in 14 national primary schools, under friars, 5,820 pupils; and in 34, under nuns, 7,440 pupils. During 1927-28, 48 rural farm schools had 5,464 pupils. In 1926-27, 85 private city primary schools had 5,517; 417 national rural primary schools, 25,348 pupils; 115 religious national rural primary schools, 5,868 pupils; 240 national urban primary schools, 24,462 pupils.

Justice.

Justice is administered by a Court of Cassation and by lower courts, all appointed for 10 years by the President and irremovable, unless impeached.

Finance.

About 90 per cent. of the revenue of Haiti is derived from customs, paid in American gold on exports and imports. Debt charges absorb about 30 per cent. of revenue.

The following table shows the revenue and expenditure (fiscal year ending September 30) for five years (in United States dollars; 5 gourdes = 1 U.S. dollar):—

	1928-29	1929-30	1930-31	1931-32	1932-33 ¹
Revenue	8,504,306	7,729,633	6,849,316	5,604,748	5,720,000

¹ Budget.

Total public debt, August 30, 1932, was 72,858,000 gourdes, of which 69,235,580 gourdes (equal to 13,847,115 dollars, U.S.) were represented by the three 'dollar loans' outstanding whose service and retirement are supervised by the American Adviser-General Receiver. Under the protocol of 1919, his functions cease with the extinction of the foreign debt (presumably in 1942, at the present rate), but the treaty outlining his duties expires in 1936 and has not yet been extended.

Defence.

An armed constabulary (Garde d'Haiti), both urban and rural, was instituted in 1916. The officers are in part drawn from the United States Marine Corps and Navy, who, according to present plans, will retire by 1934. The establishment (1932) consists of 199 officers and 2,536 non-commissioned officers and men.

Production.

The industries of Haiti are mainly agricultural, carried on in 7 large plains, from 200,000 to 25,000 acres, and in 15 smaller plains down to 2,000 acres. Irrigation is extensively used. The most important product is coffee of excellent quality grown by peasants. Average production, 31,800,000 kilos. Cocoa is grown extensively, and cotton and sisal are exported in increasing quantities. The cultivation of tobacco is extending. Sugar is likewise grown, and there are 2 sugar-making establishments. An extensive sugar central, founded with American capital, has been constructed near Port-au-Prince. Rum and other spirits are distilled but not exported: the rum is of a superior quality. Logwood is an important product, and other valuable woods are now exported. Cattle breeding is encouraged; live-stock in 1932 included 600,000 asses, 400,000 horses, 300,000 goats, 250,000 pigs, and 100,000 cattle.

Haiti possesses considerable mineral resources quite undeveloped. Gold, silver, copper, iron, antimony, tin, sulphur, coal, kaolin, nickel, gypsum, limestone and porphyry are found but are little worked.

Commerce.

Imports and exports for 4 fiscal years ending September 30 (in U.S. dollars):—

—	Imports	Exports	—	Imports	Exports
	Dollars	Dollars		Dollars	Dollars
1929 .	27,237,922	16,723,833	1931 .	9,576,818	8,963,419
1930 .	12,841,626	14,144,567	1932 .	7,461,110	7,221,279

In 1931-32, the principal exports were coffee, 51,050,771 pounds valued at 5,267,046 dollars (about 73 per cent. in value of total exports); raw cotton, 6,308 metric tons (812,452 dollars); logwood, 12,085 metric tons (163,417 dollars); raw sugar, 20,106 metric tons (425,220 dollars); sisal, 2,789 metric tons (174,807 dollars); cacao, 1,741,887 pounds (50,585 dollars).

Total trade between Haiti and the U.K. for 5 years (Board of Trade Returns):—

—	1929	1930	1931	1932	1933
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports from Haiti to U.K.	166,974	149,745	195,547	259,125	336,173
Exports to Haiti from U.K.	180,162	166,921	110,347	188,981	249,464
Re-exports to Haiti from U.K.	2,322	1,908	2,238	992	3,047

Shipping and Communications.

Several lines of steamers (American and Dutch) connect the ports of Haiti with New York, and others (British, French, Dutch and German) with Europe. In 1931-32, 595 vessels of 1,296,361 tons entered and cleared at Port-au-Prince.

Port-au-Prince is connected with Cap Haitien by a road 169 miles long, and with Mirebalais and Lascahobas by a road 33 miles long. Total length of motor road in 1932 was 935 miles. A light railway has been constructed from Port-au-Prince to Lake Assuéi (28 miles), and to Léogane (22 miles), but the traffic is small. The 'National Railroad of Haiti' runs from Port-au-Prince to Verrettes, distance 85 miles. Total mileage, 1932, 158 miles. The two railroads, the National and the P.C.S. (Compagnie des Chemins de Fer de la Plaine de Cul de Sac) are both American-owned.

The principal towns are connected by the Government telegraph system, with 1,490 miles of wire in 1927. A cable runs from the Mole St. Nicholas to Santiago de Cuba and from the Mole to Port-au-Prince, and also to Cap Haitien, whence it runs to Puerto Plata (Santo Domingo) and to New York and South America. The All-America Cables has a cable to Haiti.

There were 92 post offices in 1930.

Port-au-Prince has a modern automatic telephone exchange; 1,200 miles of telephone cables connect 46 commercial and 17 local exchanges.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The Banque Nationale de la République d'Haiti, established October 21, 1910, with a capital of 10,000,000 francs (present capital, 2,000,000 dollars), has a monopoly of the note issue until 1960. Notes are covered one-third by U.S. currency and the balance by trade bills. The Bank acts as Treasurer for the Government on a commission of 1 per cent. of State revenue. In 1916, the National City Bank of New York purchased control over this bank. The Royal Bank of Canada has branches at Port-au-Prince and Cape Haiti.

The unit of currency is the Gourde which has a fixed value in relation to United States currency, i.e. 1 gourde is equivalent to 20 cents U.S. currency. Stock of money on September 30, 1932, 600,000 dollars in U.S. Government notes and 5,562,712 gourdes in notes of the Banque Nationale; subsidiary coinage, 3,219,540 gourdes. To reduce the use of American money the Banque Nationale was authorized in April, 1928, to issue notes of 20, 50 and 100 gourdes.

Use of the metric system of weights and measures has been made obligatory since July 1, 1922.

HONDURAS.

(REPÚBLICA DE HONDURAS.)

Constitution and Government.

On September 15, 1821, the State of Honduras declared its independence of Spain and set up as a Republic which is governed under a charter proclaimed on October 8, 1824. The present Constitution was re-written in 1924. Legislative power is vested in a single chamber, the Congress of Deputies consisting of 43 members, chosen for 4 years by popular vote, in the ratio of one per 15,000 inhabitants. It meets for 60 days on January 1 each year. A Permanent Commission of five members sits whilst Congress is not in session for the transaction of routine or emergency business. The President is elected by popular vote for 4 years, holding office from February 1st.

President.—Dr. Tiburcio Carias. Assumed office February 1, 1933.

The administration of the Republic is carried on by a Council of six ministers, to whom are entrusted the departments of Foreign Affairs, Interior and Justice, War and Navy, Finance and Public Credit, Public Works and Agriculture, and Instruction.

Area and Population.

Area about 44,275 English square miles, with a population, on June 29, 1930 (census), of 854,184, or 19.4 inhabitants to the square mile. Aboriginal tribes are estimated to number over 35,000, principally Mosquito, Zumo, Payas and Xicaques Indians, all speaking different languages. The Spanish-speaking inhabitants are chiefly Indians with an admixture of Spanish blood. On the north coast there is a considerable proportion of negroes, chiefly employed by the fruit exporting companies, of whom about 3,000 are British subjects. The Republic is divided into 17 departments and one territory. La Mosquitia is still practically unexplored and is inhabited by native races who speak little or no Spanish.

The capital of Honduras is Tegucigalpa, with (census of June, 1930) 47,075 inhabitants. Other towns are San Pedro Sula, 34,425; Espire, 9,212; Nacaome, 10,302; Danli, 10,232; Santa Rosa, 10,807; Choluteca, 12,248; Juticalpa, 10,990; El Progress, 10,920. The main ports are Amapala on the Pacific, and, on the Atlantic, Puerto Cortez (9,597), Omoa, La Ceiba (13,073), Trujillo (8,865), Puerto Castilla, and Tela (9,935). The port of entry for the Bay Islands is Roatan.

Religion, Education, Justice.

Roman Catholicism is the prevailing religion, but the Constitution guarantees freedom to all creeds, and the State does not contribute to the support of any.

Instruction is free, compulsory (from 7 to 15 years of age), and entirely secular. The school census of 1932 showed 138,256 children of school age, of whom only 47,210 were then receiving education. In 1929-30 there were 1,527 public schools (1,281 under State control), with 1,953 teachers and 57,359 children enrolled. The 13 secondary schools had 609 pupils, the normal schools 1,107, and the commercial schools, 415. There is a school for the teaching of agriculture with about 52 pupils. At Tegucigalpa there is a National University with faculties of Law, Medicine and Engineering (179 students in 1930-31); a technical school with 157 pupils, and also a military school; at Comayagua there is a school of jurisprudence.

The Judicial power resides in the Supreme Court with five judges chosen directly by the people for 4 years; four Appeal Courts, and departmental and local judges. In 1923 an Appeal Court was established at San Pedro Sula to serve the Northern Provinces.

Finance.

For the years stated, ending July 31, the revenue and expenditure are given as follows (the new gold lempira is legally fixed at one-half the value of an American dollar).

	1929-30	1930-31	1931-32	1932-33 ¹	1933-34 ¹
	Lempiras	Lempiras	Lempiras	Lempiras	Lempiras
Revenue	14,314,299	11,318,673	10,943,782	15,400,199	10,727,282

¹ Estimates.

Total external debt stood on July 31, 1932, at 9,321,714 lempiras, and internal debt at 16,189,707 lempiras. Payment on debt services, external and internal, in 1931-32, was 1,535,511 lempiras. The external debt, held principally in England and unpaid as to principal or interest since 1872, totalled by 1925, 30,000,000 $\frac{1}{2}$., and was then scaled down to 1,200,000 $\frac{1}{2}$. to be repaid in 30 annual instalments of 40,000 $\frac{1}{2}$. each, derived from a special Consular tax on imports to Honduras, collected abroad and deposited in New York. In 1928 the Government borrowed 1,500,000 dollars in New Orleans, repayable in monthly instalments of 25,000 dollars at 7 per cent. interest; in 1931, 250,000 dollars was borrowed from a New Orleans bank and in 1933, 300,000 dollars.

Defence.

Every citizen of Honduras is liable to serve in the army from the age of 21. Service in the active army is for three months, and in the reserves from the age of 23 to 40. Foreigners are exempt from service, naturalised citizens being exempt for 10 years. Under the terms of the Washington Central American Conventions of 1923 the size of the Regular Army is fixed at 2,500 men, including the National Guard. The strength in 1928-29 was 344 officers and 2,253 men. The military budget for 1933-34 was 1,579,729 lempiras; actual expenditure in 1931-32 was 1,248,261 lempiras.

Production and Industry.

The chief culture is that of bananas, on the Atlantic coast (27,896,317 bunches exported in 1931-32 almost entirely by two companies; value of banana exports was 18,999,944 dollars, U.S.). The United States took 63.8 per cent. of this, and United Kingdom, 12.9 per cent. Coconuts are also grown. The coconut groves of Puerto Sal extend from the Ulua River to the Cuero River, a distance of about 60 miles, and are said to contain over 28,000 fruit-bearing trees. Coffee of fine quality is grown, generally by small farmers (exports in 1931-32, 3,385,722 lbs.), likewise tobacco. The production of sugar from 2 large mills is decreasing. Exports in 1931-32, 8,187,175 lbs. Exports of mahogany in 1931-32 fell to 54,290 feet, chiefly to the United States.

Honduras is a cattle producing country, and the Government are now taking steps to encourage breeding.

The mineral resources of Honduras are—gold, silver, copper, lead, zinc, iron, antimony, some of them being found in almost every department. The rivers still yield gold to the native workers, using primitive utensils. There is only one large mining company, at San Juancito, near Tegucigalpa. Deposits of brown and other coal have also been found.

Straw hats and cigars are manufactured for local consumption and export; 41,533,000 cigars were exported in 1931-32. A good quality of Panama hat is manufactured in the Departments of Copan and Santa Barbara.

Commerce.

Imports and exports for 5 fiscal years, ending July 31 (the lempira = 50 cents, U.S.) :—

—	1927-28	1928-29	1929-30	1930-31	1931-32
Imports . . .	Lempiras 12,573,595	Lempiras 14,860,931	Lempiras 31,892,257	Lempiras 20,582,845	Lempiras 16,736,032
Exports . . .	23,142,737	24,569,165	52,342,436	40,056,173	35,162,622

The United States took 67·5 per cent. of the exports of Honduras in 1931-32, and furnished 75 per cent. of its imports. Bananas constituted about 79 per cent. of the value of total exports.

Total trade between Honduras and United Kingdom for 5 years was (according to Board of Trade returns) as follows :—

—	1929	1930	1931	1932	1933
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports from Honduras . . .	1,108,906	496,415	1,110,919	884,854	1,155,840

Re-exports to Honduras . . .	2,339	2,050	1,635	1,705	995

Communications.

In general, travelling and transport are accomplished by means of mules and ox-carts. Slow improvements in road-making and repairing continue to be made. There is a fair mail service by automobiles, and a daily autobus passenger and freight service connects Tegucigalpa with both the northern and southern sections. The two principal roads are the Carretera del Sur from San Lorenzo, on the Pacific Coast, to Tegucigalpa, 84 miles ; and the Carretera del Norte, from Tegucigalpa to Comayagua, and Lake Yojoa, 154 miles. Transport from Lake Yojoa (20 miles across) is continued by road to Potrerillos (25 miles), the head of the railroad to San Pedro Sula and Puerto Cortés. A road from Tegucigalpa to Juticalpa and one from Santa Barbara to San Pedro Sula are being built. Total mileage of motor roads in 1930 was 361 miles. Aviation services connect the principal towns and spread outward to other Central American points ; there are 23 landing fields in the Republic.

There is a national railway of 66 miles from Puerto Cortez to Potrerillos, taken over by the Government in 1912 and leased to a fruit company. The other four railroads are owned and operated by the various fruit companies on the north coast. Total length of line (1932), 1,149 miles.

The country has 1,247 miles of telephone lines and 2,895 miles of telegraph lines. Number of telephones in use, about 1,500 ; number of telegraph offices, 276. Number of post-offices, 549. Honduras has 6 wireless stations, at Tegucigalpa, Puerto Cortés, La Ceiba, La Lima, Tela and Puerto Castilla, all owned by foreign companies.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

By a decree of March 9, 1931, the gold lempira (named after a native chief) is the monetary unit ; its value is that of 0·836 gramme of gold, 900 fine, or 50 cents, U.S. currency. Coins of 1 lempira, 50 cents, 20, 10 and 5 cents have been coined. The old peso coinage has been withdrawn from circulation. The value of the silver lempira is legally fixed at one-half the value of an American dollar, but in practice it is frequently subject to a small discount, usually 2 per cent. The new lempiras have been minted in the United States and were placed in circulation early in 1932. On the north coast the currency is partly American paper money.

There are two banks. One is the Banco de Honduras, founded in 1889; it has the power to issue notes but does not act as the Government's fiscal agent. The second bank, Banco Atlantida, which belongs mainly to Americans, also issues lempira notes.

The metric system of weights and measures has been legal since April 1, 1897, but English pounds and yards and the old Spanish system are still in general use:

1 Vara	= 32 inches.
1 Arroba	= 25 lb.
1 Quintal	= 100 lb.
1 Tonelada	= 2,000 lb.

HUNGARY.

(KINGDOM OF HUNGARY.)

Constitution and Government.

HUNGARY first became an independent kingdom in 1001. On October 31, 1918, a revolution broke out in Hungary with the object of establishing a Republic. On November 13 King Charles issued a letter of abdication, and on November 16, 1918, Hungary was proclaimed an independent Republic (Hungarian People's Republic), of which Count Michael Károlyi became Provisional President. The two Houses of the Legislature were abolished, and their place taken by a Provisional National Council. The Károlyi régime continued until March 21, 1919, when its place was taken by a Soviet Government, which proclaimed the dictatorship of the proletariat. An opposition Government was, however, soon set up at Arad and Szeged, which with the assistance of the Rumanian army swept away the Soviet Government, and on August 7, 1919, a National Government was again in the Capital. Elections were held on the basis of universal suffrage in January and February, 1920, and the new Parliament considered the period of the revolutions of 1918 and 1919 as de jure a blank space of time, and resolved that the old monarchical constitution should be continued. Hungary was thus considered a monarchy with a vacant throne, the functions of the monarch being exercised by a Regent. In accordance with a law passed on July 17, 1933, the Regent has the power to prorogue or dissolve Parliament. It has been decided that the dynastic question shall be solved at such time as the people are freed from external pressure.

Regent.—Nicholas Horthy de Nagybánya. (Elected March 1, 1920.)

The Legislature consists of two houses; the Upper House (by a Bill passed on November 11, 1926) consists of 6 groups—(1) elected representatives of the former hereditary members, about 38; (2) members elected by the County Councils and municipalities, about 50 members; (3) heads of the various religious communities, about 31 members; (4) high dignitaries—such as judges, the commander-in-chief of the army, the chairman of the National Bank; (5) representatives of scientific institutions, the Chambers of Commerce, about 40 members; and (6) life members appointed by the head of the State.

The Lower House consists of 245 members. At the elections held on June 28, 1931, the following parties were elected:—Party of National Unity (Bethlen Party), 155; Christian Social Union, 32; Socialists, 14; Independent Agricultural Party, 11; other parties, 12; Independents, 21; total 245.

The Ministry formed on October 1, 1932, is composed as follows:—

Prime Minister and Minister of National Defence.—Julius de Gombös.

Minister of Foreign Affairs.—Koloman de Kánya.

Minister of the Interior.—Dr. Francis Keresztes-Fischer.

Minister of Finance.—Dr. Béla de Imrédy.

Minister of Agriculture.—Dr. Nicholas de Kállay.

Minister of Commerce.—Dr. Tihamér Fabinyi.

Minister of Public Instruction.—Dr. Valentine Hóman.

Minister of Justice.—Dr. Andrew Lázár.

II. LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

In Hungary a distinction is observed between communes which are large or small, and county-towns and municipalities, which are regarded as communes of a higher order. The representative bodies and executives are elected by the inhabitants of the communities concerned who have possessed an electoral right since 1886 on the basis of secret suffrage, which was in 1929 extended to women also. The representative body in the communes and county towns consists half of members elected for six years, and half of persons who pay the highest taxes, but in the representative bodies of the municipalities ('municipal committee') the proportion of those who pay the highest taxes has been reduced to two-fifths of the total number of members. The members of the representative bodies have an authorization for a fixed period. Each community has the right to issue orders within the limits prescribed by law, to be carried out either by its own officials or by the subordinate communities.

Area and Population.

The Treaty of Trianon, signed on June 4, 1920, and ratified by Hungary on November 13, 1920, mentions in general terms the boundaries of the new State with Austria, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and Rumania. The exact boundaries with Yugoslavia and Rumania are to be determined by a mixed commission. As a result of negotiations with Austria and of the consequent plebescite, Hungary has obtained Sopron in Western Hungary.

The population of Hungary according to the census of December 31, 1930, is 8,688,819, and its area 35,875 square miles as against a population of 7,989,069 in 1920. Of the total population, 4,250,110 were males and 4,438,209 females. Estimated population on December 31, 1932, 8,783,919.

The following is the division of the total population according to language as estimated on December 31, 1930 (Census): Hungarian (Magyar), 8,001,112 (92.1 per cent.); German, 478,630 (5.5 per cent.); Slovak, 104,819 (1.2 per cent.); Rumanian, 16,221 (0.2 per cent.); Ruthenian, 996; Croatian, 27,683 (0.3 per cent.); others, 58,858.

Religion.

Religious toleration is one of the fundamental principles of the Hungarian State. There is perfect equality among all legally recognised religions, which include the Roman and Greek Catholic, the Evangelical (Augsburg and Helvetian), the Unitarian, the Greek Oriental, the Gregorian-Armenian, the Baptist (since 1905), the Jewish, and the Mohammedan (since 1916). Each has the independent administration of its own affairs.

In 1930 (Census), the population according to religion was estimated as follows: Roman Catholics, 5,684,103 (64.9 per cent.); Greek Catholics, 201,093 (2.3 per cent.); Helvetian Evangelicals, 1,818,162 (20.9 per cent.); Augsburg

Evangelicals, 534,065 (6·1 per cent.) ; Greek-Orientals, 39,839 (0·5 per cent.) ; Unitarians, 6,266 (0·1 per cent.) ; Jews, 444,567 (5·1 per cent.) ; others, 15,224.

Education.

Public education in Hungary comprises the following grades:—(1) infant schools ; (2) elementary schools ; (3) industrial and commercial apprentice schools ; (4) primary (city) schools ; (5) training colleges for teachers ; (6) middle or secondary schools ; (7) special schools ; (8) universities and colleges.

In 1930, 9·6 per cent. of the population over 6 years of age was illiterate.

School attendance is compulsory for children of six to twelve years at day schools, and then for three years in continuation schools. There were in the school year 1931–32 altogether 1,117 infants' schools and permanent foster-homes with 1,549 female teachers and 111,922 infants, and 5 training colleges for female teachers of infant schools.

In Hungary there were in the school-year 1931–32, 6,862 elementary schools with 1,004,369 pupils and 19,407 teachers. There were also 6,555 general, 979 agricultural continuation schools (or courses) and 55 agricultural public schools with special teachers attached to them. There were 481 apprentice schools, 444 for industrial and 37 for commercial apprentices. The number of industrial apprentices was 43,683 and of commercial apprentices 2,481. There were 20 training colleges for elementary schools for males and 35 for females, with 746 teachers and 9,708 students. The number of primary schools was for boys 131, for girls 191, for both sexes 58, with 84,769 pupils and 3,693 teachers.

In the middle schools the curriculum extends over eight years. They are maintained by the State, by the larger communes, or (in the case of the denominational schools) by ecclesiastical foundations, with sometimes a subvention from the State. There were in 1931–1932, 29 gymnasia, 71 realgymnasias, 19 modern schools, and 47 girls' secondary schools. Total number of teachers, 3,057, pupils, 65,567 (50,504 boys and 15,063 girls).

Of the special schools, 47 are agricultural, 52 industrial and mineral, and 50 commercial, with 31 others. Of the commercial schools, 31 were for boys and 19 for girls ; total number of pupils, 9,031. The other special schools had 8,909 pupils. There are 4 agricultural high-schools with 427 pupils.

Hungary has four universities and (since 1919) an independent Faculty of Economics at Budapest (69 professors, 1,282 students in 1931–32), all maintained by the State. In 1931–32 the University of Budapest had 809 professors and 5,226 students ; the University of Szeged, 91 professors and 1,770 students ; the University of Pécs 51 professors and 1,416 students, and of Debrecen 81 professors and 1,408 students—the last two having been founded in 1912. Total number of students at the Universities, 1932–33, 11,034. There are also 18 theological colleges, viz., 14 Roman Catholic, 3 Protestant, and 1 Jewish, with a total of 119 professors and 942 students ; and 3 law schools with 35 professors and 902 students ; and the veterinary school with 27 professors and 302 students. The technical high school (polytechnicum) in Budapest has 33 professors and 1,306 students (1931–32) ; the high school of mining and forestry of Sopron 26 professors and 136 students ; and 3 agricultural colleges have 31 professors and 288 students. There are 6 other high schools with 116 professors and 1,436 students.

Justice and Crime.

The Supreme Court in Budapest (curia) is the highest instance in all civil and criminal matters. As courts of first instance, there are county courts (törvényszékek) with collegiate judgeships; district courts (járásbíróságok) with single judges; and jury courts (sajtóbíróságok) for press offences, besides an army special court.

Social Insurance and Pauperism.

In 1927 and 1928, two fundamental laws were passed to regulate optional and obligatory social insurance, and called into existence the National Social Insurance Institute. The Institute affords its members medical and hospital treatment gratuitously and pays a subsidy to any member during the period of his illness, and grants, moreover, an old age and disability pension. The membership of the Institute amounted to 558,905 on December 31, 1931, including membership of all other social insurance bodies, 312,383. The insurance of farm-workers is optional in Hungary, done by the Agricultural Workers, National Fund, with a membership of 652,352 (end of 1931).

In Hungary poor relief is in the main left to communal administration. In the smaller communes orphans and the indigent are cared for by official guardians and overseers, while in the larger there are poor-houses, the funds being mostly derived from fines and taxes. The number of asylums for paupers and orphans is about 300.

Defence.

According to the Treaty of Trianon, Hungary is authorised to maintain an army of 35,000 officers, non-commissioned officers and men. The Treaty laid down that conscription was to be abolished, and consequently recruiting on a voluntary basis has been substituted. All recruits have to undertake to serve in the Army for a minimum period of 12 consecutive years, at least 6 of which are to be with the colours. Officers now serving will continue to do so until they attain the age of 40 years at least. Officers newly appointed must undertake to serve on the active list for a minimum of 20 consecutive years. No reserves or measures for mobilisation are permitted.

Hungary is divided into the following seven military districts:—Budapest, Székesfehérvár, Szombathely, Pécs, Szeged, Debrecen, and Miskolc. To each of these districts is allotted a mixed brigade each composed of 1 brigade staff, 1 cavalry squadron, 2 infantry regiments, 1 trench mortar company, 1 field artillery group, 1 cyclist battalion. In addition to the 7 mixed brigades there are the following troops: 4 hussar regiments, 1 mounted artillery group, 3 independent batteries, and 3 pioneer battalions. Strength in November, 1932, 1,750 officers and 33,213 men.

Hungary has a force of 12,000 gendarmerie and of 12,000 police, as well as 6,360 customs guards, and 1,600 river guards. The members of this force are under the obligation to serve for a minimum of 6 consecutive years. The authorised armament is as follows:—Gendarmerie: 1 rifle or 1 carbine per man; Police: 1 sword or revolver per man (automatic pistols for 5 per cent. of the establishment, i.e. 600); Customs Guards: 1 rifle per man.

A force of 3,000 finance guards is also maintained. These are armed with revolvers.

Hungary has no navy or air force, but only four patrol vessels for police duty on the Danube.

The budget expenditure on the army in 1933-34 was 87,689,000 pengős.

Production and Industry.

The cultivation of the soil is the chief industry of Hungary. The soil is noted for its fertility and the variety of its products. The area and production of crops in Hungary for two years was as follows:—

Crop	1931-32		1932-33

In Hungary there were, in 1933, 819,871 horses, 1,696,615 cattle, 1,056,218 sheep, and 1,899,479 pigs.

The total area under forest in Hungary (1932) was 2,706,626 acres.

The production of coal in Hungary was in 1900, 6,575,000 tons; in 1910, 9,036,000 tons; in 1929, 7,870,189 tons; in 1930, 6,987,826 tons; in 1931, 6,887,630 tons; and in 1932, 6,826,289 tons. The best quality coal is found in the Mecsek Mountain, in the district of Pécs. Bituminous coal is found at Ajk. Hungary has a considerable number of brown-coal and lignite mines. Her bauxite deposits may be counted among the largest in the world.

Hungary retains important fishery preserves in the Danube and Theiss rivers and in lake Balaton. The latter, situated in the west, is the largest lake in central Europe, being 50 miles long and from 2 to 7 miles broad. Its waters contain plentiful supplies of perch, carp, pike, sheatfish, shad and other fish. The north shore of Lake Balaton is an important wine-producing district. The best known Hungarian wines come from the hilly country, 'Tokaj,' in the north-east section of Hungary.

The industries of Hungary are based on agriculture. They include milling, distilling, the manufacture of sugar (1,033,330 metric quintals of raw sugar in 1932), hemp and flax, and also iron and steel works (66,281 metric tons of pig-iron and 179,841 metric tons of steel in 1932). In 1932 there were in Hungary 3,335 factories, employing on an average 176,751 workmen, with an output valued at 1,800 million pengös.

Internal Communications.

In 1932 there were 2,642 miles of state roads, 10,297 miles of municipal roads and 5,076 miles of inferior roads ; total, 18,015 miles of road.

The length of railways in Hungary in 1931-32 was 8,665 kilometres, or 5,381 miles, of which 7,106 kilometres, or 4,412 miles, are owned by the State. Of the total 999 kilometres or 620 miles are double track. The passengers carried in 1931-32 were: State railways, 57,980,000 ; private railways, 33,830,000 ; and freight, 20,124,000 and 3,811,000 metric tons respectively. There are six air lines over which 2,288 flights were made in 1932 with 6,439 passengers, and 303 metric tons of freight. Distance flown was 372,638 miles.

Number of Hungarian post-offices (not including collecting places and railway post) (1932), 2,387. In 1932, the inland postal service handled 243,226,000 pieces of correspondence, and the international 30,324,000 pieces ; 8,671,000 parcels were carried on the inland service, and 467,000 on the international service. On December 31, 1932, the length of telegraph lines was 5,349 miles ; of telegraph wires, 49,213 miles ; of telephone lines, 15,014 miles ; and of wire, 393,259 miles. The postal and telegraphic services are in the hands of the Government.

The total number of telegrams handled in 1932 was 2,647,000 (1,681,000 inland, 819,000 foreign, and 147,000 transit), and 704,000 circulars. The number of telephone conversations in 1932 was: local, 129,575,000 ; inter-urban, 2,918,000 ; international service, 1,574,000.

Currency and Banking.

By a law of November 4, 1925, a new monetary unit, the ' pengő ' (= 12,500 paper crowns), subdivided into 100 fillér, was instituted, and came into use on December 27, 1926. Up to January 31, 1927, new pengő coins were issued to the value of 24,752,105 pengős. The pengő contains 0.263158 grammes of fine gold.

The amount of the bank notes in circulation, issued by the National Bank of Hungary, was 317,450,000 pengős on February 15, 1934. Metal reserve was 107,201,000 pengős.

On December 31, 1931, the total saving deposits in the Postal Savings Bank and the twelve principal Budapest banks amounted to 516,700,000 pengős as compared with 631,600,000 on December 31, 1930.

The metric system of weights and measures is in use.

ICELAND.

(ÍSLAND.)

Reigning King.

ICELAND is united with Denmark by a personal bond of union under the government of King Christian X. (see Denmark).

The first settlers came to Iceland in 874. Between 930 and 1264 Iceland was an independent republic, but by the 'Old Treaty' of 1263 the country recognised the rule of the King of Norway. In 1381, Iceland, together with Norway, came under the rule of the Danish Kings, but when Norway was separated from Denmark in 1814, Iceland remained under the rule of Denmark. Since December 1, 1918, it has been acknowledged as a sovereign State, and is united with Denmark only through the identity of the Sovereign.

As King of Iceland King Christian X. has a civil list of 60,000 kroner.

Constitution and Government.—By the Act of Union of November 30, 1918, Iceland is temporarily united with Denmark in certain affairs beyond the King's person.

According to the Act of Union, Denmark and Iceland are free, sovereign States, united by one King and by the agreement comprised in the Union Act. The order of succession is not to be altered without the assent of both States. In Iceland, Danish citizens enjoy the same rights as Icelandic citizens, and in Denmark the latter enjoy the same rights as Danish citizens. But citizens of either of the States are exempt from military service in the other. Danish goods and products in Iceland and Icelandic goods and products in Denmark are treated no less favourably than those of any other country. Denmark takes charge of the foreign affairs of Iceland, and if Iceland so desires it, special Icelandic attachés or experts on Icelandic conditions may be appointed to Danish embassies and consulates, the expenses arising out of such appointments to be borne by Iceland. Denmark has a minister at Reykjavík, and Iceland a minister at Copenhagen.

An advisory Danish-Icelandic committee of eight members has been appointed to review Bills of importance to both States, and also to prepare ills aiming at co-operation between the two States. After December 31, 1940, the Danish Parliament and the Icelandic Legislature may demand negotiations to be opened concerning the revision of the Union Act.

Denmark has informed the Powers that, in conformity with the Union Act, it recognises Iceland as a sovereign State.

The present constitution of Iceland is embodied in the Charter of May 18, 1920, with an amendment made in 1934. By the terms of this Charter the executive power belongs to the King, and is exercised by him through responsible ministers, while the legislative power rests conjointly with the King and the Parliament, which is called Althing. The Althing is composed of a varying number of members not exceeding 49, of whom 38 are elected in constituencies, each electing one or two representatives by simple majority, except the capital, where 6 members are elected by proportional Representation, while a necessary number of supplementary mandates, though not exceeding 11, is distributed among the parties, which have got too few in proportion to the number of their electors. The electoral period is 4 years. The franchise is enjoyed by all Icelandic citizens (men and women) of good reputation who are over 21 years of age and have resided in the country during the previous 5 years. All others are eligible as candidates, save only the superior judges.

The Althing is divided into two Houses, the Upper House and the Lower House. The former is composed of one-third of the members elected by the whole Althing in common sitting. The remaining two-thirds of the members form the Lower House. The members of the Althing receive payment for their services besides travelling expenses; members residing in the capital are allowed 8 krónur (8s. 11d.) per day, and members residing outside the capital 10 krónur (11s. 1d.) per day. This payment is temporarily been raised by 15 per cent.

The Althing must meet on February 15 in every year, unless it is invoked by the King at an earlier date. The Budget Bills must be laid by the Government before the two Houses in joint session, but all other Bills may be introduced in either of the Houses. If the Houses do not agree they assemble in a common sitting, and the final decision is given by a majority of two-thirds of the voters, with the exception of Budget Bills, where a simple majority is sufficient. The ministers have free access to both Houses, but may only vote in the House of which they are members.

The executive power is exercised under the King by a ministry divided into 3 departments. The ministry, appointed June 3, 1932, is as follows:—

President of the Council and Minister of Finance.—Asgeir Asgeirsson.

Minister of Justice and of Ecclesiastical Affairs.—Magnus Gudmundsson.

Minister of Trade and Communications.—Thorsteinn Briem.

The ministers are responsible for their acts. They can be impeached by the Althing, and in that case their cause will be decided by the Landsdómur, a special tribunal, which can only try parliamentary impeachments.

For administrative purposes Iceland is divided into 16 provinces (sýslur), each governed by a chief executive functionary (sýslumaður). Each province forms one or two municipal districts with a council superintending the rural municipalities (about 200). There are also 8 urban municipalities with town council, independent of the provinces, and forming by themselves administrative districts co-ordinate with the provinces. The municipal councils are elected direct by universal suffrage (men and women over 1 years of age), in urban municipalities by Proportional Representation, but in rural municipalities by simple majority.

Area and Population.—The following table gives the area and population of Iceland according to the census in 1930 :—

Divisions	Area, English sq. m.	Population, 1930	Population, 1930, Per sq. m.
The South-West	4,125	46,765	11·3
The Western peninsula	3,658	18,071	8·6
The North	13,695	24,960	1·8
The East	5,954	10,461	1·8
The South	12,277	13,604	1·1
Total	39,709	108,861	2·7

Estimated population on December 31, 1932, 111,555.

In 1930, 42,477 were domiciled in rural districts, and 59,384 in towns and villages (of over 300 inhabitants). The population is almost entirely Icelandic. In 1930, the foreign-born population numbered only 1,511, or 1·4 per cent. of the whole; 592 were born in Denmark, 417 in Norway, 141 in Faroe Islands and 361 in other countries.

The capital of Iceland, Reykjavík, had in 1932 a population of 30,566; other towns are Akureyri, 4,069, Hafnarfjörður, 3,540, Vestmannaeyjar, 3,461, Ísafjörður, 2,471, Siglufjörður, 2,180, Nes, 1,074, Seydisfjörður, 980.

The following table gives the total number of births, deaths and marriages, with the surplus of births over deaths, for three years :—

Years	Marriages	Total living Births	Stillborn	Deaths	Surplus of Birth over Deaths
1930	759	2,808	63	1,248	1,560
1931	680	2,808	64	1,277	1,581
1932	680	2,686	53	1,196	1,790

Religion.—The national Church, and the only one endowed by the State, is Evangelical Lutheran. But there is complete religious liberty, and no civil disabilities are attached to those not of the national religion. The affairs of the national Church are under the superintendence of one bishop. At the census of 1930 only 1,503, or 1·4 per cent. were returned as Dissenters.

Education.—There is a University in Reykjavík. There are 2 grammar schools, 3 public high schools, besides 2 ladies' schools, a school for elementary-school teachers, 2 schools of agriculture, a school of navigation, a commercial high school, and several other special schools. The elementary instruction is compulsory for a period of 5 years, the school age being from 10 to 14 years. Before the age of 10 the children are usually privately educated, at any rate in the country. In 1928-29, there were 238 elementary schools, with 400 teachers and 8,709 pupils. There are also several continuation schools for young people.

Pauperism and Old-Age Pensions.—Ordinary poor-relief is regulated by the law of May 31, 1927. Each community constitutes a poor district.

There is in every community one Old-Age Pension Fund, to which all men and women from 18 to 60 years of age, to whom pensions are not otherwise secured, are bound to contribute, unless they are considered too poor to do so. In addition the funds receive a subvention from the State. Grants are made to infirm poor persons over 60 years of age who for the preceding 5 years have not received poor-relief.

Justice and Crime.—The lower courts of justice in Iceland are those of the provincial magistrates (sýslumenn) and town judges (bæjarfógetar). From these there is an appeal to the Supreme Court (hæstiréttur) in Reykjavík, which has 3 judges.

In 1930, 37 men (30 in 1929), and 1 woman (1 in 1929), were convicted of crime.

Shipping and Navigation.—The mercantile marine of Iceland (above 12 gross tons) was, in 1932, 85 steam vessels of 28,221 gross tons, 287 motor vessels of 7,977 gross tons, and 4 sailing vessels of 144 gross tons: total, 376 vessels of 36,342 gross tons.

Internal Communications.—There are no railways in Iceland. At the end of 1929 there were completed about 1,300 km. (800 miles) of carriage roads outside the towns. In 1932 there were registered 1,561 automobiles, of which 619 were passenger and 942 trucks.

There are 533 post offices.

The length of the telegraph and telephone lines at the end of 1931 was 2,591 miles. The wires had a length of 7,810 miles. There were 388 telegraph and telephone offices. Number of dispatches sent in the year 1931 was 275,431, of which 148,416 were internal. Number of telephone conversations was 578,871. The total receipts amounted to 1,752,715 krónur, and the total expenditure to 1,478,488 krónur, leaving a surplus of 274,226 krónur.

Banking and Credit.—There are 3 banks in Iceland, Landsbankinn (The National Bank), a note-issuing bank which belongs entirely to the State, Bunadarbanki Islands (The Rural Bank of Iceland), a State Bank founded 1930, and Utvegsbanki Islands (The Fishing Trade Bank), a private joint-stock bank, founded in 1930, the majority of shares being held by the Government. On December 31, 1932, the accounts of the National Bank balanced at 66,265,000 krónur. A special department for loans on mortgage is connected with the National Bank.

At the end of 1931 there were 53 savings banks with 23,200 depositors, and deposits amounting to 8,993,000 krónur, or about 388 krónur to each account.

Money, Weights and Measures.—The Icelandic name of the monetary unit is króna, pl. krónur. Since October, 1925, the relation of the value of the Icelandic króna to £ has been altered to £1 = Kr. 22·15, but this value is not stipulated by law.

The metric system of weights and measures is obligatory.

IRAQ (MESOPOTAMIA).

IRAQ was freed from the Turks during the Great War. It was recognised as an independent State, to be placed under a Mandatory Power, and the mandate was allotted to Great Britain. On December 14, 1927, a treaty was signed between Great Britain and Iraq, by which the former undertook to recognise the latter as an independent State. Iraq was admitted to membership of the League of Nations on October 4, 1932, and the mandate was terminated.

Reigning King.

Ghazi, born March 21, 1912, succeeded his father, Faisal, first King of Iraq, who died on September 9, 1933; married on September 19, 1933, to his cousin, the Emira Aliyah, second daughter of King Ali of the Hejaz.

Sisters of the King.—(1) Emira Assa; (2) Emira Rajia.

Government.—In 1920 a Council of State was formed, as a provisional measure, to conduct the administration of the country. On August 23, 1921, the High Commissioner proclaimed the Emir Faisal King of Iraq, by election of the people, as the result of a plebiscite in which 96 per cent. of the inhabitants of the country voted in his favour.

The Cabinet, formed on February 24, 1934, is as follows :—

Premier and Minister of Interior.—Jamil Beg Al Midfat.

Minister of Defence.—Rashid Beg Al Khoja.

Minister of Foreign Affairs.—Dr. Abdullah Beg Damluji.

Minister of Finance.—Naji Pasha As Suwadi.

Minister of Justice.—Jamal Beg Baban.

Minister of Economics and Communications.—Abbas Beg Mahdi.

Minister of Education.—Jalal Beg Baban.

The Organic Law passed by the Constituent Assembly in June, 1924, provides for a limited monarchy and a responsible government. The legislative body consists of a Senate of 20 nominated 'elder statesmen,' and the Lower House of 88 elected deputies.

In March, 1924, the elective Constituent Assembly met for the purpose of ratifying the Anglo-Iraqi treaty, passing the Organic Law and the Electoral Law for the election of a subsequent parliament. It completed these duties early in August, and was then dissolved. The first Parliament under the Constitution was opened by King Faisal on July 16, 1925.

The country is now divided into the following Liwas: Mosul, Arbil, Kirkuk, Sulaimani, Diyala, Baghdad, Dulaim, Kut, Karbala, Hillah, Diwaniyah, Muntifiq, 'Amarah, Basrah. Each Liwa is administered by a Mutasarrif, and is sub-divided into Qadhas (under Qaimmaqsams) and Nahiyahs (under Mudirs).

Area and Population.—The country has an area of 177,148 square miles (the former Turkish vilayets respectively of Baghdad, 113,867 square miles, Basrah, 27,070 square miles, and Mosul, 36,211 square miles) and a population, according to the census of 1920, of 2,849,282. The following are the detailed figures of the census results :—

On November 25, 1933, the Council of the League of Nations fixed the boundary between Iraq and Syria, including the whole of the Jebel Sinjar in Iraq.

Education.—The medium of instruction in the schools has been changed from Turkish to Arabic in the Arabic-speaking provinces, and to Kurdish in Kurdish-speaking areas; Turkish remains in a few Turcoman towns (Tuzkhurmatli, Kirkuk, Kifri). In 1931 there were 43,000 pupils (boys and girls) in the 324 government primary and elementary schools, with 1,410 teachers. There were in 1931 three secondary schools at Baghdad, Basrah and Mosul with 875 pupils, and 18 intermediate schools at other places with 1,817 pupils. There are two technical schools, a law school, a medical school, an engineering school, a military college and a theological college for both sects. There are one men's training college for primary teachers with 255 students, one women's training centre and one night secondary school. There are 20 centres for illiterates (male and female), having 65 classes in all, at various places in the country. In April, 1922, King Faisal laid the foundation stone of the future Al ul Bait University, and the first block was opened on March 15, 1926. The education budget for the year 1932-33 amounted to 310,554 dinars, and for 1933-34, to 358,195 dinars.

Justice.—Civil and Shara' Courts are established throughout the country as follows:—A Court of Cassation at Baghdad with a British President and 5 Iraq Judges, 2 Shara' Courts of Revision at Baghdad, 5 Courts of First Instance; 11 Single Judge Courts with jurisdiction of a Court of First Instance; 28 Peace Courts; 29 Shara' Courts. In districts where a Peace Court only is established the Peace Judge has limited jurisdiction of a Court of First Instance as well as Shara' Jurisdiction.

Wherever a Civil Court is established there is also a Criminal Court, every judge having either first or second class magisterial powers. Certain administrative officials of outlying places where no courts have been formed have also magisterial powers.

The prison population at the end of 1930 was 3,790 (64 females).

Defence.—Besides British Imperial Forces, which passed on October 1, 1922, under the control of the Air Ministry, and now consist of R. A. F. units, there are local forces of the 'Iraqi Army. The establishment of the 'Iraqi Army on April 1, 1931, was as follows:—2 cavalry regiments and 1 cavalry school and depôt; 2 field batteries, 3 pack batteries and 1 artillery school and depôt; 10 infantry battalions, 2 infantry depôts; 3 transport companies; 1 mechanical transport company; medical corps; remounts and veterinary department; ordnance department; military police corps; signal battalion; royal military college; staff school; small arms school; motor machine-gun company; mechanical transport school and dépôt; Royal 'Iraqi air force, and the King's bodyguard. Total strength (1933), 20,000 of all arms. In January, 1934, an Act was passed for introducing compulsory military service on all men between the ages of 19 and 21. Two years are to be served with the Colours, four in the First Reserve and four in the Second. Students in secondary, technical and religious schools and the physically unfit are exempt, and exemption from service may be obtained by the payment of 30 dinars. The Ministry of Defence is advised by a British Military Mission.

On January 1, 1932, the 'Iraqi Police force comprised 62 'Iraqi Gazetted Officers, 224 Inspectors, 3,687 mounted police and 3,688 foot police—total strength, together with auxiliary police, 8,358. The strength of the British Inspectorate staff is 9 Gazetted Officers and 2 non-gazetted (to be reduced in 1933 to 7 Gazetted Officers only). The force is under complete 'Iraqi executive control, with the exception of the Railway Police, numbering 275 officers and men, which, however, came under 'Iraqi executive control in April, 1933. Police budget for the year 1933-34, 534,355 dinars. The auxiliary police, in addition to the railway police, include three small camel corps, total strength, 150 camelmén, who operate in the Western and South Western Frontier; and also 26 armed cars, equipped with Lewis and Vickers guns. Attached to these cars are Police wireless stations (mobile and fixed). Of the car sections 2 are employed in the interior of the country, while the remainder are employed solely in the Western and Southern Desert areas stretching from Mosul Liwa in the North to Basrah Liwa in the South. There is a large Police Training School in Baghdad for probationary gazetted officers and inspectors.

Production.—Iraq is a land of great potentialities. The soil of the country is rich, but there are vast areas which can only be cultivated if irrigated by canals or pumps. The Irrigation Department operates several canal systems, and new irrigation works are under consideration. The number of pumps at the end of December, 1930, was roughly 2,027, with a total horse-power of perhaps 58,279, all in the hands of private individuals or tribal groups. The total area actually irrigated by them in a single year is at present about 1,000,000 acres, but reliable figures are not available.

An oilfield, 30 miles south of Khanaqin, in the area known as the Transferred Territories near the Persian frontier, is operated by the Khanaqin Oil Company, a subsidiary of the Anglo-Persian Oil Company, and there is a pipe-line to a refinery near Khanaqin. Oil for consumption in Iraq is refined at this refinery and distributed and marketed by an associated company, the Rafidain Oil Company in all parts of Iraq at cheap prices controlled by an agreement between the company and the Government. An oilfield at Kirkuk has been tested by the 'Iraq Petroleum Company, an international group, who are constructing pipe-lines to the Mediterranean in order to go into production. The British Oil Development Company are exploiting oil resources in the Mosul district.

The chief winter crops are wheat and barley. The date crop is important, and the chief producing area is the tidally irrigated riverain belt of the Shatt-el-Arab. Wool is also an important export. Cotton exports reached 5,000 bales in 1928, but has since declined owing to adverse markets.

Commerce.—Imports and exports for five fiscal years (ended March 31) were as follows:—

	1928-29	1929-30	1930-31	1931-32	1932-33
	Rupees	Rupees	Rupees	Rupees	Iraqi dinars
Imports	9,50,05,570	9,82,82,840	7,18,81,615	6,39,78,175	6,239,614
Exports	5,57,40,974	5,63,38,285	4,07,12,642	4,62,23,767	2,563,559

Customs gross revenue in 1930-31, 1,84,96,511 rupees; in 1931-32, 1,97,54,503 rupees; in 1932-33, 1,557,190 dinars. Transit, 1930-31, 3,25,92,682 rupees; 1931-32, 3,07,67,262 rupees; 1932-33, 1,933,941 dinars.

The export of barley in 1931-32, 159,067 tons, valued at 59,96,792 rupees; in 1932-33, 62,657 tons, valued at 213,442 dinars; of wheat in 1931-32, 34,413 tons, valued at 18,42,457 rupees; in 1932-33, 13,025 tons, valued at 62,979 dinars; of wool in 1931-32, 5,298 tons, valued at 205,882 dinars; in 1932-33, 3,112 tons, valued at 91,017 dinars; and of dates in 1931-32, 165,965 tons, valued at 896,362 dinars; in 1932-33, 155,643 tons, valued at 878,559 dinars.

The total trade between Iraq and United Kingdom, according to the Board of Trade Returns, was as follows for five years:—

	1929	1930	1931	1932	1933
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports from Iraq	1,676,228	1,131,156	705,113	421,914	439,123
Exports to Iraq	2,425,649	1,692,499	1,242,118	1,975,845	1,895,468
Re-exports to Iraq from U.K.	71,381	84,251	26,673	34,417	25,675

Communications.—The Iraqi railway system consists of a metre gauge line from the Port of Basra, which is the Port of Iraq situated on the Shatt-el-Arab at the head of the Persian Gulf, to Baghdad, a distance of 854 miles. There are further a metre gauge line, connected with the Basra line by a wagon ferry across the River Tigris at Baghdad, from Baghdad to Khanaqin (110 miles) which is an important town near the Iraqi-Persian Frontier; a branch metre gauge line from the Baghdad-Khanaqin line to Kirkuk (109 miles), which is to be extended to Mosul; a standard gauge (4 ft. 8½ in.) line from Baghdad to Baiji (136 miles) along the right bank of the Tigris towards Mosul. The main Basra-Baghdad line passes the ancient cities of Ur of the Chaldees, Babylon and Kish, and special railway facilities exist to enable travellers to visit these cities. Goods are carried direct from Basra Port to Khanaqin on the Iraqi-Persian Frontier, whence they are transported by road to the markets of Persia. The total route mileage open on March 31, 1932, was 752·70 miles. There were also 189·86 miles of siding, making a total of 922·56 miles. Railway earnings for the year 1932-33 were 496,054 dinars, and expenses 467,701 dinars.

The Iraqi railway also runs a passenger motor service between Kirkuk and Nisibin via Mosul to connect with the Taurus express to Haidar Pasha, and thence by the Simplon-Orient express. This gives a through connection from India to England by sea, rail and road—Baghdad to London in six days with Wagons-Lits from Nisibin to Calais—and Bombay to London in eighteen days, including two days in Iraq to visit Ur of the Chaldees, Babylon, Kish, etc.

Since the War nearly five thousand miles of roads, chiefly earthen, have been opened for the passage of all classes of traffic.

In the year 1931-32, 793 steamers of a gross registered tonnage of 4,606,566 entered the ports of Basra and Abadan.

At the close of 1932 there were 106 Post Offices in Iraq. At most of these Money Orders are issued and paid. A restricted number of Offices also issue and pay Postal Orders and accept and deliver Insured and Cash-on-Delivery (Value-payable) postal packets.

Internal mail communication is maintained over distances totalling 5,222 miles, as follows:—820 miles by air, 735 miles by rail, 3,188 miles by mechanical road transport, 351 miles by pack animals and runner service, 122 miles by river and 6 miles by tram.

Apart from frontier exchanges of mails with Turkey and Persia ordinary foreign mails are received and despatched by three routes; a weekly service via India for correspondence to and from all countries East of Iraq and also East and South Africa, and two bi-weekly services across the desert and through Palestine and Syria for correspondence with all countries West of Iraq including those in North and South America. The latter service affords mail communication to or from most countries in Europe in less than fifteen days, the time of transit for mails between England and Iraq being eight to nine days. Parcels are received and despatched by both of these routes.

Air Mail correspondence is both despatched and received in mails conveyed by the Imperial Airways, Ltd., London-Cairo-Baghdad-Karachi, and the (K.L.M.) Amsterdam-Bandseng services. The transit period between Iraq and England by this service is 3 to 4 days, and between Iraq and India about 2 days. Air Mail communication with Syria is maintained by means of Air Union Orient Lines, Ltd., bi-weekly service.

During 1932 the number of postal packets transmitted by the Inland Post was approximately 4,264,067, including 19,765 parcels. Approximately 1,814,737 postal packets, including 4,877 parcels, were despatched to destinations abroad and 3,592,606, including 24,780 parcels, were received from foreign countries for delivery in Iraq.

Post Office Money Orders issued during 1932 totalled 84,187, of an aggregate value of 228,486 dinars, and 79,352 Money Orders, aggregating 182,068 dinars, were paid.

On December 31, 1932, the line and wire mileages of the Iraq Telegraph and Telephone System were 4,415 miles and 20,742 miles respectively. The number of Post and Telegraph Offices open for public telegraph traffic was 91; in addition, 59 Railway Telegraph Offices also dealt with public telegrams.

The total number of Inland Telegrams transmitted during 1932 was 162,526. Sent and received ordinary foreign telegrams totalled 29,994 and 38,062 respectively. The number of wireless messages sent and received was 27,319. At the end of the year there were 40 Departmental Public Telephone Exchanges, and 31 Sub-Exchanges operating private systems. The number of connections in the public system was 1,876. A Strowager Automatic Telephone Exchange has been operating at Basrah since 1923.

Currency.—The rupee currency was displaced by a national Iraqi currency and note issue, by a Currency Law published on April 19, 1931. By this law, which came into effect on July 1, 1931, but was suspended until April 1, 1932, the monetary unit became the dinar, equal in value to one pound sterling, and divided into 1,000 fils. Silver coins for 50 (called the Dirham) and 20 fils are in circulation, and other coins for 10, 4 (nickel), 2 and 1 (bronze) fils. Notes are for a quarter, a half, and one dinar, and for 5, 10 and 100 dinars. The 50-fils coins are of a silver alloy, the fineness of which is 500 parts of pure silver in 1,000 parts, and of a weight of 9.00 grammes, while the 20-fils coin is of a silver alloy, the fineness of which is the same, but of a weight of 3.60 grammes. A larger coin of 200 fils was put into circulation in June, 1933. The total issued currency on May 1, 1933, was : notes, 2,004,750 dinars ; coin, 243,435 dinars. The Currency is controlled by an Iraqi Currency Board sitting in London.

ITALY.

(REGNO D'ITALIA.)

Reigning King.

Vittorio Emanuele III., born November 11, 1869, the only son of King Umberto I. of Italy and of Queen Margherita ; succeeded to the throne on the death of his father, July 29, 1900; married October 24, 1896, to Elena, born January 8, 1873, daughter of Nicholas, King of Montenegro; offspring, Princess Jolanda, born June 1, 1901, married on April 9, 1923, to Count Calvi di Bergolo; has three daughters and a son, born in 1924, 1927, 1930 and 1933 respectively; Princess Mafalda, born November 19, 1902, married on September 23, 1925, to Prince Philip of Hesse; has two sons, born in 1926 and in 1927 respectively; Prince Umberto Nicola Tomaso Giovanni Maria, Prince of Piedmont and Heir Apparent, born Sept. 15, 1904, married January 8, 1930, to Marie-José of Belgium, born August 4, 1906; Princess Giovanna, born November 13, 1907, married to King Boris of Bulgaria, on October 25, 1930; has one daughter, born in 1933; Princess Maria, born December 26, 1914.

Cousin of the King.

Prince Vittorio Emanuele, of Savoy-Aosta, Count of Turin, born November 24, 1870, son of the late Prince Amedeo of Savoy, Duke of Aosta (deceased January 18, 1890), from his union with Maria Vittorio, Princess of Pozzo della Cisterna, who died January 8, 1870.

Most genealogists trace the origin of the reigning house to a German Count Berthold, who, in the eleventh century, established himself on the western slope of the Alps, between Mont Blanc and Lake Geneva. In the end of the eleventh century the Count of Savoy acquired the countries of Turin and Susa. Count Amadeus, in 1383, founded a law of primogeniture which led to the immediate acquisition of the territory of Nice. In 1416 the Counts of Savoy adopted the title of Duke; in 1418 they acquired the Principality of Piedmont; and in 1713 they obtained the island of Sicily, with the title of King. Sicily had to be exchanged, in 1720, for the isle of Sardinia, to which henceforth the royal dignity remained attached. The Genoese territory was added at the peace of 1815. The direct male line of the House of Savoy died out with King Carlo Felice in 1831, and the crown fell to Prince Carlo Alberto, of the house of Savoy-Carignano, a branch founded by Tommaso Francesco, born in 1596, younger son of Duke Carlo Emanuele I. of Savoy. King Carlo Alberto abdicated the throne March 23, 1849, in favour of his son, the late King Vittorio Emanuele II., who, by the Peace of Zürich, November 10, 1859, obtained Lombardy, with the exception of Mantua and a part of the surrounding territory. On March 11, 1860, annexation to Sardinia was voted by plébiscites in Parma, Modena, the Romagna, and Tuscany; on October 21, Sicily and Naples (including Benevento and Pontecorvo, part of the Papal States), and on November 4, the Marches and Umbria. The first Italian Parliament assembled in February, 1861, and declared (March 17, 1861) Vittorio Emanuele King of Italy. The remaining part of the province of Mantua and Venetia were added in 1866. Finally, the remaining part of the Papal States (province of Rome), having been taken possession of by an Italian army (September 20, 1870), was annexed to the Kingdom by plébiscite on October 2. After the Great War—by the Treaty of Saint Germain (Sept. 10, 1919) there were annexed to the kingdom: the Venezia Tridantina, the Venezia Giulia with Zara, the islands of Cherso, Lussino and other minor ones. Later, on January 28, 1924, Fiume was also annexed.

The civil list has been settled (1919) at 11,250,000 lire; by a law of 1925 an allowance of 3,000,000 lire was settled on the Prince of Piedmont, Heir Apparent; Duke of Aosta and the Duke of Genoa receive an allowance of 1,000,000 lire each.

The greater part of the private domains of the reigning family has been given up to the State.

Constitution and Government.

The present Constitution of Italy is an expansion of the 'Statuto fondamentale del Regno,' granted on March 4, 1848, by King Charles Albert to his Sardinian subjects. According to this charter, the executive power of the State belongs exclusively to the Sovereign, and is exercised by him through responsible ministers; while the legislative authority rests conjointly in the King and Parliament, the latter consisting of two Chambers—an upper one, the Senate, and a lower one, called the 'Camera de' Deputati.' To co-ordinate and complete all the activity of the régime, resulting from the Fascist Revolution, there is the Gran Consiglio del Fascismo which is composed of the quadrumviri of the March to Rome appointed for an indefinite period; a certain number of Members (Ministers and other high dignitaries) appointed for as long as they hold their respective office; and an undetermined number of Members to be appointed for the duration of three years, by the Head of Government. The Gran Consiglio del Fascismo forms the definitive list of the candidates to Parliament; gives its opinion on the Statutes, on the arrangement and on the lines of conduct of the Fascist Party. Its approval must be obtained on all questions of a constitutional nature including those connected with the succession to the throne and the prerogatives of the Crown. The Secretary of the Partito Nazionale Fascista is also Secretary to the Gran Consiglio and may be invited at the sessions of the Council of Ministers. In 1932 the membership of the Fascist party consisted of 1,007,231 members belonging to the male 'Fasci,' of 608,669 belonging to the young combative 'Fasci,' of 50,998 fascist students and of 145,210 persons belonging to the female 'Fasci.'

The Senate is composed of the princes of the royal house who are twenty-one years of age (with the right to vote when twenty-five years of age), and of an unlimited number of members, above forty years old, who are nominated by the King for life; a condition of the nomination being that the person should either fill a high office, or have acquired fame in science, literature, or any other pursuit tending to the benefit of the nation, or, finally, should pay taxes to the annual amount of 3,000 lire. On December 20, 1932, the Senators numbered 374: of these 9 are Royal Princes.

By the law of May 17, 1928, the whole electoral system has been radically changed. Franchise is granted to men of 21 years of age, and also to men aged 18 years, if married or widowers with sons, who are paying a syndicate rate, or taxes to the amount of 100 lire, or are receiving a salary or pension from any public institution. Criminals and certain others are excluded.

The Chamber of Deputies consists of 400 members elected for 5 years. To be eligible it is necessary to have completed 25 years of age and to fulfil the conditions required for active electorate. The whole country is a single constituency. The National Syndicate Confederations are entitled to propose a number of candidates twice as great as the number of deputies to be elected. Juridical persons and Associations of national character are also entitled to propose 200 other candidates. Out of these lists of candidates the Great Fascist Council selects 400 names which is the roll proposed to the electors. If the proposed roll is not approved, fresh elections must be held. In this case the lists of candidates must be presented fifteen days before the fixed day for the elections. The candidates elected are those inscribed on the list which has obtained the majority of votes. The seats reserved to the minority are divided among the other lists in proportion to the number of votes obtained by each list.

Each Deputy has an annual allowance of 21,000 lire.

The last elections took place on March 25, 1934; out of the 10,438,538 registered electors, 10,041,997 (or 96.2 per cent.) participated in the balloting; of these 10,025,513 (or 99.84 per cent. of the voters) voted in favour of the national list of candidates.

The duration of a Parliament is five years, and it must meet annually. The ministers have the right to attend the debates of both the upper and the lower House; but they have no vote unless they are members.

The executive power is exercised by the King through the Government. The Prime Minister is the Chief of the Government responsible to the King for the general political direction of the Government. The Ministers are responsible to the King and the Chief of the Government for the action of their respective Offices. The Prefects are responsible, in their respective Provinces, for the high efficiency of all the Services connected with the State—with the exception of those connected with the Administration of Justice, of War, of the Navy and of the Air Service.

To discipline mass labour, the Italian State juridically admits Syndicates. Syndical Associations are either grouped territorially, or in Federations. The latter consist of thirteen Confederations, six for the employers and six for the workers. Each Confederation corresponds to the following activities: Agriculture, Industry, Commerce, Banks, Transport on Land and Maritime and Air Transports. The thirteenth comprises Arts or Liberal Professions.

The National Council of Corporations is presided over by the Chief of the Government and through it is carried into effect the principle of integral corporation.

The present Cabinet appointed on September 12, 1929, and reconstituted on November 6, 1933, consists of the following Members:

Prime Minister, Chief of the Government and Minister of the Interior, of Foreign Affairs, of War, of the Navy, of the Air, and of Corporations.—Signor Benito Mussolini.

Minister of Public Works.—Signor Araldo di Crollalanza.

Minister of National Education.—Signor Francesco Ercole.

Minister of Agriculture and Forests.—Signor Giacomo Acerbo.

Minister of the Colonies.—General Emilio de Bono.

Minister of Finance.—Signor Guido Jung.

Minister of Justice.—Signor Pietro de Francisci.

Minister of Communications.—Admiral Costanzo Ciano.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

The State is divided into 92 Provinces, and these into 7,311 Communes. Provinces are administered by a Provincial Rectorate and a President. The President, the Vice President and the Rectors are appointed by Royal Decree. In every province there is a Giunta Provinciale Amministrativa which exercises functions of guardianship on Communes and on the Opere Pie, as well as jurisdictional functions. The Consiglio Provinciale dell'Economia Corporativa represents the interests of the productive activities of the Province. At the head of the Commune (with the exception of Rome where there is a Governor, and Naples where there is a High Commissioner) is the Podestà (Mayor) who is appointed by Royal Decree and remains in charge for five years with the same powers which were formally exercised by the elected municipal authorities. In all the capitals of the Provinces and in Communes with more than 20,000 inhabitants, there exists a Council (Consulta) of from 10 to 40 members, selected by the Prefect of the Province from among the persons designated by the recognised local syndical associations. The Consulta has advisory functions only, but its advice must be asked in the case of the approval of budgets and of the imposition of taxes.

Religion.

The treaty between the Holy See and Italy, of February 11, 1929, admits and confirms the principle established by the first article of the Fundamental Statute of the Kingdom of Italy that the Catholic Apostolic Roman Religion is the only religion of the State. Other creeds are permitted, provided always they do not profess principles, or follow rites, contrary to public order or to moral behaviour. The profession of such creeds is free, and discussion on religious matters is freely admitted.

The appointment of Archbishops and of Bishops is made by the Holy See; but before proceeding to such appointments the Holy See submits to the Italian Government the name of the person to be appointed in order to obtain an assurance that the latter will not raise objections of a political nature.

Catholic religious teaching is given in elementary and intermediate schools. Marriages may be celebrated before a Catholic clergyman in accordance with the rules of Canon Law, or before a clergyman of other religions admitted by the State. Civil marriages when celebrated in accordance with prescribed legal formalities are also recognized.

According to the Census of 1931, 99·6 per cent. of the Italians were Catholics (41,017,369); 82,481 were Protestants; 47,435 Jews; orthodox, 5,890; Muslims, 814; other religions, 2,823; atheists, 17,474; religion not disclosed, 2,885.

Education.

Elementary education is free and compulsory up to the age of 14. It is given in 3 grades: Preparatory in the so-called 'Maternal Schools' or 'Asili' maintained by the municipalities (3 years), Lower (3 years), and Higher (2 years).

The Secondary schools are divided into 2 grades. In the first grade are the Gymnasium (Ginnasio), the Preparatory Course for Teachers, the Preparatory Course of the Technical Institute, the Professional Schools. In the second grade are the classical Lyceum (Liceo classico), the Lyceum for Science, the Higher Course for Teachers, the Higher Technical Institute (which is divided into several Sections), the Academy of Arts, the Lyceum for Arts, the Conservatori di Musica.

Higher Instruction is given in the Royal Universities and Higher Institutes, and also in the Free Universities and Free Higher Institutes ('Free' denotes that they are self-supporting).

Physical education is organized by the Comitato Olimpionico Nazionale Italiano, which directs and co-ordinates the activity of 33 National Federations. Sports of a popular character are entrusted to the Opera Nazionale Dopolavoro. Physical education for boys from 6 to 14 years old is entrusted to the Opera Nazionale Balilla, and that for girls of the same age to the Opera Piccole Italiane.

There were also twelve higher institutes for commercial education (Turin, Genoa, Milan, Venice, Trieste, Rome, Bari, Catania, Naples, Florence, Palermo, and Bologna), with 8,778 students in 1932-33; six higher schools of agriculture (Milan, Bologna, Florence, Perugia, Pisa, and Portici) with 913 students in 1932-33; nine engineering colleges (Turin, Milan, Genoa, Padua, Bologna, Pisa, Rome, Naples, and Palermo) with 3,321 students in 1932-33; the higher naval engineering college of Naples with 239 students; the school for Oriental languages in Naples, with 598 students; 10 veterinary colleges (Turin, Milan, Parma, Bologna, Perugia, Pisa, Naples, Messina, Sassari, and Camerino), with 669 students; 6 superior institutes for teachers (Turin, Milan, Florence, Rome, Naples, and Messina), with 1,968 students; 5 schools of architecture in Rome, Florence, Naples, Turin and Venice, with 533 students; and the school of industrial chemistry in Bologna, with 97 students.

The Italian Academy consists of 60 members, divided into 4 categories.

Justice and Crime.

Italy has 1 Court of Cassation, in Rome, and is divided for the administration of justice into 18 appeal court districts (with 6 detached sections), subdivided into 126 tribunal districts, and these again into mandamenti, each with its own magistracy (Pretura), 992 in all. There are also 123 Assize Courts. For civil business, besides the magistracy above mentioned, Conciliatori have jurisdiction in petty plaints.

By a law of November, 1926, a special tribunal was instituted with jurisdiction in offences (delitti) against the security of the State.

On December 31, 1932, there were 32,297 male and 2,222 female prisoners; of these 15,630 males and 829 females were found guilty. At that date there were 993 establishments for imprisonment before trial, 60 penal establishments, and 23 establishments for the execution of preventive measure of safety.

Pauperism.

In Italy legal charity, in the sense of a right in the poor to be supported by the parish or commune, or of an obligation on the commune to relieve the poor, does not exist. Public charity in general is exercised through the permanent charitable foundations, called 'Istituzioni pubbliche di assistenza e di beneficenza' (Opere pie), regulated by the laws of July 17, 1890, and later laws, including that of June 17, 1926.

There is, moreover, the National Institution for the protection of Maternity and Infancy (Opera Nazionale per la protezione della Maternità e dell' Infanzia), whose relief expenditure during the year 1931 amounted to 114,352,000 lire, and the relief foundations of the Fascist Party which entertained during the same year 332,519 children in holiday resorts.

Defence.

I. FRONTIER.

The extent of the land frontier of Italy is as follows :—French frontier 303 miles ; Swiss 450 ; Austrian 261 ; Yugoslav 152 ; frontier of San Marino

24; in all (exclusive of San Marino) 1,166 miles. The coast line of the peninsula measures 2,472 miles; of Sicily, 693; of Sardinia, 830; of Elba and the small islands, 973; the total length of coast is thus 4,968 miles.

II. ARMY.

Service in the army (or navy) is compulsory and universal. Liability to service begins at the age of 21 up to the age of 55.

The term of service in the active army is normally 18 months for all arms. After passing through the ranks, the men are placed on 'unlimited' leave, i.e., they are transferred to the reserve, in which they remain until the age of 55.

The army is divided into the metropolitan army and the colonial troops, the former being under the Ministry of War, the latter under the Ministry of the Colonies.

The establishment of the metropolitan army for 1933-34 was 17,966 officers and 236,217 other ranks organised in 11 army corps and the military commands of Sicily and Sardinia comprising:—

	Divisions	Brigades	Legions	Regiments	Battalions	Groups	Squadrons	Batteries	Companies

Besides the above-mentioned units, the Volunteer Militia for National Security was formed by decree of August 4, 1924. It is organised in General Headquarters (Rome), 4 areas (Milan, Bologna, Rome, Naples), 2 militia headquarters (Palermo, Cagliari), 33 legion group headquarters, 135 legions (13 reserve and 2 colonial) and 6 independent cohorts. Its strength in 1933 was 31,692 officers and 397,956 other ranks, inclusive of permanent formations amounting to 1,719 officers and 8,784 other ranks. Of these the average number called up for annual training was 31,507.

The Carabinieri are a force of military police. They are recruited by selection from the army, and by voluntary enlistment. In 1933 the strength of the Carabinieri was 1,043 officers and 49,500 other ranks.

The colonial forces consist of various colonial units, enlisted voluntarily, and native troops. The establishment in 1933 was 1,016 officers and 29,889 other ranks. This was distributed as follows: Tripolitania, 423 officers, 12,515 other ranks; Cyrenaica, 362 officers, 10,151 other ranks; Eritrea, 121 officers, 3,323 other ranks; Somaliland, 100 officers, 3,246 other ranks.

The army estimates for 1933-34 amount to 2,620,587,746 lire; for 1934-35, 2,543,761,000 lire.

III. AIR FORCE.

By Royal Decree of January, 1923, the Commissariat of Aeronautics was constituted. By successive Royal Decree of March, 1923, the Royal Air Force was constituted as a separate body independent of the other armed forces. Finally, by Royal Decree of August, 1925, the Commissariat was abolished, and instead of it was created the Ministry of Aeronautics.

The Air Force is divided into wings (stormi), consisting of different numbers of groups, each of them containing different numbers of squadrons. The Air Force contains the following parts: (1) The Air Force proper; (2) the Air Force co-operating with the royal army; (3) the Air Force co-operating with the royal navy; (4) the Air Force for the colonial army.

The Air Force proper remains at the entire disposal of the Ministry of Aeronautics. The wings destined for co-operation with the army, the navy and the colonial forces depend respectively on the Ministers of War, of Marine and of the Colonies.

For the financial year 1933-34 the Air Force expenditure is estimated at 678 millions of lire, exclusive of expenditure on civil aviation.

The number of aeroplanes actually in service amounts to 840 in 1st line and 800 in reserve, but are gradually increasing.

The strength of the personnel (including officers, non-commissioned officers and other ranks) amounted for the year 1933-34 to 24,659 persons.

IV. NAVY.

The Treaty of Washington assigned to Italy, in capital ship tonnage, a replacement figure of 175,000 tons (177,800 metric), but the existing ships have a 'standard' displacement of only 86,532 tons. Italy, had she so desired, could have begun the construction of capital ships at any time from 1927 to 1930. Under the London Naval Treaty, she may still lay down capital ships, up to a total of 70,000 tons, at any time up to 1936. The current building programmes (1932 and 1931) include 4 cruisers of 6,790 tons and 4 torpedo-boats of 600 tons. Two cruisers of 5,850 tons and a number of destroyers and submarines, belonging to the 1930-31 programmes, are nearing completion.

The naval expenditure for 1933-34 is estimated at 1,397,222,277 lire, for 1934-35 at 1,224,780,477 lire.

The Head of the Naval Administration is the Minister of Marine, assisted by an Under-Secretary of State. The Ministry of Marine embraces various general and central directorates covering the personnel, the military and scientific services, naval and mechanical establishments, arms and naval armaments, medical and accountant officers, and civil personnel. Advisory Councils of the Ministry are the Board of Admirals; the Superior Marine Council; and the Committee of Ship Designs. The Office of the Chief of the Naval Staff is entrusted with the study of all problems connected with naval warfare and the employment of the various naval units.

The coast line of the peninsula is divided into zones placed under the jurisdiction of Admirals, Commanders-in-Chief of Maritime departments, with headquarters at Spezia, Naples, Venice, and Taranto. In localities more important from a strategical point of view, there exist Maritime commands (Pola, La Maddalena, Brindisi, Messina); and in other localities there are stations under charge of Senior Naval Officers (Genoa, Leghorn, Gaeta, Cagliari and Zara).

The Mercantile Marine is administered by a Directorate General of the Ministry of Communications.

The five cruisers last named are ex-enemy vessels. There are 16 modern flotilla leaders, of from 1,550 to 2,200 tons, and a speed from 34 to 38 knots, and 40 destroyers with speeds of from 30 to 40 knots, nearly all completed since the war, besides many of earlier date. Eight of the cruisers and many of the destroyers are equipped as mine-layers.

The personnel consists of over 2,691 officers and 50,800 men.

Production and Industry.

I. AGRICULTURE.

The area of Italy comprises 76,637,877 acres, mainly distributed, on December 31, 1932, as follows (the figures are in acres):—cereals, 17,767,568; leguminous plants, 2,515,631; industrial plants, 459,634; vegetables, 1,334,421; vines, 2,493,390; olive trees, 1,991,747; woods and forests, 13,803,843; forage and pasture, 11,273,386. The total agricultural land extended to 70,294,640 acres.

According to the agricultural census taken on March 19, 1930, the number of firms engaged in agriculture was 4,114,116. Persons engaged in agriculture as their main occupation number 6,088,088 males and 2,704,349 females, while for 1,207,850 males and 2,938,912 females agriculture is a secondary occupation.

The principal crops for 3 years were as follows:—

	Acreage			Produce in thousand quintals
	1931	1932	1933	1931	1932	1933
Wheat . .	12,075,378	12,236,887	12,568,102	66,620	75,151	81,003

On March 19, 1930, Italy had 973,978 horses, 869,781 asses, 455,234 mules, 15,639 buffaloes, 7,012,877 cattle, 3,264,572 pigs, 10,043,370 sheep, and 1,846,075 goats.

II. FORESTRY.

The total forest area was 5,585,400 hectares (13,802,082 acres) in 1932. The forest area belonging to the State on December 31, 1931, was 239,854 hectares (592,715 acres).

III. MINES AND MINERALS.

The Italian mining industry is most developed in Sicily (Caltanissetta), in Tuscany (Arezzo, Florence, and Grosseto), in Sardinia (Cagliari, Sassari and Iglesias), in Lombardy (particularly near Bergamo and Brescia), and in Piedmont.

Production in metric tons (1 metric ton = 2,204 lbs., or 1,016 metric tons = 1,000 English tons) of metallic ores and other minerals in 1932 was as follows:—

Ores, &c.	No. of productive mines	Quantity (in thousands of metric tons)	Value (in thousands of Lire)	No. of Workers
Iron	8	417	15,586	991
Manganese	6	15	1,371	165

Boric acid	4	1	1,707	33
Totals (including graphite, petroleum and other minerals)	641	—	322,186	34,396

Iron and steel production in 1933 was as follows in metric tons (1932 figures in parentheses): pig-iron, 517,078 (460,538); raw steel, 1,783,650 (1,391,357); rolled steel, 1,498,234 (1,235,923).

In 1932 the 9,573 quarries in activity employed 51,013 persons, the output of building and decorative stone being valued at 354,425,000 lire.

IV. MANUFACTURES.

The Italian industrial census of October 15, 1927, showed that there were 732,109 industrial establishments in the country, having 4,005,790 employees (1,009,890 women). Of the total factories, 692,313 employed from 1 to 10 persons; 34,951 from 11 to 100 persons; 4,151 from 101 to 500 persons; and 694 over 500.

The cotton industry is the largest and most important (10,406 factories with 642,887 employees). Number of spindles in 1932, 5,462,390. Silk culture, while flourishing most extensively in Lombardy, Piedmont and Venetia, is carried on all over Italy. The quantity of silk produced in Italy was (in tons), 1931, 5,393; 1932, 2,965.

The manufacture of sugar is growing in importance. Sugar output (in metric tons) in 1913-14, 269,946; 1927-28, 254,954; 1928-29, 353,458; 1929-30, 405,081; 1930-31, 387,747; 1931-32, 341,384. The manufacture of cheese is also an important industry.

Commerce.

The following table shows value of Italy's special foreign trade for five years (in millions of paper lire), excluding precious metals:—

Year	1929	1930	1931	1932	1933
Imports . . .	21,803·0	17,346·6	11,643·1	8,257·4	7,392·4

Internal Communications.

I. RAILWAYS.

Railway history in Italy began in 1839, with a short line between Naples and Portici (5 miles). Length of railways (December 31, 1932), 22,787 km., of which 16,918 km. were State railways. Receipts from State railways in 1932-33, 3,144,919,000 lire; expenditure, 3,748,248,000 lire.

The Government proposes to electrify the greater part of the railways; already electrified, 2,033 km.

The total length of national roads in Italy (June 30, 1933) was 20,597 kilometres (12,796 miles), covering an area of 115,795,000 square metres.

II. AVIATION.

The statistics of aviation for 3 years were as follows:—

—	1930	1931	1932
Length of air lines (km.)	14,899	18,723	19,564
Distance flown (km.)	4,438,912	4,398,871	4,650,118
Passengers (No.)	38,361	33,650	43,300
Parcels and letters (kg.)	41,675	71,107	52,201
Newspapers (kg.)	26,109	34,834	216,678
Baggage (kg.)	474,759	446,878	544,830
Goods (kg.)	137,610	153,284	154,334

III. POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS.

In the year 1932 (June 30) there were 11,293 post offices. In the postal correspondence (1931-32), 2,309,016,000 pieces, including insured and registered pieces, were dealt with at ordinary rates.

On June 30, 1932, the telegraph lines had a length of 65,308 km., and the wires 541,711 km. There were 10,375 telegraph offices, of which 8,591 were State offices and 1,784 railway offices. In 1931-32, 24,727,548 private telegrams were sent inland; and 1,956,637 private international telegrams.

The telephone service in 1931-32 (June 30) had 325,263 subscribers. There were 957 urban systems, and also 5,535 inter-urban systems. Total number of conversations in the year, 28,944,787 (excluding international conversations).

During the year 1931-32 the maritime radio-telegraphic service, with its 17 coast stations, transmitted and received 1,044,881 words, while local continental radio stations despatched and received 981,811 messages of 17,901,984 words.

Banking and Currency.

At the end of 1931, there were 3,299 credit institutes with deposits amounting to 37,862,100 thousands of lire. At the same date the capital and reserves of these 3,299 credit institutes were 8,728,500,000 lire.

Deposits in the savings-banks on December 31, 1932, were as follows: Post Office savings banks, 17,020,751 thousands of lire; ordinary savings banks, 18,742,979 thousands of lire, total 35,763,730 thousands of lire.

By a decree of April 29, 1923, life assurance business is carried on only by the National Insurance Institute and by other institutions, national and foreign, authorised by the Government. Branches of the National Institute of Insurance have been established in every Province of Italy, 2,485 branches in all, on December 31, 1932. The insurance effected by the Institute in 1932, 1,052,186 contracts in force, to the value of 11,465,339 thousands of lire.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The Lira of 100 Centesimi; intrinsic value, 25·22½ to 1*l.* sterling. On December 22, 1927, the paper lira was stabilized at 92·46 to £ sterling, 19 to the dollar, and 366 for 100 gold lire. The lira contains 0·070191 grammes of gold.

The coin in circulation consists of gold 20-lire, 50-lire and 100-lire pieces; of silver, 5-lire, 10-lire, and 20-lire pieces; nickel, 20-cent, 50-cent, 1-lire, and 2-lire pieces; and bronze 5 and 10-cent pieces. Nickel coin is being substituted for bronze to a large amount. Bank notes of 50, 100, 500 and 1,000 lire are in circulation, and, in accordance with the decree of December 22, 1927, are convertible into gold or monies of countries with a gold basis.

The Metric System of weights and measures is in general use.

FOREIGN DEPENDENCIES.

Colony of Eritrea.

The dominion of Italy on the coast of the Red Sea extends from Cape Kasar (18° 2' N.) to Cape Dumeirah on the Strait of Bab-el-Mandeb (12° 30' N.). The length of coast is about 670 miles. The total area is 45,754 square miles, and the population according to a census taken in 1931 is 621,776 inclusive of 4,565 Italians. Massawah has (1931) 4,154 inhabitants, of whom 654 are European, mainly Italian. The seat of the Government is Asmara, a modern town 7,765 feet above the sea-level, with 21,601 inhabitants (8,101 European). The religions of the native population are the Christian (Coptic rite) and the Mohammedan. There are some Roman Catholics and a few Pagans. The principal languages of Eritrea are Tigry and Tigré, two languages originating from the ancient Ghehz, the Ethiopian language, which is the ecclesiastical language of the Eritrean Christians. Tigry is spoken by the Abyssinian stock and Tigré in the North, in Massawah and district, and is understood to a certain extent in the whole of Eritrea. Other languages are spoken in the plateau, and Arabic in the lowlands and ports.

Military force (1932): 98 officers, 111 non-commissioned officers, and about 3,500 native troops, exclusive of the police force of the colony.

In the Italian dependencies the central government is represented by a civil governor, who is nominated by the King and is under the direction of the Minister for the Colonies.

Governor.—Riccardo Astuto dei Duchi di Lucchesi.

For the financial year 1932-33 the revenue and expenditure of the Colony of Eritrea are estimated at: Colonial revenue, 51,294,280 lire; State contributions, 23,000,000 lire; expenditure, civil administration, 32,311,790 lire; military, 18,982,490 lire.

For climatic and agricultural purposes the country must be divided into two zones, the lowlands along the sea coasts and the plains, where the climate is tropical and the rains fall in winter; and the uplands, where the climate is cool, and sometimes cold, and the rains fall in summer. Both in the lowlands and the uplands the annual rain is sufficient for the successful raising of the crops. Irrigation works are being carried on in the lower zone in order to facilitate intensive production by Italian farmers. Pasture is abundant, and the pastoral population is partly nomadic. Pearl-fishing is carried on at Massawah and the Dahlak archipelago. There are gold mines worked successfully in several localities of Hamasiën.

At Massawah the imports by sea, the exports, and the tonnage entered were as follows:—

—	1927	1928	1929	1930	1931
Imports . Lire	201,360,416	195,627,391	207,503,799	176,814,838	186,825,160
Exports . " "	80,196,371	93,712,746	72,499,008	76,279,192	69,063,359
Tonnage entd. Tons (Steamships only)	588,857	600,960	597,631	572,205	572,742

Through the land frontier the imports in 1931 amounted to 28,217,293 lire, and the exports to 36,284,668 lire.

There are 75 miles of railway from Massawah to Asmara, 65 miles from Asmara to Cheren, and 53 miles from Cheren to Agordat. The line from Agordat to Tessenei, under construction, has reached a point 65 miles from Agordat. There are monthly sailings between Massawah and Genoa and Massawah and Trieste, and weekly sailings for Egypt, and frequent sailings for the Far East. There are 10 post-offices. There is a telegraph line of 465 miles in length with 10 public offices. There are 1,074 miles of telephone lines with 10 public offices. Wireless telegraph stations have been opened at Massawah, Assab, Asmara, and Marsa Fatma Eri. They communicate with the radiotelegraphic system of Italian Somaliland and also with Italy (St. Paolo of Rome). There is thus through wireless communication between Italy and Italian Somaliland, via Massawah.

The legal currency consists of Italian coins and Maria Theresa thalers. The Italian mint in 1918 issued a new silver coin, the Tallero d'Italia, the weight of which is 28·0668 grammes, ·835 fine.

Italian Somaliland.

The Colony of Italian Somaliland has an area of about 194,000 sq. miles and a population (1931) of 1,010,815 (1,630 Italians and 28 other Europeans). It extends along the east coast of Africa from British Somaliland to Dik's Head in Kenya Colony. The inland boundaries are determined under the Treaty of May 6, 1908, between Italy and Abyssinia, by a line (only partially demarcated) from the confluence of the Ganale with the Dawa, thence to Bender Ziada (45th parallel) on the Gulf of Aden following an irregular line which runs at a mean distance of 180 miles from the coast through Jet, Ato, El Gorum, Bur Lelmis, Bur Gumburn, Bur Burdubo, and Bur Galambaladi to Bender Ziada.

As a result of the Treaty of 1915 and the Colonial rearrangements consequent on the war, Britain has ceded Italy territories on the right bank of the Juba with the port of Kismayu (Chisimaio). This district is incorporated in Somalia and forms one of its provinces. [See map in THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1925.]

Italian Somaliland comprises (I.) The territories of Northern Somalia, viz.—(1) The territory of the Mijertins, from Bender Ziada, the most northerly point belonging to Italy on the Gulf of Aden, to Cape Gabà on the Indian Ocean (8° 13' N. lat.); (2) the territory of the Nogal, from Cape Gabà to Cape Garad (6° 47' N. lat.), formerly occupied by the Mad Mullah; (3) the territory of Obbia, from Cape Garad to the northern boundary of the colony of Benadir, determined by a line which ends at the sea near the wells of El Gabobe (about 4° 30' N. lat.). (II.) Southern Somalia, formerly called 'Benadir,' which extends from 4° 30' N. lat. to Ras Chiamboni (Dik's Head). Mogadiscio (population 29,562, of whom 675 are Europeans), capital of the Colony, with its territory, has been placed under the direct dependence of the Governor.

The principal occupations of the people are cattle-rearing and agriculture. In Southern Somaliland the whole country near the banks of the Webi Shebele and the Juba is inhabited and cultivated by the natives, and in the district of Merca-Genale and in that of Villaggio Duca degli Abruzzi there are Italian plantations with a cultivated area of some 70,000 acres. In Northern Somaliland agriculture is almost unknown; the Mijertins rear camels and sheep. Exports (1931) were 78,823,060 lire; imports, 128,789,227 lire. Imports are cottons, sugar, rice, tea, coffee, iron, machinery, timber; exports sesame oil, gum, hides, butter, cotton and cotton-seed oil, resin, kapok and ivory. In 1931 there were 71 miles of railway open to traffic. In 1931 exports to U.K. amounted to 28,589% and imports from U.K. 12,931%. Re-exports from U.K. in 1931 amounted to 24%. Length of roads 6,200 miles; steamship service on the Juba River from Kismayu to Bardera. In 1931, 1,127 ships entered and 1,144 cleared the ports of the colony. Military force (1932), 123 (Italian) officers, 73 non-commissioned officers and 3,047 (coloured) men. A detachment of the Flying Corps has recently been added.

Governor.—Maurice Rava (1931).

The budget of Italian Somaliland for the year 1932-33 is as follows: Revenue proper of the colony, 23,000,000 lire; State contribution, 42,900,000 lire; special administration, 5,740,000 lire; total, 71,640,000 lire. Civil expenditure, 50,286,000 lire; military, 21,354,000 lire; total, 71,640,000 lire.

Twenty-three wireless telegraph stations are working in the Colony. The wireless station at Afgoi communicates directly with Italy.

There are in the Colony 9 principal post offices (Mogadiscio, Merca, Brava, Khismayu, Baidoa, Villaggio Duca degli Abruzzi, Obba, Afgoi and Alula), and 15 secondary post offices. A railway runs from Mogadiscio to Afgoi Adalei Villaggio Duca degli Abruzzi (70.23 miles).

The currency is the Italian lira (silver coins and currency notes issued by the Banca d'Italia).

Tripolitania and Cyrenaica.

(LIBIA ITALIANA.)

Governor (with Headquarters in Tripolitania).—Marshal Italo Balbo (appointed November, 1933).

Lieutenant-Governor of Cyrenaica.—General Rodolfo Graziani (appointed March, 1930).

Italian Libia lies along the north coast of Africa between Tunis on the west and Egypt on the east, in longitude from about 9° to 25° east. The extreme northerly point of Libia is at about the parallel of latitude 33° north. The territory in effective occupation was greatly extended southwards in 1930-31. According to an arrangement with France (September 12, 1919) as a result of the Treaty of 1915, the western frontier extends in a curve from west of Ghadames to south of Tummo including Ghat. On the Egyptian frontier Italy has obtained Jaraboob from Britain. By the Italo-Egyptian Treaty of December 5, 1925, the Eastern boundary is the 22nd parallel.

Tripoli fell under Turkish domination in the sixteenth century, and though, in 1711, the Arab population secured some measure of independence, the country was in 1835 proclaimed a Turkish vilayet. In September, 1911, a quarrel broke out between Turkey and Italy, and the latter occupied Tripoli and established an army there. On November 5, 1911, a decree was issued annexing Tripoli, and on February 23, 1912, the Italian Chamber passed the Bill which ratified the decree of annexation. The war, nevertheless, continued until October 18, 1912, when the Treaty of Ouchy was signed, by which the sovereignty of Italy in Tripoli was established. This has been recognised by the Great Powers.

For administrative and military purposes the country is divided (since January 24, 1929) into two provinces, Tripolitania and Cyrenaica, with their respective capitals at Tripoli and Benghazi.

TRIPOLITANIA.

Area and Population.—The area of the territory is estimated at about 347,500 square miles. According to a census taken on April 21, 1931, there were 522,914 natives and 29,749 Europeans (24,700 Italians). It is estimated that of the total population, 500,356 are Mussulmans, 21,342 Jews, and 1,216 other religions. Of the Mussulman population the negroes of various races form about 35 per cent. Arabic is more generally spoken than written, and both Italian and Arabic are the official languages. The principal towns of Tripolitania are on the coast: Tripoli with 86,000 inhabitants (1933), Misurata with 43,000, and Homs with 31,000. Inland are the caravan halting places, Ghadames, Sinauen, Mizda, Murzûk, and Ghat.

Justice.—In both districts justice, in so far as personal status or family or succession matters are concerned, is administered by Mohammedan or rabbinic tribunals for native Mohammedans or Jews according to their own religious law, and by regional tribunals according to Italian law in civil and commercial matters, whether the parties concerned be Italians, strangers or natives, except for special concessions made by the Colonial Judiciary to native mentality. Criminal cases are tried by the regional tribunals with the assistance of two assessors, chosen from the citizens of the best class, who with the President (a professional magistrate) form the Judicial College. One of the assessors must be a Mussulman or a Jew, according to the religion of the accused, but the judges of the metropolitan citizens are all Italians. More serious penal cases are tried by the Court of Assize, consisting of the President of the Court of Appeal with four assessors, two of whom must be Mohammedans or Jews, according to the religion of the accused. Appeals in both the districts, whether in civil or in criminal cases, are heard by the Court of Appeal for Libya, which was instituted in December, 1912, with its seat at Tripoli. There is a final appeal to the Supreme Court of Cassation at Rome. Disputes as to titles to land (which have to be inscribed in the Land Registry) are tried in the first instance by the Land Registry Office, from which there is an appeal to the Regional Tribunal composed of a judge and four assessors, and finally to the Court of Appeal of Libya.

Finance.—For the financial year 1933–34 the revenue and expenditure were estimated at: Revenue proper of the colony, 71,000,000 lire; State contribution, 165,500,000 lire; special administration, 1,961,800 lire; civil expenditure, 93,961,800 lire; military expenditure, 144,500,000 lire.

Defence.—The military force in Tripolitania consists of a corps of Colonial troops numbering 440 officers, 835 non-commissioned officers, and 13,200 men (8,700 natives and 4,500 Italians). There is an aviation station near Tripoli, also a naval command, with its station at Tripoli and a higher naval officer at its head. To this are attached some light vessels and tugs, stationed in the harbour.

Production and Industry.—Tripolitania has three zones from the coast inland—the Mediterranean, the sub-desert and the desert. The first, which covers an area of about 17,231 square miles, is the only one properly suited for agriculture, and may be further subdivided into (1) the oases along the coast, the richest in N. Africa, in which thrive the date-palm, the olive, the orange, and all Mediterranean plants (the yield of dates in 1931 was 50,000 metric tons); (2) the steppe district, suitable for cereals (barley and wheat) and pasture (the barley crop in 1931 was 20,000 metric tons and the wheat crop 4,000 metric tons). This district is the one where Italian colonisation has chiefly spread; it has olive, almond, vine, orange and mulberry trees and ricinus plants; (3) the dunes, which are being gradually afforested with acacia, robinia, poplar and pine; (4) the Jebel (the mountain district, Tarhuna, Garian, Fessato), in which thrive the olive, the fig, the vine and other fruit trees, and which on the east slopes down to the sea with the fertile hills of Msellata. The sub-desert zone produces the alpha plant. The desert zone and the Fezzan contain some fertile oases, such as those of Ghadames, Ghat, Soena, Sebha, Brak. In 1928 (latest census) there were in the colony: 506,489 sheep, 336,642 goats, 48,051 cattle, 43,008 camels and 38,073 donkeys, mules and horses.

Sponge-fishing and tunny-fishing are of great importance. In 1933, there were 8 fisheries working, the number of tunnies caught was 16,540 compared with 7 fisheries, 13,496 tunnies in 1932. In 1932 the quantity of sponges fished amounted to 47,424 kilogs. Among the other industries the most flourishing is that of tobacco and tobacco manufactures. In 1932 the tobacco crop yielded 585 metric tons (700 metric tons in 1931). The exports of the products of the tobacco manufacture reached in 1932-33 the sum of 1,968,220 lire. The Mellaha salt-pits yielded 19,000 tons of the best salt in 1932-33, nearly the whole of it being exported. Among the other products are matting, carpets, leather articles, fabrics embroidered with gold and silver, and other articles of value of a local character.

Commerce.—The trade of Tripolitania was: Imports, 1932, 160,568,419 lire, 1931, 185,082,830 lire; exports, 1932, 29,276,629 lire, 1931, 29,710,540 lire. In 1933 the exports to the United Kingdom (Board of Trade Returns) were 1,595*l.* and the imports from U.K. 53,876*l.* Re-exports from U.K. in 1933 were 4,270*l.*

Communications.—The principal means of communication inland are the caravans which follow long-frequented routes. Tripoli (town) is connected by telegraph cable with Malta, and by land lines with Bengardane (Tunis). In 1912 an Italian cable was laid between Syracuse and Tripoli.

Total length of railways, 167 miles. The principal lines in Tripolitania are: a line 73 miles long, along the coast, from Tripoli to Zuara; one 13 miles long, from Tripoli to Tagiura; and one 58 miles long, from Tripoli to Azizis, and Garian. There are 2,820 miles of carriage road.

There are fortnightly steamship sailings from Tripoli to Naples and Tripoli to Genoa. From Tripoli to Syracuse and vice versa—there are two steamship sailings every week. Malta is always touched. From Tripoli along the coast there are weekly steamship sailings.

During the year 1932, 552 steamers and 168 sailing vessels entered the port of Tripoli, landing 178,813 tons of goods and 21,859 passengers; while 548 steamers and 164 sailing vessels left the port embarking 33,510 tons of goods and 17,383 passengers. During the same period the post office issued post money orders for 85,485,768 lire and paid out money orders amounting to 73,506,482 lire. The number of messages despatched was 244,876, and those received were 224,377. The railways carried 151,128 passengers and 191,698 tons of goods.

Banking and Currency.—The Banca d'Italia, the Banco di Sicilia, the Banco di Napoli, the Banco di Roma, the Cassa di Risparmio, the Cassa di Piccolo Prestito and other banks carry on financial operations. The official currency is the Italian, but English pounds and francs are also used in commercial transactions.

There is a British Consul at Tripoli and a Vice-Consul at Homs.

CYRENAICA.

Area and Population.—The area of the territory is estimated at about 73,000 square miles, and with the hinterland (zone of Cufra) 212,000 square miles. According to a census taken on April 21, 1931, the population was estimated at 165,000 (19,000 Europeans, mainly Italians). The principal town is Bengazi with 43,000 inhabitants in April, 1931.

The oasis of Jarabub, on the eastern border of Cyrenaica, was ceded by Egypt to Italy, and Italian troops occupied it on February 7, 1926. On the other hand, the frontier in the neighbourhood of Sollum on the sea was rectified in favour of Egypt.

Justice.—For details as to the Administration of Justice, see above under Tripolitania.

Finance.—For the financial year 1933-34 the revenue and expenditure of Cyrenaica were estimated at: Revenue proper of the colony, 48,680,000 lire; State contribution, 165,500,000 lire; total, 214,180,000 lire; civil expenditure, 102,483,000 lire; military expenditure, 111,697,000 lire.

Defence.—The military force in Cyrenaica consists (1932) of 361 officers, 662 non-commissioned officers and 9,218 men (7,163 natives and 2,055 Italians).

Production and Industry.—Pasturage is abundant and cattle could be bred on a vast scale. An impulse will be given to agriculture by the establishment of large numbers of Colonists from Italy. Bananas are grown at Derna, and experimental planting of wine grapes at Guarscia, under Government supervision, has given promising results. Barley is the chief food of the people. In 1932 the yield in sponge fishing amounted to 57,939 kilos, valued at 6,186,000 lire. There is one tunny fishery near Bengazi (Honnara Mongar el-Chebiri); catch in 1932 was 584 tons of tunnies and 1,794 tons of pilchards. The development of the valuable salt pans of Bengazi is being advanced slowly: in 1931 the yield was 25,000 tons.

Commerce.—The trade of Cyrenaica was (1932): imports, 124,556,625 lire; exports, 10,213,392 lire. The principal imports are cotton goods, sugar, tobacco and metals; exports (1932), sponges (1,520,040 lire); hides and skins (638,649 lire); wool (1,003,995 lire); cattle (40,210 lire); and carpets (125,200 lire).

Communications.—Good carriage roads join the coastal centres, and run from there inland, linking up with the old caravan routes which lead through the oases to Darfur, Wadai, and Borker. On August 31, 1932, there were 380 miles of road completed. A steamer calls every week at Bengazi from Syracuse. Another steamer calls every two weeks from Genoa, Leghorn, Palermo, Tunis and Tripoli at Bengazi and continues to Derna and Alexandria (Egypt). In 1912 an Italian cable was laid between Syracuse and Bengazi. Aerial service between Bengazi and Tripoli, three times weekly, 577 miles; between Bengazi and Tobruk, weekly, 275 miles. A railway line 67 miles long runs from Bengazi to el-Abiar and on to Barce, and one 35 miles long from Bengazi to Soluch. In 1931, 1,170 vessels of 1,075,981 tons entered, and 1,153 vessels of 1,072,900 tons cleared the ports. The length of railway open to traffic in 1932 was 170 km. (106 miles). The number of passengers was 82,077, and the goods traffic 156,019 metric tons.

In Cyrenaica the telegraph lines have a length of about 187 miles (1932), with 16 civil telegraph stations, and 36 military radio stations. There is a cable from Bengazi to Syracuse (478 miles). During the year ending June 30, 1932, postal revenues amounted to 3,709,010 lire; savings bank deposits to 5,200,097 lire; registered and insured letters numbered 674,137; parcels received numbered 105,059; telegrams sent and received, 923,680; revenue from telegrams, 1,725,224 lire.

Banking and Currency.—The Banca d'Italia and the Banco di Roma carry on financial operations. In 1925 the Cassa di Risparmio della Cyrenaica opened at Bengazi and Derna, and now has branches at Barce, Cirene, Derna, Tobruk, Apollonia, Bardia and Agedabin.

There is a British Consul at Bengazi.

AEGEAN ISLANDS.

Italy occupied the Aegean Islands in 1912, during the Tripoli War. By the Treaty of Lausanne, which came into force on August 6, 1924, Turkey ceded them, with the island of Castelrosso, to Italy in full sovereignty. The military regime in the islands lasted from the occupation, May 4, 1912, to August 7, 1920. The civil regime was then established, Governors being appointed. The Governor, who is subject to the Foreign Office in Rome, is head of the administration; his authority is represented in the smaller islands by the Regent of the Government of Cos and five delegates in the islands of Lero, Calymno, Symi, Scarpanto and Castelrosso. The municipalities of the cities of Rhodes and Cos debate autonomously the matters within their province. The municipal councils of these two cities are appointed by the Governor. The other towns and villages are administered by sindaci and demogerondi elected by the people according to ancient customs.

Governor.—Senator Mario Lago. (Appointed February, 1923.)

Area and Population.—The following are the Italian islands in the Aegean with their areas and population in 1931 (Italian names in brackets):—

Island	Area in sq. miles	Population 1931	Island	Area in sq. miles	Population 1931
Rhodes (Rodi) .	542	54,818	Karchi (Calchi)	12	1,788
Cos (Coo) .	109	21,169	Symi (Sfimi) .	24	9,469
Patmos (Fatmo) .	12	2,900	Astypalaea
Lipao (Lisso) .	6	962	(Stampalia) .	37	1,610
Kalymnos (Calino)	38	16,512	Karpathos (Scar-
Leros (Lero) .	24	6,151	panto) .	107	6,574
Nisyros (Nisiro) .	15	3,436	Casos (Caso) .	24	1,925
Tilos (Piscopi) .	24	1,228	Castelrosso .	8	2,280

The chief towns are : Rhodes (capital) with 25,447 inhabitants ; Calimno, 16,512 ; Cos, 11,571 ; Symi, 9,462. Of the total population of 131,255 the Greeks in 1931 were 83 per cent., the Turks 7, the Italians 5 and the Jews (all in Rhodes) were 5 per cent.

Justice.—The special judiciary of the Aegean Islands includes (1) the Department of Judicial Services, under which are all the judicial offices of the possession ; (2) the Tribunal of Second Instance (appeal) ; (3) the Assize Court ; (4) a Civil and Penal Tribunal of First Instance at Rhodes, with jurisdiction over the islands of Calchos, Symi, Piacopi, Scarpanto, Caso and Castelrosso ; (5) a Civil and Penal Tribunal of First Instance at Cos, with jurisdiction over all the other islands. Special Ecclesiastical and Mixed Tribunals which exert authority in matters of personal status also operate for the Orthodox, Moslems, and Jews, and Mixed Tribunals of Appeal. These special tribunals apply the provisions of Byzantine, Koranic and Talmudic law.

Finance.—The State contribution is 3,000,000 lire on a budget of 47,000,000 lire (1932-33).

Education.—There are Government schools for boys and girls, both elementary and secondary, and practical agricultural school, commercial school of first and second degree, and a normal school ; and private schools, both elementary and secondary, for the various communities.

Defence.—The Aegean Islands are garrisoned by an infantry regiment of two battalions, one stationed at Rhodes and the other at Cos. These battalions send detachments to the smaller islands. The Italian Navy has a station at Rhodes, to which are attached the units scattered over the Aegean and the naval base of Porto Lago in Leros. The police and passport service is in the hands of the Carabinieri (one company). The Customs services are carried out by the Finance Guard (one company).

Agriculture, Commerce and Navigation.—The agriculture of the islands of Rhodes and Cos is highly developed. These islands are famous for the cultivation of the very famous table grapes, other white and black grapes. Olives, tobacco, oranges, and other fruits, and vegetables are also cultivated. The most important industries are the manufacture of oriental carpets, wines in bottles, olive oils, artistic pottery, and tiles, that are specially exported to Italy and to Egypt. The market to which the greater part of the exports is directed is Egypt, which is connected with Rhodes by speedy steamship lines. Rhodes is developing a considerable tourist traffic, partly dependent on the thermal springs at Calitea. Sponge fishing is of great importance in the islands of Calimno, Symi and Castelrosso. The transit and inter-island commerce gives rise to a brisk harbour movement of sailing vessels and small steamers, which serve the neighbouring islands. The countries which import manufactures and food-stuffs are principally Italy, Egypt and Turkey. The trade of Aegean Islands was (1932): imports, 56,850,290 lire; exports, 12,713,896 lire. In 1933, exports to U.K. (Board of Trade Returns) were 25,821*l.*; imports from U.K., 3,489*l.*; re-exports from U.K., 39*l.* There are no railways.

Communications.—Every week a steamship sails from Brindisi and from Alexandria to Rhodes and vice versa. The means of communications are assured by steamships and motorships of the Lloyd Triestino, Adriatica, Messageries Maritimes and many other steamship companies which touch at Italian ports of the Tyrranean and Adriatic Seas and the Piræus, Smyrna, Syria, Palestine and Egypt. There is an air-mail every week from Brindisi and Athens to Rhodes.

There are in Rhodes almost 200 miles of good roads and there are telegraph lines (cable and wireless) and automatic telephones in each island.

Banking and Currency.—The Banca d'Italia, the Banco di Roma, the Banco di Sicilia and other banks carry on financial operations. Italian money is current; the metric system of weights and measures is in use.

There is a British Consul at Rhodes.

Concession of Tientsin.—The Italian concession of Tientsin, under the agreement with China of June 7, 1902, lies on the left bank of the Pei-Ho and has an area of about half a square kilometre with a population of 8,534 (Chinese, 8,051; Italians, 327; other Europeans, 156) on December 31, 1932.

Island of Saseno.—3 miles long and 1·24 miles broad. Lies at the entrance of the Vallona Bay (Albania) and is inhabited by some few shepherds and by marines of the Royal Navy. The island owns a radio-telegraphic Station.

JAPAN.

(NIPPON.)

Reigning Sovereign.

THE Japanese claim that their empire was founded by the first Emperor Jinmu Tennō, 660 B.C., and that the dynasty founded by him still reigns. It was revived in the year 1868 (the first year of the Meiji), when the now ruling (de jure) sovereign overthrew, after a short war, the power of the Shogun (the de facto sovereign), who had held the ruling power in successive families, since the twelfth century; and in 1871 the feudal system (Hōken Seiji) was entirely suppressed. The Emperor bears title of Tennō; but the appellation by which he is called in relation to external affairs is 'Kōtei,' a word of Chinese origin. Only foreigners make use of the poetical title 'Mikado.'

Emperor of Japan.—Hirohito, born at Tōkyō, April 29, 1901; succeeded his father, Yoshihito, December 25, 1926; married, January 26, 1924, to Princess Nagako, born March 6, 1903, daughter of H.I.H. Prince Kuninomiya (died January 27, 1929). Offspring:—Imperial Princess.—I., Princess Shigeko (Terunomiya), born December 6, 1925. II., Princess Sachiko (Hisanomiya), born September 10, 1927; died March 8, 1928. III., Princess Kazuko (Takanomiya), born September 30, 1929. IV., Princess Atsuko (Yorinomia), born March 7, 1931. V., Prince Akihito of Tsugunomiya, born December 23, 1933.

Empress Dowager.—Princess Sadako, born June 25, 1884; daughter of Prince Kujō; married, May 10, 1900, to late Emperor.

Brothers of the Emperor.—I., Prince Yasuhito (Chichibunomiya), born June 25, 1902; married, September 28, 1928, to Setsu-Ko Matsudaira. II., Prince Nobuhito (Takamatsunomiya), born January 3, 1905; married, February 8, 1930, to Kiku-Ko Tokugawa. III., Prince Takahito (Suminomiya), born December 2, 1915.

By the Imperial House Law of February 11, 1889, the succession to the throne has been definitely fixed upon the male descendants. In case of failure of direct descendants, the throne devolves upon the nearest Prince and his descendants. The civil list is fixed at 4,500,000 yen.

Constitution and Government.

By the Constitution of February 11, 1889, the Emperor combines in himself the rights of sovereignty, and exercises the whole of the executive powers with the advice and assistance of the Cabinet Ministers, who are responsible to him, and are appointed by himself. There is also a Privy Council, who are consulted by the Emperor on important matters of State. The Emperor can declare war, make peace, and conclude treaties, and he exercises the legislative power with the consent of the Imperial Diet. It is his prerogative to give sanction to laws, to convoke the Imperial Diet, to open, close, and prorogue it, and to dissolve the House of Representatives. The Imperial Diet consists of two Houses, a House of Peers and a House of Representatives. Every law requires the consent of the Imperial Diet. Both Houses may respectively initiate projects of law, can make representations to the Government as to laws or upon any other subject, and may present addresses to the Emperor.

The House of Peers (404 members) is composed of (1) male members of the Imperial family of full age (16 in number); (2) princes and marquises of the age of 30 and upwards (15 princes and 30 marquises); (3) counts, viscounts, and barons of the age of 30 and upwards, who have been elected by the members of their respective orders, to the total number of 18 counts, 66 viscounts and 66 barons; (4) persons above the age of 30 years, who have been nominated members by the Emperor for meritorious services to the State or for erudition, not to exceed 125 in number, the term of membership being, in principle, for life; (5) 4 members of the Imperial Academy of Sciences above the age of 30 years, who have been elected by the members of that body; (6) 1 or 2 persons above the age of 30 years, who have been elected in Hokkaido and each Fu and Ken from among and by respectively 100 or 200 male inhabitants thereof, paying therein the highest amount of direct national taxes on land, trade or industry, to the total number of 66. The term of membership under (3), (5) and (6) is seven years.

Until May, 1925, the suffrage for the House of Representatives was restricted by qualification arising from payment of taxes. But in May, 1925, general manhood suffrage was enacted to come into force at the first general election. According to the new law, the members of the House shall number 466 (at present, 455), a fixed number being returned from each electoral district for a term of 4 years.

The proportion of the total number of members to the population of Japan proper is 1 to 133,309. In principle, all the male Japanese subjects above the age of 25 years are electors and those above the age of 30 years eligible. Heads of the families of peers and persons in the army and navy can neither elect nor be elected; holders of certain specified offices in the Government are ineligible; and no Government officials except the seimukan (political) class are, while in office, permitted to be members of the House. Such persons as have not lived continuously for not less than a year within the same city, town or village, shall not be registered as electors. Voting is by secret single ballot.

The President and Vice-President of the House of Peers are nominated by the Emperor from among the members, and President and Vice-President of the House of Representatives are nominated by the Emperor from among three candidates, elected by the House. The Presidents of both Houses receive an annual salary of 7,500 yen; Vice-Presidents, 4,500 yen; elected and nominated members of the House of Peers and members of the House of Representatives, 3,000 yen, besides travelling expenses. The Imperial Diet, which must meet annually, has control over the finances.

At the elections held on February 20, 1932, the following parties were returned to the 56th Diet:—Seiyūkai, 303; Minseito, 146; Labour, 5; Other Groups, 12.

The Cabinet (appointed on May 26, 1932) consists of the following members:—

Prime Minister.—Viscount Makoto Saito.
Minister for Foreign Affairs.—Kōki Hirota.
Home Affairs.—Baron Tatsuo Yamamoto.
Finance.—Korekiyo Takahashi.
War.—General Hayashi.
Navy.—Admiral Mineo Osumi.
Minister of Justice.—Matsukichi Koyama.
Education.—Ichirō Hatoyama.
Agriculture and Forestry.—Fumio Goto.
Commerce and Industry.—J. J. Matsumoto.
Communications.—Hiroshi Minami.
Railways.—Chuzō Mitsuuchi.
Overseas Affairs.—Ryutarō Nagai.

Local Government.

For local administration Japan (except Hokkaidō or Yezo; Chōsen, formerly Korea; Karafuto or Japanese Sakhalin; and Taiwan or Formosa) is divided into prefectures ('Fu' and 'Ken'). The prefectures are subdivided into municipalities ('Shi'), towns ('Chō') and villages ('Son'). Okinawa Prefecture and some islands have, however, special organisations. Municipality, town, and village are the units of local government. These administrative divisions form at the same time local corporations of the same names. In each prefecture there are a governor ('Chiji'), a prefectural assembly ('Fukwai' or 'Ken-kwai'), and a prefectural council ('Fu-Sanji-kwai' or 'Ken-sanji-kwai'), of which the governor is president; in each municipality a mayor, a municipal assembly, and a municipal council, of which the mayor is the president; and in each town or village a chief magistrate and a town or village assembly. Prefectural assemblies give decisions upon certain matters prescribed by the Law (chiefly upon financial affairs); and municipal, town and village assemblies, upon public affairs in general. The prefectural council gives decisions upon matters delegated by the prefectural assemblies and upon matters of pressing necessity when the assembly is not in actual session.

Citizenship in a municipality, town, or village, is recognised, in principle, for every male person above the age of 25 years who has resided for two years continuously within the municipality, town or village, with similar exceptions to those in the case of the suffrage for the House of Representatives. Every citizen is qualified to elect and be elected for the municipal, town, or village assembly of his own city, town or village, and also for the prefectural assembly of the prefecture to which his city, town, or village belongs.

Hokkaidō has a governor and a special organisation. Chōsen has a Governor-General. The peninsula is administered in 13 Do or provinces, these being sub-divided into 329 Tuand Yun or districts. Taiwan (Formosa) also has a governor-general, who is invested with very extensive powers. The island is divided into 5 provinces (Shū), each of which has a governor. Karafuto is divided into 7 local divisions (Shichō).

Area and Population.

The Empire consists of the five principal islands of Honshū (mainland), Kiushū, Shikoku, Hokkaidō (Yezo), and Taiwan (Formosa); besides the Chishima (Kuriles), Sado, Oki, Awaji, Iki, Tsushima, Riukiu (Luchu Islands), Ogasawarajima (Bonin Islands), Bōkotō (Pescadores) islands, the peninsula Chōsen (Korea), and the southern half of the island of Karafuto (Sakhalin). Total area is shown as follows:—

Administratively there exists a division into 47 prefectures. There is also a division into 632 rural districts, 112 cities, 1,716 towns, and 9,946 villages (April 1, 1933).

Taiwan (Formosa) and Bōkotō (the Pescadores) were ceded by China in accordance with the treaty of Shimonoseki in 1895, and Japanese Karafuto was ceded by Russia by the Treaty of Portsmouth, N.H., in 1905. By the same Treaty of Peace the Russian Government ceded to Japan the lease of Port Arthur, Ta-lien, and adjacent territory and waters, and also the railway between Chan-Chun and Port Arthur, and the coal mines worked in connection therewith. In March, 1915, the Chinese Government agreed to extend the lease of the territory on Liaotung Peninsula, including Port Arthur and Dalny, to 99 years. The Chino-Japanese Treaty of December 22, 1905, provided for the interests of China and Japan with respect to Manchuria. By a treaty between Japan and Korea on Aug. 23, 1910, the Korean Territory was annexed to the Empire of Japan.

By an agreement signed May 25, 1915, Japan obtained from China exclusive mining rights in Eastern Mongolia, and the right to settle in the province, and in Shantung the transference of all mining and railway privileges hitherto enjoyed by the Germans; also the extension of the lease of Port Arthur to 99 years, and a joint control over certain industrial works in which they have a large financial interest, besides other privileges. (For full details, see Introduction to THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1916.)

Estimated population of Japan on October 1, 1933, 33,796,400 males and 33,442,200 females; total, 67,238,600.

On October 1, 1931, the number of Japanese residing abroad was 635,227 (361,450 males and 273,777 females). Of these, 164,467 men and 113,363 women were in America; 113,662 men and 92,115 women in Asia; 80,602 men and 67,218 women in Australasia; 2,657 men and 1,039 women in Europe; and 62 men and 42 women in Africa. On December 31, 1931, the number of foreigners in Japan was 26,885, of whom 17,819 were Chinese, 1,969 English, 2,015 American, 1,040 German, 462 French, 171 Portuguese, 110 Dutch, 1,637 Russian, 287 British Indians, 225 Swiss, 227 Canadian, and 132 Italian.

Religion.

There is absolute religious freedom. The chief forms of religion are—(1) Shintoism, with 13 sects; (2) Buddhism, with 12 sects (56 denominations). There is no State religion, and no State support. In 1931 Shinto shrines numbered 49,631 (besides 61,712 minor shrines), and the priests, 15,199; Buddhist temples (1930), 71,310 (besides 34,963 minor temples); high priests and priestesses, 54,904. There were, in 1930, 2,512 licensed preachers and 1,795 churches and preaching stations of the Roman Catholic, Greek, Catholic, and Protestant Churches. Since 1891 the Roman Catholics have had an episcopate of one archbishop and three suffragan bishops. There are shrines dedicated to the eminent ancestors of the Imperial House, and to meritorious subjects; these are independent of any religious sect, and some of them are supported by State or local authorities.

Education.

Elementary education is compulsory. The following are the educational statistics for 1930-31:—

Institutes	Number	Teaching Staff	Students and Pupils

¹ 5,262,327 males and 4,848,899 females.

Japan has 5 Imperial universities, and 41 other institutions of university rank (1930-31).

Particulars of the Imperial universities are given as follows:—

University	Location	Established	1930-31
			Teachers	Students
Tokyo Imperial University	Tokyo	1877	651	8,064
Kyoto Imperial University	Kyoto	1897	493	5,552

Kyushu Imperial University	Fukuoka	1910	265	1,956
Hokkaido Imperial University	Sapporo	1918	281	2,268

The remaining 41 institutions had 3,983 teachers and 50,154 students.

In 1931, there were 4,609 libraries in Japan, with 10,138,281 volumes. In 1931, 23,110 original books and translations, and 10,666 periodicals, monthly, weekly, and daily, were published.

Justice and Crime.

A system of justice founded on modern jurisprudence has been established. Judges are irremovable, except by way of criminal or disciplinary punishment. There are four classes of courts in Japan; namely, subdistrict courts, district courts, courts of appeal, and court of cassation. In the court of cassation five judges preside; in the courts of appeal and in the district courts three judges; in each case one of them being the chief judge. In the subdistrict courts a single judge presides. A court which deals with disputes respecting administrative affairs is under the direct supervision of the Emperor.

The following are the criminal statistics for four years:—In 1927, 155,316 criminals were condemned; in 1928, 144,409; in 1929, 152,239, and in 1930, 166,027.

In 1930 there were 56 prisons, 98 detached prisons and houses of correction. Number of prisoners of all kinds, convicted and accused, and those in houses of correction at the close of 1930:—Men, 45,699; women, 738; total, 46,437.

Pauperism.

The relief statistics for 3 years show expenditure as follows (in yen):—

Year	Food	Clothing	Providing with work	Shelter and Temporary lodgings	Total (including miscellaneous)
1929-30	131,665	35,181	257,986	79,904	512,899
1930-31	237,015	37,394	195,036	238,374	764,998
1931-32	223,970	46,116	653,648	70,177	1,002,432

In 1930-31 the Government relieved 17,403 persons to the amount of 727,384 yen. On March 31, 1931, 617 foundlings were being maintained, and the expense in that year was 92,123 yen. There are, besides, several workhouses established by local corporations and private persons. The number of hospitals in 1930 was 2,165 (13 state, 94 public and 2,058 private).

The revenue of the Prefectures for the year 1933-1934 was 491,663,247 yen, and expenditure 491,663,247 yen. The revenue of the cities in 1932-33 was 590,669,591 yen, and the expenditure was 590,575,682 yen. The revenue of the towns and villages in 1932-33 was 452,267,205 yen, and the expenditure was 451,982,787 yen. The total local debt at the end of March, 1932, was 2,535,085,907 yen.

Defence.

I. ARMY.

Service in the army (or navy) is universal and compulsory. Liability commences at the age of 17 and extends to the age of 40, but actual service begins at 20. All those physically capable of bearing arms are divided into two classes, the 'fit,' and the 'absolutely fit.' The numbers necessary for the first line (or active army), called Gen-eki, are taken solely from the 'absolutely fit.' Service in the ranks is for 2 years in all arms; then for 5 years and 4 months in the reserve (Yobi). Reservists are usually called out once during their reserve service, for 3 weeks. Having completed 7 years and 4 months in the first line, including its reserve, the men are transferred to the second line, called Kōbi. Service in the Kōbi is for 10 years, with usually one period of training of 3 weeks. At the end of their Kōbi service the men are in the 38th year of their age, and they are passed into the Kokumin, which is the territorial or home defence army. In this they serve for 2 years and 8 months, to complete their total service of 20 years.

The reserve for making good the waste of war, or supplementary reserve, is called Hojū. It is composed of the balance of the 'absolutely fit' recruits not required for the first line, and of as many of those classed as 'fit' as may be required to make up a certain fixed number. They all serve in the Hojū for 12 years and 4 months, during which a part of them is called out for training. After completion of this they are passed to the Kokumin until 40 years of age to complete their army service.

The Kokumin is divided into two 'bans.' The first ban comprises all the men who have passed, as shown above, through the first line and landwehr, or through the supplementary reserve and landwehr, who are trained in barracks, and will serve until 20 years of age. The second ban consists of Jōbi, Kōbi, Hojū, and those of which do not serve for the first ban. It includes (1) those who though 'fit' are not required for the Hojū; (2) those who for various reasons have been exempted from military service; and (3) the young men between 17 and 40 years of age who have not been called up. None of these classes receive any military training, but they can be drawn on in case of national emergency.

The partially trained men who have been passed into the Kōbi from the Hojū are not included in the fighting units of the Second Line. They supply the large number of men required for the transport service on mobilisation, and for the expansion of other departmental corps.

The standing army of Japan consists of 17 divisions, including the guard, 4 independent cavalry brigades, 2 independent regiments of mountain guns, and 3 regiments of heavy artillery.

Two infantry regiments form a brigade, and two brigades (12 battalions) a division. The divisional artillery consists of a regiment of field or mountain artillery (6 batteries of 4 guns). A regiment of cavalry of 2 squadrons, and a battalion of engineers, and also a battalion of transport service, complete the division. Four infantry, and 4 artillery, ammunition columns, 6 field hospitals, 4 supply columns, and 1 remount dépôt accompany each division in the field. The war strength of a division is reckoned at 18,700 officers and men, 4,800 horses, 36 guns, and 1,674 vehicles.

The strength of the active army and the first and second reserves in 1932 was 17,343 officers and 259,304 other ranks.

The air personnel for the army numbered in 1932, 6,944, organised in 8 flying regiments and a balloon corps. The number of aeroplanes in service was 800.

The Japanese Islands are divided into military districts, corresponding to the divisions of the army, and the district is the unit of administration as well as of territorial command. Each division is supplied with recruits from its own district, except the Guards, whose infantry recruits are selected from the whole country; the other arms of the Guard division are recruited from each district of the 1st, 2nd, 3rd, 13th and 14th divisions. Abroad there are 36,000 men in Manchuria, and 800 in North China.

The Emperor is the head and supreme commander of the army, and also of the navy. He nominates the War Minister (always a general officer of high rank), the Chief of the General Staff, and the Members of the Military Council.

The arm of the Japanese infantry is the improved rifle; calibre, 6.5 mm. (.256") machine guns and light machine guns, infantry cannons and infantry howitzers, a Mauser with an altered chamber. The cavalry are armed with a carbine of similar construction, and also with heavy and light machine guns. The field gun is a q.-f. shielded Krupp of 7.5 cm. calibre, which fires a shrapnel of 14.3 lbs. The mountain artillery has a gun of the same calibre firing a lighter shell. There are a certain number of field howitzer batteries, armed with 4·6" and 5·9" howitzers, firing shells of about 44 lbs. and 80 lbs. respectively. A 4" gun for heavy field batteries is being introduced.

The military budget for 1932-33 amounted to 361,600,000 yen.

II. NAVY.

The administration of the Navy is in the charge of the Minister of Marine, under whose control is also the Naval Technical Department for Naval Construction, while the Chief of the General Staff is directly responsible to the Emperor for Operation, Mobilization, and Intelligence.

The coast of Japan is divided into three maritime districts having their headquarters at Yokosuka, Kure, and Sasebo.

The Japanese Fleet was markedly affected by the Washington Agreement, though Japan remains the third great naval power of the world. Her replacement tonnage was fixed by the Treaty at 315,000 tons in capital ships, which is superior to the strength allowed to France and Italy. By the London Treaty, no capital ships may be replaced during 1931-36. When the London Treaty expires in 1936, Japan has expressed the intention of claiming 'parity in principle' with the British Empire and the United States. The existing capital ships are in process of being modernized, it is said at a cost of 7,500,000*l*. Recent programmes have been concerned mainly with the building of cruisers, destroyers and submarines for the purpose of replacing obsolete ships. Under the Fleet Replacement Laws there are to be built during 1931-36: 6 cruisers of 8,500 tons, 2 aircraft carriers of 10,000 tons, 26 destroyers, 14 submarines, 2 large and 3 small minelayers, 6 minesweepers, 4 torpedo boats, and 7 other vessels.

The principal state dockyards are at Kure and Yokosuka, where capital ships have been built, and there is a dockyard also at Sasebo, where lighter vessels are constructed. The Kawasaki private shipbuilding yard at Kobe and the Mitsubishi establishment at Nagasaki are well equipped with modern plant, and there are lesser building yards at Maizuru, Uraga and elsewhere, as well as the government armour and armament factory at Kure. Japan has made herself practically independent of Europe for the building and arming and equipment of her warships.

A statement of the Japanese fleet follows:—

The notes of the Bank of Japan are of seven denominations, 1, 5, 10, 20, 50, 100, and 200 yen.

The total amount of notes in circulation on February 3, 1934, was 1,247,194,000 yen, cash and bullion 456,874,000 yen, discounts 607,445,000 yen, advances 137,132,000 yen, state and public deposits 438,598,000 yen. On March 31, 1929, the gold stock of Japan was 1,178,000,000 yen, of which 91,000,000 yen were held by the Government and 1,087,000,000 yen by the Bank of Japan. The embargo on the export of gold, imposed on September 12, 1917, was removed on January 11, 1930, and Japan thus returned to the gold standard. The embargo, however, was re-imposed on December 13, 1931, to check the gold efflux.

The modern banking system dates from 1872. The principal banks of Japan are the Nippon Ginko (Bank of Japan), the Yokohama Specie Bank, the Hypothec Bank, the Industrial Bank of Japan, the Hokkaidō Colonisation Bank, the Bank of Taiwan, Bank of Chōsen. There are also (1932) 19 agricultural and industrial banks, 532 ordinary banks, and 86 savings banks. The condition of the banks (ordinary, saving and special) for three years (December 31st) was as follows.

Year	Paid-up Capital	Reserve Fund	Deposits	Net Earnings	Rate of Dividend
	Yen	Yen	Yen	Yen	Per cent.
1930	1,695,286,000	995,096,000	11,731,161,000	292,302,000	7.3
1931	1,656,874,000	962,900,000	11,156,940,000	268,518,000	6.6
1932	1,626,320,000	976,867,000	11,402,489,000	286,269,000	6.6

The depositors in the Post Office Savings Bank on March 31, 1933, numbered 39,845,216, and their deposits amounted to 2,686,805,915 yen; on March 31, 1932, there were 39,066,040 depositors with 2,815,868,019 yen to their credit.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The present monetary law came into force from October, 1897, by which gold standard was adopted. The unit of value is 0.75 gramme of pure gold, and is called the yen = 2s. 0½d., which, however, is not coined. The pieces coined are as follows:—Gold coins (20, 10, and 5 yen pieces), silver coins (50, 20, and 10 sen pieces), nickel coin (10 and 5 sen pieces), and bronze coins (1 sen and 5 rin pieces). The sen is the hundredth part of a yen, and the rin is the tenth part of a sen. The gold coins are .900 fine, and the silver coins .720 fine. The gold coins formerly issued (20, 10, 5, 2, and 1 yen pieces) are used at double their face value. The one-yen silver coin formerly issued is withdrawn. The old copper 2, 1 and ½ sen pieces are used as formerly.

Weights and measures are as follows:—

The Kin	= 160 momme	. . .	= 1.323 lbs. avoirdupois.
„ Picul	= 100 kin	. . .	= 132.27 lbs. „
„ Kwan	= 1,000 „	. . .	= 8.267 lbs. „
„ Sun	= 1.193 inches.
„ Shaku (10 sun)	= 11.930 inches.
„ Ken	= 6 shaku	. . .	= 5.965 feet.
„ Chō	= 60 ken	. . .	= ⅓ mile, 5.4229 chains.
„ Ri	= 36 chō	. . .	= 2.44 miles.
„ Ri sq.	= 5.9552 sq. miles.
„ Tsubo	= 3.9538 sq. yds.
„ Chō , land measure	= 2.45 acres.
„ Koku , liquid	= 39.6804 gallons.
„ „ dry	= 4.9601 bushels.
„ To , liquid = ⅓ koku	= 3.9680 gallons.
„ „ dry	= 1.9851 pecks.

The metric system was made obligatory by a law passed in March, 1921, but has not yet been enforced. The following rates are recognised:—

metre = 3.3 shaku.

gramme = 0.266667 momme (⅓ momme).

KOREA (CHOSEN).

Government.—By a treaty concluded between Japan and Korea on August 22, 1910, the Korean territory was formally annexed to the Empire of Japan. The Emperor was deprived of all political power, and the title of the country was changed back to 'Chosen,' from 'Tai Han,' which had been adopted in 1897, and the office of Japanese Governor-General established. By an Imperial Rescript of 1919, Korea is to be treated as in all respects an integral part of Japan, Koreans to be on the same footing as Japanese. Members of the Korean Imperial House and the late Korean Cabinet have had Japanese patents of nobility conferred upon them.

Governor-General.—General Kazunari Ugaki (June, 1931).

Area and Population.—The area is 85,228 square miles. Population at the end of 1931, 20,262,958 (10,324,068 males and 9,938,890 females). Of this number, 514,666 were Japanese, 19,710,168 Koreans, and 38,124 foreigners. The 1931 returns give the number of British subjects as 260, Americans 724, French 62, and Germans 90. At the end of 1931 the population of the largest cities and towns was as follows:—Keijo-fu (Seoul), the capital, 365,482 (100,323 Japanese), Fusan-fu (Pusan), 139,538 (45,502 Japanese), Heijo-fu (Pyong-Yang), 144,215 (19,268 Japanese), Taikyu-fu (Tai-Ku), 102,180 (25,750 Japanese), Chemulpo 63,881 (11,373 Japanese).

The language of the people is intermediate between Mongolo-Tartar and Japanese, with a large admixture of Chinese words, and an alphabetical system of writing is used. Official correspondence, except with Korean provincial officials, is conducted in Japanese. The written language of the people is a mixture of Chinese characters and native script.

Religion and Education.—The knowledge of Chinese classics and of Confucian doctrine, formerly considered essential to the education of the upper classes, has given way under Japanese and foreign influence to a more practical system of instruction, but the worship of ancestors is still observed with as much punctiliousness as in China. In the country there are numerous Buddhist monasteries, which, however, are looked upon with scant respect. There is a large number of Christian converts. French missionaries were working in the country from 1784 and struggled for a century in the face of official persecution. The ban on Christianity was raised in 1882 and the first Protestant missionaries came to Korea in 1884. In 1931 there were about 700 foreign missionaries working in Korea and a membership of 327,000 converts was claimed. The missions early established numerous hospitals and schools throughout the country.

Since annexation the Japanese authorities have provided schools in all parts of the country, but it is recognized that much is required to be done, as less than 40 per cent. of the Koreans are literate. Plans are now being drawn up to establish an elementary school in every myen or village, but lack of funds hinders the speedy attainment of this ideal. Technical schools are being gradually introduced.

In 1932 there were for the education mainly of Japanese 475 elementary schools with 76,052 pupils and 2,106 teachers, 11 middle schools with 6,170 pupils, 1 medical school, a law school, 3 normal schools with 1,772 students and 99 teachers, a higher technical school, a higher commercial school and a higher agricultural school, 25 girls' high schools with 9,125 pupils, and 252 kindergarten schools and various private schools. For the education of Koreans there were 1,973 common schools with 514,372 pupils, and 80 private common schools with 24,563 pupils, 26 higher common schools (11 private) with 13,276 pupils, 17 (10 private) higher common schools for girls, with 4,770 pupils; besides various industrial schools. There is a University at Seoul with 579 students (May 31, 1932), of whom 190 were Koreans and 389 Japanese. The preparatory course has 324 students.

In Seoul there are three daily Korean newspapers, and 2 Japanese besides others published at Chemulpo and in other parts of the country. There is a Government-subsidised daily newspaper in English, published at Seoul.

Finance.—The finances of Korea form a special account in the Budget of Japan. The estimated revenue and expenditure for two years are shown as follows :—

Revenue.		1932-33	1933-34	Expenditure.		1932-3	1933-34
		Yen	Yen			Yen	Yen
Ordinary	179,556,988	184,481,578	Ordinary	163,514,689	170,097,296
Extraordinary	35,899,419	47,456,806	Extraordinary	51,941,718	61,841,088
Total	215,456,407	231,938,384	Total	215,456,407	231,938,384

The outstanding debt (March 31, 1932) is 406,996,480 yen.

Production.—Korea is almost entirely an agricultural country; the cultivated area at end of 1931 was 10,961,275 acres. The Japanese own nearly one-half of the cultivated land. The chief crops are rice (about 33 per cent. of the cultivated area), barley, wheat, beans, and grain of all kinds, besides tobacco and cotton. The rice crops for 4 years were (in bushels):—1928, 80,485,957; 1929, 81,617,865; 1930, 95,903,385; 1931, 79,364,995. In 1931, 39,060,635 bushels of barley were produced; 20,658,975 bushels of soya beans, 104,962,460 lbs. of Upland American cotton and 49,588,586 lbs. of native cotton. Whale fishing is carried on on the coast. In 1931, 92,145,092 pounds of apples and 28,656,292 pounds of pears were produced. Silkworm rearing is also carried on and in 1931 there were produced 2,891,305 bushels of cocoons. Live-stock is raised as a by-product of agriculture. The cattle are well known for their size and quality. In 1931, there were 1,637,019 cattle, 54,100 horses, 1,348,199 pigs, 6,984 donkeys and 25,601 goats. The fishing industry is developing; value of catch in 1931, 46,578,170 yen.

Gold mining is carried on; the value of the 1931 output was 9,008,572 yen. There are several foreign-owned gold mines in active operation. Copper, iron, and coal are abundant in Korea; the development of these resources has been impeded by defective means of communication, but is making steady progress. The output of pig iron in 1931 was valued at 4,588,887 yen; iron ore at 824,063 yen; and coal 5,190,064 yen. Anthracite coal mines in the north of Korea are in operation. Graphite and mica also are found in fair quantities. The total value of mineral products in 1931 was 21,741,519 yen. The Government has the monopoly of ginseng, salt and tobacco, the latter yielding 36,534,817 lbs. in 1930. At end of 1930 there were 4,249 factories with 81,790 employees, while the value of the output was 320,007,290 yen.

Commerce.—The open ports are Seoul, Chemulpo, Fusan, Gensan, Chinnampo, Mokpo, Kunsan, Seishin, Ping-Yang (inland city), Wiju, Yong-Am-Po (1908), Yuki, Joshin and Shin-wi-ju.

Trade (merchandise only) at the open ports:—

—	1928	1929	1930	1931	1932
	Yen	Yen	Yen	Yen	Yen
Imports	413,990,943	423,093,551	367,050,000	270,466,331	367,048,758
Exports	365,978,524	345,664,056	266,540,000	261,798,539	266,547,178

The imports in 1932 included cotton goods, 34,234,738 yen; machinery, 8,959,332 yen; silk goods, 13,328,248 yen; timber, 4,096,994 yen; mineral oil, 9,386,578 yen; grass cloth, 1,204,369 yen; sugar, 7,645,280 yen; paper, 6,878,141 yen; flour, 3,774,416 yen; fertilisers, 7,793,941 yen; and coal, 7,873,251 yen. The principal exports were rice, 145,337,225 yen; beans, 20,539,329 yen; hides, 1,489,212 yen; cattle, 3,246,275 yen; silk, 11,666,127 yen; cocoons, 1,270,848 yen; and gold ore, 1,304,318 yen. Of the total imports in 1932, the value of 258,670,063 yen was from Japan; of the exports, the value of 282,144,296 yen was to Japan. From Great Britain and the United States of America respectively, direct imports amounted to 1,545,949 yen and 5,097,175 yen; but there is also considerable indirect trade via Japan.

Imports from United Kingdom (Board of Trade Returns) were 58,705*l.* in 1931, 112,201*l.* in 1932; and 82,402*l.* in 1933; exports to United Kingdom were 217*l.*, 30*l.* and 1,587*l.*; and re-exports from U.K. were 4,862*l.*, 100*l.* and 290*l.* in the three years respectively.

Shipping and Communications.—The shipping entered at the open ports in 1932 had a tonnage of 10,731,162, and those that cleared a tonnage of 10,733,576. In March 1932 there were 202 steamships, of 52,302 tons, and 745 sailing ships, of 24,778 tons, registered in Korea.

Transport in the interior is by rail, road (motor-car, oxen, pack-horses, etc.), and river. The railways are being rapidly extended and the roads are being gradually improved. At the end of March, 1932, there were 12,179 miles of completed roads. Length of railways, 1932 (public and private), about 2,678 miles; number of passengers carried (1932-33) 20,391,638.

Number of post offices 793. There were 24,992 miles of telegraph wire open (March, 1933), and the lines connect with the Japanese and the Chinese systems. The telephone has been introduced into all the principal towns; length of lines 95,142 miles (March, 1933). During the fiscal year ended March, 1933, 233,360,400, telephone messages, and 5,764,914 telegrams were sent.

In 1932-33, 251,763,916 ordinary mails were collected and 270,708,785 delivered, 2,080,879 parcels were collected and 3,058,118 delivered.

Currency and Banking.—Regulations for banking were framed in 1906. In 1933 (Jan.) there were 15 banks, semi-Government and ordinary, with 60,971,000 yen paid-up capital, with total deposits at December 31, 1932, amounting to 255,646,000 yen.

A central bank, the Bank of Chosen, was established in August, 1909, and in November it took the place of the First Bank of Japan (Dai-Ichi-Ginko) as the Government Treasury. Notes of this bank are permitted to circulate unrestrictedly within the jurisdiction of the Government-General of Chosen and are exchangeable with convertible notes issued by the Bank of Japan. The Bank of Chosen has a paid-up capital of 25 million yen, the deposits amounting to 193,932,707 yen (Dec. 31, 1932). Notes issued at Dec. 31, 1932, 124,622,525 yen. Against their issue must be provided a reserve of the same amount, consisting of gold coin, gold and silver bullion, and convertible notes of the Bank of Japan; silver bullion, however, must not exceed one-fourth of the total reserve. The postal savings banks had 2,494,062 depositors with a total amount 40,939,891 yen on March 31, 1933.

The coinage consists of gold pieces of 5-, 10-, and 20-yen, silver of 10-, 20-, and 50-sen, nickel of 5-sen, and 10-sen, and bronze of 1-sen. The gold coins, however, are not in general use, the ordinary medium of commerce being the notes of the Bank of Japan or of the Bank of Chosen which are issued in the following denominations, viz.: 100 yen, 20 yen, 10 yen, 5 yen, and 1 yen. The old nickel coin has been wholly withdrawn from circulation, and the cash currency is now rarely seen, and then only in remote parts of the country. Under certain regulations, bills of exchange and cheques may pass into the currency. In the more important commercial towns there are authorised 'note associations' of merchants for the transaction of business relating to bills.

British Consul-General at Seoul.—William Massy Royds.

Vice-Consul.—H. R. Sawbridge.

FORMOSA (TAIWAN).

The Island of Formosa, or Taiwan, was ceded to Japan by China by the treaty which was ratified on May 8, 1895, and Japan took formal possession on June 2 of the same year. Japanese civil government in the island began on March 31, 1896.

Governor-General.—Kenzo Nakagawa.

The Island has an area of 13,890 square miles, with a population according to the census of Oct. 1, 1930, of 4,592,537 (2,353,288 males and 2,239,249 females). There were 243,872 Japanese, and 45,234 foreigners in the Island in 1931. The chief towns are Taihoku (230,490 inhabitants in 1930 Census), Tainan, Kûrun, and Taichu. The official language is Japanese, but Chinese (Amoy dialect) is the most used.

Many improvements have been effected by the Japanese administration. A colonising scheme was commenced in 1909, whereby Japanese were settled in Taiwan. An educational system has been established for Japanese and natives. In 1931-32 there were for the instruction of the Japanese 133 primary schools, with 900 teachers and 36,181 pupils. For the instruction of the natives there were 781 schools, with 5,520 teachers and 265,749 pupils. There are also normal schools, a medical school, an industrial school, and a school for teaching the Japanese language to natives, and native languages to Japanese. The University of Formosa was opened in April, 1928.

The receipts of the Japanese administration are from inland taxes, customs, public undertakings, and also subsidies from Japan ranging from 5 to 9 million yen annually. The expenditure is chiefly for internal administration and the working of public undertakings.

The agricultural products of Formosa are rice, tea, sugar, sweet potatoes, ramie, jute, turmeric; while camphor is worked in the forests under a Government monopoly. The production of crude camphor and camphor oil respectively was in 1926, 1,665,317 lbs. and 4,633,284 lbs.; and in 1927, 1,719,510 lbs. and 11,639,760 lbs. The quantity of tea produced in 1931 was 9,844,000 kilograms; in 1932, 8,822,491 kilograms. Production of rice in 1932, 45,029,066 bushels; in 1933, 19,547,523 bushels, on an area of 705,589 acres. Area under cane and production of raw sugar in 1930-31, 208,421 acres, 784,656 tons; 1931-32, 243,666 acres, 957,720 tons. There are active fisheries: value of catch in 1932, 2,297,009 yen. The number of animals (December 31, 1930) was:—horses, 325; goats, 83,875; cattle, 92,323; pigs, 1,750,464; buffaloes, 298,536. The industries comprise flour-milling, sugar, tobacco; oil, spirits, iron-work, glass, bricks, soap, and many other manufactures. Mining is making steady progress: gold, silver, copper and coal being the principal minerals; the output of coal in 1930 was 1,598,728 metric tons, and in 1931, 1,421,544 metric tons. The total value of minerals in 1930 was 15,141,198 yen. There were 46 new style and 68 old style sugar mills in Taiwan in 1932.

The commerce of Formosa is largely with Japan; imports in 1932, 31,040,823 yen from foreign countries; 133,456,947 yen from Japan; total imports, 164,497,770 yen; exports, 18,045,250 yen to foreign countries; 222,682,738 yen to Japan; total exports, 240,727,988 yen. In 1931 the imports from Japan amounted to 114,763,307 yen; exports to Japan 201,424,107 yen. Imports from other foreign countries, 30,858,816 yen; exports to other foreign countries, 19,448,759 yen. Total imports, 145,622,123 yen; and total exports, 210,872,866 yen. The chief exports in 1932 were tea, 4,870,380 yen; sugar, 3,174,477 yen; camphor and camphor oil, 1,547,783 yen; alcohol, 521,358 yen; coal, 1,315,805 yen. The chief imports in 1932 were manures, 12,612,630 yen; soya beans, 1,800,962 yen; liquid fuel, 1,086,118 yen; gunny bags, 1,327,100 yen.

In March, 1931, there were 26 steamships, of 5,210 tons, and 137 sailing vessels, of 7,980 tons, registered in Formosa. In 1931, 1,985 vessels of 3,772,314 tons entered the ports of Formosa from countries and Japan.

Roads have been and are being constructed throughout the Island. There were, in 1931, 620.5 miles belonging to the Government and 329.8 miles to private companies, and 1,053.5 miles to exclusive use of private companies. In 1933 there were 178 post offices, through which passed packets (including parcels), 70,824,868. The telegraph service has 198 offices; length of line 810 miles; of wire, 3,751 miles; messages (1933), 3,200,478. Telephone line, 2,552 miles; length of wire, 49,457 miles; calls, 77,100,249.

The post office savings bank had 494,847 depositors with 18,147,761 yen to their credit (1932-33).

The coinage current in the Island is that of Japan.

Bōkotō, or the Pescadores, consist of about 12 islands, with a total area of about 50 square miles.

Japanese Sakhalin (or Karafuto) consists of that portion of Sakhalin which lies to the south of the parallel of 50° north latitude. It has an area of about 13,935 sq. miles, and, in 1930 (census), the population was 295,196 (168,532 males, 126,664 females). The most important industry of the island is the herring fishery, but large areas are fit for agriculture and pasturage, and Japanese settlers have been provided with seed and domestic animals. There is a vast forest area of larch and fir trees. The minerals found are coal and alluvial gold; coal raised in 1932, 677,389 tons.

The revenue for the year ending March 31, 1934, is estimated at 23,566,668 yen, and expenditure 23,566,668 yen.

The leased Territory of Kwantung, the southern part of the Liaotung Peninsula, has an area of about 1,444 sq. miles, and a population (December 31, 1932) of 961,146, of whom 544,740 were males and 416,406 females. At the end of 1932, there were 832,488 Chinese and 127,937 Japanese (exclusive of army and navy). The Territory is under a Japanese governor-general, the seat of administration being at Dairen (or Tairend, formerly called Dalny). At the end of 1931 there were 54 elementary schools with 30,857 pupils, 10 secondary schools with 4,757 pupils, and 8 girls' schools with 3,909 pupils, for the instruction of the Japanese, and 161 schools with 38,618 pupils for the instruction of the natives; also an American Presbyterian Mission with a church and a hospital.

The revenue for 1933-34 is estimated at 26,024,914 yen, and expenditure, 26,024,914 yen.

At the end of 1931 there were 133 steamships of 347,728 tons, and 108 sailing vessels of 4,321 tons, registered in Kwantung.

The chief agricultural products of the Territory are maize, millet, beans, wheat, buckwheat, rice, tobacco, hemp, and various vegetables. There is an active fishing industry, the value of the catch in 1931 (9,387,036 kwan) being 3,150,750 yen, as compared with 9,562,015 kwan in 1930, valued at 3,848,214 yen. The chief manufactured product is salt, which is abundant in the Territory. In 1931 production amounted to 204,345 metric tons. Since July 1, 1907, the Territory forms a Customs district under the Chinese Imperial Customs, Dairen being the Customs port, with out-stations at Kinchow, Pulantien, Pitzewo, and Port Arthur. The port is free, goods being subject to duty only on crossing the frontier of the leased territory. The trade is mostly with Japan and China. Imports (1932), 207,586,925 yen; exports, 305,087,478 yen, of which 133,217,302 yen were imported from Japan, and 110,514,777 yen exported to that country. Dairen has a fine harbour, ice-free all the year, and protected by a break-water 1,000 yards long. The harbour is provided with sheds and warehouses, under the control of the South Manchuria Railway Company. The railway connects Port Arthur and Dairen with Mukden, Harbin, and the Eastern Chinese Railway System, 8,610,156 passengers and 16,572,816 tons of goods were carried during 1932-33. In 1932 its total length was 699 miles.

Gold and silver coin and the notes of the Yokohama specie bank are current.

Pacific Islands.—Under the Treaty of Versailles Japan was appointed mandatory to the former German possessions north of the Equator. These include:—(1) The Marianne (or Ladrone) Islands.—By treaty of February 12, 1899, these islands, with the exception of Guam (the largest of the Marianne Islands) ceded to the United States in 1898, passed on October 1, 1899, from Spanish to German possession for payment of 840,000*l.* Sipan is the seat of Government. The Japanese population of the islands at October 1, 1930, numbered 19,835, and the natives 49,695. The northern group is actively volcanic and uninhabited.

(2) The Caroline Islands.—The Carolines consist of about 549 coral islets, Ponapé having 9,499 inhabitants, Yap 6,596, and Parao 9,047 (each at April 1, 1932). The population is mainly of Malay origin, with some Chinese and Japanese. The chief export is copra. For administrative purposes the islands were divided into two groups: (a) the Eastern Carolines, with Truk and Ponapé as the centres of administration. There are in Truk 1,028 Japanese, 24 Foreigners, and 15,409 natives; in Ponapé there are 1,137 Japanese, 24 Foreigners, and 8,334 natives. (b) The Western Carolines, with Palau and Yap as administrative centres. There are in Palau 2,981 Japanese, 6,031 natives, and 13 Foreigners. In Yap there are 262 Japanese, 6,321 natives, and 9 Foreigners.

(3) Marshall Islands.—The Marshall Islands, consisting of two chains or rows of lagoon islands (several uninhabited), known respectively as Ratak (with thirteen islands) and Ralik (with eleven islands), first came under German rule in 1885. The population on April 1, 1932, was of 456 Japanese, 15 foreigners, and 9,870 natives. The chief island and administrative centre is Jaluit; Protestant (American) and Catholic missions are at work. There are plantations of coco-palm (1,705 hectares). The chief export is copra.

Justice is administered in 3 district courts and in a court of appeal. The islands contain 14 primary schools for Japanese and 23 for natives. Besides coco-palm, the principal products are sugar-cane (island of Saipan) and cotton (islands of Rota and Tinian). In 1931, there were in the islands 4,039 cattle, 2,875 goats, and 11,636 pigs.

The revenue for the Pacific Islands for 1931-32 is estimated at 5,014,419 yen, and expenditure, 5,014,419 yen.

LATVIA.

(LATVIJAS REPUBLIKA.)

LATVIA, along the southern part of the Baltic littoral, is inhabited chiefly by Letts. As early as the 13th century the Letts fought against the Germans (battle of Durbe, 1260), but in the long run the Germans carried the day, and the state created by the Teutonic Order under the form of a Federal Republic (consisting of Estonia, Latgale, Livonia, and Courland) lasted until 1560. Eventually, Estonia passed under the rule of Sweden, Latgale and Livonia under that of Lithuania-Poland, while Piltene and Oesel became Danish. Courland alone retained her independence under the form of a vassal duchy of Lithuania-Poland. In 1621 Livonia was annexed by Sweden, and in 1710 by Russia. In 1772, after the first partition of Poland, Latgale was assigned to Russia, and in 1795 Courland joined Russia. From this time onwards, Latvia was under Russian rule.

In 1917 Lettish public opinion expressed itself in favour of the separate existence of Latvia, and announced its view officially in the Russian Constituent Assembly in January, 1918. An organization for establishing the independence of the country was formed, and on November 18, 1918, it proclaimed in Riga the sovereign Free State of Latvia, which has been recognised as an independent State by all the Powers, and was admitted to the League of Nations on September 22, 1921.

Constitution and Government.—The Latvian Constitution which was passed by the Constituent Assembly on February 15, 1922, declares that Latvia is an independent democratic Republic and that the sovereign power of the State is vested in the Latvian people. The Saeima (Parliament) consists of 100 representatives elected for 3 years by universal, equal, direct, and secret vote on the basis of proportional representation, by citizens of both sexes over 21 years of age. Its powers expire on the day on which the new Saeima assembles. The Saeima elects the President of the State by absolute majority, and he holds office for 3 years. No person can hold this office for more than 6 consecutive years. The President must be over 40 years of age. He is the Chief of the armed forces of the State, and, for the period of war, appoints a commander-in-chief. War can only be declared after a vote of the Saeima. The President chooses the Prime Minister, who forms the Cabinet; and the Cabinet is responsible to the Saeima. The President may propose the dissolution of the Saeima, which proposal shall then be followed by a vote of the people. If this proposal is accepted by the people, the Saeima is dissolved and new elections are proclaimed; if not, the President of the State is to be considered as having resigned and the Saeima elects a new President. All citizens are equal before the Law. The Judges are independent and irrevocable. The State Control is an independent collegial institution, its chief being elected by the Saeima for a definite period.

The elections to the Saeima, held on October 15, 1931, returned the following parties: Right, 29 (National bloc, 5; Farmers' League, 16; Clerical Catholic Party, 8); Centre, 26 (Economic Party, 7; Centre Party, 6; Latvian National Party, 5; Progressive Union, 3; various smaller parties, 5); Left, 28 (Social Democrats, 21; Communists, 7); National Minorities (Germans, Russians, Jews, Poles), 17; total, 100.

The Ministries are those of Interior, Foreign Affairs, Finance, War, National Welfare, Education, Agriculture, Justice, Communications, and State Control.

President of the State.—Albert Kviesis (elected April 4, 1933).

Prime Minister.—Karl Ulmanis (appointed March 12, 1934).

Area and Population.—Latvia consists of the former Russian Province of Courland (about 10,435 square miles), four southern districts (Riga, Wenden, Wolmar, Walk) of the former Russian province of Livonia (about 8,715 square miles) and three western districts (Dvinsk, Reshitza, Lutsin) of the former Russian province of Vitebsk (about 5,292 square miles), making a total of about 24,440 square miles, or, including inland lakes, about 25,000 square miles. The total length of the frontier line of Latvia is 1,040 statute miles, with a coast line of 338 statute miles. For administrative purposes Latvia is divided into: Vidzeme (Livonia), Kurzeme (Courland), Zemgale, and Latgale.

The chief town is Riga (the capital), population (1930) 377,917; population of other principal towns according to 1930 Census, Liepāja (Libau) 57,238; Daugavpils (Dvinsk), 43,226; Jelgava (Mitau), 33,048; Ventspils (Windau), 17,253; Rzekne (Rositten), 12,680; Valmiera (Wolmar), 8,368; Cēsis (Wenden), 7,692.

The census taken in 1930 showed a population of 1,900,045 in Latvia, of which 1,843,877 were Latvian citizens, and 56,168 foreigners, (including 21,336 persons without nationality). Of the Latvian citizens 73·42 per cent. were Letts, 12·52 per cent. Russians, 4·97 per cent. Jews, 3·68 per cent. Germans, 3·12 per cent. Poles, 1·36 per cent. Lithuanians, 0·40 per cent. Estonians, 0·45 per cent. other nationalities, and 0·08 per cent. were persons with unknown nationality.

Births, 1932, 37,366; marriages, 33,805; deaths, 26,342; excess of births over deaths, 11,024; divorces, 1,593.

Religion and Education.—The majority of the population in Latvia is Protestant (56·58 per cent.), but in Latgale and one district of Kurzeme there are also many Roman Catholics (28·69 per cent.), while in Riga, Ventspils and south-east of Vidzeme there are a number of Greek Catholics and members of the Orthodox Church (8·93 per cent.).

During the year 1932–33 there were 2,070 elementary schools in Latvia, with 212,327 pupils and 8,302 teachers. Most of these schools were supported by the State or municipal institutions, only 122 being supported by private persons or societies. The State or municipal institutions also supported 82 of the secondary schools in the country, the remaining 63 being supported by private persons or societies. In these 145 secondary schools 2,623 teachers taught 20,447 pupils.

Each national minority has the right to its own schools (elementary and secondary) with its own language of instruction. The State contributes to the maintenance of these schools according to the percentage of inhabitants of the respective national minorities. In 1932–33, instruction was given in elementary schools in the following languages (figures in brackets refer to secondary schools):—Lettish in 1,518 (89) schools, with 156,377 (15,074) pupils and 5,519 (1,746) teachers; national minorities in 552 (56) schools, with 55,950 (5,373) pupils, and 2,783 (877) teachers.

Formerly the University of Dorpat served the whole of the Baltic provinces of Russia, and as Dorpat became an Estonian institution, the Riga Polytechnic was in 1919 raised to be the Latvian University. The number of students is (1932-33) 8,584, and of professors, 375. There are also 82 technical professional schools with 5,527 pupils; a Musical Academy with 804 students and 35 teachers; and an Academy of Arts with 231 students and 22 teachers.

Finance.—Revenue and expenditure for five years are shown as follows:—

	Lats	Lats	Lats	Lats	Lats
Revenue . .	195,047,000	172,594,000	126,785,000	133,532,807	140,712,000

The National Debt of Latvia on April 1, 1933, was as follows:—To United States of America, 7,085,454 dollars; to Great Britain, 1,925,000*l.*; to France, 4,500,000 francs; to the Swedish Match Trust, 6,000,000 dollars. The internal debt amounted to 2,253,000 Lats.

Defence.—The standing army numbers 2,200 officers and 23,000 men, organized in four divisions. There are also 550 men in the Air Service organized in 1 regiment. Service is compulsory, beginning at the age of 21, and lasting to the age of 50. Service with the colours has been reduced, according to the law of May 16, 1928, to 12 months in the case of the infantry and 15 months for other arms.

Latvia maintains a coast defence squadron, comprising at present 2 submarines and 4 ships of different types.

Production and Industry.—Latvia is mainly an agricultural country, but an increasing number of people are passing from agricultural to industrial life. In 1933 the principal crops were rye, 635,018 acres, 351,240 metric tons; barley, 455,715 acres, 183,730 metric tons; oats, 757,302 acres, 318,900 metric tons; wheat, 308,750 acres, 179,770 metric tons; potatoes, 257,127 acres, 1,163,370 metric tons; flax, 102,575 acres, 11,210 metric tons (12,820 metric tons linseed). Latvian forest lands, State and private (4,098,280 acres), produced in 1931-32, 3,053,000 cubic metres of timber (firewood, 1,990,000 cubic metres). On December 31, 1932, there were 3,523 industrial enterprises in Latvia, employing 51,919 hands. The number of workers employed in the principal industries was as follows:—metallurgical, 8,774; chemical, 3,318; textile, 8,357; mineral working, 2,700; and woodworking, 7,628.

Live-stock in 1933: horses, 370,200; cattle, 1,155,800; sheep, 1,114,300; pigs, 585,900.

Latvia does not possess much mineral wealth.

Commerce and Communications.—Latvia has about 340 miles of sea-coast; its 3 principal harbours are Riga, Liepaja, and Ventspils. Three Russian main lines converge on Latvian ports, viz. the Riga-Tsaritsin line, the Ventspils-Moscow line, and the Liepaja-Romni line.

Trade for four years :—

Year	Imports		Exports
	Metric tons	1,000 Lats	Metric tons	1,000 Lats
1930	1,445,517	296,328	1,241,779	247,877

Precious metals, etc.	1,001	2	837	—
Total	177,083	168,757	84,576	96,528

The main export articles of Latvia are (1932) timber, 19,063,000 lats; flax, 5,060,000 lats; butter, 30,991,000 lats.

In 1932 the imports (value in thousand lats) came from Germany, 30,140; United Kingdom, 719; Czechoslovakia, 1,359; Soviet Russia, 8,506; Poland and Danzig, 5,063; United States of America, 3,164. Exports to the United Kingdom, 29,723; Germany, 25,287; Soviet Russia, 14,222; Belgium, 5,748.

In 1932 the principal imports of the United Kingdom from Latvia (according to the Board of Trade Returns) were: sawn timber, 709,014*l.*; pit props, 183,796*l.*; flax, 559,749*l.* The principal exports to Latvia were iron and steel, 53,162*l.*; herrings, 73,732*l.*; coal, 146,867*l.*

Total trade between Latvia and the United Kingdom for 5 years (according to Board of Trade Returns):—

	1929	1930	1931	1932	1933
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports from Latvia into U.K.	5,467,018	4,746,797	2,927,537	2,682,735	2,640,792
Exports to Latvia from U.K.	1,496,447	1,152,046	590,712	590,508	1,001,772
Re-exports to Latvia from U.K.	131,689	95,360	31,814	44,275	168,355

On January 1, 1933, there were 115 steamships and motorships of 147,653 tons gross, and 27 sailing vessels of 2,421 tons gross, making a total of 142 vessels of 200,074 tons gross sailing under the Latvian flag. There were also 4 ice-breakers.

In 1932, 2,625 vessels of 1,235,000 tons entered and 2,623 of 1,227,000 tons cleared the ports of Latvia.

To facilitate the transit of goods to and from Russia, the Latvian main lines converging on the ports of Riga and Ventspils have been altered to the Russian gauge, while for Western traffic (Riga-Ostend-Paris line) and internal communications the normal and narrow gauges are used. Of the total length of Latvian railways—1,754 miles on January 1, 1933—1,084 miles were of Russian gauge and 198 miles of the normal gauge. Gross receipts of Latvian railways in 1932 were 30,258,000 lats, and expenditure 28,358,000 lats; 10,707,000 passengers were carried and 2,232,000 tons of freight handled. There were also 680 miles of macadamised high roads. The navigable inland waterways (1,829 miles) carried about 655,885 tons of goods in 1932.

On April 1, 1933, there were 1,411 post offices in the country; length of telegraph line, 2,053 miles; length of telephone lines, 21,245 miles.

Banking and Currency.—The legal tender in Latvia is the Lat, equal to one gold franc, and representing "2903226 grammes of fine gold. Notes of 20, 25, 50, 100 and 500 lats are in circulation, also silver coins of 1, 2 and 5 lats, bronze and nickel coins of 1, 2, 5 santims, and 10, 20, 50 santims respectively. The issue of notes in Latvia is strictly limited to the amount of cover, and notes can be encashed in gold.

On January 1, 1933, there were 17 joint-stock Banks, 34 mutual credit societies and 12 communal credit institutions in Latvia, with an aggregate capital of 39,876,000 lats, and assets totalling 139,312,000 lats. The Bank of Latvia (Latvijas Banka) which commenced operations on November 1, 1922, had on January 30, 1933, notes in circulation amounting to 34,905,155 lats; deposits, 91,077,377 lats (including 72,000,798 lats on current account); and gold bullion and coin, 38,010,140 lats.

The metric system has been established by law, but the old Russian system of weights and measures was used until January, 1, 1924.

LIBERIA.

Constitution and Government.—The Republic of Liberia had its origin in the efforts of several American philanthropic societies to make permanent provision for freed American slaves by establishing them in a colony on the West African coast. In 1822 a settlement was formed on the west coast of Africa near the spot where Monrovia now stands. On July 26, 1847, the State was constituted as the Free and Independent Republic of Liberia. The new State was first recognised by Great Britain and France, and ultimately by other Powers. The Constitution of the Republic is on the model of that of the United States, with important differences. The executive is vested in a President and a Council of 8 Ministers, and the legislative power in a parliament of two Houses, called the Senate and the House of Representatives. The President and the House of Representatives are elected for four years, and the Senate for six years. The President must be at least thirty-five years of age, and have unencumbered real estate to the value of 2,500 dollars, or 500*l*. Electors must be of negro blood, and owners of land. The natives of the country are not excluded from the franchise, but, except in the centres of civilisation, they take no part in political life. The official language of the Government is English.

President of Liberia.—Edwin Barclay (1932–1936).

Liberia is one of the original members of the League of Nations.

Area and Population.—Liberia has about 350 miles of coast line, extending from the British colony of Sierra Leone, on the west, to the French colony of the Ivory Coast on the east, and it stretches inland to a distance, in some places, of about 200 miles. The boundaries were determined by the Anglo-Liberian agreement of 1885 and the Franco-Liberian agreements of 1892 and 1907–10. Early in 1911 an agreement was concluded between the British and Liberian Governments transferring the territory of Kaure-Lahun to Sierra Leone in exchange for a strip of undeveloped territory of about the same area on the south side of Morro River, which now becomes the boundary.

The total area is about 43,000 square miles. The total population is estimated at 1,000,000, all of the African race. Since the organisation of the frontier force the Government has obtained complete control of Northern Liberia and of the Kroo countries in Southern Liberia. The indigenous natives belong in the main to six principal stocks: (1) the Mandingos (Muhammadan), (2) the Gissi; (3) the Gola, (4) the Kpwesi, (5) the Kru negroes and their allies, and (6) the Greboes. The Kru tribes are mostly Pagan. The number of Americo-Liberians is estimated at about 12,000. About 60,000 of the coast negroes may be considered civilised. There is a British negro colony of about 500, and there are about 150 Europeans and Americans. The coast region is divided into counties, Bassa, Sino, Maryland, and Grand Cape Mount, each under a Government superintendent, and Montserrado, subdivided into 2 districts, each under a superintendent. Monrovia, the capital, has, including Krutown, an estimated population of 10,000, and is administered as a Federal District by a Municipal Board appointed by the President. It is one of the eleven ports of entry along the 350 miles of coast, the others being Liberian Jene (river port), Robertsport (Cape Mount), Marshall (Junk), Buchanan, River Cess, Greenville (Sinoe), Sasstown, Grand Cess, Harper (Cape Palmas), and Kablaki (river port). Other towns are Royesville, Arthington, Careysburg, Millsburg, Whiteplains, Bopora (native), Rocktown (native), Garraway, Upper Buchanan, Edina, Kakata, Paynesville, Clay Ashland.

Religion Education and Justice.—The Americo-Liberians are all Protestant (Anglican, Presbyterian, Baptist, or Methodist). There are several American missions at work and one French Roman Catholic. The Government educational system is supplemented by mission schools, instruction being given both to American and to native negroes. In the year 1932 there were 172 schools, of which 51 were Government schools and 121 were maintained by missions. The total number of pupils receiving instruction amounted to about 7,000. The Methodist Episcopalians have a college at Monrovia and an agricultural and industrial institute at Kakata; the Government has a college with (1932) 8 professors and 88 students.

A criminal code was enacted in 1900; the customs laws were codified in 1907.

Finance.—The revenue and expenditure for 5 years (in American dollars):—

	1927-28	1928-29	1929-30	1930-31	1932
	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars
Revenue . .	1,276,487	1,028,123	980,156	482,508	476,368
Expenditure .	1,712,709	1,008,152	985,554	702,194 ¹	685,080 ²

¹ Includes loan charges of 220,002 dollars but does not include prior year's charges.

² Includes loan charges of 216,524 dollars but does not include prior year's charges.

The customs duties were for 1928-29, 604,226 dollars; for 1929-30, 461,099 dollars; for 1930-31, 250,549 dollars; for 1932, 236,138 dollars.

In 1927 arrangements were made with the Finance Corporation of America for a loan of 5,000,000 dollars, of which 2,027,700 dollars has been issued. The previous 1912 loan, in which British financial interests preponderated, was paid off from the proceeds of the new loan, which is secured by a first lien on customs revenues and head moneys. The Loan Agreement also provides for financial supervision by American officials. The external bonded debt at the close of the year 1932 was 2,192,000 dollars, on which payments on account of amortization were in arrears to an amount of 94,867 dollars, and on account of interest 133,061 dollars.

DEFENCE—PRODUCTION, COMMERCE—SHIPPING 1097

The internal floating debt as at December 31, 1932, was approximately 676,000 dollars.

Defence.—For defence every citizen from 16 to 50 years of age capable of bearing arms is liable to serve. The establishment organized on a militia basis numbers 4,000, divided into 7 infantry regiments. There is in addition an enlisted Frontier Force of about 400.

Production, Commerce.—The agricultural, mining, and industrial development of Liberia has scarcely begun. There are forests unworked; but the working of one para rubber plantation has begun, and rubber is being produced. The soil is productive, but cultivation is neglected; cocoa and cotton are produced in small quantities only, and indigenous coffee is the staple product. Piassava fibre, prepared from the raphia palm, palm oil and palm kernels, kola nuts, chillies, beni seed, coffee, anatto seed and rice are also produced. Beeswax is collected, and gum copal is found but is not collected. Tortoiseshell, improperly prepared, is sold in small quantities. In the forests there are rubber vines and trees of 22 species. No survey of the mineral resources of the country has been made by an expert mineralogist, and although iron exists and is worked by the natives, no mineral deposits of sufficient importance to warrant exploitation have yet been found.

The trade for five years was as follows (in dollars):—

—	1928	1929	1930	1931	1932
	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars	Dollars
Imports . . .	4,029,506	2,064,440	1,228,102	858,742	641,312
Exports . . .	1,465,568	1,475,356	838,739	679,885	675,347 ¹

¹ Excess of Export values over Import values is caused by the shipment of 70,937 dollars of metallic currency.

The chief imports are cotton goods, spirits, tobacco, building material, galvanised iron, ready-made clothing, and dried and preserved fish. The chief exports in 1932 were coffee (3,439,434 lbs.); piassava fibre (6,865,585 lbs.); palm oil (437,171 gallons); palm kernels (308,761 bushels); cocoa (924,543 lbs.); ivory (7,889 lbs.). Imports in 1932 were chiefly from the United Kingdom (328,982 dollars); United States of America (113,151 dollars); Germany (101,563 dollars); and Holland (32,151 dollars).

According to Board of Trade Returns, the value of the trade between the United Kingdom and Liberia was as follows in five years:—

—	1929	1930	1931	1932	1933
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports into U.K. from Liberia	58,512	42,767	31,290	14,960	6,523
Exports of U.K. produce to Liberia	133,452	119,575	65,425	82,051	77,794
Re-exports to Liberia from U.K.	17,874	9,699	6,851	4,583	3,912

Shipping.—In 1932, 526 ships of a tonnage of 1,334,649 entered and cleared. Of these, 163 of a tonnage of 475,940 were British and 199 of a tonnage of 475,287 were German.

Communications.—There are no railways in Liberia, and means of transport are extremely limited. At present there are about 150 miles of road fit for light motor traffic, all of which are in the coastal area. In the interior communication is maintained between villages by tracks, all goods being carried by native porters.

The River St. Paul is navigable for a distance of 25 miles from its mouth for small craft of shallow draft, and a service of motor launches runs between Monrovia and White Plains.

There is cable communication with Europe and America via Dakar, and a wireless station is maintained by the Government at Monrovia. There is no telephone or telegraph service in the country.

Money, Weights, and Measures.—The money chiefly used is British silver, but there is a Liberian coinage in silver and copper. Official accounts are kept in dollars and cents, but commercial accounts are generally in English currency. The Liberian coins are as follows:—Silver, 50-, 25-, and 10-cent pieces; copper, 2- and 1-cent pieces.

Weights and measures are the same as Great Britain and the United States.

The Bank of British West Africa, Ltd., withdrew from Liberia in October 1930; and the Firestone Plantations Company have established a bank at Monrovia under the title of 'United States Trading Company (Banking Department).'

LIECHTENSTEIN.

THE Principality of Liechtenstein, lying between the Austrian Land of Vorarlberg and the Swiss cantons of St. Gallen and Graubünden, is a sovereign State consisting of the two counties of Schellenberg and Vaduz (formerly immediate fiefs of the Roman Empire). The former in 1699 and the latter in 1712 came into the possession of the house of Liechtenstein and, by diploma of January 23, 1719, granted by the Emperor Karl VI., the two lordships were constituted as the Principality of Liechtenstein. After the Treaty of Pressburg John I., who had succeeded his father, Aloys I., as seventh Prince in 1805, seceded from the Holy Roman Empire on July 12, 1806, and joined the Confederation of the Rhine under the Protectorate of the Emperor, Napoleon I., and after the fall of the French Empire joined the German Confederation June 8, 1815. He was succeeded in 1836 by his son, Aloys II., whose son, John II., in 1858 began his long reign, which lasted until 1929. This Prince, who was of age at his accession, saw the dissolution of the German Confederation in August, 1866, and thereafter maintained the political independence of the Principality.

The Reigning Prince is Francis I., born August 28, 1853; succeeded his brother, February 11, 1929. The reigning family originated in the twelfth century, and traces its descent through free barons who in 1608 became princes of Liechtenstein. The monarchy is hereditary in the male line. The constitution, adopted in October, 1921, provides for a Diet of 15 members elected for four years by direct vote on the basis of universal suffrage and proportional representation. The capital and seat of Government is Vaduz (pop. 1,715). The principality has a High Court. Since February, 1921, Liechtenstein has had the Swiss currency, and since January, 1924, it has been included in the Swiss Customs Union; the posts and telegraphs are administered by Switzerland.

Area, 65 square miles; population, of German origin (Census 1930), 10,213; Catholics, 9,492; Protestants, 253. In 1932 there were 196 births, 95 marriages and 106 deaths. The revenue for 1932 was 1,988,022 Swiss francs and the expenditure 1,590,970 francs. Budget estimates for 1932: revenue, 1,860,700 francs; expenditure, 1,408,646 francs; for 1933: revenue, 1,854,500 francs; expenditure, 1,434,176 francs; for 1934: revenue, 1,470,600 francs; expenditure, 1,447,059 francs. Public debt on December 31, 1933, 4,608,144 francs. The inhabitants of Liechtenstein since 1867 have not been liable to military service. The Principality has no army (since 1868). The population is in great part agricultural, the chief products of the country being corn, wine, fruit, wood, and marble. The industries are cotton weaving and cotton spinning, leather goods, and pottery. The rearing of cattle, for which the fine alpine pastures are well suited, is highly developed.

Administrator.—Dr. Joseph Hoop (appointed August 4, 1928).

LITHUANIA.

(LIETUVA.)

LITHUANIA became a Grand Duchy in the early part of the thirteenth century. In 1386 the Grand Duke Jogaila embraced Christianity and married the Polish Queen Hedvig, thus becoming King of Poland. During the reign of Vytautas (Vitold) the Great (1392-1430) Lithuania reached the zenith of her power and prosperity, her frontiers extending from the Baltic to the Black Sea. After the death of Vytautas the Great, Polish influence gradually increased in Lithuania, and in 1569 the Lithuanians were forced to unite with the Poles at Lublin, the Lithuanians retaining their own treasury, laws, courts of justice, and army. Both countries elected the same king and had a common Seim (parliament).

At the end of the eighteenth century Lithuania fell under Russian rule.

In 1917 a Lithuanian Conference of 214 representatives at Vilna elected a Lithuanian State Council (Taryba) and demanded the complete independence of Lithuania. The independence of the Lithuanian State was proclaimed on February 16, 1918.

On December 20, 1922, Lithuania received de jure recognition by the Great Powers. Russia had already accorded that recognition in the Treaty of Peace of July 12, 1920.

Constitution and Government.—The constitution adopted by the Constituent Assembly on August 1, 1922, and amended on May 15, 1928, declares that the State of Lithuania is an independent Democratic Republic. The Diet (or Seimas) is the exponent of the sovereign power of Lithuania, and makes laws, ratifies treaties with other States, approves the State budget and superintends the execution of the laws. The Executive Power is placed in the hands of the President of the Republic and of the Cabinet of Ministers. The President of the Republic is elected by the people for seven years, and he appoints the Minister-President (Premier), and all other Ministers, as recommended by the Premier. The President also appoints the higher military and civil officials of the State. In case of the absence or illness of the President, his place is to be taken by the Premier. All the acts of the President must be countersigned by the Premier or the proper Minister. The Cabinet of Ministers is responsible to the Diet and resigns on an expression of a lack of confidence by the latter. The Members of the Diet on entering the Cabinet of Ministers do not cease to be Members of the Diet.

All the citizens of Lithuania, without distinction of sex, nationality or religion, are equal before the law; there are no classes or titles. All citizens are also guaranteed inviolability of person, homes, and correspondence, and freedom of religion, conscience, Press, speech, strikes, assembly and organization.

The Diet of Lithuania is elected every five years by universal, equal, direct and secret suffrage according to the proportional system, the electoral unit being one representative to 50,000 inhabitants.

President of Lithuania.—Antanas Smetona (1932-39).

Prime Minister and Minister of Finance.—Juozas Tubelis.

For administrative purposes the territory of Lithuania is divided into 20 districts, of about 100,000 inhabitants each. The districts are divided into communities, with about 15 communities to each district. National minorities (Jews, Germans, and Poles) enjoy cultural autonomy.

Area and Population.—The Lithuanian Government claims that Lithuania consists of: (1) the whole of the former Russian Province of Kaunas (Kovno); (2) the Province of Vilnius (Vilna), minus the districts of Disna and Vileika; (3) a part of the Province of Gardinas (Grodno), north of the Niemen River and the narrow hinterland of the city of Gardinas (Grodno) in the south; (4) the Province of Suvalki minus the southern parts of the districts of Suvalki and Augustovo; (5) part of the Province of Courland between the old German frontier and the Holy Aa (Sventoji) River by the Baltic Sea, and (6) the territory of Klaipeda (Memel).

For the northern and eastern frontier of Lithuania, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR BOOK for 1929, p. 1075.

In the south (in the region of the Province of Suvalki) the frontier with Poland has not yet been conclusively agreed upon by Lithuania and Poland. Both Lithuania and Poland lay claim to Vilna, but though the Great Powers (on March 15, 1923) recognized the de facto boundary between the two countries as de jure, and though the League of Nations has endeavoured to bring about a solution of this problem, no agreement has been reached. The southern part of Lithuania occupied by Poland has an area of about 27,000 sq. kilometres (10,422 sq. miles), with a population of 1,000,000.

The total area of Independent Lithuania (including Memel) is 55,670 sq. kilometres (21,489 sq. miles), and the population (January 1, 1933) 2,421,777.

The Memel territory (area 943 square miles, population 146,000), which was detached from Germany by the Treaty of Versailles and at first placed under the control of the conference of ambassadors, who handed it over to Lithuania on February 16, 1923. According to the Memel Convention signed May 8, 1924, between Lithuania on one side and Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan on the other, the Territory of Memel constitutes a unit under the sovereignty of Lithuania, but with a large measure of local autonomy. The port itself is regarded as one of international concern.

The Lithuanians claim that the capital of Lithuania is Vilnius (Vilna), with a population of 214,600 in 1914. Other large towns are: Kaunas (Kovno), seat of the Government, 101,065; Gardinas (Grodno), 61,600; Klaipeda (Memel), 37,277; Siauliai (Shavli), 23,561; and Panevezys (Poneviej), 20,774. Of these cities, Vilna and Grodno are in possession of Poland.

Religion.—In Independent Lithuania, according to the census of 1923, Roman Catholics formed 80·5 per cent., Jews 7·3 per cent., Protestants and Calvinists 9·5 per cent., Greek Orthodox 2·5 per cent. In the Memel Territory Protestants form 91·7 per cent., Roman Catholics 5·3 per cent. In April, 1926, the Vatican decided to declare Lithuania a Church Province, with an Archbishop and four bishops.

Education.—In 1932-33 there were 2,548 primary schools with 4,656 teachers and 258,005 pupils, 48 secondary schools with 406 teachers and 5,172 pupils, 65 gymnasias (high schools) with 1,120 teachers and 16,353 pupils, and 11 teachers' training colleges with 1,185 pupils. In addition to these there are 24 special training schools of higher grade giving commercial, technical, art and music courses, with a total of 3,720 pupils, and 107 special schools of lower grade with 4,222 pupils. The University of Vytautas the Great, at Kovno, which was opened on February 16, 1922, had (1932) 287 professors and teachers and 4,548 students. The academy of agriculture has 50 professors, etc., and 264 students.

Finance.—Revenue and expenditure for 5 years are shown as follows:—

	1928	1929	1930	1931	1932 ¹
	Litas	Litas	Litas	Litas	Litas
Revenue	319,820,730	338,541,200	347,694,100	340,085,700	292,030,300

¹ Estimates.

During 1932 the largest expenditures were incurred by the following Ministries: Communication, 63 million litas; Agriculture, 51 million litas; and Defence, 47 million litas. The largest source of revenue was derived from indirect taxes (especially customs), which amounted to 78 million litas; from government enterprises (railways, postal service, telephone, telegraph), and indirect taxes (alcohol, playing cards and match monopolies), to the sum of 84 million litas.

On September 1, 1933, the national debt of Lithuania was 136,331,252 litas (13,633,125 dollars). Of this sum 1,979,045 litas (197,904 dollars) were for internal indebtedness, and 134,352,207 litas (13,435,220 dollars) foreign obligations. The larger foreign creditors in 1932 were: the United States, 6,386,227 dollars; Great Britain, 120,209 dollars; and the Swedish Match Syndicate, 4,129,032 dollars.

Defence.—Military service is compulsory, beginning at the age of 21. Service in the active army is for 1½ years. The establishment of the active army in 1932 was 1,587 officers and 18,668 men, organized in 3 divisions: cavalry brigade, technical and air forces. There is in addition an auxiliary force of about 52,000 men.

Production.—Lithuania is an agricultural country, and preponderantly rural in character. Of the total population, 76·7 per cent. is engaged in agriculture, 10 per cent. in commerce, industry and communications. The resources of the country consist of timber and agricultural produce. Of the total area, 49·6 per cent. is arable land, 25·3 per cent. meadow and pasture land, 15·9 per cent. forests, and 9·2 per cent. unproductive lands. In 1932 in the agricultural territory of Lithuania, 5,565,800 hectares (about 13,747,526 acres), there was produced (in metric tons) rye, 572,070; wheat, 256,460; barley, 238,950; oats, 356,380; potatoes, 1,918,800; flax fibre, 14,262.

Lithuania is made up of small and middle-sized farms. Approximately half of the available agricultural area is made up of farms from 5 to 23 hectares. The dividing up of the land into smaller holdings has promoted a lively development of livestock raising, dairying and agricultural co-operative societies.

In 1933 the country possessed 586,673 horses, 1,340,074 cattle, 1,321,619 sheep, and 1,305,824 pigs. Poultry farming is also an important occupation.

Forests cover 1,029,404 hectares (about 2,542,627 acres). 70 per cent. of the forests consist of needle-bearing trees, mostly pines, and the remainder of leaf-bearing trees. In 1930, about 90,000 tons of peat were produced.

In 1932 there were 1,151 industrial establishments (with not less than 5 working persons) with 24,294 working persons. The values of the production of principal commodities in 1932 were: meat and fish, 49,807,000 litas; manufactured timber, 21,380,000 litas; tissues and yarns, 20,420,000 litas; machines and metallic wares, 2,703,000 litas; leather, 9,027,000 litas.

Commerce.—Trade for five years :—

	1928	1929	1930	1931	1932
	Litas	Litas	Litas	Litas	Litas
Imports . . .	291,091,400	306,422,400	312,415,200	277,959,100	166,952,500

In 1932, meat exports amounted to 57,000,000 litas; butter, 41,800,000 litas; cellulose, 19,400,000 litas; pigs, 2,800,000 litas. Other items of export were timber, flax and eggs. In 1932 39 per cent. of the exports were to Germany, 41 per cent. to Great Britain and 2 per cent. to Latvia.

The principal items of import in 1932 were: cotton goods, 19,600,000 litas; woollen goods, 9,000,000 litas; coal, 9,400,000 litas; sugar, 4,500,000 litas; yarns, fertilizer, iron machinery and cement. Of the total imports 40 per cent. came from Germany, 11 per cent. from Great Britain, 8 per cent. from Czechoslovakia and 4 per cent. from the United States.

Total trade between Lithuania and the United Kingdom for five years (according to Board of Trade Returns):—

	1929	1930	1931	1932	1933
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports from Lithuania into United Kingdom . . .	587,061	791,015	1,487,692	1,882,105	1,967,224
Exports to Lithuania from United Kingdom . . .	380,006	367,708	300,866	392,575	658,915
Re-exports to Lithuania from United Kingdom . . .	14,444	30,381	5,968	16,387	31,674

Shipping.—In 1932, 1,113 vessels of 925,700 tons entered and 1,117 vessels of 912,100 tons cleared the port of Memel.

Internal Communications.—On December 31, 1932, the total length of railways was 1,829 kilometers (1,136 miles), of which 1,260 kilometers (789 miles) were broad gauge lines.

There are about 15,582 kilometers (9,738 miles) of roads in the country, while of the waterways those navigable for steamboats extend to 481 kilometers (301 miles); for rafts to 2,000 kilometers (1,242 miles); total, 2,586 kilometers (1,606 miles). The river Niemen is navigable for about 270 days in the year; good for floating, 1,977 km. (1,234 miles).

Banking and Currency.—By a law promulgated on August 16, 1922, a national currency, based on the gold standard, with the Litas as unit, was introduced to replace the Ost mark, Ost rouble, and German mark hitherto in circulation but now withdrawn. The litas contain 0.150462 grammes of pure gold, and is equivalent to a tenth of the American gold dollar. The par of exchange with the gold pound sterling is 48.66 litas. There are no gold coins in circulation, but a 50-litas piece weighing 8.3592 grammes .900 fine is provided for in the currency law. Silver coins in circulation are 5, 2 and 1 litas, and there are also a number of subsidiary copper-aluminium coins ranging from 50 centas to 1 centa. The Bank of Lithuania (Lietuvos Bankas) was established in August, 1922, on joint-stock principles, 50 per cent. of the shares being held by the State and the balance being available for private subscription. The Bank's capital-stock is 12,000,000 litas. The Bank enjoys during twenty years the sole right of issuing bank-notes. Although under the law the bank-note issue calls for a gold cover of one-third, yet in practice the Government has decided that the actual security must represent 100 per cent. in the form either of gold or stable currencies backed by gold. On February 15, 1934, the bank-notes in circulation amounted to 85,091,000 litas, silver coin and bullion, 55,714,000 litas. The Land Bank, with a paid-up capital of 50,000,000 litas, is under the control of the Government, and grants agricultural credits to farmers and agricultural co-operative societies. Lithuania has 7 joint stock banks, the capital of which on July 1, 1932, reached 86,000,000 litas. Deposits in all credit institutions (not including government thrift institutions) on the same date amounted to 205,434,100 litas and loans and special accounts 272,880,400 litas.

The weights and measures are of the metric system.

LUXEMBURG.

Reigning Grand Duchess.—Charlotte, born January 23, 1896, was the daughter of William, Grand Duke of Luxemburg, Duke of Nassau (died February 25, 1912) and of Marie-Anne, Princess of Braganza, born July 13, 1861, succeeded on the abdication of her sister Marie-Adelaide, on January 9, 1919; married to Prince Felix of Bourbon-Parma on November 6, 1919. Offspring:—Prince Jean, born January 5, 1921, Princess Elisabeth, born December 22, 1922, Princess Marie-Adelaide, born May 21, 1924, Princess Marie-Gabrielle, born August 2, 1925, Prince Charles, born August 7, 1927, and Princess Alix, born August 24, 1929. Sisters of the Grand Duchess:—Princess Marie-Adelaide, born June 14, 1894, died January 24, 1924; Princess Hilda, born February 15, 1897; Princess Antoinette, born October 7, 1899; Princess Elisabeth, born March 7, 1901; Princess Sophie, born February 14, 1902.

The early history of Luxemburg may be divided into four periods, viz., from 963 to 1443, when the country was part of the Holy Roman Empire; from 1443 to 1506, the Burgundian period; from 1506 to 1714, the Spanish period; and from 1714 to 1795, the Austrian period. From 1795 to 1815 the Duchy was French. By the Treaty of Vienna it was constituted a Grand Duchy and awarded to William I., King of the Netherlands, although it entered the German Confederation June 8, 1815, and its capital was constituted a Federal Fortress and occupied by a Prussian garrison. The Belgian Revolution of August, 1830, put an end to the authority of the King-Grand Duke everywhere except in the town of Luxemburg, where the Prussians upheld it until by the Treaty of April 19, 1839, he recognised the independence of Belgium and, by ceding 1,706 sq. miles of the Grand Duchy, which was formed into the Belgian Province of Luxemburg, recovered the rest. William I. abdicated October 10, 1840, and died December 12, 1893. His son and successor, William II., under whom the Grand Duchy entered the German Customs Union in 1842, died March 17, 1849, and was succeeded by the last King-Grand Duke, William III., in whose reign the Grand Duchy was neutralised by the Treaty of London May 11, 1867, in consequence of which the Prussian garrison withdrew from Luxemburg and its fortifications were dismantled. On his death, December 4, 1890, the Grand Duchy passed to his heir male while the kingdom of the Netherlands was inherited by his daughter, Queen Wilhelmina. The new Grand Duke, Adolphus, who had to go back to the 13th century to trace his agnatic kinship with his predecessor, had been Duke of Nassau in Germany from 1839 until September 20, 1866, when his Duchy had been annexed by Prussia. He died November 17, 1905, and was succeeded by his son, William IV., who made a family statute April 16, 1907, enabling his daughters to succeed to the Throne, which had hitherto been subject to the Salic Law. The Grand Duke, William IV., died February 25, 1912, and was succeeded by his daughter, Marie Adelaide, who saw her dominions overrun by the Germans in 1914. The Grand Duchess abdicated January 15, 1919, and entered a convent in Italy, where she died January 24, 1924. She was succeeded by her sister, the Grand Duchess Charlotte.

On September 28, 1919, a Referendum was taken in Luxemburg to decide on the political and economic future of the country. Those entitled to vote were men and women of 21 (voters on the register, 127,775; actual voters, 90,984). The voting resulted as follows:—for the reigning Grand Duchess, 66,811; for the continuance of the Nassau-Braganza dynasty under another Grand Duchess, 1,286; for another dynasty, 889; for a Republic, 16,886; for an economic union with France, 60,133; for an economic union with Belgium, 22,242. But France refused in favour of Belgium to consider the possibility of an economic union, and negotiations to this end between Belgium and Luxemburg were concluded on December 22, 1921, when the Chamber of the Grand Duchy passed a Bill for the economic union between Belgium and Luxemburg. The Agreement, which is for 50 years, provides for the disappearance of the customs barrier between the two countries and the use of Belgian currency in the Grand Duchy. It came into force on May 1, 1922.

Constitution and Government.—The Constitution now in force was proclaimed on October 17, 1868; in 1919 some important changes were introduced into it, viz. the Constituent Assembly decided that the sovereign power resided in the Nation (Article 32); that all secret treaties were abolished (Article 37); that the deputies are to be elected on the basis of universal suffrage, pure and simple, by scrutiny of lists, according to the rules of proportional representation and in conformity with the principle of the smallest electoral quotient (Article 52).

The country is divided into four electoral districts: the South, North, Centre, and East. In order to qualify as an elector it is necessary to be a citizen (male or female) of Luxemburg and to have completed 21 years of age; to be eligible for election it is necessary to have completed 25 years of age and to fulfil the conditions required for active electorate. The electors may be called upon to record their votes by means of a referendum or plebiscite in all cases and under the conditions to be determined by law (Article 52). The Members of the Chamber of Deputies are elected for 6 years; half are renewed every 3 years (Article 56); they receive a salary which may not surpass 4,000 francs per annum; they are also entitled to receive a travelling allowance (Article 75).

The Chamber of Deputies consists of 54 members. The state of the parties (1931) is as follows:—Catholics, 26; Radical Socialists, 5; Labour Party, 14; Radicals, 4; Independents, 5.

The head of the State takes part in the legislative power, exercises the executive power, and has a certain part in the judicial power. The Constitution leaves to the sovereign the right to organise the Government, which consists of a Minister of State, who is President of the Government, and of at least three Directors-General. The Cabinet, appointed July, 1926, is composed as follows:—

Minister of State and President of Government.—M. Bech.

Director-General of Justice and Home Affairs.—M. Dumont.

Director-General of Public Works, Trade and Industry.—M. Schmit.

Director-General of Finance and Social Welfare.—M. Dupong.

Besides the Government there is a Council of State. It deliberates on proposed laws and Bills, on amendments that might be proposed; it also gives administrative decisions and expresses its opinion regarding any other question referred to it by the Grand Duke or by the Law. The Council of State is composed of 15 members chosen for life by the sovereign, who also chooses a president among them each year.

Area and Population.—Luxemburg has an area of 999 square miles, and a population (December 31, 1930) of 299,782. The population is Catholic, save 4,651 Protestants, 2,242 Jews, and 509 belonging to other sects. The chief town, Luxemburg, has 53,791 (December 31, 1930) inhabitants. Other towns are Esch-Alzette, the centre of the mining istrict, 29,429 inhabitants; Differdange, 17,567 inhabitants; Dudelange, 4,657 inhabitants; and Petange, 11,003 inhabitants.

In 1932 there were 5,494 births, 3,949 deaths, and 2,285 marriages.

Education.—Education is compulsory for all children between the ages of 6 and 13. In 1930 the primary schools had 1,006 teachers (503 women); there are 24 higher elementary schools, 3 classical schools, 2 commercial and industrial colleges, 2 girls' colleges, 4 technical schools, 2 teachers' training colleges (male and female), a mining school, a college of agriculture, and an academy of music.

Finance.—Revenue and expenditure (including extraordinary) for six years (in francs):—

—	1928	1929	1930	1931	1932	1933 ¹
Revenue	365,767,890	400,763,895	440,576,935	511,490,534	409,571,453	358,223,765
Expenditure	290,353,474	362,378,232	433,472,624	453,560,677	413,593,657	313,704,249

¹ Estimates.

The debt on December 31, 1932, amounted to 708,592,170 francs.

The armed forces of the State number 250 men; and the police 180 men.

Production and Industry.—Agriculture is carried on by about 90,000 of the population (about 32 per cent.); 450,000 acres were under cultivation in 1931. The principal crops are oats and potatoes.

According to the latest census (December 1, 1931), the country possesses 6,967 horses, 98,901 head of cattle, 148,958 pigs, 7,733 sheep, and 5,046 goats.

The mining and metallurgical industries are the most important. The following table shows production and value for five years:—

Year	Iron ore	Pig iron	Steel	Value of iron ore	Value of cast iron	Value of steel metric tons	metric tons	metric tons	francs	francs	francs
1929	7,571,206	2,906,093	2,702,257	162,161,842	1,561,840,323	1,758,347,212
1930	6,649,372	2,472,908	2,269,892	156,615,796	1,200,416,038	1,411,187,143

1933	3,369,861	1,887,538	1,844,838	—	—	—

The number of blast furnaces in 1932 was 46, employing 3,349 workers; the wages paid being 40,761,299 francs. There were 7 steelworks, and the number of workers was 1,912 in 1932, who received in wages 22,168,684 francs.

Communications.—In 1931, there were 1,297 miles of State roads and 1,330 miles of local roads. In 1931 there were 337 miles of railway (246 miles normal gauge and 91 miles secondary gauge), and 800 miles of telegraph line with 2,025 miles of wire, and 455 telegraph offices. There were also 51 telephone systems with 1,465 miles of line and 32,227 miles of wire. In 1931 there were 141 post-offices, through which there passed: inland mail: 5,242,536 letters and post-cards, 24,965,310 pieces of printed matter and newspapers; foreign mail: 18,732,000 pieces of mail matter.

Currency.—According to a law of December 19, 1929, official currency is the Luxemburg franc containing the same weight of fine gold as the Belgian franc. Belgian banknotes are received in payment in the Grand-Duchy at par with Luxemburg notes. On January 1, 1932, there were 173,678 depositors in the State Savings Bank, with a total of 548,867,550 francs to their credit.

MEXICO.

(REPÚBLICA MEXICANA.)

Constitution and Government.

MEXICO's history falls into three epochs. She was annexed to the Spanish Crown by conquest in 1521, and for three centuries was governed by Spain through 62 Viceroyalties, from Antonio de Mendoza (1535–1550) to Juan O'Donojú (1821–1822). From 1822 to 1911 was the second epoch, covering nearly a century of national existence and abounding in movements and events shaping the national life. After three quarters of a century marked by stormy events (see STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1928, p. 1099) the country settled down in 1876 to a long and quiet regime under the presidency of General Don Porfirio Díaz (died July 2, 1915), who ruled the country with the exception of four years (1880–4, General Manuel González) until May 25, 1911, when he presented his resignation to Congress. Then began the third or revolutionary epoch, commencing with coups d'état and civil war and culminating in bold social and economic experiments. The names of the Presidents are shown in the following table:—

Gen. Don Porfirio Díaz	Dec. 1, 1884—May 25, 1911. ¹
Don Francisco de la Barra (Provisional).	May 26, 1911—Nov. 1, 1911.
Don Francisco Indalecio Madero	Nov. 1, 1911—Feb. 19, 1913. ¹
Don Pedro Lascurain (Provisional)	Feb. 19, 1913—Feb. 19, 1913. ¹
Gen. Don Victoriano de la Huerta (Provisional)	Feb. 19, 1913—July 15, 1913. ¹
Don Francisco Carbajal (Provisional)	July 15, 1913—Aug. 13, 1914. ¹

(Period of disputed succession.)

Don Venustiano Carranza ('First Chief')	Aug. 20, 1914—Nov. 24, 1914.
Don Eulalio Martín Gutiérrez (Provisional)	Nov. 10, 1914—Jan. 16, 1915.
Gen. Don Roque González Garza (Provisional)	Jan. 16, 1915—June 9, 1915.
Don Francisco Lagos Cházaro (Provisional)	July 31, 1915—Oct. 1915.
Don Venustiano Carranza (Provisional)	Oct. 1915—Mar. 11, 1917.
Don Venustiano Carranza	Nov. 11, 1917—May 21, 1920. ²
Don Adolfo de la Huerta (Provisional)	May 25, 1920—Nov. 30, 1920.

Gen. Don Plutarco Elías Calles	Dec. 1, 1924—Nov. 30, 1928.

Owing to the assassination, on July 17, 1928, of General Obregón, the President-elect, a Provisional President took office.

Don Emilio Portes Gil (Provisional)	Dec. 1, 1928—Feb. 4, 1930.
Don Pascual Ortiz Rubio	Feb. 5, 1930—Sept. 3, 1932. ¹
Gen. Don Abelardo Rodríguez	Sept. 4, 1932.

¹ Resigned.

² Assassinated.

President.—General Abelardo Rodríguez. Elected by the unanimous vote of Congress, September 4, 1932. Assumed office September 4, 1932, to serve until November 30, 1934.

A new Constitution, amending the Constitution of 1857, was promulgated on February 5, 1917; it has been amended in 1929 and 1933. By its terms Mexico is declared a federative republic, divided into States, each of which has a right to manage its own local affairs, while the whole is bound together in the usual federal system.

Congress consists of a Chamber of Deputies (170 members) and a Senate. Deputies are elected for three years by universal suffrage at the rate of one member for 100,000 inhabitants. The Senate consists of fifty-eight members, two for each State and the Federal District, elected for six years. Senators and Deputies are ineligible for re-election until another term has elapsed. Congress sits from September 1 to December 31. During the recess there is a Permanent Committee consisting of fourteen Senators and fifteen Representatives appointed by the respective Houses.

The President is elected by direct popular vote in a general election, and holds office for six years. Failing the President, Congress acts as an electoral college for the election of a successor. The administration is carried on under the direction of the President and a Council formed by eight Secretaries of State (Foreign Affairs, Interior, Finance and Public Credit, War and Marine, Communications and Public Works, Agriculture and Development, Education, and National Economy), and three Departments of State (Manufacture of State Supplies, Labour, and Public Health).

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

Mexico is divided into twenty-eight States, one Federal District (comprising Mexico City and 11 surrounding villages), and two Territories, occupying the peninsula of Lower California. Each State has its own constitution, government, taxes, and laws; but inter-State customs duties are not permitted. Each State has its governor, legislature, and judicial officers popularly elected under rules similar to those of the Federation. All the States must publish and enforce laws issued by the Federal Government. The Federal District is governed by a Chief of the Department of the Federal District appointed by the President who also appoints the Governors of the Territories.

Area and Population.

Mexico is situated between the parallels of 14°33' and 32°43' north, and 86°48' and 117°8' west, and comprises, according to Mexican estimates, 763,944 square miles, though English geographers compute it as 767,198 square miles, and German authorities as 767,290 square miles.

The population at the census of May 15, 1930, was 16,553,398, an increase of 2,218,618 or 15.48 per cent. since 1921; density was 21.67 persons per square mile; census results are shown in the following table. The capitals of the States and territories are in brackets.

¹ Preliminary.

Religion, Education, and Justice.

The prevailing religion is the Roman Catholic (7 archbishops and 23 bishops), but by the Constitution of 1857, the Church was separated from the State, and the Constitution of 1917 provided strict regulation of this and all other religions. No ecclesiastical body may acquire landed property. Since 1917 the property of the Church has been held to belong to the State. In 1926 all foreign priests were expelled, and in June, 1931, the Papal Delegate.

Primary education is free and compulsory, and, according to the Constitution of 1917, secular in all official educational establishments. Clergy are forbidden to set up primary schools. In the Federal District and in the Territories education is controlled by the National Government; elsewhere by the State authorities. The census of 1930 showed about 50 per cent. of those over 10 years old to be illiterate; in the Federal District, 23.66 per cent. There are 8 universities; two in the Federal District and one each in Jalisco, Michoacán, Nuevo León (1933), San Luis Potosí, Veracruz, and Yucatán. Of these the most important is the National University at Mexico City, re-organised in 1910, and with full autonomy granted in 1929; it had 7,273 students in 1929. The National University of the South-east, established at Mérida (Yucatán) in 1922, had 1,011 students; University of Guadalajara (founded in 1792, closed 1860, and reopened in 1925), 602. In 1931 there were 19,523 schools of all grades in the country of which 7,012 were supported by the Federal Government, 8,829 by State and municipal governments and 3,682 were private. These included 421 kindergartens, 13,210 rural schools, 5,369 primary, 103 secondary, 238 technical, industrial and commercial, 75 teachers' colleges, 73 other professional schools and 29 art schools; total enrolment, 1,915,419; number of teachers, 44,501. Total expenditures by the Federal Government, States and municipalities, 1931, were 62,751,000 pesos. Ranches, mills, mines and other concerns maintain schools for employees and their children.

Magistrates of the various Courts are appointed by Congress for life. They include the Supreme Court with 16 judges, nine Circuit Courts with 9 judges, and District Courts with 44 judges. The Federal District has a Higher Court of Justice composed of 22 magistrates and 4 supernumeraries. The new Penal Code of January 1, 1930, abolished the death penalty, except for the Army, and set up a Commission of alienists and other specialists, in place of the Courts, to pass on criminal cases; there is no appeal from their recommendations as to the proper treatment. Thus sentences are indeterminate. This Code applies to the Federal District and to such States as adopt it.

Federal Finance.

The ordinary receipts and expenditure for four years (1st gold peso = 50 cents, U.S. in 1930; thereafter the unit is the silver peso = 35.5 cents in 1931, 31.8 cents in 1932, and 28.1 cents in 1933):—

	1930	1931	1932	1933 ¹
	Pesos	Pesos	Pesos	Pesos
Revenue	233,189,461	226,632,290	202,682,431	215,050,000

The funded debt (in default since 1914 and allowing for payments of 75,000,000 pesos between 1923 and 1927) stood in 1933 at: Federal debt (mainly external), 923,552,970 pesos; National Railways, guaranteed by the Government, 773,939,248 pesos; internal, about 100,000,000 pesos.

Congress in January, 1932, ratified an agreement reached December 22, 1931, with the International Committee of Bankers by which 'the foreign debt totalling 274,000,000 dollars, the principal covering 15 bond issues since 1885, will be refunded by a single issue totalling 267,419,241 dollars at 5 per cent. interest, which will be guaranteed by import and export duties.' Payments which were to have begun not later than January 1, 1934, have been postponed.

Defence.

Every citizen is compelled to serve in the active army or in the National Guard. Supreme command is vested in the President, exercised through the Secretary for War. The active army in 1933 consisted of 52 battalions of infantry, 75 regiments of cavalry, 2 regiments of military police, 2 marine corps, 3 regiments of artillery and 3 detached companies. Infantry strength, 2,538 officers and 23,608 men; cavalry, 4,074 officers and 19,285 men; artillery, 454 officers and 1,372 men. Total strength, 58,262 officers and other ranks. Military education is provided at a military college and in officers' training schools, and is compulsory in the colleges. To combat illiteracy in the Army, 165 regimental schools have been established. The air force comprises 2 regiments each of 3 squadrons.

The Navy, which is little more than a police force, consists of a coast defence vessel El Andhuac of 3,162 tons, purchased from Brazil in 1924, the gunboats Bravo and Agua Prieta, the armed transport Progreso, and some smaller vessels. Five gunboats and 10 patrol vessels are under construction in Spain.

Production and Industry.

Mexico is well suited for agriculture. In the tropical regions, in the mountain valleys, and on the great central plateau are millions of acres of virgin soil and millions more which have been barely skimmed by the antiquated methods of agriculture in vogue. About 395,400 acres have been placed under irrigation. Wheat, cotton, garbanzos, sugar, tomatoes and vegetables are grown principally on irrigated land. Five large irrigation projects in Nuevo León, Tecamachalco and Aguascalientes were completed by 1931; nine other projects are under way.

Cultivated lands, 24,000,000 acres (about 5 per cent. of the total area); available for cultivation, 73,000,000 acres; pastoral lands, 146,000,000 acres; forest lands, 43,933,200 acres. Number of farms, 1931, about 600,000. Up to June 30, 1930, 18,328,382 acres of public and confiscated lands had been distributed to families in accordance with the agrarian laws, which makes the rural village the unit for holding land in common. Estates in excess of 2,000 acres are being broken up. Principal products in 1932 were maize (1,942,100 metric tons), rice (49,000 tons), sugar (232,600 metric tons), henequen (83,930 tons in 1931), wheat (242,800 tons), coffee (700,000 bags), beans (117,200 tons), chickpeas (43,300 tons), tomatoes, tobacco, alfalfa. The Yucatán peninsula produces about 50 per cent. of the world's supply of henequen; plantations are almost wholly Mexican-owned. Banana production started in 1928 in the Gulf Coast region near Tampico. The west coast grows vegetables for the United States and Canada. The cotton production, 1931, was 135,000 bales.

Timber lands are estimated to extend over 25,000,000 acres and to contain pine, spruce, cedar, mahogany, logwood, and rosewood. A new industry is the extraction of rubber from the guayule bush which flourishes in the arid regions.

Live-stock is declining; in 1930: Cattle, 3,735,000; horses, 743,000; mules, 305,000; donkeys, 1,532,000; sheep, 1,574,000; and pigs, 2,728,000.

The chief Mexican oil-fields may be grouped in five districts; fields covered by 1,186 concessions on January 1, 1930, occupied 30,866,894 acres. Total output since first well was sunk in 1901, 1,689,040,000 barrels.

Petroleum output follows: In 1931, 33,038,680 barrels; in 1932, 32,802,285 barrels; in 1933, 33,430,000 barrels. Of the 1933 output, 20,834,000 barrels were exported, against 22,588,000 barrels in 1932. There are 3,002 storage tanks with a total capacity of 120,000,000 barrels. Mexico has 16 petroleum refineries, including the two largest in the world, with total daily capacity of 312,129 barrels.

Mining is the principal industry in Mexico, but practically 97 per cent. of the 31,000 mining properties are foreign-owned. Of the annual output, measured in pesos, probably less than 10 per cent. is Mexican-owned. Concessions operated in 1928 numbered 17,355. Nearly all the mines yield silver; output is about 40 per cent. of world production.

Coal is produced only in the State of Coahuila (about 1,000,000 tons per annum). Opals are mined in Querétaro.

The following table shows the quantities of mineral products for three years:—

Metals	1931	1932	1933
	Kilos	Kilos	Kilos
Gold	19,378	18,183	19,856

Amorphous graphite	3,121,864	2,045,135	2,635,000

The industrial census of 1929 showed 48,850 manufacturing establishments with capital of 979,529,483 pesos; number of employees, 318,763; materials used, domestic, 244,453,538 pesos; foreign, 69,751,638 pesos; value of output, 900,332,923 pesos. Food products led in importance, with 14,530 establishments, employing 99,222 persons, with a capital of 229,965,739 pesos, consuming materials worth 121,791,977 pesos. There were 138 tobacco factories, 158 cotton textile factories, 31 woollen mills, and 89 small iron foundries, producing for local consumption about 50,000 tons annually. There are 727 electric power plants, with combined capacity of 686,143 horse power.

Commerce.

The trade of Mexico for 5 years is shown as follows (at par peso = 50 cents, U.S.) :—

	1928	1929	1930	1931	1932
	Pesos	Pesos	Pesos	Pesos	Pesos
Imports	357,762,358	382,247,637	350,173,416	216,585,416	180,912,211
Exports	592,444,048	590,658,603	458,674,489	399,711,314	304,697,117

In 1932 mineral exports totalled 190,539,687 pesos, or 62·5 per cent. of the total.

The principal articles of commerce between the United Kingdom and Mexico for 1932 (according to Board of Trade Returns) were as follows :— Imports from Mexico: petroleum spirit, 863,298*l.*; fuel oil, 577,884*l.*; lamp oil, 209,640*l.*; lubricating oil, 241,080*l.* Exports to Mexico: cotton goods, 361,318*l.*; chemicals, 74,787*l.*; machinery, 130,892*l.*; iron and steel, 182,233*l.*

Total trade between Mexico and the United Kingdom for 5 years (according to Board of Trade Returns) :—

Shipping and Communications.

The most important ports are Vera Cruz and Tampico, both on the Gulf of Mexico. In 1932, 11,022 vessels entered at all the ports, and 10,979 vessels cleared. Merchant shipping, 1933, 62 vessels of 49,033 tons.

In 1909 the main railway lines of Mexico were united in a Government corporation—The National Railways of Mexico—which owned (1932) 14,828 miles. There were also 3,925 miles operated by the various States. Road-building is being pushed in order to invite tourist traffic, especially on the new highway (770 miles) between Mexico City and Laredo, on the American border. Total mileage, of uneven character, is 62,137 miles, of which 380 miles are surfaced. Motor cars, 1933, 70,500.

On December 31, 1931, the Federal telegraph and telephone system had 766 offices and 24,543 miles of line. Systems belonging to individual States and private companies had 1,076 offices and 15,328 miles of line. Number of telephone instruments, 98,587. Mexican Telephone and Telegraph Corporation operates about 90 per cent. of all telephones in the country, and serves Mexico City and the central section of the republic. Mexico City has telephone connections with London and the Continent. There are (1932) about 3,098 post-offices.

There is a State mail, express, and passenger airplane service between Mexico City and Tampico and Tuxpan, as well as over other routes. Airplane service to South and Central America was established in 1930. Passengers carried (1932), 23,447; mail, 40 metric tons. There were four large companies operating, 1932, against five in 1930.

Banking and Credit.

On September 30, 1933, the 67 banks of the Republic (mostly national and including the Bank of Mexico) had total capital of 147,005,000 dollars.

On September 1, 1925, the Bank of Mexico was established with an authorised capital of 100,000,000 gold pesos, of which 66,770,852 pesos were paid up by December 31, 1930. It succeeded a number of former banks of issue, and under Article 28 of the Constitution it has the sole right to issue notes. It has 5 branches, but discontinued commercial banking in April, 1932, becoming solely a central reserve and issue bank, with capital reduced to 50,000,000 pesos (32,197,000 pesos paid). The Government holds 51 per cent. of the capital stock. The Bank is now closely modelled on the Federal Reserve system, with large powers to 'manage' the currency. On December 31, 1933, metallic monetary reserves were 97,384,351 pesos, of which 36,934,631 pesos were in gold currency and bars, and the balance in silver and subsidiary coinage and in foreign banks. The Bank's silver note circulation was 77,724,235 pesos on that date, of which 52,703,519 were used in rediscount operations, and 25,020,716 pesos were in general circulation. The Monetary Law of July, 1931, authorizes it to issue notes to double the amount of its gold and foreign currency reserves. Notes may be accepted voluntarily but are not legal tender. Ex-president Calles of Mexico became President of the Bank in July, 1931.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

By a decree of April 29, 1925, the monetary unit was the gold peso or dollar, the legal value of which was fixed at .75 gramme of pure gold. At par it equalled 24.58*d.* or 50 cents. (U.S.). But the excessive premium (30 to 40 per cent.) commanded by the gold peso in 1930 and 1931 led to a decree on July 26, 1931, setting up the silver peso as full legal tender at a fixed value of .75 grammes of gold. Further minting of gold coins was suspended and restrictions upon export removed. The silver coins are in denominations of 1-peso, 50, 20 and 10 centavos, with a fineness of .720, except the 2-peso, which is .900 fine. Control of the issue of silver pesos is now lodged with the Bank of Mexico. Exchange value of the silver peso in New York, 1933, ranged between 31.25 cents and 27.12 cents, U.S.; in London between 19.75 and 10.45 to the £. The bronze coins are in denominations of 5, 2 and 1 centavos. There are 5-centavo nickel coins. Notes of the Bank of Mexico are of the denominations of 1,000, 500, 100, 50, 10 and 5 pesos.

The weights and measures of the metric system were introduced in 1884 and their use is enjoined by law of June 19, 1895, though the old Spanish measures are still in use.

MONACO.

Prince Louis II, born July 12, 1870, succeeded his father, Prince Albert, June 26, 1922.

Monaco is a small Principality on the Mediterranean, surrounded since 1860 by the French Department of Alpes Maritimes except on the side towards the sea. From 968 it belonged to the house of Grimaldi. In 1715 it passed into the female line, Louise Hippolyte, daughter of Antoine I., heiress of Monaco, marrying Jacques de Goyon Matignon, Count of Thorigny, who took the name and arms of Grimaldi. Antony I. died in 1731, Louise Hippolyte reigning only ten months and dying in 1732. She was succeeded by her husband under the name of Jacques I., who also succeeded Antony I. as Duc de Valentinois, and was in his turn succeeded by his son Honoré III. This Prince reigned from 1731 until 1793, when his dominions were annexed by France. He died in 1795 and in 1814 his son Honoré IV recovered the Principality, which was placed under the protection of the Kingdom of Sardinia by the Treaty of Vienna, 1815. Honoré V, who had acted as Regent for his invalid father since the Restoration, became Prince in 1819. He was succeeded in 1841 by Florestan, against whom, in 1848, Mentone and Roccabruna revolted, and declared themselves Free Towns, only to be occupied by the Sardinians. His son Charles III succeeded in 1856 and sold his rights over these two towns in 1861 to France, to which the Sardinian protectorate was transferred after the cession of Nice and Savoy in that year. Prince Albert, who acquired fame as an oceanographer, succeeded his father, Charles III., in 1889.

On January 5, 1911, a Constitution was promulgated, which provides for a National Council elected by universal suffrage and scrutin de liste. The Government is carried out under the authority of the Prince by a Ministry assisted by a Council of State. The legislative power is exercised by the Prince and the National Council, which consists of 21 members elected for four years.

The territory of the Principality is divided into three communes—Monaco-Ville, La Condamine and Monte Carlo—which are administered by a municipal body, elected by vote. Women do not vote.

In 1819 the Government adopted a code founded upon the French codes and a Court of First Instance, as well as a Juge de Paix's Court. The Principality issues its own separate postage-stamps, and has its own flag.

The small harbour, absolutely sheltered, has an area of 42 acres, depth at entrance 90 feet, and alongside the quay 24 feet at least. The Customs duties are the same as in France.

The area is 149 hectares, or 370 acres. Population (census January 1, 1933), 22,153. Towns: Monaco, 2,020; La Condamine, 10,705; Monte Carlo, 9,428.

There has been since 1887 a Roman Catholic bishop. A semi-military police force has taken the place of the 'guard of honour' and troops formerly maintained. The value of the commerce of the Principality is not stated. The revenue is mainly derived from the gaming tables. The annual grant for the concession was 80,000*l.* in 1917; 90,000*l.* in 1927, and in 1937 it will be 100,000*l.*

MOROCCO.

(MOGHREB-EL-AKSA, i.e. The Farthest West)

Reigning Sultan.

THE introduction of Islam into Morocco about the end of the 7th century was followed by an exceedingly confused period, to the latter part of which belongs the great Arab influx of the 11th century known as the Hilalian invasion. This period witnessed the rise and fall of various Arab and Berber dynasties, notably the Idrissids, under whom Fez was founded or refounded early in the 9th century, and the Almoravids, the first of whom, Youssef Ben Tashfin, founded Marrakesh in 1062, and later extended his power over the north of Morocco and into Spain. His dynasty was followed by the Almohads (12th and 13th centuries), and the Merinids (13th to 16th centuries), whose decline led up to the establishment of the Sherifian dynasties, the Saadians (16th and 17th centuries) and the Alaouis. The latter claim descent from Ali, the son-in-law of the Prophet, through the Filali Sherifs of Tafilalet. The present Sultan is the 18th of this dynasty.

Sidi Mohammed, third son of Moulay Youssef (reigned 1912–1927), was proclaimed Sultan on November 18, 1927, on the death of his father.

Government.

The Empire of Morocco is in principle an absolute monarchy, in which the Sultan exercises supreme civil and religious authority; the latter in his capacity of Emir-el-Muminin or Commander of the Faithful. The majority of his subjects are Sunni Moslems of the Malekite school, the teachings of which formerly constituted the common law of Morocco. The country is now, however, divided into three Zones, in each of which a different system of government prevails as the outcome of the Protectorate Treaty concluded between France and the Sultan at Fez on March 30, 1912, the subsequent Convention between France and Spain of November 27, 1912, and the Convention between Great Britain, France and Spain of December 18, 1923 (modified July 25, 1928), providing for a special Statute in the Tangier Zone.

The Sultan resides in the French Zone, usually at Rabat, but occasionally in one of the other traditional capitals, Fez, Marrakesh, and Meknes. His government, known as the Makhzen, consists of the Grand Vizier, the Vizier of Justice, the Vizier of 'Habous' or Pious Foundations, the Grand Vizier's Delegate for Public Instruction and the Presidents of the Sherifian High Court and the Religious Court of Appeal. All effective authority is exercised by the Protecting Power, which is represented by a Resident General. The latter is Minister of Foreign Affairs to the Sultan and head of an elaborate French administration which has its headquarters at Rabat and which is divided into departments for Finance, Economic Affairs, Public Instruction, etc. The French have created a large body of modern law in the form of Imperial Edicts or 'Dahirs' issued by the Sultan but promulgated and made executory by the Resident General, and decrees of minor importance, all of which similarly require French approval. Local administration is in the hands of native Pashas or Caids and French Controllers. The French civil administration has been made independent of military authority in the coastal regions and the Oudjda district adjoining Algeria. In other districts it is still subordinate to military authority. In the less settled districts in the south-east of the Zone the French control is less direct than elsewhere, although the system of governing through the 'Grand Caids' or tribal overlords is on the decline.

In the Spanish Zone the Sultan's powers are entirely delegated to a Khalifa, whom he chooses from a list of two candidates presented by the Spanish Government, and whose administration is controlled by a Spanish High Commissioner resident at Tetuan. Spanish authority in the Zone was consolidated by successful military operations terminating in the spring of 1927. Spain also has treaty rights in a narrow coastal strip at Ifni as well as in an area extending south from the river Dra and some distance inland from the coast about Cape Juby. She has never established herself effectively in the Ifni enclave. The connection of the area south of the Dra with the rest of Morocco is tenuous and it merges into the Spanish Rio de Oro further south.

The 1923 Tangier Statute came into force on June 1, 1925, but did not receive the adhesion of all the Powers signatory of the Act of Algeciras of April 7, 1906. It was modified by a Protocol signed at Paris on July 25, 1928, to which Italy, one of the previously non-adhering Powers, was a party. The Zone is permanently neutralised and demilitarised. The regime is one of autonomy, and legislative power is vested in an international Assembly of 27 members, but the parties to the Statute agreed on certain regulations and fiscal enactments which were not to be modified for two years, as well as on a special code of law. A Committee of Control, composed of the Consuls of the Powers signatory of the Act of Algeciras, is invested with a right of veto and certain other powers. The administration of the Zone is entrusted to an administrator, with assistant administrators for finance, health, etc., and justice. These officials are at present (March, 1933) French, British, Spanish, and Italian respectively. The Sultan is represented by a Mendoub, who is ex-officio President of the Assembly and who deals more particularly with native affairs.

French Resident General.—M. Henri Ponsot (appointed July 13, 1933).

Spanish High Commissioner.—General Agustin Gomez Morato (March 1934).

Khalifa for Spanish Zone.—Sidi Muley Hassan Ben el M'ehedi

Mendoub of Tangier.—Si Mehemed Et-Tazi.

Administrator of Tangier Zone.—M. Le Fur.

Area and Population.

The French Zone comprises the whole of Morocco (except the Ifni enclave and the Cape Juby area) from the Atlantic to the Algerian frontier, and from the confines of the Sahara to the boundary of the Spanish Zone as agreed to in 1912. The Franco-Spanish boundary has not been fully delimited. It follows a generally eastern direction from a point on the Atlantic about 16 miles south of Larache to the river Moulouya, which completes the boundary to the Mediterranean. The Spanish Zone comprises the area between this line and the sea, with the exception of the small territory around Tangier which is included in the international zone. The southern and eastern boundaries of Morocco being largely indeterminate, no exact estimate can be made of the total area, but it may be estimated as follows :—

French Zone	approximately	200,000 square miles.
Spanish Zone	"	13,125 " "
Tangier Zone	"	225 " "
Total . . .		213,350

The native population consists mainly of Islamised Berbers and Arabs dating from the great invasions of the Middle Ages. These elements have to some extent intermixed with each other and with negro stocks. There is a large native Jewish population, mostly in the towns. Since 1912 the European element has greatly increased, especially owing to the influx of French into the towns of the French Zone and of a fair number of agricultural settlers, also mostly French. A census of the French Zone taken in March, 1931, puts the population at about 4,230,000 native Moslems, 120,000 native Jews and 150,000 foreigners; total 4,500,000. That of the Spanish Zone may be put at something under 750,000 (about 38,000 Europeans and 11,000 Jews), and that of the Tangier Zone at about 51,000 (35,000 native Moslems, 11,000 Europeans and 5,000 native Jews).

The following table shows the estimated population of the principal towns of the French Zone on the results of an urban census in 1931 :—

	Europeans	Natives	Total
French Zone :—
Casablanca	55,291	105,127	160,418
Fes	9,641	97,197	106,838
Kenitra	5,482	13,251	18,733
Marrakesh	6,379	185,557	191,936
Mazagan	1,949	18,699	20,648
Meknes	9,945	44,211	54,156
Mogador	907	13,584	14,491
Oudjda	14,383	15,054	29,437
Ouezzan	758	14,706	15,464
Rabat	20,802	82,204	53,006
Saffi	1,695	24,538	26,188
Salé	1,285	24,532	25,817
Taza	3,418	9,296	12,714

The principal towns in the Spanish Zone are Alcazar (estimated population in 1933, 30,500), Arzila (6,700), Larache (30,100), Tetuan (48,000).

There are important British colonies at Casablanca (about 1,000), and Tangier (about 500). Spaniards form an important element in the European population of the coast towns.

The principal languages are Moorish, Arabic, and numerous Berber dialects. The use of French for official and business purposes is very widespread, except in the Spanish Zone, where Spanish is chiefly used.

In the Tangier Zone, French, Spanish and Arabic are recognised as the official languages.

Education.

The bulk of the native population is illiterate. There are numerous Koranic schools imparting a very elementary education, and a number of higher schools attached to mosques. The most notable is the Kairoween University at Fez, which is highly reputed in the Islamic world. In the French Zone education on European lines is given in the French schools, and schools provided by the Protectorate for Moslem natives. There were in 1932 for European boys and girls, 170 primary public schools with 26,530 pupils, and 20 primary private schools with 3,076 pupils; 3 primary technical schools with 134 pupils; 15 secondary schools with 7,664 pupils in all, including an industrial and commercial school at Casablanca. The system is correlated with the French system, and pupils can take their baccalauréat in the French zone. The Institut des Hautes Études Marocaines at Rabat had 1,548 students in 1932, and has a faculty of French law. The boys' and girls' high schools at Rabat have sections for training teachers. For Moslems there were in the French zone, in 1932, 96 primary schools attended by 12,802 boys and girls; 6 schools attended by 1,297 sons of notables; 17 technical schools with 826 boy pupils; 2 Moslem colleges with 529 students at Rabat and Fez. The Italian Government maintains schools at Rabat and Casablanca. Jewish education has made great progress since 1912 under the joint auspices of the Protectorate and the Alliance Israélite. There were in 1932, 45 Franco-Jewish schools with 14,537 pupils. Research work is done at the Institut Scientifique Chérifien at Rabat.

There are State schools in the chief towns of the Spanish Zone, also certain Hispano-Arabic schools for education of natives. The Alliance Israélite has schools in Tetuan and Larache, and a native school of Arts and Industries exists in Tetuan, and a carpet-weaving school at Sheshuan.

In the Tangier Zone the education of native Moslems is mainly confined to the elementary Koranic schools. The Government of the French Protectorate and the Spanish Government, however, maintain several primary and elementary schools for natives, and there are French technical schools for boys and girls. There are several primary and secondary schools for Jews maintained by the Jewish community but connected with the Alliance Israélite. The French Protectorate and Spanish Governments also maintain a number of primary and secondary schools for European boys and girls, to some of which natives are admitted, and there is an Italian school with primary and secondary classes for Europeans as well as natives.

Justice.

French Zone.—Native justice is administered by religious courts and in a large range of criminal and civil cases by the Pashas and *Caid*s. Under the Protectorate two Courts of Appeal corresponding to these jurisdictions have been set up at Rabat. French Courts modelled on those in France were created in 1913, and deal with cases brought by or against French and other foreigners, except cases against British and United States citizens, who retain capitulatory rights and are justiciable in their own Consular courts. The French Courts are the Court of Appeal at Rabat, Courts of First Instance at Rabat, Casablanca, Oudjda, Marrakesh and Fez, and twelve tribunaux de paix. They administer specially drawn-up codes, which inter alia provide for the application of the national law in matters affecting the personal status of foreigners. Rabbinical Courts deal with matters affecting the personal status of Jews.

Spanish Zone.—Native and Jewish justice is similar to that in the French Zone, except that all criminal cases are tried in the Spanish Courts. These consist of Audiencia, or Supreme Court, Court of First Instance, and Tribunaux de Paix. As in the French Zone, British subjects and American citizens are justiciable in their own Consular Courts.

Tangier Zone.—Native justice is administered as in the French Zone, the Mendoub having a jurisdiction similar to that of Pashas and Caids. The Statute provides for a Mixed Tribunal which deals with all cases involving foreigners, except the subjects of the U.S.A. which have not adhered to the Convention and still claim capitulatory rights.

The Moroccan debt consists of French loans (1904, 1910, 1914, 1918, and 1920). The 1904 loan amounted to 62,500,000 francs and bears interest at 5 per cent. The 1910 loan was for 101,124,000 francs and also bore interest at 5 per cent. The 1914 loan, guaranteed by the French Government, was for 170,250,000 francs. By a law dated March 25, 1916, the 1914 loan was increased to 242,000,000 francs. The first issue of 70,250,000 in July, 1914, was at 4 per cent., and the second issue 171,750,000 in March, 1918, was at 5 per cent. By the law of August 19, 1920, a further loan, also guaranteed by the Government, was authorised for 744,140,000 francs. Of this amount 300 million francs had been issued by 1923, after which no further issue was made. Provision was made in 1928 for a new loan of 819,822,000 francs in which was to be merged the balance of the 1920 loan not already earmarked for expenditure. A first issue of Fr. 325,000,000 at $4\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. (price of issue Fr. 925 for Fr. 1,000) was made in May, 1929. The second issue of Fr. 425,000,000 at 4 per cent., price Fr. 977.50, followed in July, 1930. In April, 1932, a further loan of 1,535,676,000 francs was authorised, mainly for public works.

The budget of the Spanish Zone for 1933 balanced at 50,841,200 pesetas by the help of a subvention from the Spanish Treasury of 25,872,725 pesetas.

The principal revenue of the Tangier Zone is from Customs and Consumption duties. The net revenue for 1931 amounted to 21,880,000 francs and the expenditure to 21,879,000. The budget for 1932 provided for a revenue of 22,460,000 francs and an expenditure of 22,447,000.

Defence.

The Sherifian army as such no longer exists, except for the Black Guard or Sultan's bodyguard. The military forces in the French Zone are made up of drafts (consisting largely of African troops) from the French Metropolitan and Colonial armies, a portion of the Foreign Legion and native levies of various kinds. Following on the termination of the Riff war a Presidential decree of October 3, 1926, placed the army under the control of the Resident General for all purposes except actual operations, and directed that the regular land forces should be organised in three divisions and two mixed brigades. The French budget for 1931-32 provided for 2,650 officers and 58,614 N.C.O.'s and men of the regular army to be employed in Morocco, as well as the following irregulars:—8 auxiliary native officers, 228 French non-commissioned officers, 140 French brigadiers, 12,122 native rank and file. The composition of the Spanish forces in the Spanish Zone in 1933 numbered regulars, 11,136; Spanish troops and Foreign Legion, 25,405; irregulars, 5,000. The Tangier Zone is demilitarised. The 1923 Statute as revised in 1928 provided ultimately for a native gendarmerie of 250 men, under a Spanish commanding officer and a French second-in-command. In July, 1932, the strength of the force was 150.

Production and Industry.

French Zone.—Agriculture is by far the most important industry. The total agricultural area is estimated at 24,875,000 acres, not including forests. Forest land is estimated at about 4,940,000 acres, of which one-third lies within the agricultural area. The principal crops are cereals, especially wheat and barley; beans, chickpeas, fenugreek and other legumens; canary-seed; cumin and coriander; linseed; olives; vines and other fruits, especially almonds. The approximate yield of the principal crops in 1932 was as follows in metric quintals (220·4 lbs.):—barley, 10,264,928 (8,286,728 acres); wheat, 7,612,192 (2,711,691 acres); sorghum, 242,841 (211,597 acres); oats, 183,890 (58,096 acres); maize, 1,188,053 (856,052 acres); chickpeas, 116,176 (70,691 acres); linseed, 93,722 (53,465 acres). Endeavours are being made to stimulate the production of other crops, e.g. cotton. Market-gardening for export has become important in the neighbourhood of Casablanca. The almost universal wild palmetto is put to various uses, including the manufacture of crin végétal. The trees grown include cork, cedar, arar, argan, oak, and various conifers. In 1932 there were 6,212,092 olive trees, 467,098 orange and lemon trees, 530,263 palm trees (dates), 2,758,569 almond and nut trees, 5,384,189 fig and other trees. Tizra wood is exported for tanning purposes. Gums are produced in considerable quantities. Stock-raising is an important industry. The number of the animals in the Zone in 1932 was:—cattle (bovine), 1,954,053; sheep, 7,556,318; goats, 3,860,211; pigs, 116,921; horses and mares, 207,548; mules, 108,261; asses, 611,037; camels, 132,185.

The bulk of the land is held by natives, who cling to primitive methods. There are now, however, a fair number of European settlers. The number of exploitations was estimated at the end of 1929 at 2,595, representing 1,729,756 acres. Work was started in 1927 on a considerable programme of irrigation works, which is to include barrages in the rivers Beth, Moulouya, Mellah, Nefis, Oum-er-Rebia, Derna, Tessaout and El-Akhdar.

The principal mineral exploited is phosphate, the output of which (under a State monopoly) has grown rapidly from 8,232 metric tons in 1921 to 885,720 tons in 1926, 900,731 tons in 1931, 1,004,919 tons in 1932, and 1,105,300 tons in 1933. Lead ore (2,505 metric tons in 1932), manganese (3,977 metric tons in 1932), cobalt (566 metric tons in 1932), and anthracite (14,962 metric tons in 1932) are the principal minerals. Iron ore, tin, and zinc ore are also mined.

The coasts abound in fish. The chief fishing centres are near Casablanca and at Fedhala, which possesses an important preserving industry.

The scheme for providing a central supply of electrical energy for practically the whole zone by harnessing the water power of the Oum-Er-Rebia is expected shortly to yield 18,000 h.p. and to supply all the coast towns and Marrakesh. Other hydraulic power stations in course of erection are the El Kamera barrage on the Beth, and the N'Fis barrage in the Marrakesh region. A large barrage on the Oued Mellah (Chaouia region) was completed in 1932. It is for irrigation purposes and for the water supply of Casablanca.

A number of miscellaneous industries designed partly to supply local requirements of goods previously imported have grown up in recent years. Among them are flour mills, breweries, soap and candle factories, cement factories, etc., etc. The total number of European industrial establishments in 1930 was estimated at 1,000, employing 35,000 persons.

Spanish Zone.—Agriculture is potentially important, but is carried on by natives in primitive fashion. Principal crops harvested by the natives under the colonisation plan in 1931 were, in metric tons: wheat, 25,803; barley, 50,740; straw, 55,267; aldora, 18,472; beans, 4,127; olives, 3,800; maize, 4,424; rye, 946; and peas, 946. The 1931 livestock census showed there were 119,865 goats, 201,559 sheep, 89,690 cattle, 12,000 mules and asses, 8,630 horses, 2,500 swine, and 38 camels. European colonisation is at present almost entirely confined to the towns, but is spreading from the new Riffian township of Villa Alhucemas into the fertile Guis valley, which was once Abdel Kerim's headquarters. Iron ore is mined and exported from the Melilla district. The Jebala and Ghomara areas are reputed to be rich in mineral wealth, but the disturbed state of the country has in the past prevented any systematic exploitation. Prospecting is now being undertaken in these areas. Fishing, largely tunny, is an important industry. No other considerable industries exist.

Tangier Zone.—The agricultural output, consisting principally of wheat, barley and chickpea, is insufficient for the needs of the population. The most important single industry is the manufacture by a Régie of cigarettes for the whole of Morocco. This employs 700 persons. There are also fisheries and preserving factories and a certain amount of market gardening for local requirements.

Shipping and Communications.

In 1932, 3,108 vessels of 5,156,538 tons entered and 3,038 of 4,940,139 tons cleared the ports of the French zone. Of those entering 1,203 vessels of 2,408,898 tons and of those clearing, 1,178 of 2,329,485 tons were French. Of the total 1,665 vessels of 3,368,134 tons entered and 1,591 of 3,147,484 tons cleared the port of Casablanca.

Casablanca possesses a fully equipped port, and Port Lyautey (Kenitra) a smaller up-river one. Modern ports are under construction at Rabat and Tangier. Fedhala can accommodate vessels up to 4,000 tons which supply important oil storage stations. Mazagan and Mogador have lighter ports and another is under construction at Saffi. Agadir was opened to commerce on January 1, 1930, and a port is projected.

The ports in the Spanish Zone are relatively unimportant, the bulk of the trade being done through Ceuta, Mellila and Tangier. In 1932, 1,512 vessels of 567,589 tons entered the ports of the Spanish Zone.

At the end of 1932, there were 790 miles of normal gauge railways in operation and 205 miles under construction. There were also 542 miles of narrow-gauge railway (60 cm.). In 1932, 255,134 metric tons of freight and 1,497,963 passengers were carried.

The existing railways in the Spanish Zone are Ceuta-Tetuan (41 km.); Nador-Tistutin (36 km.); and Larache-Alcazar (40 km.), besides the portion of the Tangier-Fez railway which crosses the zone.

On December 31, 1932, there were 2,342 miles of main roads and 1,381 miles of secondary roads in the French Zone; about 1,242 miles of road are tarred. The Spanish Zone has about 518 miles of good roads suitable for traffic. The roads in the Tangier Zone have been considerably improved since the coming into force of the Statute. There are now about 65 miles of urban and rural roads.

There are a daily aeroplane service between Toulouse and Casablanca via Tangier and Rabat, and a weekly service between Casablanca and Dakar.

A Sherifian postal service under French management exists in the French and Tangier zones. European mails are conveyed by steamer services from Marseilles and Bordeaux, overland through Spain, and by daily steamers between Algeciras and Tangier and increasingly by air from Toulouse. The Sherifian service in 1932 received 38,234,205 letters, 2,494,648 registered letters, also 528,423 parcels, and 10,261,129 printed papers and samples; and despatched 36,315,185 letters, 2,037,400 registered letters, 89,238 parcels and 5,104,284 printed papers and samples. The Spanish authorities maintain the ordinary postal service in the Spanish Zone. Spain retains a post-office in Tangier, and Great Britain maintains the only foreign postal service still existing in Morocco as a whole, with offices at Rabat, Casablanca, Mazagan, Saffi, Marrakesh, Fez, Tetuan, Larache, and head office at Tangier.

The total length of telegraph lines open to the public in the French Zone on December 31, 1932, was 3,433 miles. In 1932, 1,223,741 telegrams were received and 1,100,681 despatched, exclusive of 216,488 received and 168,954 despatched free of charge (official, etc.). All important centres in the Spanish Zone are connected by land lines. Communication between Morocco and Europe is maintained by cables between Casablanca and Brest, Tangier-Oran-Marseilles, Tangier-Gibraltar, Tangier-Cadiz, Larache-Cadiz via Algeciras. The French Protectorate administration maintains wireless stations at various places in the French Zone and also at Tangier.

Telephone systems exist in all the principal towns of the French Zone and there is a complete inter-urban connection. In 1932 there were in the Zone 11,111 subscribers and 16,319,171 messages sent. Urban services exist in the principal towns of the Spanish Zone and at Tangier. An inter-zonal system is being studied. Ceuta is now connected with the European system.

Currency, Weights, and Measures.

Since the withdrawal of the Hassani currency in 1920 the franc has been the sole currency in the French Zone. Measures were taken later to protect the note-issue of the Moroccan State Bank from the competition of Algerian and French notes, and steps were taken at the end of 1924 to make those measures really effective. The Moroccan franc (State Bank notes of all denominations from frs. 5 upwards) was in 1928 placed on the same gold basis as the French franc. It is also proposed to mint silver coins of frs. 10 and frs. 20 for use in the hinterland, where paper money is still not very popular.

On December 31, 1930, the value of State bank-notes in circulation was 581,421,495 francs, as compared with 603,833,395 francs at the end of 1929.

Spanish currency circulates in the Spanish Zone together with the old Hassani silver currency. The latter has undergone many vicissitudes since it was the legal currency (concurrently under the Act of Algeiras of 1906 with Spanish money) for the whole of Morocco. It is now relatively stable at an exchange of Pesetas Hassani 50 to the £ stg.

Moroccan francs and Spanish money are legal tender in the Tangier Zone. The Peseta Hassani continues to circulate freely.

The metric system of weights and measures became in 1923 the sole legal system in the French Zone.

The principal native measures still in current use are :—

Weight.—1 Kantar = 100 Rotls. 1 Rotl = 16 ookeyas. The Rotl varies widely round about 2 lbs. Capacity.—The mudd, which varies by locality. Length.—1 Kama = 50 inches. 1 Dra = 20 inches. 1 Kala = 22 inches.

Diplomatic and Consular Representatives of Great Britain in Morocco.

Under the Tangier Convention of December 18, 1923, the diplomatic agencies maintained by the signatory Powers were suppressed.

Consul-General at Tangier.—Ernest Frederick Gye.

Consul-General at Rabat.—W. S. Edmonds, C.M.G., O.B.E.

Consul at Tetuan.—G. E. Monck-Mason.

Consul at Casablanca.—F. H. W. Stonehewer-Bird, O.B.E.

Consul at Marrakesh.—J. F. R. Vaughan-Russell.

There are also Vice-Consuls at Casablanca, Mazagan, Saffi, Mogador, Marrakesh, Fez and Laraiche.

NEPÁL.

AN independent Kingdom in the Himálayas, between 26° 25' and 30° 17' N. lat., and between 80° 6' and 88° 14' of E. long.; its greatest length 500 miles; its greatest breadth about 150; bounded on the north by Tibet, on the east by Sikkim, on the south and west by British India.

The sovereign is His Majesty Mahárájadhírája Tribhubana Bir Bikram Jung Bahádúr Shah Bahádúr Shumshere Jung, who was born on June 30, 1906, and succeeded his father on December 11, 1911. The Prince-Royal and Heir-apparent was born on June 11, 1920. The government of Nepál is a military oligarchy. All power is in the hands of the Prime Minister, to whom it was permanently delegated by the Mahárájadhírája Surendra Bikram Shah under pressure of the Bharadárs or nobles of the State in 1867. The present Prime Minister is General Joodha Shum Shere Jung Bahadur Rána, Hon. G.C.I.E. (born April, 1875), who was appointed on September 1, 1932. The office of Prime Minister is always held by a member of his family, the succession being determined by special rules.

The aboriginal stock is Mongolian with a considerable admixture of Hindu blood from India. They were originally divided into numerous hill clans and petty principalities, one of which, Gorkha or Gurkha, became predominant in about 1769 and has since given its name to all. The ruling family are Hindu Rajputs.

A commercial treaty between India and Nepál was signed in 1792, and a British Resident was sent to reside at Káthmándu, but was recalled two years later. A frontier outrage, in 1814, compelled the Indian Government to declare war; and a British force advanced to within three marches of the capital. Peace was concluded and the Treaty of Sagauli signed in December, 1815. Since then the relations of the British with Nepál have been friendly. In 1854 hostilities broke out between the Nepalese and Tibetans, and in 1856 a Treaty was concluded between the Nepalese and Tibetan Governments by which the Tibetans bound themselves to pay an annual sum of Rs.10,000 to Nepál, to encourage trade between the two countries, and that the Nepalese Representative at Lhasa should be of high rank. Besides, trade agents are maintained at Gyantse, Kuti, Kerrong, and other trade marts in Tibet.

In accordance with the treaty of Sagauli, which amongst other things provides that accredited ministers of each shall reside at the Court of the other, a British Envoy, with a small escort of Indian sepoys, lives at the capital; but he does not interfere in the internal affairs of the State.

A fresh treaty was signed on December 21, 1923. By it all previous treaties, agreements and engagements since and including the Treaty of Sagauli were confirmed, and the British and Nepalese Governments acknowledged one another's independence, internal and external.

Area and Population.—Area about 54,000 square miles; population estimated at about 5,600,000. The estimated gross revenue is 15,000,000 rupees. The races of Nepál, besides the dominant Gurkhas, include earlier inhabitants of Tartar origin, such as Magars, Gurungs, and Bhotias. The Newars, who came from Southern India, live in the valley or adjacent to it.

Capital, Káthmándu, 75 miles from the Indian frontier; population about 80,000, and of the surrounding valley 300,000.

Religion.—Hinduism of an early type is the religion of the Gurkhas, and is gradually but steadily overlaying the Buddhism of the primitive inhabitants.

Defence.—The Army consists of about 45,000 men, mainly infantry, of whom about 20,000 are regulars. The armament comprises about 15,000 magazine '303 rifles, 25,000 Martini-Henry rifles, 110 machine or Lewis guns, 30 modern, 12 fairly modern and about 240 old-fashioned guns.

Trade.—The principal articles of export are cattle, hides and skins, opium and other drugs, gums, resins and dyes, jute, wheat, pulse, rice and other grains, clarified butter, oil seeds, spices, tobacco, timber, saltpetre. The chief imports are cattle, sheep and goats, salt, spices, sugar, tobacco, drugs and dyes, petroleum, leather, brass, iron and copper wares, raw cotton, twist and yarn, silk, cotton and woollen piece goods. Nepal possesses very valuable forests in the southern part of the country.

Slavery was entirely abolished in the country by the Maharaja in 1924-6.

A telephone connects the capital with Birganj near the southern frontier. In February, 1927, the first railway into Nepal (metre gauge), from Raxaul on the Bengal & North-Western Railway to Amlekhganj, a distance of 25 miles, was opened. There is a suitable road for motors from Amlekhganj to Bhimphedi, a distance of about 27 miles. A ropeway was opened at about the same time for the carriage of goods over the last 14 miles of the road from Dhursing above Bhimphedi into the Kathmandu valley. A topographical survey of the country by Indian personnel of the Government of India was completed in 1927.

The silver mohar is valued at 6 annas and 8 pies of British Indian currency. Copper pice, of which 50 go to a silver mohar, are also coined. The Indian rupee passes current throughout Nepal.

NETHERLANDS (THE).

(KONINKRIJK DER NEDERLANDEN.)

Reigning Sovereign.

Wilhelmina Helena Pauline Maria, born August 31, 1880, daughter of the late King Willem III., and of his second wife, Princess Emma, born August 2, 1858 (died March 20, 1934), daughter of Prince George Victor of Waldeck; succeeded to the throne on the death of her father, November 23, 1890; came of age August 31, 1898, and was crowned September 6 of that year; married to Prince Henry of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, February 7, 1901. Offspring: Princess Juliana Louise Emma Marie Wilhelmina, born April 30, 1909.

The royal family of the Netherlands, known as the House of Orange, descends from a German Count Walram, who lived in the eleventh century. Through the marriage of Count Engelbrecht, of the branch of Otto, Count of Nassau, with Jane of Polanen, in 1404, the family acquired the barony of Breda, and thereby became settled in the Netherlands. The alliance with another heiress, only sister of the childless Prince of Orange and Count of Châlons, brought to the house a rich province in the south of France; and a third matrimonial union, that of Prince Willem III. of Orange with a daughter of King James II., led to the transfer of the crown of Great Britain to that prince. Previous to this period, the members of the family had acquired great influence in the United Provinces of the Netherlands under the name of 'stadhouders,' or governors. The dignity was formally declared to be hereditary in 1747, in Willem IV.; but his successor, Willem V., had to fly to England, in 1795, at the invasion of the French republican army. The family did not return till November, 1813, when the United Provinces were freed from French domination. After various diplomatic negotiations, the Belgian provinces, subject before the French revolution to the House of Austria, were ordered by the Congress of Vienna to be joined to the Northern Netherlands, and the whole to be erected into a kingdom, with the son of the last stadhouder, Willem V., as hereditary sovereign. In consequence, the latter was proclaimed King of the Netherlands at The Hague on the 16th of March, 1815, and recognised as sovereign by all the Powers of Europe. The union thus established between the northern and southern Netherlands was dissolved by the Belgian revolution of 1830, and their political relations were not readjusted until the signing of the treaty of London, April 19, 1839, which constituted Belgium an independent kingdom. King Willem I. abdicated in 1840, bequeathing the crown to his son Willem II., who, after a reign of nine years, left it to his heir, Willem III. This king reigned 41 years, and died in 1890; in default of male heirs, he was succeeded by his only daughter Wilhelmina.

The Sovereign has a civil list of 1,200,000 guilders. There is also a large revenue from domains, and in addition an allowance of 100,000 guilders for the maintenance of the royal palaces. The family of Orange is, besides, in the possession of a very large private fortune, acquired in greater part by King Willem I. in the prosecution of vast enterprises tending to raise the commerce of the Netherlands.

Government and Constitution.I. CENTRAL GOVERNMENT.

The first Constitution of the Netherlands after its reconstruction as a Sovereign State was promulgated in 1814, and was revised in 1815 (after the addition of the Belgian provinces, and the assumption by the Sovereign of the title of King); in 1840 (after the secession of the Belgian provinces); in 1848, 1884, 1887, 1917, and 1922. According to this charter the Netherlands form a constitutional and hereditary monarchy. The royal succession is in the direct male line in the order of primogeniture: in default of male heirs, the female line ascends the throne. In default of a legal heir, the successor to the throne is designated by the Sovereign and a joint meeting of both the Houses of Parliament (each containing twice the usual number of members), and by this assembly alone if the case occurs after the Sovereign's death. The age of majority of the Sovereign is 18 years. During his minority the royal power is vested in a Regent—designated by law—and in some cases in the State Council.

The executive power of the State belongs exclusively to the Sovereign, while the whole legislative authority rests conjointly in the Sovereign and Parliament, the latter—called the States-General—consisting of two Chambers. The Upper or First Chamber is composed of 50 members, elected by the Provincial States. Members of the First Chamber not residing in The Hague, where the Parliament meets, are allowed 10 guilders (16s. 8d.) a day during the Session of the States-General. The Second Chamber of the States-General numbers 100 deputies, who are elected directly. Members are allowed 5,000 florins (420*l.*) annually, with travelling expenses. Members of the States-General must be Dutch subjects, men or women, and recognised as such.

First chamber (elected July 29, 1932): 16 Catholics, 6 Anti-Revolutionists, 7 Protestant Party, 6 Liberty Union, 4 Democrats and 11 Social Democrats.

Second chamber (elected April 26, 1933): Catholics, 28; Social Democrats, 22; Anti-Revolutionists, 14; Christian Historicals, 10; Liberty Union, 7; Democrats, 6; other parties, 13.

The Electoral Reform Act, passed December 12, 1917, provides for universal suffrage and proportional representation. The Members of the Second Chamber are, according to the Electoral Reform Act, directly elected by citizens of both sexes who are Dutch subjects not under 25 years. Criminals, lunatics, and certain others are excluded; for certain crimes and misdemeanours there may be temporary exclusion. The electoral body numbered April 1, 1931, 3,957,530 voters, i.e. 98·0 per cent. of the number of citizens of 25 years and older.

The members of the Second Chamber are elected for 4 years, and retire in a body, whereas the First Chamber is elected for 6 years, and every 3 years one half retire by rotation. The Sovereign has the power to dissolve both Chambers of Parliament, or one of them, being bound only to order new elections within 40 days, and to convoke the new meeting within two months.

The Government and the Second Chamber only may introduce new Bills; the functions of the Upper Chamber being restricted to approving or rejecting them without the power of inserting amendments. The meetings of both Chambers are public, though each of them, by the decision of the majority, may form itself into a private committee. The ministers may attend at the meetings of both Chambers, but they have only a deliberative vote unless they are members. Alterations in the Constitution can be made only by a Bill declaring that there is reason for introducing those alterations, followed by a dissolution of the Chambers and a second confirmation by the new States-General by two-thirds of the votes. Unless it is expressly declared, the laws concern only the realm in Europe, and not the Colonies. The executive authority, belonging to the Sovereign, is exercised by a responsible Council of Ministers. The Ministry, appointed May 26, 1933, is composed as follows:—

President of the Council of Ministers, Minister of the Colonies.—Dr. H. Colijn.

Minister of Foreign Affairs.—Dr. J. R. Slotemaker de Bruïne.

Minister of Justice.—Dr. R. J. H. van Schaik.

Minister of the Interior.—Dr. J. A. de Wilde.

Minister of Instruction, Science, and Arts.—Dr. H. P. Marchant.

Minister of Finance.—Dr. P. J. Oud.

Minister of Defence.—Dr. L. N. Deckers.

Minister of Public Works (Waterstaat).—J. A. Kalff.

Minister of Economic Affairs.—Dr. T. J. Verschuur.

Minister of Social Affairs.—Prof. Dr. J. R. Holemaker de Bruïne.

Each of the above Ministers has an annual salary of 16,000 guilders, or 1,393l. The Minister of Foreign Affairs enjoys besides 10,000 guilders for representation.

There is a State Council—'Raad van State'—of 14 members, appointed by the Sovereign, of which the Sovereign is president, and which is consulted on all legislative and a great number of executive matters.

II. LOCAL GOVERNMENT

The territory is divided into 11 provinces and 1,076 communes (January 1, 1934). Each province has its own representative body, 'the Provincial States.' The members are elected for 4 years, directly from among the Dutch inhabitants of the province who are 25 years of age. Except that they must be inhabitants of the province, the electors are the same as for the Second Chamber. The members retire in a body and are subject to re-election. The number of members varies according to the population of the province, from 82 for Holland (South) to 35 for Drente. The Provincial States are entitled to make ordinances concerning the welfare of the province, and to raise taxes according to legal precepts. All provincial ordinances must be approved by the Crown. The Provincial States exercise a right of control over the municipalities. They also elect the members of the First Chamber of the States-General. They meet twice a year, as a rule in public. A permanent commission composed of 6 (in Drente 4) of their members, called the 'Deputed States,' is charged with the executive power in the province and the daily administration of its affairs. This committee has also to see the common law executed in the province. Both the Deputed as well as the Provincial States are presided over by a Commissioner of the Sovereign, who in the former assembly has a deciding vote, but in the latter named only a deliberative vote. He is the chief magistrate in the province. The Commissioner and the members of the Deputed States receive an allowance.

Each of the communes forms a Corporation with its own interests and rights, subject to the general law. In each commune is a Council, elected for four years directly, by the same voters as for the Provincial States, provided they inhabit the commune. All the Dutch inhabitants 23 years of age are eligible, the number of members varying from 7 to 45, according to the population. The Council has a right of making and enforcing bye-laws concerning the communal welfare. The Council may raise taxes according to rules prescribed by common law; besides, each commune receives from the State Treasury an allowance proportioned to the total number of its inhabitants and to the share which its non-contributing inhabitants have failed to pay towards local taxes. All bye-laws may be vetoed by the Sovereign. The Municipal Budget and the resolutions to alienate municipal property require the approbation of the Deputed States of the province. The Council meets in public as often as may be necessary, and is presided over by a Mayor, appointed by the Sovereign for 6 years. The executive power is vested in a college formed by the Mayor and 2—6 Aldermen (wethouders), elected by and from the Council; this college is also charged with the execution of the public law. The Municipal Police is under the authority of the Mayor; as a State functionary the Mayor supervises the actions of the Council; he may suspend their resolutions for 30 days, but is bound to inform the Deputed States of the province.

Religion.

Entire liberty of conscience is granted to the members of all religious confessions. The royal family and a great part of the inhabitants belong to the Reformed Church. The State Budget (1934) contains allowances for the different churches: for Protestant Churches, about 1,705,000 guilders; for Roman Catholics, about 707,000; for Jansenists, about 17,500; and for Jews, about 16,200.

The number of adherents of the different Churches in the various provinces according to the census of 1930 was: Dutch Reformed Church, 2,732,333; Other Protestants, 876,958; Catholics, 2,890,022; Jansenists, 10,182; Jews, 111,917; and other creeds or those of none, 1,313,968 (other creeds, 169,575; no religion, 1,144,393; unknown, 185).

The government of the Reformed Church is Presbyterian. At the end of 1933 the Dutch Reformed, Walloon, English Presbyterian, and Scotch Churches had 1 Synod, 10 provincial districts, 44 classes, and 1,431 parishes. Their clergy numbered 1,679. The Roman Catholic Church had one archbishop (of Utrecht), 4 bishops, and 1,424 parishes. The Old Catholics had 1 archbishop, 2 bishops, and 27 parishes. The Jews had 143 communities.

Education.

Public instruction (primary) is given in all places where needed, religious convictions being respected. Instruction was made obligatory by the Act of 1900; the school age is from 7-13.

By a modification of the Act of 1887 public instruction is diminished and a greater share in education is left to private instruction, if approved as efficient by the State, in which case it is paid for out of public funds. The cost of public primary instruction is borne jointly by the State and the communes, the State contributing to the salaries of the teachers and being responsible for 25 per cent. of the costs of founding or purchasing schools.

Secondary Education is given in the larger communities in public or private schools. Private schools may be endowed by the State, private professional schools also by the province and the community. Higher education is given at Universities, in high schools, and grammar schools, either public or private. Private institutions may be endowed by the State. Tuition in Kindergartens has not been regulated by law.

The following table is taken from the Government returns for 1932-33:—

Besides the schools named in the table, there is a great number of special schools, mostly technical. Since 1908 there is also a Government school to train officials of the colonial service for superior posts.

Of the conscripts called out in 1931, 0·12 per cent. could neither read nor write, the percentage being highest in Drenthe, 0·64. Of the persons married in 1918, 0·22 per cent. of the males and 0·41 per cent. of the females could not sign the marriage certificate. Of the convicts in 1911, 4 per cent. could neither read nor write. Of the total number of children from 7 to 13 years (school age) on January 1, 1922, 4·29 per cent. received no elementary instruction.

Justice and Crime.

As from January 1, 1934, justice is administered by the High Court of the Netherlands (Court of Cassation), by 5 courts of justice (Courts of Appeal), by 19 district tribunals, and by 62 cantonal courts; trial by jury is unknown in Holland. The Cantonal Court, which deals with minor offences, is formed by a single judge; the more serious cases are tried by the district tribunals, formed as a rule by 3 judges (in some cases one judge is sufficient); the courts are constituted of 3 and the High Court of 5 judges. All Judges are appointed for life by the Sovereign (the Judges of the High Court from a list prepared by the Second Chamber). They can be removed only by a decision of the High Court.

Juvenile courts were called into existence in 1922. The juvenile court is formed by a single judge specially appointed to try children's civil cases, at the same time charged with the administration of justice for criminal actions committed by young persons who are not yet 18 years old, unless imprisonment of six months or more ought to be inflicted, in which case the judge of the juvenile court acts as judge-examiner.

The number of persons convicted was:—

Year	By the Cantonal Courts		By the District Tribunals
	Male	Female	Male	Female
1930	173,160	13,639	18,322	1,961
1931	170,544	12,118	19,022	1,978
1932	177,169	11,740	19,887	2,090

The number of inmates in the prisons during the years 1929, 1930, and 1931 was respectively, 6,055, 5,977, and 6,078 males, and 232, 195, and 231 females; in the houses of detention, 12,646, 14,109, and 15,528 males, and 553, 401, and 518 females. There are also 4 State-work establishments; the numbers of inmates of these establishments were respectively in the years 1929, 1930, and 1931, 2,556, 2,577, and 2,603 males, and 19, 15, and 14 females.

In 1901 an Act was passed reforming State reformatories for the education of juvenile criminals and establishing disciplinary schools for juvenile criminals. The number of inmates during the years 1929, 1930, and 1931 in the State reformatories was: 667, 650, and 768 boys, 100, 117, and 110 girls; in the disciplinary schools: 366, 432, and 517 boys, 82, 91, and 97 girls.

There are both State and municipal police. The State police consists of field-constables and cavalry. The former are spread over the country, the latter guard the frontiers (eastern and southern). The cavalry police (maréchaussé) numbers about 22 officers and 1,150 men. There are about 1,339 field-constables—appointed and paid by the Government—divided into numerous brigades. Besides each commune has its own field-constables or police force.

Pauperism and Social Insurance.

The statistics of the poor relief in the Netherlands cover all forms of relief. The following data for the year 1931 relate exclusively to what may be called normal poor relief (not including relief of any kind to the unemployed).

Defence.

I. FRONTIER.

The Netherlands are bordered on the south by Belgium, on the east by Germany. On the former side the country is quite level, on the latter more hilly; the land frontier is open all round. The frontiers are defended by few fortresses. The scheme of defence adopted in 1874 contemplated the concentration of the defensive forces in a restricted area, known as the 'Holland Fortress.' This comprises the provinces of North and South Holland, with parts of Zealand and Utrecht. Two-thirds of the area is surrounded by the sea. On the land side, to the East and South, are lines of more or less permanent works, which can be rendered very difficult of attack by inundations. There are also strong works on the coast, notably the Helder group, barring access to the Zuiderzee, and the Hollandsch Diep and Volkerak position, while the entrances to the Amsterdam and Rotterdam ship canals are defended by powerful forts. The citadel of the whole is Amsterdam, which is well fortified. Here also inundations would almost preclude a successful attack. The coast defences are in good order and are to be further strengthened, but the defences on the land side, except the position of Amsterdam, have of late years been neglected. Moreover, the control of the inundations is not entirely in military hands.

Apart from the Holland Fortress are the works on the Western Schelde. These have hitherto been unimportant, but a plan has been adopted to augment them by entirely new works at Flushing.

II. ARMY.

According to an Act of 1922, service in the army is partly voluntary and partly compulsory; the voluntary enlistments bear a small proportion to the compulsory. Every Dutch citizen and, in certain circumstances, every other resident in the Netherlands, is liable to personal service in the army (or navy) from the age of 19 up to 40. The maximum strength of the annual contingent is fixed at 19,500 (including 1,000 for the sea service). The average effective strength of the home army in 1933 was 1,320 officers and 16,953 other ranks. Budget for Army and Navy, 1933, 88,569,145 florins.

The first training lasts for: (a) 5½ months at the longest for men not belonging to the mounted corps, with the exception of those under (b) and (c); (b) 9 months at the longest for men not belonging to the mounted corps who after enlistment are being trained as subalterns; (c) 12 months at the longest for men not belonging to the mounted corps who after enlistment are being trained as officers, for infirm men, for conscripts of the air service, and for men of the mounted artillery troops; (d) 15 months at the longest for the cavalry; (e) 8 months at the longest for the navy. The time for further training is at the lowest 40 days for all conscripts, with the exception of infirm men and air-service men, who are exempted.

The Dutch garrison of the East Indies is organised in 2 divisions with a strength, in 1933, of 1,098 officers and 34,096 other ranks.

The Netherlands infantry is armed with the Mannlicher magazine rifle, model 95. Cavalry and engineers carry the Mannlicher carbine. The field artillery, including the horse batteries, is armed with a shielded Q.F. Krupp gun of 7.5 cm.

III. NAVY.

The Navy is maintained for a double purpose—viz. the protection of the Dutch waters and coast, and the defence of the East Indian possessions. These latter contribute to the maintenance of that division of it known as the Indian Marine. The majority of the vessels recently added to the Navy are intended mainly for the defence of the Dutch East Indies.

Following is a list of the principal ships of the Royal Netherlands Navy.

Name	Displacement, Tons	Armour water line	Max. Armour on guns	Principal Armament	Torpedo Tubes	Indicated Horse-power	Nominal Speed Knots	Laid down

There are also 2 armoured gunboats; 2 sloops; 8 destroyers of 1,316 tons; 6 seagoing torpedo boats; 30 submarines; 2 submarine depot ships and 13 mine layers. The construction of a new cruiser of 6,000 tons for service in the East Indies was begun in 1932. A flotilla leader and a submarine are also under construction. The Zeven Provinciën and the cruisers Java and Sumatra are assigned to the East Indies Fleet, as are the destroyers, 3 older torpedo-boats, 16 of the submarines, and many of the other vessels mentioned.

Production and Industry.

I. AGRICULTURE.

The surface of the Netherlands was divided in 1932 as follows (in hectares : 1 hectare = 2·47 acres) :—Uncultivated land: heath, 365,846 ; water and morass, 142,039 ; dykes and roads, 67,272 ; untaxed land, 84,697 ; building land, houses, &c., 68,033 Total, 727,887. Cultivated land: arable land, 864,852 ; pasture, 1,325,304 ; gardens and orchards, 118,708 ; forest, 254,312. Total, 2,563,176.

Large estates prevail in the provinces of Zealand, South Holland, Groningen, and North Holland ; small estates in North Brabant, Guelders, Limburg, and Overijssel.

The areas under the principal crops, in hectares, were as follows :—

According to the live-stock census of May-June, 1930, Holland possessed 299,152 horses, 2,366,066 cattle, 484,937 sheep, and 2,017,781 pigs. In 1933, cattle numbered 2,877,230, and pigs, 2,112,546.

II. MINING AND MANUFACTURES.

A few coal-mines are found in the province of Limburg ; some of them belong to the State. The quantity of coal extracted in 1931 was 12,901,391 metric tons and in 1932, 12,756,448 metric tons. In 1932 the private mines produced 5,255,737 tons, and the State mines, 7,500,711 tons. There is one salt mine at Boekelo, production 1929, 44,914 tons ; 1930, 49,807 tons ; 1931, 56,414 tons ; 1932, 61,156 tons.

There are no official returns of all the manufacturing industries. According to the last reports there were, in 1930 : 280 distilleries, 10 sugar refineries, 7 beet-sugar factories, 11 salt works, 148 breweries, and 2,919 tobacco factories.

III. FISHERIES.

In 1932, 3,820 vessels of all kinds were engaged in the fisheries. The produce of the herring fishery in the North Sea was valued at 7,063,537 guilders in 1932; the weight of the catch of herrings was 58,935 tons. The quantity of oysters produced in 1932 amounted to 1,530,560 kilos.

Commerce.

The following are the returns of the imports (exclusive of gold and silver coins and bullion) for home consumption and the export of home produce for six years (in thousands of guilders):—

Internal Communications.

I. CANALS AND RAILWAYS.

The total extent of rivers and navigable canals is about 4,660 miles ; of roads about 3,000 miles.

In 1931 the total length of the principal tramway lines was 1,869 miles ; 843,999,000 passengers were carried, and 3,045,806,000 kilogrammes of goods. Their revenue amounted to 44,439,000 guilders.

In 1932 the 2 principal railways had a length of 2,262 miles. The breadth of the railway gauge is 1.50 metres, or 4 ft. 11 in. In 1932 79,644,000 passengers were carried on the railways. The total revenue was 136,540,000 guilders (121,015,040 guilders in 1933). All railway companies are private ; there is a State railway company, only so named because the road is owned by the State..

II. POST AND TELEGRAPHS.

The postal traffic was as follows in 2 years :—

—	Letters	Post Cards	Newspapers and Printed Matter	Parcels	Letters with Money Orders 1931
Internal .	246,367,000	98,507,513	579,049,000	7,172,376	218,530

Internal .	243,567,000	84,388,421	555,535,000	6,040,701	208,890
Foreign .	71,960,000	13,216,283	41,515,000	1,559,518	210,765

The receipts of the Post Office in 1932 were 48,161,000 guilders, the expenditure in 1932, 47,898,000 guilders.

There are several private telegraph lines, but most of the lines are owned by the State. The length of State lines on Jan. 1, 1933, was 753 miles, the length of wires on Jan. 1, 1933, 9,975 miles. The number of State offices was, on Jan. 1, 1933, 2,221. The number of paid messages by State and private lines in 1932 was 5,529,400. The receipts of the State amounted in the same year to 9,997,000 guilders, and the ordinary expenses in 1932 to 11,897,000 guilders.

In 1921 the interurban and international telephone system had 2,512 miles of line and on December 31, 1931, 317,815 miles of wire, and is administered by the State; 27,520,183 interurban and 2,125,446 international conversations were held in 1932. The receipts were in the same year for interurban and international intercourse 16,460,000 guilders, and the total expenses 13,381,000 guilders.

II. AIR TRAFFIC.

There is a regular civil aeroplane service subsidised by the Government between Amsterdam and London, Amsterdam, Brussels and Paris, Amsterdam and Hamburg, Rotterdam and Berlin, Amsterdam and Malmö, and between Amsterdam and Batavia. In 1929, 75 tons of postal matter, 695 tons of goods and 14,269 passengers were carried; in 1930, resp. 65 tons, 684 tons and 10,152 passengers; in 1931, resp. 100 tons, 655 tons and 11,166 passengers; in 1932, resp. 110 tons, 603 tons, and 12,166 passengers.

Banking and Credit.

The money in general circulation is chiefly silver. Before 1875 the Netherlands had the silver standard; but a Bill which passed the States-General in the session of 1875 allowed an unrestricted coinage of ten-guilder pieces in gold, whereas the coinage of silver was suspended for an unlimited time.

Value of money minted during the following years (in thousands of guilders):—

Year	Gold	Silver	Copper and Nickel	For the East and West India Colonies	Total value	Total number of pieces
1881-1900	8,564	13,710	1,310	10,834	34,418	452,342,090
1901-1920	95,123	108,370	4,362	58,152	265,907	1,370,652,000
1921-1931	55,000	194,320	2,320	23,462	275,080	728,320,000
1932	43,240	18,800	110	50	62,200	26,644,000

The Bank of the Netherlands is a private institution, but it is the only one which has the right of issuing bank-notes. This right, granted in 1863 for 25 years, was prolonged in 1888 for 15 years, and prolonged again for the same term in 1903, with some alterations in the conditions; e.g. all the paper money is to be issued by the Bank. In 1918 the Charter was once more prolonged for a further 15 years. The Bank does the same business as other banks, only with more guarantees. Two-fifths of the paper money in circulation must be covered. It has agencies in all places of importance.

Some recent figures are as follows (in thousands of florins):—

	February 20, 1933	February 19, 1934		February 20, 1933	February 19, 1934
Gold	1,023,055	813,597	Notes in circulation.	932,242	883,996
Silver	26,260	26,678	Deposits	318,829	143,012
Discounts & advances	183,878	172,620

The capital amounts to 20,000,000 guilders. The Bank keeps the State-Treasury and the cash of the State Postal Savings-Bank and of other institutions. The Bank receives $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. of the capital; the remainder, with deduction of some reserves, is divided between the State and the Bank in proportion of 3 : 1.

There are many savings-banks, all private. Besides these there is a State postal savings-bank, established in 1881. The following table gives some particulars:—

Year	Number of Savings Banks	Amount deposited (in 1,000 gldrs.)	Amount withdrawn (in 1,000 gldrs.)	Total Deposits at end of year (in 1,000 gldrs.)	Number of Depositors at end of year	Amount per inhabitant. Gldrs.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

MONEY.

The standard coin is the 10-florin piece weighing 6·720 grammes, '900 fine, and thus containing 6·048 grammes of fine gold. The unit of the silver coinage is the gulden or florin, weighing 10 grammes, '945 fine and containing 9·45 grammes of fine silver.

Gold is legal tender, and the silver coins issued before 1875.

The principal coins are:—

The gulden, guilder or florin of 100 cents = 1s. 8d. ; or 12 g. = £1.

The rijksdaalder = $2\frac{1}{2}$ guilders.

Coins in circulation: silver, of 10, 25, 50, 100 and 250 cents; bronze, $\frac{1}{2}$ cent, 1 cent and $2\frac{1}{2}$ cents; nickel, 5 cents.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

The metric system of weights and measures, and, with trifling changes, the metric denominations are adopted in the Netherlands.

Colonies.

The colonial possessions of the Netherlands, situated in the East Indies and the West Indies, embrace an area of about 788,000 English square miles, with a total population of 60,958,371 in 1931.

NETHERLANDS EAST INDIES.

The Dutch possessions in Asia, forming the territory of Netherlands India (Nederlandsch Indie), are situated between 6° N. and 11° S. latitude, and between 95° and 141° E. longitude.

In 1602 the Dutch created their East India Company. This Company conquered successively the Dutch East Indies, and ruled them during nearly two centuries. After the dissolution of the Company in 1798 the Dutch possessions were governed by the mother-country.

Government and Constitution.

Politically, the territory, which is under the sovereignty of the Netherlands, is divided into (1) Lands under direct government; (2) Subject native States.

The administration and executive authority of the East Indies rest in the hands of a Governor-General. He is assisted by a Council of seven members of an advisory character. The members of the Council, however, have no share in the executive. The Governor-General and the members of the Council are nominated by the Queen. In 1918 a 'Volksraad' was installed to discuss the budget, and to advise the Government on matters of general importance as a first step towards the development of self-government in the colony. Some of the members are appointed by the Government, some are elected by the local councils, and the Chairman is appointed by the Crown. It includes Europeans, natives and foreign Orientals (Chinese, Arabs). By the Netherlands India Constitution of 1926, Netherlands India is granted a measure of self-government in internal affairs under supervision of the Home Government, the legislative powers being shared between the Volksraad and the Governor-General.

The provinces, divided into residencies, are governed by Governors; the residencies by Residents, assisted by Assistant-Residents and a member of subordinate European officials. Local government is almost entirely exercised by native civil servants, headed by Regents. The Resident, however, remains responsible for governing in his division.

Governor-General.—Jhr. Dr. B. C. de Jonge, appointed May 8, 1931.

The population of Java and Madura on October 7, 1930 (Census), consisted of 20,424,199 males and 21,294,136 females; 192,571 were Europeans, 40,891,093 natives, and 634,671 other Orientals, chiefly Chinese and Arabs (582,481 Chinese). The population of the outer provinces (census 1930) was 19,011,501 (included an estimate of 135,350), with 9,581,893 males and 9,294,258 females; 48,754 were Europeans, 18,253,531 Natives, 650,496 Chinese, and 58,720 other Asiatics.

The whole population of the colony is legally divided into Europeans, Natives and foreign Orientals. The former generally live under the same laws as the inhabitants of the mother-country, while in the government of the latter the Indian customs and institutions are considered. The Governor-General, however, is, in agreement with the Council, authorised to make individual exceptions to this rule.

Religion.

Religious liberty is granted to all denominations. The Protestant Church counted, at the end of 1932, 34 ministers, 30 preachers and assistant-preachers and 345 native preachers paid by the Government; the Roman Catholic 37 curates and 14 native preachers paid by the Government; 276 priests and 57 native preachers not salaried out of the public funds. During 1932, 82 missionaries of 22 societies were allowed to practise their missionary work.

The bulk of the natives are Mohammedans; there are also some millions of converted Christians and Animists, and a million Buddhists.

Education.

There are public (Government and municipal) primary schools, where instruction is given through the medium of the Dutch language, for (1) Europeans and persons assimilated with them (a 7 years' course); (2) Chinese ('Dutch-Chinese schools,' with a 7 years' course); (3) Natives ('Dutch-Native schools,' with a 7 years' course); and (4) link-schools (with a 5 years' course). Public schools where instruction is given through the medium of a native tongue are (1) the 'second class' schools (with a 5 or 6 years' course); and (2) village schools (with a 3 years' course of extremely elementary instruction). Besides, there are schools with an extended primary instruction (in the Dutch language) with a 3 years' course (Mulo-schools) open to all certificated pupils of the primary schools with a 7 years' course, without distinction of race. Side by side with the public schools, there are various private schools.

For secondary education there are public secondary schools with 5- and 3-year courses in connection with the primary schools, and also with 3-year courses in connection with the extended primary school. In addition to the Government institutions there are 6 private secondary schools for girls with a 3 years' course and 1 with a 5 years' course. Higher education is given at the Technical College at Bandoeng, erected in 1920. Furthermore, a College for Law opened in 1924, and a Medical College, erected in 1927, both at Batavia.

The following table shows the number of schools, the school attendance, the teaching staff, and the expenditure on education in 1932 :—

Furthermore, there were in 1932 the following training schools :—Four public schools for training in engineering, architecture, electrical engineering, and mining (5 years' course), and two similar private schools (1 four years' course and 1 three years' course), with 129 teachers and 1,553 pupils; 42 public and 19 private trade schools for natives (53 two years' course, 6 three years' course and 2 four years' course), with 317 teachers and 5,693 pupils. Five commercial schools (3 years' course), with 424 pupils; 4 agricultural schools with 33 teachers and 402 pupils; one veterinary school with 10 teachers and 31 pupils; 8 training schools for civil, judicial, and administrative functions, with 78 teachers and 553 pupils, and one training school for police with 43 students; three public medical schools with 47 teachers and 445 students; one private nautical school for Europeans.

For native teachers there are 12 schools with instruction in the Dutch language with 129 teachers and 1,266 pupils; with instruction in the native tongue, 312 schools and courses with 601 teachers and 7,751 pupils. Furthermore, there are 18 schools and courses for European teachers with 227 teachers.

For Chinese teachers there is a school with instruction in the Dutch language with 13 teachers and 119 pupils.

Justice and Crime.

The administration of justice for Europeans is entrusted to European judges, while for natives their own chiefs have a large share in the trial of cases. There is a High Court of Justice at Batavia—courts of justice at Batavia, Samarang, Soerabaya, Padang, Medan and Makassar—Resident courts and police courts for Europeans; native courts, magistrate courts, police courts, Regent courts, district courts, and courts of priests for natives.

Public funded debt on December 31, 1933, was 1,261,356,000 guilders.

Defence.

The Dutch forces in the East Indies constitute a colonial army which is entirely separate from the home army. The colonial army in 1933 comprised 4 regiments and 1 independent battalion of field infantry, each regiment consisting of 3 or 4 battalions and 1 unit of machine-guns and mortars, 2 battalions of light infantry, 12 garrison battalions and 1 garrison company, and the light infantry corps at Atchin. There were further 2 dépôt battalions of infantry, 1 unit of cyclist-soldiers, 4 squadrons, 2 independent troops, 1 dépôt squadron of cavalry, 6 mountain batteries, 6 motor batteries, 1 corps and 3 detachments of coast- and anti aircraft artillery, 1 dépôt battery of artillery, 2 field companies, 1 dépôt company of sappers and miners, 1 radio company, 1 telephone company, 1 searchlight company, 1 motor-car company, and a flying corps consisting of 1 wing (3 flights of 6 aeroplanes). In 1918 compulsory service was introduced in the militia for Europeans (only of Netherlands nationality) between 19 and 32 years of age, and in the land-storm between the ages of 31 and 45. On December 31, 1932, there were 1,523 reservist officers, 15,001 militia-men and 16,269 landstorm-men.

In most battalions there are 3 companies composed either of Europeans or of Natives; the greater part of the officers, and a proportion of the non-commissioned officers, are Europeans. The artillery has European and Native gunners and Native drivers. The Europeans (except the militia) and Natives are volunteers. The strength of the colonial army in 1932 was 1,194 officers, 34,183 volunteers, of whom 6,819 were Europeans and 27,364 Natives. Besides the Army there are different armed troops, viz.: (1) The Legion of the Native Prince Mangku Negara, consisting of infantry, numbering about 960 men. In case of war this Legion would be placed at the disposal of the Commander-in-Chief. (2) The Barisan, being a native infantry of Madura, consisting of 3 battalions, numbering 1,647 men, designed to maintain peace in the island and to participate in campaigns in case of war.

The expenditure for defence (army and navy) estimated for 1934 amounts to about 73,700,000 guilders.

The Royal Navy in the East Indies numbers 360 officers and 1,750 European and 2,350 Native non-commissioned officers and sailors and 185 militia, and consists of 36 men-of-war, including 2 light cruisers, 8 destroyers, 12 submarines, 2 gunboats, 6 minelayers, 4 torpedo motor-boats, 1 old battleship serving as gunnery-schoolship, 2 surveying vessels, and 1 submarine-depôtship, and some old torpedo-boats for local service. There is, besides, a Naval Air Service with 62 hydroplanes, and the Colonial Navy, consisting of 14 smaller ships of no naval value, with 147 Europeans and 682 natives, employed for civil service duties.

Production and Industry.

Scattered all over the isle of Java are many agricultural estates chiefly owned by agricultural companies, Europeans and Chinese. Yet the greater part of the soil of Java belongs to and is cultivated by the natives.

The harvested area under various 'native' cultures in Java and Madura was in 1932 as follows, in acres :—Irrigated rice, 8,070,486; non-irrigated rice, 1,057,068; maize, 4,950,945; cassava, 1,774,113; sweet potatoes, 358,820; groundnuts, 530,491; soya beans, 588,549; other pulses, 547,383; tobacco (native), 350,304; other secondary crops, 1,539,680; total, 19,767,839.

In 1932, the harvested areas of the principal 'other secondary crops' were potatoes, 59,287 acres; native sugar-cane, 27,682 acres; indigo, 4,893 acres; and capsicum, 176,071 acres. Separate from this area native tea was planted on 97,296 acres; native rubber on 20,368 acres; and native coffee on 54,631 acres.

The total area in use for agriculture in Netherlands-India in 1932 was 6,823,550 acres, of which 99,398 acres were Government-estates, 795,113 acres were private lands, and 170,904 acres lands hired from native states in Java and Madura, 2,654,365 acres lands hired on long-lease (erfpacht) from the Government or from native states, 2,688,878 acres agricultural concessions in the Outer Provinces granted by the Government or by native states (landbouwconcessie), 414,891 acres lands hired on short-lease from natives. Of the total only 2,986,317 acres were planted.

In 1930 the Netherland East Indies had about 35,900 miles of highways, of which 24,850 were macadam (2,500 miles with bituminous surface), 50 concrete and brick, and 11,050 low-type, earth, sand-clay, or gravel, graded and drained. The road mileages of some of the larger islands are reported as follows: Java, 15,800; Sumatra, 11,400; Borneo, 1,400; Moluccas, Bali, Lombok, and Timor, 3,060.

At the end of 1932 the total length of rail and tramways (State and private) was about 4,644 miles (3,419 in Java and 1,225 in Sumatra); the gross receipts (1932) about 70,864,000 guilders; working expenses (1932), 54,459,000 guilders; number of passengers (1932) about 90,262,000.

The Government telegraph lines extended in 1932 over 5,442 miles, the Government telegraph cables over 4,102 miles, making a total of 9,544 miles. The number of post and telegraph offices (combined), post offices (simple), telegraph offices (simple) and stations in 1932 were respectively 231, 89, and 531 for Java and Madura, and 171, 104, and 293 for the other islands, a total of 1,419 offices and stations. Moreover, there were 1,457 rural postal agencies and 694 rural telegraph agencies. The number of telegraph offices includes 43 government radio telegraph stations for public service (including 10 coast stations and 1 station for wireless traffic with other countries), 6 private radio telegraph stations for coastal public service; and 21 radio posts erected in isolated regions for the purpose of connecting the Government Civil Service officials of these outstations with more populated centres. The numbers of telegrams were 907,000 (internal) and 691,000 (foreign). Internal ordinary letters and postcards carried in 1932, 34,189,000, while there were 41,246,000 printed matter, newspapers, etc., 1,796,000 paid registered articles, 12,906,000 official letters and 1,991,000 official registered articles for the interior. The international correspondence dealt with was 11,825,000 letters and postcards, 9,850,000 other articles, and 843,000 registered articles.

The Government telephone aerial lines extended in 1932 over 14,779 miles, the Government telephone cables over 1,268 miles. At the end of 1932 there were 350 telephone exchanges and 39,750 telephones.

The Royal N.I. Airlines Cy. (K.N.I.L.M.) maintains internal subsidised airlines between the principal towns of Java, Sumatra, and Singapore. In 1932 about 860,000 kilometres were covered on the regular lines, 10,696 passengers and 19,459 kilograms of mail were carried.

Since October 15, 1931, the Royal Dutch Airlines Cy., The Hague (K.L.M.), maintains a weekly service, carrying mail, freight and passengers, between Amsterdam and Batavia.

Banking and Credit.

The Java Bank, established in 1828, has a capital of 9,000,000 guilders. On February 24, 1934, its position (in thousands of guilders) was as follows: gold and silver, 150,410; discounts and advances, 69,660; notes in circulation, 189,640; deposits and bills payable, 23,530. The other large Dutch banking institutions are the Netherlands Trading Company, the N.E.I. Commercial Bank, and the N.E.I. Escompto Company, besides which there are branches of British and Japanese banks.

In the Postal savings-bank there were in 1932 about 395,700 depositors, with a deposited amount of 29,604,502 guilders.

Weights and Measures.

The metric system of weights and measures was officially introduced on January 1, 1934.

The following are the old weights and measures:—

The Picul	. . .	= 133½ lbs. avoirdupois.
„ Catty	. . .	= 1½ „ „
„ Tjengkal	. . .	= 4 yards
„ Paal (Java)	. . .	= 1,507 metres
„ Paal (Sumatra)	. . .	= 1,852 metres
„ Square Paal	. . .	= 227 hectares = 561·18 acres
„ Bouw	. . .	= 1·7537 acres

The legal coins of 10, 5, 2½, 1 and ½ guilders, as well as the weights and measures, of Dutch India, are those of the Netherlands. But the country has coins of its own, viz., 25, 10, 5, 2½, and 1 cent pieces.

Consular Representatives.

British Consul-General at Batavia.—H. Fitzmaurice, M.B.E.

There are also consular officers at Samarang, Sourabaya, Makassar, Medan, and Padang.

DUTCH WEST INDIES.

The Dutch possessions in the West Indies are (a) Surinam, or Dutch Guiana, and (b) Curaçao.

Surinam or Dutch Guiana.

Dutch Guiana or Surinam is situated on the north coast of S. America between 2° and 6° N. latitude, and 53° 50' and 58° 20' W. longitude, and bounded on the north by the Atlantic Ocean, on the east by the river Marowijne, which separates it from French Guiana, on the west by the river Corantijn, which separates it from British Guiana, and on the south by inaccessible forests and savannas to the Tumac-Humac Mountains, which separates it from Brazil.

At the peace of Breda, in 1667, between England and the United Netherlands, Surinam was assured to the Netherlands in exchange for the colony of New Netherlands in North America, and this was confirmed by the treaty of Westminster of February, 1674. Since then Surinam has been twice in the possession of England, 1799 till 1802, when it was restored at the peace of Amiens, and in 1804 to 1816, when it was returned according to the Convention of London of August 13, 1814, confirmed at the peace of Paris of November 20, 1815, with the other Dutch colonies, except Berbice, Demerara, Essequibo, and the Cape of Good Hope.

The administration and executive authority are in the hands of a governor assisted by an advisory council consisting of the governor as president, a vice-president and three members, all nominated by the Queen of the Netherlands. The Colonial States form the representative body of the colony. The members (13) are elected for 6 years.

Governor.—Prof. Dr. J. C. Kieftstra. Appointed August 16, 1933.

Dutch Guiana is divided into six districts.

Area, 54,291 English square miles; population (December 31, 1932) 158,194 inclusive of the negroes and Indians living in the forests. Capital, Paramaribo, 49,674 inhabitants.

Principal exports in 1932: Sugar, 20,148,020 kilos; rum, 135,559 litres; rice, 2,672,500 kilos; coffee, 3,251,677 kilos.

Board of Trade figures show U.K. imports from Dutch Guiana in 1933, 22,383%; and U.K. exports to Dutch Guiana, 74,418%; U.K. re-exports to Guiana, 2,019%.

In 1932 there entered 229 vessels of 868,086 register tons, and cleared 226 vessels of 858,098 register tons.

The communication between several districts of the colony is carried on by vessels and small steamers. A Colonial steamship service extends to British Guiana. The capital, Paramaribo, has a harbour open to ships of 20 feet draught; regular connections in both directions exist with Europe and the United States by different steamship companies (Royal Dutch Steamship Company, Compagnie Générale Transatlantique, Ocean Dominion Steamship Corporation and Aluminium Line). In September, 1929, a weekly air service was established between Paramaribo and the United States. In February, 1930, air services were further increased when Paramaribo was made a regular stop of a weekly service between the United States and Buenos Aires. Both these services are by the Pan-American Airways, Inc.

Curaçao.

The colony of Curaçao consists of two groups of islands about 500 miles apart. One group is made up of the first three islands in the following list; the other of the last three:—

	Square Miles	Population Dec. 31, 1932
Curaçao	210	47,473
Bonaire	95	10,757
Aruba	69	5,958
St. Martin ¹	17	2,643
St. Eustatius	7	1,049
Saba	5	1,510
	403	75,390

¹ Only the southern part belongs to the Netherlands, the northern to France.

Governor.—B. W. T. van Slobbe. Appointed January 1, 1930.

The Governor is assisted by a Council composed of a vice-president and three members, nominated by the Sovereign. There is also a Colonial Council consisting of thirteen members nominated by the Sovereign. The city of Willemstad, on Curaçao, is the seat of government. The different islands, except Curaçao, are under officials called 'Gezaghebbers,' nominated by the Governor. In 1932, 2,737 births were registered, 515 marriages and 970 deaths. Schools in 1932 numbered 46 with 10,316 pupils.

The revenue is derived from import, export, and excise duties, taxes on income, on land, and some other taxes. In the Budget for 1934 the revenue is estimated at 6,852,240 guilders, and the expenditure at 6,337,347 guilders.

The garrison of Curaçao consisted at the end of 1932 of 2 officers and 76 men, with 1 man-of-war.

The imports of Curaçao and the other islands in 1932 were valued at 140,443,368 guilders; the exports of Curaçao and the other islands at 132,260,009 guilders. The chief products are maize, beans, pulse, cattle, salt, and phosphate of lime. The chief industry is oil-refining.

There entered the ports of the different islands in 1932, 10,388 vessels of 44,393 tons net.

Vice-Consul at Curaçao.—B. L. Maduro.

NICARAGUA.

(REPÚBLICA DE NICARAGUA.)

Constitution and Government.

THE Constitution of the Republic of Nicaragua came into operation on April 5th, 1913. It vests the legislative power in a Congress of two houses consisting of 43 deputies, elected for 4 years by universal suffrage, and 24 Senators elected for 6 years. The President is elected for 4 years.

President.—Don Juan B. Sacasa (elected November 4, 1932; assumed office January 1, 1933).

The President exercises his functions through a council of responsible ministers, composed of the heads of the departments. He may form, when occasion requires, a Council of State to advise on public contracts and other matters.

The Republic is divided into 13 'departments' and 2 'comarcas,' each of which is under a political head, who has supervision of finance, instruction and other matters, and is also military commandant. The Mosquito Reserve now forms a department named Bluefields.

By an agreement reached in 1911 between the Government and the British bondholders, modified and extended in 1917 and 1920, customs receipts and certain other revenues are collected by the Collector-General of Customs (who must be an American) and applied by a High Commission of 3 members (2 of whom must be Americans) to the payment of the external debt, the balance being turned over to the Government.

On February 18, 1916, the Bryan-Chamarro treaty between Nicaragua and the United States was signed, under which the United States in return for 3 million dollars acquired the option for a canal route through Nicaragua and also a naval base in the Bay of Fonseca on the Pacific coast and Corn Island on the Atlantic coast. It was ratified by Nicaragua on April 7, 1916, and by the United States on June 24, 1926. American Army engineers reported to the U.S. Congress in 1931 that a Nicaraguan canal would cost 700,000,000 dollars, whereas a third set of locks on the Panama Canal could be constructed for 140,000,000 dollars.

Area and Population.

Area estimated at 51,660 English square miles, with a coastline of about 300 miles on the Atlantic and 200 miles on the Pacific. The population (census of 1920) was 668,119, including 311,613 males and 356,506 females. Estimated population in 1930, based on registration of voters, 750,000. This is the largest in area and most thinly populated of the Central American republics. At least 75 per cent. of the inhabitants live in the western half of the country. The two halves of the Republic differ greatly in many respects and there is little communication between them, the journey by trail and river being slow and difficult.

The people of the western half of the Republic are principally of mixed Spanish and Indian extraction, though there are a considerable number of pure Spanish descent and many Indians. The population of the eastern half is composed mainly of Mosquito and Zambo Indians and Negroes from Jamaica and other islands of the Caribbean, with some Americans and a comparatively small number of Nicaraguans from the western part of the Republic. Immigration has been severely restricted since 1930.

There are 105 municipalities of which 28 have from 2,000 to 30,000 inhabitants. The capital is Managua, situated on the lake of the same name, with (1926) 32,536 inhabitants; it was almost totally destroyed by earthquake on March 31, 1931, but is being rebuilt. León, formerly the capital, had a population of 23,565; Granada, 18,066; Matagalpa, 10,271; Masaya, 13,763; Jinotega, 6,990; Chinandega, 10,307; Rivas, 4,081; Esteli, 4,583; Matapa, 4,561; Somoto, 6,182; Boaco, 4,342; Jinotepe, 6,317; Diriamba, 6,151; Bluefields, 4,706. Other towns are Corinto, 2,307; Cabo-Gracias; and San Juan del Sur on the Pacific.

Religion, Education and Justice.

The prevailing form of religion is Roman Catholic. The Republic constitutes one archbishopric and ecclesiastical province (Nicaragua). The Seat of the Archbishop is Managua. There are three bishoprics, León, Granada and Matagalpa.

There were (1931) 187 state elementary schools, 12 secondary schools, 5 professional schools, 408 mixed (urban and rural) schools and 233 other schools. The total number of teachers is 1,856. After the earthquake in March, 1931, all schools were closed, to be opened (1934) as financial conditions permit. The number of illiterate persons, of all ages, is about 60 per cent. of the population. Secondary education is neither obligatory nor free, the secondary schools being carried on by private individuals. Nicaragua has three universities, in the cities of Managua, León, and Granada.

The judicial power is vested in a supreme Court of Justice at Managua, three chambers of second instance, and judges of inferior tribunals.

Finance.

Revenue and expenditure for 5 years in córdobas (4.86 córdobas = £1; 1 córdoba = 1 U.S. dollar):—

—	1927	1928	1929	1930 ¹	1931 ²
	Córdobas	Córdobas	Córdobas	Córdobas	Córdobas
Revenue . . .	4,871,427	5,987,588	6,553,094	4,628,419	8,934,184
Expenditure . .	4,918,295	5,845,826	6,450,711	5,000,000	3,984,236

¹ Estimates, as actual records were destroyed by the earthquake of March, 1931.

² Budget estimate.

Customs duties provide from 50 to 60 per cent. of total revenues.

Total public debt on December 31, 1932, included Sterling bonds of 1909 outstanding, £487,780, equal at par to 2,370,510 córdobas; guaranteed customs bonds of 1918, 1,187,750 córdobas; claims arising out of the revolution, 16,000,000 córdobas. But last-named will be considerably scaled down, probably, it is stated, to 2,000,000 córdobas. Service of internal and external debt took 608,626 córdobas in 1931.

Defence.

The army was disbanded on May 10, 1927, when, theoretically, all arms, etc., were delivered into the custody of the National Guard, which numbers 178 officers and 2,140 other ranks. Period of enlistment, 3 years; during period of enlistment, soldiers cannot vote. American marines were withdrawn in January, 1933.

A coastguard boat patrols the east coast to prevent smuggling.

Production and Industry.

Of the total land area (about 30 million acres), about 10,000,000 acres are under timber, 600,000 acres are used for grazing and about 1,000,000 acres are cultivated.

Agriculture is the principal source of national wealth. The banana is the principal agricultural product of the eastern part of the Republic; output is shipped to New Orleans; exports, 1931, 2,973,446 stems. Coconuts are also of some importance, and plantains, oranges, pineapples, and yucca are raised for home consumption. The products of the western half are much more varied, the most important being coffee, sugar cane, cacao, corn, and beans. Sugar producers have a combine, under government control, which fixes the price for internal sales; profits are now made solely on domestic consumption; exports, 1931, 1,652 metric tons. Rice is grown to a small extent, and some wheat in the hilly Nueva Segovia district, while tobacco is cultivated round Masaya. The annual average coffee crop, from 104,000 acres, is estimated at 30,000,000 lbs. Exports (in bags) were, in 1931, 200,000; 1932, 176,684; in value, coffee exports constitute from 45 to 65 per cent. of total exports. With the exception of bananas, plantains, and yucca or cassava, the greater part of the food supply of the eastern section is imported from the United States. The western half of the country produces much of its own food.

Timber production is declining, though the forests contain mahogany and cedar, which were formerly largely exported, three varieties of rose-woods, guayacan (lignum vitæ), dye-woods, gums, and medicinal plants. Wild rubber is abundant in the virgin forests on the Atlantic watershed, but there are very few rubber plantations owing to the labour shortage. Exports of dyewoods, 1931, 1,912,411 board feet; timber, 5,234,148 board feet.

There are several gold mines, worked by American and British companies, one having also silver. Exports of gold, 1931, 411,709 dollars. Copper and precious stones are also found. Banditry has forced the closing down of several mines.

Commerce.

The foreign trade of Nicaragua, in córdobas, was as follows in 5 years (1 córdoba = 1 U.S. dollar):—

—	1929	1930	1931	1932	1933
	Córdobas	Córdobas	Córdobas	Córdobas	Córdobas
Imports . . .	11,797,440	8,172,360	6,015,481	3,479,878	3,814,261
Exports . . .	10,872,526	8,843,358	6,575,958	4,541,597	4,863,496

The customs receipts in 1931 were 1,562,140 córdobas; in 1930, 2,014,295 córdobas.

In 1931 the value of the principal imports (in córdobas or dollars) was:—Cotton goods, 1,162,676; iron and steel, 458,839; chemicals, drugs, and medicines, 347,292; flour, 316,207. The principal countries of import in 1931 were (values in dollars):—United States, 3,684,213 (61 per cent.); Great Britain, 544,283 (9 per cent.); and Germany, 565,202 (9 per cent.).

In 1931 the value of the principal exports (in córdobas or dollars) was:—Coffee, 3,319,211; bananas, 1,981,327; gold, 411,709. The principal countries of export, in values exported (in córdobas or dollars), were: United States, 3,506,370 (53 per cent.); France, 812,756 (12 per cent.); Germany, 843,446 (13 per cent.); Holland, 439,796; and Great Britain, 461,111 (7 per cent.).

Total trade between Nicaragua and United Kingdom (Board of Trade Returns) for 5 years:—

—	1929	1930	1931	1932	1933
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports from Nicaragua to U.K. . .	81,080	104,614	178,134	122,168	56,467
Exports to Nicaragua from U.K. . .	268,582	145,709	107,607	86,383	104,845
Re-Exports to Nicaragua from U.K. .	4,007	1,152	1,264	584	1,020

Shipping and Communications.

Western Nicaragua has two seaports, Corinto (the larger) and San Juan del Sur, through which pass approximately 80 per cent. of the imports and exports of the Republic. The eastern ports are Bluefields (the chief), Cabo Gracias, Puerto Cabezas, and San Juan del Norte (Greytown).

Most of the roads of the country are mere tracks over which ox-carts alone can travel in the wet season, but highways have been or are being constructed between the following places: Managua-Matagalpa-Jinotega, 104 miles; León-Matagalpa, 80 miles; Puerto Diaz-Juigalpa-La Libertad, 50 miles; Masaya to Tipitapa, 25 miles. There is a fairly good road from Managua to Granada via Masaya, with a branch to Diriamba. There are 150 miles of motor roads and 200 miles of cart roads, but the east coast is practically shut off from the west coast.

The Pacific Railroad of Nicaragua, owned by the Government and the principal line in the republic, has a total length of 159 miles, all single-track. The line runs from Corinto to León, Managua, Granada, and Diriamba. Extensions are under construction from León to El Sauce, about 55 miles, and from San Jorge to San Juan del Sur in the district of Rivas. There is a regular bi-weekly air service (Pan-American Airway) connecting Managua with the Central America republics and the United States.

There are 2,819 miles of telegraph wire, and 100 offices; also 3,190 miles of telephone wire and 64 telephone stations serving 1,242 instruments. Telephone service is good along the line of the Pacific Railway, but unreliable elsewhere. There are 116 post offices, and good service between the chief towns of the western section, but service into the interior and to the east coast is irregular and inadequate. All-America Cable Co. connects with New York.

The Tropical Radio Telegraph Company maintains a powerful station at Managua, and branch stations at Bluefields and Cabo Gracias. Other companies maintain stations at Bragman's Bluff, El Gallo and Rio Grande.

Money and Banking.

Since 1912 the monetary unit has been the gold córdoba, equivalent to the American dollar, containing 1.672 gr. of gold nine-tenths fine, and divided into 100 centavos. Banknotes based on the córdoba are issued by the National Bank of Nicaragua, the Issue Department of which maintains deposits in New York equal to 60 per cent. of the circulation above the fiduciary issue allowed of 1,500,000 córdobas. On June 30, 1932, note circulation was 2,831,314 córdobas; fiduciary circulation was 1,501,212 córdobas, and foreign exchange held in New York, 1,330,101 dollars; silver, nickel and copper coins in circulation, 381,349 córdobas. Other gold coins provided by law are 10, 5 and 2½ córdobas, but no gold coins have ever been struck. National banknotes form the great part of the currency. United States notes and silver also circulate.

The National Bank of Nicaragua at Managua was founded in 1912, and since 1924 has been owned by the Government though the directors meet in New York; they include Nicaraguans and Americans, the latter identified with the American International Acceptance Bank. It is the sole bank of issue and has a capital of 300,000 dollars, surplus of 300,000 dollars (as of June 30, 1932) and special reserves of 349,402 dollars; deposits were 2,095,809 dollars. Other banks are the Anglo-South American Bank, Ltd., and the Anglo-Central American Commercial Bank, Ltd.

Since January 7, 1893, the metric system of weights and measures has been in use.

NORWAY.

(NORGE.)

Reigning King.

Haakon VII, born August 3, 1872; the second son, Carl, of Frederik VIII, King of Denmark, elected King of Norway by the Storting, November 18, 1905; accepted the crown through his grandfather, the late King Christian of Denmark, November 18, 1905; landed in Norway November 25, 1905; married, July 22, 1896, to Princess Maud, born November 26, 1869, the third daughter of the late Edward VII, King of Great Britain and Ireland.

Son.—Prince Olaf, Crown Prince, born July 2, 1903, married on March 21, 1929, to Princess Märtha of Sweden. Offspring: Princess Ragnhild Alexandra, born June 9, 1930; Princess Astrid Maud Ingeborg, born February 12, 1932.

According to the Constitution, Norway is a constitutional and hereditary monarchy. The royal succession is in direct male line in the order of primogeniture. In default of male heirs the King may propose a successor to the Storting, but this assembly has the right to nominate another, if it does not agree with the proposal.

By the Treaty of January 14, 1814, Norway was ceded to the King of Sweden by the King of Denmark, but the Norwegian people declared themselves independent and elected Prince Christian Frederick of Denmark as their King. The foreign Powers refused to recognise this election, and on August 14 a convention was made proclaiming the independence of Norway in union with Sweden. This was followed on November 4 by the election of Karl XIII. as King of Norway. Norway declared this union dissolved, June 7, 1905, and after some months' negotiation, a mutual agreement for the repeal of the union was signed, October 26, 1905. The throne of Norway was offered to a prince of the reigning house of Sweden, but declined, and, after a plébiscite, Prince Carl of Denmark was formally elected King. In November, 1907, a treaty guaranteeing the integrity of Norwegian territory was signed at Kristiania (Oslo) by the representatives of Norway, Great Britain, France, Germany, and Russia, and on January 8, 1908, received the unanimous approval of the Storting. The treaty was denounced January 8, 1924.

The following is a list of the Sovereigns of Norway since the year 1204, with the date of their accession.

Inge Baardsson	1204	Erik af Pommern	1389
Haakon Haakonsson	1217	Kristofer af Bayern	1442
Magnus Lagabøter	1263	Karl Knutsson	1449
Erik Magnusson	1280	Same Sovereigns as in Denmark
Haakon V. Magnusson	1299		1450-1814

The King has a civil list of 700,000 kroner, the Crown Prince 100,000 kroner.

Constitution and Government.

The Constitution of Norway, called the Grundlov, bears date May 17, 1814, with several modifications passed at various times. It vests the legislative power of the realm in the Storting, the representative of the sovereign people. Only the Storting can vote supplies and has the power of the purse. The royal veto may be exercised twice; but if the same Bill pass three Stortings formed by separate and subsequent elections, it becomes the law of the land without the assent of the sovereign. The King has the command of the land and sea forces, and makes all appointments, but except in a few cases, is not allowed to nominate any but Norwegians to public offices under the crown.

The Storting assembles every year. The meetings take place suo jure, and not by any writ from the King or the executive. They begin on the first weekday after January 10 each year, and the Storting remains assembled as long as it may find it necessary. Every Norwegian subject of twenty-three years of age (provided that he resides and has resided for five years in the country) is entitled to elect, unless he is disqualified from a special cause. Women are, since 1913, entitled to vote under the same conditions as men. The mode of election is direct, and the method of election is proportional. Every third year the people choose their representatives, the total number being 150. The country is divided into districts, each electing from three to eight representatives. Representatives must not be less than thirty years of age, must have resided in Norway for ten years, and be voters in the district from which they are chosen. Former members of the Cabinet can be elected representatives of any district of the Kingdom without regard to their residence.

At the elections for the Storting held in October, 1933, the following parties were elected for the period 1933-1935: Labour Party 69, Conservatives 31, Liberals 24, Agricultural Party 23, and 3 others.

The Storting, when assembled, divides itself into two sections, the 'Lagting' and the 'Odelsting.' The former is composed of one-fourth of the members of the Storting, and the other of the remaining three-fourths. The Ting nominates its own presidents. Questions relating to laws must be considered by each section separately. The inspection of public accounts and the revision of the Government, and impeachment before the Rigsret, belong exclusively to the Odelsting. All other matters are settled by both sections in common sitting. The Storting elects five delegates, whose duty it is to revise the public accounts. All new laws must first be laid before the Odelsting, from which they pass into the Lagting to be either accepted or rejected. If the Odelsting and Lagting do not agree, the two sections assemble in common sitting to deliberate, and the final decision is given by a majority of two-thirds of the voters. The same majority is required for alterations of the Constitution. The Lagting and the ordinary members of the supreme court of justice (Høiestret) form a High Court of the Realm (the Rigset) for the impeachment and trial of Ministers, members of the Høiestret, and members of the Storting. Every member of the Storting has a salary of six thousand kroner per annum, besides travelling expenses.

The executive is represented by the King, who exercises his authority through a Cabinet called a Council of State (Statsraad), composed of a Prime Minister or Minister of State (Statsminister), and at least seven ministers (Statsraader). The ministers are entitled to be present in the Storting and to take part in the discussions, but without a vote. The following are the members of the Cabinet, appointed March 2, 1933:—

Prime Minister and Minister for Foreign Affairs.—M. Mowinkel.

Minister of Agriculture.—M. Fjær.

Minister for Public Works.—M. Mjølde.

Minister for Commerce and Industry.—M. Meling.

Minister of Finance.—M. Lund.

Minister of Justice.—M. Sundt.

Minister for Education and Ecclesiastical Affairs.—M. Liestøl.

Minister for Defence.—M. Kjøbo.

Minister for Social Affairs.—M. Uthoim.

II. LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

The administrative division of the country is into twenty districts, each governed by a chief executive functionary (Fylkesmann), viz., the town of Oslo and Bergen, and 18 Fylker (counties). There are 43 towns, 24 'Ladesteder' (ports), and 682 rural communes (Herreder), mostly parishes or sub-parishes (wards). The government of the Herred is vested in a body of representatives (from 12 to 48), and a council (Farmannskap), elected by and from among the representatives, who are four times the number of the 'Formannskap'. The representatives elect conjointly every third year from among the 'Formannskap' a chairman and a deputy chairman. All the chairmen of the rural communes of a Fylke form with the Fylkesmann the Fylkesting (county diet), which meets yearly to settle the budget of the Fylke. The towns and the ports form 65 communes, also governed by a council (5 to 21), and representatives (four times the size of the council). The members of the local governing bodies are elected under the same conditions as those of the Storting. Since 1910 women are entitled to vote and to be elected, under the same conditions as men.

III. PRINCIPAL TOWNS.

At the census taken December 1, 1930, the number of towns with a population of above 100,000 was one, above 20,000 five, above 10,000 eighteen, above 5,000—twenty-eight in all. The population of the principal towns was:—

Oslo	253,124	Alesund	18,350	Tonsberg	11,997
Bergen	98,303	Haugesund	17,166	Horten	10,788

Drammen	25,493	Kristiansund	14,646	Halden	10,387
Kristiansand	18,781	Sarpsborg	12,392	Tromsø	10,336

As from January 1, 1925, the name of the capital, Kristiania, was changed to Oslo.

Religion and Education.

The evangelical Lutheran religion is the national Church and the only one endowed by the State. Its clergy are nominated by the King. All religions (except Jesuits) are tolerated. Ecclesiastically Norway is divided into 7 Bispedømmer (bishoprics), 91 Prostier (provostships or archdeaconries), and 520 Prestegjeld (clerical districts). In 1930 there were 91,459 dissenters, including 2,827 Roman Catholics, 12,207 Methodists, 7,788 Baptists, 667 Mormons, 81 Quakers. The Roman Catholics are under a Vicar Apostolic resident at Oslo.

Education is compulsory, the school age being from six and a half in towns and seven in the country to fourteen. In 1930-31 (the latest date for which there are statistics) there were in the country 5,828 public elementary schools with 307,485 pupils, and in towns 96,877 pupils; the amount expended on both being 69,602,000 kroner, of which 30,435,000 kroner were granted by the State, the rest being provided locally. The 10 normal schools (Teachers' Seminaries) had in 1931-32 783 students. There were in 1930-31, 135 secondary schools—17 public, 89 communal, and 11 private entitled to give certificates and 18 private not having this right, with respectively 5,367, 16,469, 1,375, and 526 pupils in April, 1931. Most of the secondary schools are mixed. Norway has one University, viz. at Oslo (founded 1811), attended in 1932 by 3,734 students. There is a technical high school at Nidaros (Trondhjem), attended in 1932 by 712 students, one agricultural high school in Aas, with 114 students, a Teachers' Training College at Lade with 56 students, a military high school with 23 students, a dentist high school with 149 students, and the State academy of arts with 52 students. There are also several special schools, particularly continuation schools for young people between 15 and 18, and industrial, crafts, technical, and arts schools for both sexes.

There are 25 schools for defective children, deaf, blind, feeble-minded children with defect of speech, and crippled, also 10 reformatory schools for neglected children. The number of children in reformatories in 1930-31 was 362 boys and 121 girls; in the schools for defective children in 1931-32, 986 boys and 956 girls. There are, besides, 6 communal compulsory schools, established mainly for children neglecting the ordinary school (97 boys, 34 girls in 1930-31).

Norwegian is an independent language side by side with Danish and Swedish. As to the written language, there exist two idioms ('bokmaal' and 'landsmaal') and both may be officially used.

Justice and Crime.

For civil justice Norway is divided into 107 districts, each with an inferior court. There are 3 superior courts, having each one chief justice and two other justices, and one supreme court for the whole kingdom (Höiesteret), consisting of 1 president and 22 other justices. There is a court of mediation (Forlikssraad) in each town and Herred (district), consisting of three men chosen by the representatives (see above under Local Government), before which, as a rule, civil cases must first be brought.

According to the law of criminal procedure of July 1, 1887, all criminal cases (not military, or coming under the Rigsret—the court for impeachments) shall be tried either by jury (Lagmandsret), or by the lower court. The Lagmandsret consists of three judges and 10 jurors. The Kingdom is divided into 4 jury districts (Lagdømmer), each having its chief judge. Each district is divided into circuits, in which courts are held at fixed times. The lower courts consist of the judge and 2 assistant judges (not professional) summoned for each case. The Lagmændsret takes cognisance of the more serious classes of offences, and is also a court of appeal. The lower courts are for the trial of other offences as courts of first instance.

There are three convict prisons: inmates, June 30, 1933, 384 males and 13 females. There are 38 local prisons, in which were detained, June 30, 1933, 727 males and 39 females.

Pauperism.

The relief of the poor is mostly provided for by local taxation by the Communes. The number of persons receiving relief amounted to 145,423 in 1932.

Of the total on June 30, 1933, 726,207,000 kr. were foreign debt; 769,818,000 kr. internal debt.

Defence.

The most important fortresses of Norway are Oscarsborg, Tönsberg, Bergen, and Agdenes. (The fortress of Kristiansand is in reserve.)

ARMY.

The army of Norway is a national militia. Service is universal and compulsory, liability commencing at the age of 18, and continuing till the age of 55. The men are called out at 21, and for the first 12 years belong to the line. Men from 18 to 21 and from 45 to 55 belong to the landstorm, which can be called out in a national emergency, and from 33 to 43 to the landvaern. Military training lasts 84 days for all branches. Further, the young soldiers eventually can be assembled for field exercises. The strength of the permanent forces in 1933 was about 900 officers and 4,500 other ranks; the numbers trained in that year were approximately 10,000.

The Norwegian infantry is armed with the Krag-Jørgensen rifle of 6.5 mm. The field artillery has Erhardt Q.F. guns of 7.5 cm.

The budget proposal for the army for 1933-34 is 25,190,000 kroner.

NAVY.

The principal vessels are :—

Laid down	Name	Displacement	Armour		Principal Armament	H.P.	Max. Speed
			Belt	Big Guns
1896	(Harald Haarfagre . . .) (Tordenskjold . . .)	3,900	7	8	2 8in.; 6 4.7in. . . .	4,500	17
1899	(Norge) (Eidsvold)	4,200	8	8	2 8in.; 6 6in.	5,200	17

None of the above possesses any other than local value. The whole navy is designed for coast-defence duties.

There are also 3 destroyers, 3 first-class torpedo boats and 14 others, 9 submarines, 3 mine-layers, and 3 fishery protection vessels. A mine-layer of 1,600 tons is approaching completion. There are now about 36 seaplanes and 20 other planes.

The navy numbers about 800 officers, warrant officers and men, on the permanent establishment, and about 400 men conscripted annually. All seafaring men between the ages of 20 and 44 are enrolled on the lists of the active fleet, and are liable to the maritime conscription. The conscripts have to go through a training of at least 6 months.

The budget proposal for naval expenditure, 1933-34, amounted to 11,151,000 kroner.

Production and Industry.

In 1930, 30 per cent. of the population lived on agriculture and forestry, 28 per cent. on industry, 10 per cent. on navigation and other transportation, 10 per cent. on trading and 7 per cent. on fishery and whaling.

I. AGRICULTURE.

Norway is a barren and mountainous country. The arable soil is found in comparatively narrow strips, gathered in deep and narrow valleys and around fjords and lakes. Large continuous tracts fit for cultivation do not exist. Of the total area, 72.2 per cent. is unproductive, 24.2 per cent. forest, and 3.6 per cent. under cultivation and other used soils.

The acreage and products of the principal crops for 3 years were as follows :

Crops	Acreage			Produce (quarters)
	1931	1932	1933	1931	1932	1933 ³

³ Preliminary.

In 1933 the country possessed live-stock as follows:—Horses, 180,183; cattle, 1,339,833; sheep, 1,764,000; goats, 343,042; swine, 317,207.

II. FORESTRY.

The forests are one of the chief natural sources of wealth. The total area covered with forests is estimated at 29,455 square miles, of which 70 per cent. is under pine trees. The State forests occupy about 5,200 square miles. The value of unwrought or partly wrought timber exported from Norway in 1931 and 1932 was respectively 19,505,000 and 14,987,000 kroner, and of wood pulp and paper 100,106,000 kroner in 1931 and 146,771,000 kroner in 1932.

III. MINERALS AND METALS.

Pyrites is the most important mineral product for both its sulphur and copper content. Iron-ore deposits occur in many places. The total value of mineral products in 1932 was 20,647,000 kroner.

The production and value of the chief ores, metals and alloys in 1932 are shown in the following table:—

IV. FISHERIES.

The number of persons in 1931 engaged in cod fisheries was 74,348; in herring fisheries, 33,938.

The value of the sea fisheries (based on the prices paid at the fishing places) in kroner in 1931 was: Cod, 22,788,691; herring, 19,163,606; mackerel, 1,805,120; salmon and sea trout, 1,740,991; other fisheries, 17,232,741; lobsters, 1,198,469; total, 63,929,618.

Other fisheries are the whale, walrus, seal, and shark fisheries, which in 1931 produced a total of 151,061,000 kroner.

Whale-oil production: 689,000 barrels in 1927; 845,800 barrels in 1928; 1,210,000 barrels in 1929; 1,796,000 barrels in 1930; 2,317,000 barrels in 1931; and 29,000 barrels in 1932.

V. MANUFACTURES.

Industry is chiefly based on raw materials produced within the country (wood, fish, etc.), and on water power of which the country possesses an enormous amount. The pulp and paper industry, the wood industry, the canning industry and the electro-chemical industries are the most important export manufactures. In the following table are given figures for all industrial establishments in 1932 occupying more than 5 workers. Electrical plants, constructions and building industry are not included.

Length of telegraph and inter-urban telephone lines and wires, June 30, 1932: 36,032 miles of line, 601,780 miles of wires. (State, 22,583 and 434,310 miles respectively.) Number of paid messages on the State lines, 3,803,000. Number of telephone conversations on trunk lines, 13,738,000. State telegraph offices, 2,707; receipts, 31,385,000 kroner; expenses, 22,454,000 kroner.

The Government possesses 41 wireless telegraph and telephone stations in Norway, of which 3 are at Svalbard and Jan Mayen.

Currency, Credit and Banking.

On December 31, 1932, the nominal value of the coin minted was: 18,614,000 kroner. Gold coin which is not in circulation excluded.

There is no Government paper money.

The 'Norges Bank' is a joint-stock bank, of which, however, a considerable part is owned by the State. The bank is, besides, governed by laws enacted by the State, and its directors are elected by the Storting except the president and vice-president of the head office, who are nominated by the King. It is the only bank in Norway that is authorised to issue bank notes for circulation. The balance-sheets of the bank for February 22, 1934, show the following figures: bullion, 118,324,000 kroner; gold abroad, 16,379,000 kroner; notes in circulation, 305,320,000 kroner (the issue of notes allowed was 368,369,000 kroner); deposits, 65,526,000 kroner; loans and discounts 280,020,000 kroner; foreign bonds and domestic securities, 30,336,000 kroner.

The 'Kongeriget Norges Hypothekbank' was established in 1852 by the State to meet the demand for loans on mortgage. The capital of the bank is mostly furnished by the State, and amounted to 67,000,000 kroner in 1932,

At the end of 1931 the total amount of bonds issued was 485,969,000 kroner. The loans on mortgage amounted to 471,851,000 kroner.

The Norwegian 'Arbeiderbruk og Boligbank' was established in 1903 by the State to meet the demand for loans on mortgage from labourers and small proprietors. The capital of the bank is furnished by the State, and amounted to 7,200,000 kroner in 1932. On June 30, 1932, the total amount of bonds issued was 29,209,000 kroner. The loans on mortgage amounted to 25,112,000 kroner. This bank is in liquidation, its business is little by little being taken over by the 'Norske Stats Smaabruk og Boligbank,' which was established in 1917. Its capital amounted to 23,000,000 kroner in 1932; on June 30, 1932, the total amount of bonds issued was 114,423,000 kroner. The loans on mortgage amounted to 199,875,000 kroner.

Further, several private credit associations are authorised to meet the demand for loans on mortgage. In 1932, there were 6 such associations in operation. The total amount of bonds issued by these credit associations at the end of 1932 was 105,791,000 kroner, and the total amount of loans on mortgage was 103,880,000 kroner.

In the year 1922, Den Norske Stats Fisherbank (established by law 1919) started with the purpose of making loans to fishermen for fishing vessels and fishing outfits, etc. The capital of the bank is furnished by the State and amounted to 6,500,000 kroner in 1932. On June 30, 1932, the total amount of bonds issued was 9,900,000 kroner, and the total amount of loans was 7,688,000 kroner.

In the year 1926, the Norges Kommunalbank was established by law for the purpose of making loans to communities. The bank began its operations on September 1, 1927. On Dec. 31, 1932, the capital and reserve of the bank was 36,766,000 kroner, of which 27,300,000 were furnished by the State. The total amount of bonds issued was 209,265,000 kroner, and the total amount of loans was 190,637,000 kroner.

At the end of 1932, there were 133 private joint-stock banks reported, of which, however, 28 were in liquidation. The total amount of capital and funds possessed by joint-stock banks was 241,947,000 kroner (capital 183,742,000, funds 58,205,000), of which 241,463,000 kroner belonged to banks in free operation. Deposits amounted to 1,245,525,000 kroner, of which 101,105,000 kroner were deposits on demand, and 1,144,420,000 kroner deposits on time; 851,568,000 kroner of the total amount of deposits were deposited at banks in free operation.

The number of savings-banks at the end of 1932 was 617, of which 7 were in liquidation. The total amount of the funds of the savings-banks amounted to 233,818,000 kroner, and total deposits 2,114,343,000 kroner, of which 15,348,000 kroner were on demand, and 2,098,995,000 kroner on time. The number of depositors was 2,163,756.

As from January 1, 1925, all private joint-stock banks must be chartered by royal licence. Their operations are regulated, to a considerable extent, by the law, and controlled by the Ministry of Finance.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

By a treaty signed October 16, 1875, Norway adopted the same monetary system as Sweden and Denmark. The Norwegian krone, of 100 øre, is of the value of 1s. 1½d. at par, or about 18 kroner to the pound sterling. The gold 20-kroner piece weighs 8·960572 grammes, ·900 fine containing 8·0645 grammes of fine gold. The standard of value is gold. National Bank notes of 5, 10, 50, 100, 500, and 1,000 kroner are legal means of payment, and the Bank is ordinarily bound to exchange them for gold on presentation. By a Royal Decree of September 27, 1931, the gold standard was suspended and there was placed an embargo on gold.

The metric system of weights and measures is obligatory.

SPITZBERGEN, BEAR ISLAND, AND ADJACENT ISLANDS (SVALBARD).

An archipelago situated between 10° and 35° longitude east of Greenwich and between 74° and 81° latitude north. The distance from Norway to Bear Island is 240 miles, and to Spitzbergen (South Cape) 360 miles.

It is claimed that in all probability the archipelago was discovered by Norwegians in 1194 and re-discovered by the Dutch navigator Barents in 1596. The English explorer Henry Hudson visited Spitzbergen in 1607. In the 17th century a very lucrative whale-hunting was started and for some time there were Dutch, British, and Norwegian claims to sovereignty and quarrels about the hunting-places. But when in the 18th century the whale-hunting ended, the question of the sovereignty of Spitzbergen lost its actuality, and it was not until the beginning of this century that the question was again raised, owing to the discovery and exploitation of rich coalfields. It was settled by a Treaty, signed on February 9, 1920, at Paris, in which Norway's sovereignty over the archipelago was recognised. On August 14, 1925, the archipelago was officially taken possession of by Norway.

Total area about 24,294 square miles. The chief islands are West Spitzbergen or Mainland, North East Land (about half the former), Prince Charles Foreland, Edge Island, Barents Land, King Karl's Land, Hope Island, and Bear Island (area, 8,616 sq. miles). The climate is essentially arctic, tempered by the Gulf Stream.

Coal is the principal product. There are six mining camps inhabited all the year round. The largest is Longyearbyen in Advent Bay, 550 inhabitants on December 1, 1930. In 1930, 195,530, in 1931, 206,345, in 1932, 255,000 tons of coal were exported.

U.K. imports from Spitzbergen in 1933 (Board of Trade returns), 836*l.*; U.K. exports to Spitzbergen, 538*l.*

JAN MAYEN ISLAND.

This is a bleak and desolate island between Greenland and Northern Norway, and about 300 miles north of Iceland. It is 34 miles long and its greatest breadth is 9 miles. It is of volcanic origin and is mountainous, Beerenberg in the north reaching a height of 8,350 ft. It is uninhabited, but is occasionally visited by seal hunters, whalers, and fishermen. In 1921 the Norwegian Meteorological Institute established a weather forecast station there, and the decision of the Norwegian Government to annex the island was largely due to this action.

The island was discovered by Henry Hudson in 1607, and it was first named Hudson's Tutches (Touches). It was again and again rediscovered and renamed. Its present name was taken from that of a Dutch navigator of the early 17th century, whose claim to have visited the island cannot be substantiated. For the period of a year (1882-83) an Austrian station for scientific observations was maintained there. On May 8, 1929, Jan Mayen Island was officially proclaimed as incorporated in the Norwegian State, and at the same time the manager of the meteorological station on the island was invested with magisterial authority. The final relation to Norway was settled by law of February 27, 1930. Norwegian sovereignty over the island has been officially recognised by the British Government.

BOUVET ISLAND.

This uninhabited island in the Southern Atlantic was discovered in 1739 by a Frenchman, Pierre Bouvet, but no flag was hoisted till, in 1825, Captain Norris raised the Union Jack. A neighbouring island, Thompson Island, has been reported but its existence is seriously doubted. In 1928 a diplomatic dispute arose between Great Britain and Norway as to the claim to Bouvet, particularly in connection with the occupation since December, 1927, by a Norwegian whaling expedition, and the Norwegian decision to erect a wireless station on the island, and Great Britain decided in November, 1928, to waive its claim. By law of February 27, 1930, it is stated that Bouvet Island belongs to Norway as a dependency.

PETER I. ISLAND.

This uninhabited island in the Antarctic Ocean was discovered in 1821 by the Russian explorer, Admiral von Bellinghousen, who got a sight of it at a distance. The first landing was made in 1929 by a Norwegian expedition which hoisted the Norwegian flag and took possession of the island. On May 1, 1931, Peter I. Island was proclaimed as incorporated in the Norwegian State. By a law of March 24, 1933, it is stated that the island belongs to Norway as a dependency.

PANAMA.

(REPÚBLICA DE PANAMA.)

Government.—Panama, formerly a department of the Republic of Colombia, asserted its independence on November 3, 1903, and the de facto Government was on November 13 recognised by the Government of the United States, and soon afterwards by the other Powers. In 1914 Colombia, in the Treaty of Bogota entered into with the United States, agreed to recognize the independence of Panama. This Treaty was ratified by the United States and Colombia in 1921. On May 8, 1924, a Protocol was signed at Washington by the Panama and Colombian Plenipotentiaries by which diplomatic relations between the two countries were established.

The Constitution, adopted February 13, 1904, and amended in 1918 and again in 1928, provides for a National Assembly of 32 members elected for four years (one for every 15,000 inhabitants), which meets biennially on September 1, and for a President of the Republic, elected by direct vote for 4 years, and not eligible for the succeeding term.

President of the Republic.—Dr. Harmodio Arias. Elected June 5, 1932. Assumed office, October 1, 1932.

There are three Vice-Presidents, chosen by the National Assembly, and a Cabinet of five Ministers.

Area and Population.—Extreme length is about 480 miles; breadth between 37 and 110 miles; coast line, 477 miles on the Atlantic and 767 on the Pacific; total area is 82,380 square miles; population according to the census of 1930 (excluding the Canal Zone), 467,459, of whom 78,813 were white, 69,583 Negroes, 42,897 Indians, 4,138 Orientals and 249,583 mestizos or mixed. There are approximately 40,000 British subjects on the Isthmus, chiefly coloured, from the West Indies. There are 9 provinces with populations (1930) as follows (the capitals in brackets):—Bocas del Toro (Bocas del Toro), 15,851; Coclé (Penonomé), 48,244; Colón (Colón), 57,161; Chiriquí (David), 76,918; Los Santos (Las Tablas), 41,218; Panama (Panama City), 114,103; Veraguas (Santiago), 69,543; Herrera (Chitré), 31,030; Darién (La Palma), 13,891. The capital, Panama City, founded in 1518, on the Pacific coast, had (1930) 74,409 inhabitants, and Colón on the Atlantic coast (1930), 29,769. Smaller ports on the Pacific are Aguadulce, Pedregal, Montijo, Puerto Mutis, and Puerto Armuelles; on the Atlantic, Bocas del Toro, Portobello, and Mandinga.

Religion.—The religion of the country is Catholicism, but other denominations are represented and have a fair following. In the Canal Zone Protestantism chiefly prevails.

Education.—Elementary education is obligatory for all children from 7 to 15 years of age. The Government maintains 598 primary schools throughout the nine provinces and 57,592 children (excluding children enrolled in the Canal Zone public schools) received free instruction in 1929–30 from 1,688 teachers. Only 65 primary schools are in cities; the remaining 533 are in rural districts. The co-educational system has been adopted in all the schools of the Republic. Panama has a college for higher instruction (Instituto Nacional), with 626 students in 1930, a normal school for girls (576), a professional school for young women, and a school of arts and crafts or trades for boys from 14 years of age. Secondary, vocational and normal schools enrolled 2,175 students in 1929–30. In addition there are about 71 private institutions. Panama City is to be the site of the Bolivarian University, the formation of which was agreed upon on June 22, 1926, as an expression of Pan-American solidarity; it is to be supported by contributions from Colombia, Ecuador, Panama, Peru, and others.

Justice.—The laws were codified and promulgated in 1917 and 1918. These codes—civil, penal, commercial, judicial, administrative, fiscal, and mining—are designed to meet modern conditions, and replace the old Colombian laws formerly in use. The death penalty has been abolished. The Supreme Court consists of 5 justices appointed by the executive for 10 years; magistrates are similarly appointed for similar terms.

Finance.—All the revenue collected on importations into the Republic belongs to the Panama Government, but the United States reserve the right to import supplies of all descriptions required for canal construction, maintenance and protection and for the use of their employees free of all taxes.

Expenditures and revenues are on a biennial basis, for two years ending June 30 through 1929–31, ending February 28 for 1931–33, and from January 1, 1933, to December 31, 1934. For recent years budget estimates have been as follows (1 balboa = 1 dollar U.S.):—

—	1925–27	1927–29	1929–31	1931–33	1933–34
	Balboas	Balboas	Balboas	Balboas	Balboas
Revenue . . .	12,258,700	14,302,488	17,031,908	19,961,353	11,848,945
Expenditure . .	12,258,700	14,302,488	17,031,908	18,500,984	11,848,945

The revenue includes an annual subsidy of 250,000 dollars from the United States so long as the latter maintains and operates the canal; in 1934 Panama rejected the payment tendered of 250,000 "paper" dollars and demanded payment in gold.

The Public Debt on April 30, 1932, amounted to 18,076,706 balboas or dollars. The foreign debt consists of bonds to the value of 15,617,000 dollars issued in the United States (about 2,000,000 dollars in Canada) for railway, road construction, and public works. The internal debt amounted to 2,459,706 dollars. In addition the Government has a contingent liability for about 4,000,000 dollars borrowed in the United States and Canada by the Banco Nacional and lent out on the security of real property in the Republic. Debt service in 1931–33 required 3,840,000 dollars.

The Republic has no army or navy to support. The National Police Force numbers 60 officers and 630 men.

Production.—Of the whole area about five-eighths are unoccupied, and of the remainder only a small part is properly cultivated. Immigration of European settlers is discouraged. The most important product is bananas, the exports of which, chiefly to the United States, account for two-thirds of total exports; in 1932, 1,422,929 stems were exported. Other products are cocoa, coconuts, and ivory nuts. Caoutchouc (about 180 tons annually) is collected by the Indians of the Cordillera, or is obtained from trees planted by Europeans near the coast. Coffee (about 500,000 bushes) is grown in the province of Chiriqui, near the Costa Rican frontier. Exports, 1932, 80,000 kilos. Other products of the soil of Panama are mahogany and other woods, copaiba, samzaparilla and ipecacuanha. The country has great timber resources. Sugar (about 90,000 bags of 100 lbs. each produced annually) and tobacco growing are assuming importance. Cattle rearing (about 350,000 head in 1930) is carried on successfully, and hides form an important article of export.

Pearl fishing is carried on at the Pearl Islands in the Gulf of Panama. Turtle-shell is also exported to a considerable amount.

Commerce, Shipping, Communications.—The imports and exports (excluding the Canal Zone) for 4 fiscal years ending June 30 and for the calendar years 1931 and 1932 are shown as follows (1 balboa = 1 dollar, U.S.):—

Year	Imports	Exports	Year	Imports	Exports
	Balboas	Balboas		Balboas	Balboas
1926-27	14 516,000	3 785,660	1929-30	18,337,478	3,408,201
1927-28	16,182,000	4,380,129	1931	13,492,459	2,721,465
1928-29	19,277,938	4,262,124	1932	8,552,610	2,061,275

Of the total imports about 64 per cent. come from the United States (exclusive of canal materials) and 8 per cent. from Great Britain. The principal exports in 1932 were bananas (1,727,779 dollars), cacao (85,383 dollars), coconuts (103,367 dollars), hides, mother of pearl, ivory, nuts, gum, and tortoise shell.

Total trade between Panama and the United Kingdom (Board of Trade Returns) for 5 years:—

	1929	1930	1931	1932	1933
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports from Panama to U.K.	41,924	39,818	255,489	79,721	21,806
Exports to Panama from U.K.	431,959	614,290	300,605	271,798	237,12
Re-exports to Panama from U.K.	26,327	14,029	13,891	12,727	9,97

The Isthmus on both sides is in communication with European and American countries by several lines of steamers. All the maritime traffic (international commerce) for Colón and Panama now runs through the Canal Zone ports of Cristobal and Balboa; Bocas del Toro remains for the provincial trade. The Government (1930) appointed a commission to study the possibility of establishing free commercial zones, making Panama a general distribution centre for pan-American trade. The port of Puerto Armuelles, opened in 1928, provides an outlet for bananas from plantations in the neighbourhood. Shipping under Panamanian registry totalled (1933) 84 vessels of 287,162 gross tons.

The Panama Railroad, which connects Panama City on the Pacific with Colón on the Atlantic, is the principal railway in the country. It is 47.61 miles long and, with the exception of the termini at Panama and Colón, passes through Canal Zone territory. As there is no road across the Isthmus, and as most vessels unload their cargo at Cristobal (Colón), the greater portion of the merchandise destined for Panama City is brought by the Panama Railroad. In the Province of Chiriqui there is a narrow gauge railway, 32 miles long, connecting the port of Pedregal with Boquete, and passing through David, the capital. Between David and Concepcion there is a line 18 miles long, which has now been extended to the Port of Puerto Armuelles.

A central highway system from the capital, Panama City, west to the Costa Rican frontier is under construction; the 315-mile section connecting Panama City with David, the capital of the Province of Chiriqui, was opened in March, 1931. Road building is handicapped by the extraordinary number of bridges required by the contour of the country.

Commercial aviation rapidly developed in Panama during 1929. Daily air service, in both directions, connects Colón and Panama, while air mail and passenger services exist between the Isthmus and countries of South, Central and North America.

There are telegraph cables from Panama to North American and South American ports, and from Colón to the United States and Europe. There are 189 Government telephone stations, 33 telegraph offices, and ten radio stations, seven of which are operated by the Navy Department of the United States.

Money and Credit.—In 1930, the old Panamanian silver currency to a value of approximately 272,000 dollars was withdrawn from circulation. A portion of these coins was used in minting new coins of half the weight and size of the old ones, but of twice the value. The present monetary unit is the Balboa which is of the same size and fineness as the United States silver dollar and is equivalent in value to that coin; 200,000 of these coins were minted and placed in circulation in 1931. Other silver coins are the half-balboa (of 12.5 grammes .900 fine, and equal to 50 cents., U.S.); the quarter and tenth of a balboa pieces; and nickel coins of 5 and 2½ cents. There is no paper currency other than U.S. notes. Altogether 500,000 balboas of the new Panamanian silver currency had (1932) been placed in circulation.

Part of the 10,000,000 dollars (canal money) paid by the United States has been applied to the establishment of a real estate loan bank, part to public improvements in the several provinces, and 6,000,000 dollars have been invested in the United States, particularly in New York real estate.

English weights and measures are in general use as well as those of the metric system.

The Panama Canal and the Canal Zone.

On November 18, 1903, a treaty between the United States and Panama was signed, providing facilities for the construction and maintenance of the inter-oceanic Canal. In this treaty, Panama granted in perpetuity the use of a zone (Canal Zone) five miles wide on each side of the Canal route, and within this zone the exclusive control for police, judicial, sanitary and other purposes. For the needs of the Panama Canal other territory was ceded and, for defence, the coastline of the zone and the islands in Panama Bay were also ceded. The cities of Panama and Colón remain under the authority of Panama, but complete jurisdiction was granted to the United States in both the cities and in their harbours in all that relates to sanitation and quarantine. In return for these grants the United States paid 10,000,000 dollars and is paying 250,000 dollars yearly, beginning in 1913. The treaty was ratified on February 26, 1904, and in July, 1904, the agreement for the provisional delimitation of the boundaries of the United States territory on the Isthmus was signed. A treaty to cede further territory, particularly in Colón, to the Canal Zone, and to bind Panama to consider herself joint-belligerent with the United States in the event of war, was rejected by the National Assembly in 1927, but discussion of it has revived.

Governor of Canal Zone.—Lieut.-Col. J. L. Schley. Appointed October 21, 1932.

The area of the Canal Zone, including land and water, but not including the water area within the 3-mile limit from the Atlantic and Pacific ends, is 552·8 square miles. The area of Gatun Lake, when its surface is at its normal elevation of 85 feet above sea level, is 163·4 square miles.

The Canal has a summit elevation of 85 feet above the sea. It is 50·72 statute miles in length from deep water in the Caribbean Sea to deep water in the Pacific Ocean. The distance from deep water to the shore line in Limon Bay is about 5 miles, and from the Pacific shore line to deep water is about 5½ miles; hence the length of the Canal from shore to shore is approximately 40½ miles. The channel ranges in width from 300 to 1,000 feet. The average bottom width of the channel in this project is 649 feet, and the minimum width is 300 feet. The Canal has a minimum depth of 41 feet. The average time of passage through the Canal is from 7 to 8 hours. The record passage is 4 hours 10 minutes. The maximum traffic capacity of the Canal is estimated at 48 ships of usual size in a day or about 17,000 in a year.

The Gatun dam along the crest is 8,400 feet long, including the spillway, or over 1½ miles, and ½ mile wide at its greatest width. The crest of the dam is at an elevation of 105 feet above sea level, or 20 feet above the normal level of Gatun Lake, and 100 feet wide. The width of the dam at the normal water level of the lake, i.e., 85 feet above sea level, is about 388 feet. The length of the cut through the Continental divide (Culebra, now Gaillard Cut) is 8 statute miles. The minimum bottom width of the cut is 300 feet. The bottom is 40 feet above sea level, giving a normal depth of 45 feet.

The civil population of the Canal Zone in June, 1933, was 31,839, of whom 8,654 were Americans. Of this population, 2,520 Americans and 5,071 of other nationalities (chiefly British West Indian negroes) were employed by The Panama Canal and Railroad. The total force employed July 1, 1933, was 3,028 Americans and 9,575 coloured aliens, many of whom did not reside in the Canal Zone. No land in the Zone is privately owned and the Zone is, in effect, a Government owned reservation dedicated to the operation, maintenance and protection of the Canal and its appurtenances. However, building sites and agricultural lands are licensed to responsible companies and individuals.

The total capital investment for the construction, operation and maintenance of the Canal to June 30, 1933, totalled 539,200,059 dollars, and the net revenues from tolls and other sources since it was opened to navigation have totalled 172,799,586 dollars. The current expenses of operation and maintenance, inclusive of depreciation and amortisations during the fiscal year 1932-33 were 9,155,672 dollars, and the gross Canal revenue was 19,931,173 dollars; gross business receipts, 16,583,950 dollars. Computing interest at 3 per cent. on the capital investment of 533,106,009 dollars (on July 1, 1932), there was a deficit of 4,081,971 dollars for Canal operations during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1933.

The Canal was informally opened to commerce by the passage of the 9,000 ton steamer Ancon on August 15, 1914, with specially invited guests. The journey was made without mishap in ten hours. It was formally opened to commerce by proclamation of the President of the United States on July 12, 1920. The Canal has been in use since 1914, except for various short periods in 1915, and from September 18, 1915, to April 15, 1916, when the channel was entirely blocked by slides in the banks of Gaillard Cut. There has been no interruption since January 11, 1917.

Particulars of the traffic through the Canal for the last 6 fiscal years are given as follows:—

Fiscal year ending June 30	Northbound (Pacific to Atlantic)		Southbound (Atlantic to Pacific)		Total		Tolls levied (in dollars)

PARAGUAY.

(REPÚBLICA DEL PARAGUAY.)

Constitution and Government.

THE Republic of Paraguay gained its independence from Spanish rule in 1811, and after a short government by two consuls, the supreme power was seized, in 1815, by Dr. José Gaspar Rodríguez Francia, who exercised autocratic sway as dictator till his death, September 20, 1840. Subsequently, in 1844, a new Constitution was adopted providing for the election of a President. President Lopez, in 1864, began a dispute with the Government of Brazil, which resulted in the entry of a Brazilian army, united with forces of the Argentine Confederation and Uruguay, into the Republic, June, 1865. After a struggle of five years, in which Paraguay lost probably 500,000 men, Lopez was killed at Cerro Corá, March 1, 1870, in the last battle of the war.

The Constitution of 1870 provides for a Congress of two Houses, a Senate (now of 20 members) elected for six years (one-third every two years), and a Chamber of Deputies (now of 40), elected for four years (one-half every two years). Both are elected directly by the people, the former in the ratio of one representative per 8,000 to 12,000 inhabitants, and the latter one to 6,000 inhabitants, though in the case of the sparsely populated divisions a greater ratio is permitted. Voters are all males 18 years of age or older. A Permanent Committee of two senators and four deputies sits when Congress is not in session.

The President is elected for four years; until 1910 he took office on November 25, but by legislative decree of August 8, 1912, the date was altered to August 15. The following is a list of Presidents since 1898, with the date on which each took office:—

Don Emilio Aceval—Nov. 25, 1898.¹
 Don Hector Carvallo—Jan. 9, 1902.²
 Don Juan Escurrea—Nov. 25, 1902.
 Don Juan Gaona—Oct. 18, 1904.³
 Dr. Don Cecilio Baez—Dec. 8, 1905.³
 Dr. Don Benigno Ferreira—Nov. 25, 1906.
 Don Emiliano Gonzalez Navero—July 5, 1908.³
 Don Manuel Gondra—Nov. 25, 1910.
 Col. Don Albino Jara—Jan. 11, 1911.³
 Don Liberato Marcial Rojas—July 6, 1911.³
 Dr. Don Pedro Peña—Feb. 29, 1912.³
 Don Emiliano Gonzalez Navero—Mar. 22, 1912.³

Don Eduardo Schaerer—Aug. 15, 1912.
 Dr. Don Manuel Franco—Aug. 15, 1916.⁴
 Dr. Don José Montero—June 7, 1916.⁴
 Don Manuel Gondra—Aug. 15, 1920.
 Dr. Don Felix Paiva—Oct. 31, 1921.⁴
 Dr. Don Eusebio Ayala—Nov. 3, 1921.⁴
 Dr. Don Eligio Ayala—April 1, 1923.⁴
 Dr. Don Luis Riart—April 12, 1924.⁴
 Dr. Don Eligio Ayala—Aug. 15, 1924.
 Dr. Don José Guggiari—Aug. 15, 1928.
 Don Emiliano Gonzalez Navero—Oct. 26, 1931.⁴
 Dr. Don José Guggiari—Jan. 28, 1932.

² Succeeded as Vice-President.

³ Provisional, i.e. a forcible intruder.

⁴ Died June 7, 1919.

The President has a cabinet of five ministers, presiding over the departments of the Interior; of Finance; of Justice, Worship and Public Instruction; of War and Marine; and of Foreign Affairs. The President receives a salary of 30,000 pesos per month, and each of the ministers 15,000 pesos.

President of the Republic.—Dr. Eusebio Ayala. Elected June 12, 1932; assumed office, August 15, 1932.

The country is divided into 2 sections: the 'Oriental,' east of Paraguay river, and the 'Occidental,' west of the same river. The Oriental section is divided into 12 departments, subdivided into 104 'partidos'; the Occidental section (the Chaco) is divided into 3 'comandancias militares.'

The 12 departments are: Concepción, San Pedro, Caraguatay, Villarrica, Yhú, Caazapa, Encarnación, San Ignacio, Quiindy, Villeta, Paraguari and Pilar. The civil authority is exercised by a comisario de policía in each of the departments, who is subject to the control of Government jefes de policía, or delegados civiles, 9 in number. The capital, Asunción, forms a district subdivided into 'secciones policiales.'

Area and Population.

The approximate area of Paraguay proper or 'oriental section,' which is situated between the rivers Paraguay and Alto Paraná, is estimated at 159,834 square kilometres, or 61,647 square miles. An area officially stated to be 100,000 square miles in extent, lying between the rivers Paraguay and Pilcomayo, known as the Chaco, is claimed by Paraguay, whose rights, however, are disputed by Bolivia. Serious friction developed in December, 1928, and the two countries broke off diplomatic relations, which were not fully resumed until May, 1930, only to be broken off again in July, 1931. Despite efforts of neutral countries to induce the parties to sign a pact of non-aggression, a state of open warfare developed in September, 1932, which lasted through 1933, interrupted by a brief truce ending January 8, 1934.

In 1932 the total population was estimated at 870,197 (including 67,500 in the Chaco, of whom Indians are roughly estimated at 15,000), with a density of 5 per square mile. The population of Paraguay (oriental section) consists of people of mestizo (mixed white and Indian), Indian, and European (chiefly Spanish), blood, the latter largely predominating. There are practically no negroes in Paraguay. On December 31, 1932, the urban population of the capital, Asunción (founded 1537), was 94,187, or about one-ninth of the total population; including the surrounding district, it was 228,600 or over one-fourth; other towns, as estimated in 1926, are Villarrica, 26,000; Concepción, 11,000; Encarnación, 7,500; San Pedro, 8,700; Luque, 13,000; Carapeguá, 12,000; Paraguari, 10,000; Villa del Pilar, 6,000. These figures include the surrounding districts in each case, and are estimated.

Paraguayans are bi-lingual, speaking both Spanish and Guaraní, the language of the now extinct Guaraní Indians, who held the country at the time of the Spanish conquest.

Immigration from 1905 up to January, 1933, totals 20,187, including 3,891 Mennonite farmers from Canada, Russia and Poland. Most of the immigrants settle in the 27 state-aided colonies. Only 508 immigrants arrived in 1932. Very little land is now national property, most of it having been transferred to private ownership, much of it in very large tracts.

Religion, Education, and Justice.

The Roman Catholic Church is the established religion of the State, but the free exercise of other religions is permitted. The seat of the Paraguayan Archbishopric is Asunción; there are Bishoprics at Villarrica and Concepción. Roman Catholic and other religious marriage ceremonies are allowed, but the civil ceremony alone gives validity to a marriage.

Education is free and nominally compulsory, but schools are not everywhere available. In 1932 there were 1,577 Government and private primary schools with 104,994 pupils and 2,260 teachers; 53 private schools had (1932) 172 teachers and 4,495 pupils. The National College (i.e., high school) at Asunción had (1931) 1,121 students. There is also a University which had in 1932, 469 students and 36 professors; complete autonomy in appropriate spheres of university affairs was granted in 1929 to a body including students, alumni and faculties. The 7 normal schools had (1932) 724 students.

Justice is administered by a Supreme Court, two courts of appeal (one for civil causes and another for commercial and criminal causes), a court of jurymen, 17 judges of First Instance, and (at the capital) 3 police magistrates. The functions of magistrates are exercised in the provinces by 139 jueces de paz (all laymen), who are at the same time registrars of births, deaths, and marriages.

Finance.

The estimated revenue and expenditure for six fiscal years, ending August 31, are given as follows (the gold peso, like the Argentine gold peso, equals 96·5 cents. (U.S.); roughly 5 gold pesos or 213 paper pesos = £1):—

Year	Revenue	Expenditure	Year	Revenue	Expenditure
	Gold pesos	Gold pesos		Gold pesos	Gold pesos
1926-27	6,103,883	6,103,753	1929-30	6,306,227	7,082,944
1927-28	5,187,469	5,147,668	1930-31	6,453,240	6,445,945
1928-29	5,950,181	5,950,135	1931-32	5,704,080	5,703,004

Internal revenue, 1930-31, amounted to 1,633,005 gold pesos (239,093*l.*); customs, 2,974,225 gold pesos (435,465*l.*).

On November 30, 1932, the external debt of Paraguay was 3,345,742 gold pesos; the consolidated internal debt was 3,174,512 gold pesos; the floating debt was 971,773 gold pesos. By an agreement reached September, 1924, Paraguay has resumed payment of interest on her sterling loan of 1871-72 (476,290*l.* in 1931), and of 4,315*l.* annually in reduction of the principal, and on that of 1915 (209,900*l.*), on which she pays annually 10,861*l.* in reduction of the principal.

Defence.

The military establishment is about 100 officers and 2,800 men, distributed at 5 centres. The permanent organisations comprise 4 regiments of infantry, 1 regiment of cavalry, and 2 batteries of artillery. In the event of war service is compulsory in the active army for 2 years between the ages of 18 and 20; between 20 and 29 in the reserve of active army; between 29 and 39 with national guard, and between 39 and 45 in the territorial guard.

The navy consists at present of a flotilla of 2 new armoured river gun-boats of 835 tons (built in Italy) and 3 small converted merchant vessels, river craft armed with modern guns. The largest of the latter is about 200 tons gross register. The budget expenditure on national defence in 1930-31 amounted to 67,978,222 paper pesos.

Production and Industry.

The soil of Paraguay is productive and the climatic conditions favourable to the cultivation of many sub-tropical products. Much of the country is admirably suited to pastoral purposes. It is estimated that there are about 4,000,000 head of cattle in the country. There are four packing plants, encouraged by the Government; hides, jerked beef, corned beef and other animal products are exported. Annual output of hides is about 250,000 wet and 100,000 dry hides, plus about 120,000 hides from the packing plants. Yerba maté, or strong-flavoured Paraguay tea, which is a natural product of the virgin forests (covering from 25,000 to 30,000 square miles) as well as a plantation product, is one of the chief articles of export (6,269 metric tons in 1932). Tobacco is also grown (12,000 metric tons in 1932). Timber resources of excellent quality are enormous. Paraguay produces in the Chaco region quebracho logs, of which 279 tons were exported in 1932 and quebracho extract; exports, 49,604 tons in 1932. Fruit-growing, especially oranges, is general; exports in 1932, 30,873,000 oranges and 10,303,000 tangerines. Yaguaron is the chief source of petit-grain oil, distilled from the leaves of a bitter orange tree and used in the manufacture of many perfumes. About 80 metric tons are yearly exported, chiefly to France and Germany. The total area devoted to sugar cultivation (largely for the manufacture of spirit) is about 35,000 acres; sugar production in 1932, 7,693 tons. There are 10 sugar factories in Paraguay, the most important of which is at Tebicuari. Some rice is grown—4,302 tons in 1932. Banana growing has started. Roots (chiefly mandioca, sweet potatoes, and ground-nuts), &c., are grown for local consumption, but agriculture is primitive. About 90,000 acres are planted to maize; output (1932) 63,075 tons. The cultivation of cotton of the American uplands type is encouraged by the authorities; it matures early and reaches the market when the American crop is scarce. Labour shortage is the main difficulty. In 1931-32 the acreage under cotton was 27,264 acres; production, 8,141 metric tons; ginned cotton, 2,423 metric tons. Lace-making, of the 'spider-web' variety, is a thriving industry.

Iron, manganese, copper, and other minerals are encountered in abundance. The Ibicui iron mines were worked as early as 1863. The Quiquió and Ibicui manganese mines contain ore deposits estimated at 60,000,000 tons. Copper has also been found at San Miguel and Quiquió.

Commerce.

The following is the value, in gold pesos, of the imports and exports (at par 5 gold pesos = £1):—

	1928	1929	1930	1931	1932
	Gold pesos	Gold pesos	Gold pesos	Gold pesos	Gold pesos
Imports	14,305,119	13,850,095	15,139,359	10,080,732	6,417,646
Exports	15,886,208	13,459,766	14,176,453	12,856,585	12,872,945

Exports in 1932 included hides (300,614), corned beef, meat extract, and cotton (2,873 tons). The most important imports are cotton and woollen textiles, wheat, flour, and petrol. Of the total exports in 1932, goods to the value of 6,633,750 gold pesos, or about 51 per cent. of the total, went to Argentina, whence goods to the value of 5,510,713 gold pesos were re-exported. Imports from Argentina, 1932, 2,487,293 gold pesos; United States, 823,343; United Kingdom, 766,231.

Communications.

Asunción, the chief port, is 950 miles from the sea; the Paraguay river is navigable up to Villa Concepción for vessels of 12-foot draft. Smaller vessels navigate its 1,800 miles. In 1932, 3,730 vessels, with an aggregate tonnage of 305,498 tons, entered at the port of Asunción, and 4,390 with a tonnage of 336,330 cleared. The principal company engaged in the river service on the Paraguay and the Alto Paraná is the Argentine Navigation Company, Ltd., the controlling interest in which is British.

There is a British-owned railway (the Paraguay Central Railway) from Asunción to Encarnación, on the Rio Alto Paraná. This railway has a total main-track length of 232 miles. There is now a through train service without break of bulk from Asunción to Buenos Aires. El Ferrocarril del Norte, owned by a Paraguayan company, runs from Concepción as far as Horqueta, a distance of 83 miles. This road is projected to run as far as Pedro Juan Caballero on the Brazilian border. The Azucarera Paraguaya, in the Department of Ibytymi, has 15 miles of its line open to the public. Total length of railways, 669 miles. The country roads are in general mere bullock tracks, and transport is difficult.

The national telegraph (110 offices) connects Asunción with Corrientes and Posadas in the Argentine Republic, and thus with the outside world; total, 2,944 miles. Telephone lines, 1932, 4,636 miles. Long-distance telephone communication with Posadas was established in 1932. Wireless telegraph stations have been erected at Asunción, Concepción, Paraguari, Bahía Negra, and Puerto Casado. Paraguay joined the postal union in 1881; the number of post offices is 257.

Money and Credit.

The unit of value is the gold peso, which is based on the Argentine gold peso; at par, it is equal to 96·5 cents. (U.S.). Actually there is no gold or silver current, and the paper peso, which is roughly equivalent to one English penny, is the only circulating medium with the exception of nickel coins which, in the shape of one peso, two pesos and fifty cents pieces, form a small part of the currency. One gold peso = 42·61 paper pesos. Business and governmental transactions are frequently stated in both gold and paper pesos. The total paper currency in circulation on December 31, 1932, was 196,510,000 paper pesos, guaranteed by Conversion Fund and deposits in other banks; total stock of gold, 749,000 U.S. dollars.

From 1923, when finances were reorganized on the lines suggested by an American financial adviser, the State Bank's Exchange Office, with its separate capital of 1,000,000 gold pesos (Oficina de Cambios) maintained the exchange at 18·75 Paraguayan paper pesos to the Argentine paper peso and 42·61 Paraguayan pesos to the Argentine gold peso; the world-wide exchange difficulties of 1932 led to joint control with Argentine of the country's foreign exchange resources.

The principal banks in Paraguay are a branch of the Bank of London and South America, Ltd.; the Banco Germanico de la America del Sud, the Banco del Hogar Argentino, and the Banco Agrícola. The last mentioned is practically a department of the Government, charged with agricultural development. Some contraction in banking facilities is taking place; commercial banks which reported on December 31, 1930, combined capital and reserves of 1,019,481 gold pesos, had on March 31, 1932, capital and reserves of 946,467 gold pesos.

Weights and Measures.

The metric system was officially adopted on January 1, 1901.

PERSIA.

(IRÂN.)

Reigning King (Shah).

On October 31, 1925, the Majlis, 'in the name of the national welfare,' proclaimed the deposition of the Shah, Sultan Ahmad, and the overthrow of the Kajar dynasty. On December 13 the Constituent Assembly elected Riza Khan Pahlevi Shah of Persia, and made the Crown of Darius hereditary in his family. On December 15 the new Shah took the oath to defend the Constitution, and on December 16 he was publicly proclaimed. On Feb. 25, 1926, he appointed his eldest son, Shahpur Mohammed Riza, Valiahd (Crown Prince) of Persia. Riza Shah was crowned on April 25, 1926.

Constitution and Government.

The form of government in Persia up to the year 1906 was, in its most important features, similar to that of Turkey. The Shah, within the limitations imposed by the Moslem religion, was an absolute ruler, but had to reckon with the power of the leading doctors of law (Mujtahid), who resided at Najaf and Kerbela in Mesopotamia. Unlike the Sultan of Turkey he had no religious standing. In 1905, the Persian people demanded representative institutions, and in January, 1906, the Shah gave his consent to the establishment of a National Assembly, or 'Majlis,' which sat from October, 1906, to June, 1908, and drew up a 'Constitution' which received the Shah's approval on December 30, 1906. Each term of the Majlis lasts 2 years. The new Majlis was opened by the Shah on March 15, 1933.

The government of the country is in the hands of the Cabinet, appointed as follows (September 17, 1933):—

Prime Minister.—Mirza Muhammad Ali Khan Feroughi (Zuka-ul-Mulk).

Minister for Foreign Affairs.—Mirza Seyyid Bagher Khan Kazemi (Muhazzeb-ud-Dowleh).

Minister of Interior.—Mirza Mahmud Khan Jam (Mudir-ul-Mulk).

Minister of Finance.—Mirza Ali Akbar Khan Davar.

Minister of Roads and Communications.—Mirza Ali Khan Mansur (Mansur-ul-Mulk).

Minister of War.—Jaafar Kuli Khan Assad (Sardar Assad).

Minister of Justice.—Mirza Seyd Muhsen Khan Sadr (Sadr-ul-Ashraf).

Acting Minister of Education.—Mirza Ali Asghar Khan Hekmat.

Minister of Posts, Telegraphs, and Telephones.—Muhammad Ali Mirza Dowlatshahi (Meshkat-ud-Dowleh).

Department of Commerce.—Mirza Ali Akbar Khan Bahman.

Industry and Agriculture.—Mustafa Kuli Khan Bayat (Samsam-ul-Mulk).

The country is divided into twenty-six provinces, which are governed by governors-general (Wâli) and governors (Hâkim), who are directly responsible to the central Government. Each quarter of a town or parish, and every village, has a chief who is called Katkhuda. These officers are generally appointed by the governors, but sometimes elected by the citizens. The chiefs of nomad tribes are called Ilkhâni, Ilbegi, Wâli, Sirdâr, Sheikh.

Towns generally have a municipality, the director of which is nominated by the Central Government.

Area and Population.

Persia, which has an area of about 628,000 square miles, lies between 25° and 40° north latitude and between 44° and 63° 30' east longitude. A vast portion of this area is an absolute desert, and the population is everywhere so scanty as to approximate, on the average, 16 inhabitants to the square mile.

The population is estimated at 10 millions, but all figures are largely conjectural. It is estimated that the country contains some three million nomads. Of these, 260,000 are Arabs, 720,000 Turks, 675,000 Kurds and Leks, 20,700 Baluchis and Gipsies, 234,000 Lurs. These figures, however, are merely round numbers, and estimates vary.

The principal cities of Persia are:—Teheran and district, with about 350,000 inhabitants; Tabriz, 180,000; Isfahan, 100,000; Meshed, 85,000; Resht, 80,000; Kerman, 30,000; Kermanshah, 40,000; Shiraz, 35,000; Yezd, 30,000; Barfurush, 30,000; Hamadan, 30,000; Kazvin, 30,000; Kum, 25,000; Sultanabad, 20,000; Kashan, 15,000; Muhammerah, 30,000; Ahwaz, 30,000; and Abadan, 40,000.

Religion.

Of the population about 7½ millions are Moslems of the Shi'a sect, and of that branch of it known as the Ithnâ-'Ashariyya, who recognize twelve Imâms or spiritual successors of the Prophet Mahomet; 850,000 are of the Sunnî sect; 10,000 are Parsis (Gabrs), 40,000 Jews, 50,000 Armenians, and 30,000 Nestorians; there are also many 'Bahais' and some Christians, whose number cannot, however, be estimated.

The Moslems of the sect called Shi'a differ to some extent in religious doctrine (especially in their rejection of the Sunna or traditional body of rules, as distinct from the actual text of the Koran), from the Moslems of the Turkish Empire, who are called Sunnî. The Persian priesthood (ulemâ) is still powerful. The highest authority, the chief priest of all, is the leading mujtahid, who resides at Najaf or Kerbela, near Baghdad, and some consider him the vicegerent of the Prophet, the representative of the Imâm. The Shah and the Government have no voice in the matter of appointing the mujtahids, but the Imâm-i-Jama, chief of the great mosque (Masjid-i-Jama) of a city, are appointed by Government. Under the Imâm-i-Jama are the pish namâz or khatib (leader of public prayers and reader of the Khutba, the Friday oration), the mu'azzin (crier for prayers), and sometimes the mutawali (guardian of the mosque); this latter, as well as the mu'azzin, need not necessarily be a priest. All mosques and shrines have some endowments (wakf), and out of the proceeds of these are provided the funds for the salaries of the priests attached to them. The shrines of some favourite saints are so richly endowed as to be able to keep an immense staff of priests, servants, and dependants.

The Gregorian National Armenians form two dioceses, each under a bishop, the one residing at Tabriz, and the other at Isfahan. There are also a few thousand Roman Catholic Armenians in Persia who have a bishop of their own rite at Isfahan, the bishop of the Latin rite residing at Urumia. There is a wide tolerance exercised towards Armenians and Nestorians, Jews, and Parsis in cities where Europeans reside.

Education.

In recent years Public Instruction has made rapid strides; the old system of instruction, which was generally religious, has been practically entirely changed, and at present a tolerably adequate education can be obtained in general knowledge from native teachers who have studied abroad, although, of course, the purely religious schools are still maintained in the Mosques, and the old 'Maktab'—street schools for the very young at which the mere rudiments of reading and writing are taught—still abound. In 1932 there were said to be 3,642 schools of all categories with 182,000 pupils as compared with 612 schools with 55,000 pupils in 1921.

The Government pays the whole budget of Government Schools and grants are paid to the public, private and foreign schools. Religious Schools are maintained from endowments.

The Foreign Schools are maintained by funds from abroad supplied by The American Presbyterian Mission, The Church Missionary Society, The Alliance Israélite, and The French Roman Catholics Mission, and there are also schools run by the German and Soviet Governments; all the above have schools for boys and for girls, but children who are Persian subjects may not now attend foreign primary schools.

Justice.

The judicial system of Persia is modelled on that of France. There are justices of the peace in villages and small towns, higher courts in the larger towns, police magistrates in all important places, courts of appeal in Teheran, Tabriz, Shiraz, Kermanshah, Isfahan, Meshed, Kerman and Ahwaz, and a court of cassation, or supreme court, in Teheran. The courts are supervised by the Ministry of Justice. New Civil, Criminal and Commercial codes based on French and Swiss codes have been introduced into the Courts of Justice.

Finance.

The most productive items of revenue in order of importance are usually Customs Receipts, Anglo Persian Oil Co. royalties, Sugar and Tea monopoly, and Land Tax and Road Tax. The incidence of taxation, which is mainly indirect, weighs most heavily on the labouring classes.

Approximate gross Customs receipts for the last three years, according to the Customs Tableau Général, were:—March, 1929–March, 1930, 2,119,917.; March, 1930–March, 1931, 1,964,740.; June, 1931–June, 1932, 1,406,977. (The Persian Economic Year is now from June 21 to June 20, instead of March to March: the Customs figures are published for the economic year.)

The budget estimates for the year ending June, 1934, are:—revenue, 506,912,227 rials, exclusive of the Anglo-Persian Oil Company royalty, the revenue from the sugar and tea monopoly tax and part of the proceeds of the road tax; expenditure, 506,904,460 rials, exclusive of certain expenditure on railways and roads. The royalties from the A.P.O.C. are deposited in London and regarded as a treasury reserve. This reserve, which has recently, as the result of the new agreement with the A.P.O.C., been increased by payments slightly exceeding 4,000,000*l.*, will probably be used to assist railway finances. The total revenue from the sugar and tea monopoly tax up to March 20, 1933, was recently shown as 579,841,088 rials (about 6,983,033*l.*) and expenditure from this fund, established for railway construction, 402,967,786 rials (4,855,033), leaving 176,873,303 rials, or about 2,131,000*l.* available.

On August 14, 1933, the recognised foreign debt of Persia was the 1911 Loan, the original amount of which was 1,250,000*l.*, and the amount outstanding, 1,069,397*l.* 11*s.* 7*d.*

The debt incurred to Great Britain during and immediately after the war, which has been placed at 2,000,000*l.*, has not yet been funded. The total floating debt at the same date was 6,661,428 rials.

Defence.

The army is estimated to consist of about 80,000 men (actual figures are not available), exclusive of the amnich (gendarmérie). The latter number approximately 8,000 and are used for the surveillance of roads and other armed police duties.

The army, navy, and air force cost some 2,000,000*l.* annually. The organisation is a Central Garrison at Tehran, numbering some 14,000 men; two divisions in Azerbaijan, one based on Tabriz and the other on Rezaieh (Urumiah); one division based on Meshed; six independent brigades of varying strengths based on Sennéh, Khurramabad, Ahwaz, Shiraz, Kerman and Khwash; and five independent regiments based on Asterabad, Gumbad-i-Kabus, Isfahan, Kermanshah and Resht.

The army has recently been re-armed and equipped at a cost of about 1,000,000*l.* with material bought in Czechoslovakia.

Military service became compulsory under the Conscription Act passed in 1924. This Law is now being generally enforced, except in certain tribal areas, and the supply of conscripts exceeds the numbers required.

The air force at present has 17 new De Havilland 'Tiger Moth' aeroplanes fitted with Gipsy 120 h.p. engines; 10 new Russian aeroplanes with engines of German design, Type T. 5, and of 600 h.p.; 5 Junker monoplanes; one Potez; and 12 De Havilland D.H. 9. A's of Russian manufacture, fitted with Liberty engines. It is understood that further orders have been placed.

The Persian navy consists of 2 gunboats armed with 3 4-inch guns, and 4 motor patrol vessels armed with 2 3-inch guns, all built in Italy in 1931. In addition there are 2 obsolete gunboats. Some 250 officers and ratings have been trained in Italy.

Production and Industry.

Persia produces oil, wool, skins, casings, drugs, fruits, gums, rice, cotton, wheat, &c.; special attention is being paid to the textile industry. Production in 1931-32 was estimated by the Department of Agriculture as follows (in tons):—rice, 280,000; cotton, 25,000; tobacco, 10,000; raisins, 40,000; and wheat, 1,150,000. The wool of Khurasan is famous. Persian carpets, of which there are many kinds, are all made by hand. The principal centres of the industry are Tabriz, Hamadan, Sultanabad, and Kerman.

The mineral deposits of Persia are considerable but undeveloped. They include iron, coal, copper, lead, manganese, marble, borax, nickel, and cobalt. Oil is being developed with much success. The turquoise mines of Nishapur are worked in a most primitive fashion but with profit, as also are the iron oxide and rock salt in the Persian Gulf.

The production of the Anglo-Persian Oil Company, which holds a concession for a large area in S. Persia, was: 1931, 5,750,000 tons; 1932, 6,500,000 tons; 1933, 7,087,000 tons.

Commerce.

On February 25, 1931, the Government established a monopoly of foreign trade, operating through a system of Government permits.

The principal centres of commerce are Tabriz, Teheran, Hamadan, Meshed, and Isfahan; the principal ports, Bandar Abbas, Mohammerah, Bushire and Bandar Shapour on the Persian Gulf, and Astara, Pahlavi (Enzeli), Meshed-i-Sar, Bandar Guez and Bandah Shah on the Caspian.

According to the statistics published by the Minister of Finance the values of the imports and exports for six years were as follows:—

Banking and Credit.

The Shah in 1889 granted a concession to Baron Julius de Reuter for the formation of a State Bank of Persia, with head office at Teheran and branches in the chief cities. The bank was formed in the autumn of the same year, with the title 'The Imperial Bank of Persia,' and incorporated by Royal Charter, dated September 2, 1889. The bank has recently conceded its sole right of note issue to the Persian Government. There is also established at Teheran the Russian 'Banque d'Escompte,' formerly 'Banque des Prêts de Perse.' This Bank, with all its Concessions, was in March, 1921, handed over to the Persian Government by the Soviet authorities, and is now 'The Bank of Iran,' and forms part of the Ministry of Finance. The Ottoman Bank has also established branches in Teheran, Hamadan, and Kermanshah. Latterly the Russians started a bank, under the auspices of the Soviet Government, which has branches in both the northern and southern provinces. A Government Pawnbroking Establishment was founded in January, 1927, and a 'National Bank' in September, 1928. During the year 1929, the National Bank of which Dr. W. Horschitz Horst, a German, is now joint Director with Mirza Hussein Khan Ala, C.M.G., and Mirza Mohammad Ali Khan Farzin, opened branches in all the chief provincial towns. There is also the Bank-i-Pahlavi with branches in the important towns in the north. The Agricultural Section of the National Bank was made a separate establishment with its own capital in May, 1933.

Communications.

Tonnage entered at Bushire, Lingah, Bandar Abbas, Mohammerah, Bandar Shapour and several other smaller ports between June 23, 1931, and June 21, 1932, was 6,018,178 tons, of which 5,279,975 tons were British, 285,064 tons German, and 101,900 tons Russian; the Persian total was 189,553 tons; at Caspian ports 430,104 tons, of which 341,341 (steam) were Russian and 16,338 (steam) Persian, and 11,025 tons (sail) Russian, and 61,400 tons (sail) Persian.

The total number of vessels entered and cleared at Persian ports during the year ended June 21, 1932, was 14,117 as compared with 15,858 during the year ended March 21, 1931.

The Government continues its programme of road construction, and a new road from Tehran to Chalus on the Caspian Sea, via Kerej, is nearing completion. This is the shortest road, about 140 miles, from the capital to the Caspian. Work has been continued on the Tabriz-Rowanduz road and consignments have already been made from Baghdad to the Province of Azerbaijan by car over the new road, though it is far from being in a finished state as yet. Construction of the North to South Railway progresses, but so far trains only run on some 80 miles from Bandar Shah to Shahi (Aliabad) in the northern section, and on about 156 miles from Bandar Shapour to Salehabad, via Ahwaz, on the southern section.

Taking Teheran, the capital, as the centre, the following main routes are available for all forms of motor traffic:—(i) Teheran to the Caspian Sea (Port Pahlevi) via Kasvin and Resht; (ii) Teheran to Tabriz; (iii) Teheran to Baghdad via Kasvin, Hamadan and Kermanshah; (iv) Teheran to Basra via Sultanabad, Burujird, Khurramabad, Dizful Ahwaz, and Mohammerah; (v) Teheran to Bushire via Isfahan and Shiraz; (vi) Teheran to Bander Abbas via Isfahan and Kerman; (vii) Teheran to Meshed; (viii) Teheran to the Caspian Sea (Bandar-i-Gaz) via Babul; (ix) Teheran to Zahedan and Quetta. Two routes: (a) via Meshed; (b) via Kerman. Several subsidiary roads exist, the most important being:—(i) The coastal road on the southern shore of the Caspian Sea from Pahlevi to Bandar-i-Gaz; (ii) Hamadan to Isfahan via Sultanabad; (iii) Kermanshah to Burujird; (iv) Shiraz to Kerman via Niriz; and (v) Meshed to Askabad; (vi) Tabriz to Rezaniyeh (Urumiah) (a) via Sauj-Bulag (south of Lake Urumiah); (b) via Julfa and Khoi (north of Lake Urumiah); (vii) Khoi to Maku and Trebizond. A road was opened in 1932 to connect Tabriz with Nisibin via Rowanduz. Several of the above roads are blocked by snow for 3 or 4 days at a time between December 15 and April 1.

Total length of railways 467 miles, as follows:—Tabriz-Julfa, 85 miles; Sofian-Sharifkhaneh, 30 miles; Mirjawa-Zahedan, 104 miles (not actually working now); Teheran-Shah Abdul Azim, 5 miles; Bandar Shahpur-Salehabad 156 miles; Aliabad-Bandar Shah, 80 miles. These last two sections are at the southern and northern ends respectively of the line which is projected between the Persian Gulf and the Caspian; work is continuing at each end, but progress is slow owing largely to the difficulty of the country which has now to be traversed.

Navigation on the Lake of Urumiah, from Sharafkhaneh to Golmankhaneh is served by some five tugs and 15 barges for the transport of goods and passengers. The service runs twice a week. On the River Karun likewise, from Mohammerah to Ahwaz (Nasseri), an irregular service for cargo only both ways is run by the Mesopotamia Persia Corp., Ltd., and some native firms run daily trips by motor boat, for passengers and merchandise. By changing into lighter draught boats at Ahwaz both can be taken up to Shallili near Shushtar.

The telegraph system attains a length of 9,588 miles with 16,265 miles of wire. In virtue of several conventions, dating from 1863, between the British and Persian Governments, the Indian Government constructed, and until March, 1931, maintained and worked with its own staffs: the Indo-European Telegraph Department line from Teheran-Kum-Kashan-Isfahan-Shiraz to Bushire, and thence to Fao and also Karachi; this line is 669 miles in length with 2,292 miles of wire and 7 stations; and the Central Persia Telegraphs from Teheran via Kashan-Yezd-Kerman-Bam to the Beluchistan frontier and thence to India with a mileage of 1,467 line and 4,183 wire and 10 stations. The Indo-European Telegraph Co. maintained communication between Teheran and Tabriz and on to Julfa, which connects with the European systems. Number of telegrams in 1929, 735,737 internal, 104,559 foreign.

The Indo-European Telegraph Company, as well as the Indo-European Telegraph Department, relinquished all their telegraph lines in Persia on February 28, 1931; thenceforward all these lines came under the direct control of the Persian Telegraph Administration with the exception of the land-line between Jaok and the Indian frontier near Gwadar, which is exploited by the Imperial and International Communications Company.

Wireless has been installed at Teheran, Tabriz, Meshed, Kermanshah, Pahlevi, Kerman, Mohammerah, and Shiraz. Teheran is in wireless communication with Europe via Tiflis and Beyrout.

In 1932 the Government purchased the telephone system from the lessees, the "Société Anonyme des Téléphones Persans" for one million tomans, and it is now generally under Government control.

In 1929, 6,199,800 letters and 256,700 post-cards were handled in the internal service; in the foreign service, 1,518,400 letters and 22,600 post-cards were received, and 1,197,400 letters and 124,200 post-cards despatched.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

Persia has a gold standard, the unit of which is the rial, containing 0.07322382 grammes of gold: one hundred rials make one pahlevi. The rial is sub-divided into 100 dinars.

The gold standard is not, however, in force, for, by a law passed on March 13, 1932, there is no obligation to pay out gold pending a return to more normal economic conditions.

The actual unit of currency is a rial, which contains 4.14 grammes of silver and is the equivalent of the kran, which is now obsolete, but which has not been altogether withdrawn from circulation.

By a law passed on January 8, 1933, the official weights and measures of Persia correspond to those of the metric system: the metre is to be used for measures and the kilogram for weights. Arrangements are being made for the putting into effect of this law.

For the old Persian weights and measures, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1933, p. 1191.

PERU.

(REPUBLICA DEL PERÚ.)

Constitution and Government.

THE Republic of Peru, formerly the most important of the Spanish Viceroyalties in South America, issued its declaration of independence on July 28, 1821; but it was not till after a war, protracted till 1824, that the country gained its actual freedom from Spanish rule.

The following table gives a list of Presidents from 1899 to 1933 :—

Don Eduardo Lopez de Romaña, Sept. 8, 1899—Sept. 8, 1903.	Don Augusto Bernardino Leguía, Oct. 12, 1919—Aug. 24, 1930. ^a
Don Manuel Candamo, Sept. 8, 1903—May 7, 1904. ¹	General Don Manuel Ponce (Acting), Aug. 24, 1930—Aug. 28, 1930. ^a
Don Serapio Calderón (Acting), May 7, 1904—Sept. 24, 1904.	Colonel Don Luis M. Sánchez Cerro (Acting), Aug. 28, 1930—March 1, 1931. ^a
Don José Pardo y Barreda, Sept. 24, 1904—Sept. 24, 1908.	Don Ricardo Leoncio Elias (Acting), March 1, 1931—March 5, 1931. ^a

According to the new Constitution of April 9, 1933, the legislative power is vested in a Senate and a Chamber of Deputies. The present constituent assembly, nominally 145 members, will form the Chamber of Deputies, but 25 of its members will be chosen for the Senate and 15 further members of the Senate will be elected by direct suffrage in 1934. The next legislative and presidential period will commence December 8, 1936, and last until July 28, 1941. Thereafter the President and the Chamber of Deputies will be renewed every 5 years; the Senate will be elected for 6 years, one-third renewable every two years. Both senators and deputies are to be elected by a direct vote. Congress normally sits for 120 days; it may be convened for a special session. Voters are males, at least 21 years old, who are able to read and write; in 1931 the number of registered voters was 392,263.

The executive power is entrusted to a President, elected for 5 years and not eligible for a consecutive term. He receives 25,500 soles a year, plus 12,000 soles for representation.

President.—General Don Oscar Raimundo Benavides. Elected by Constituent Assembly on April 30, 1933, on the assassination of President Sánchez Cerro. To serve until December 8, 1936.

The President exercises his executive functions through a Cabinet of seven ministers, holding office at his pleasure. The ministers are those of the Interior, War, Marine, Foreign Affairs, Justice, with Worship and Instruction, Finance and Public Works. Each minister receives 14,280 soles a year.

The 23 departments are divided into provinces (114 in all), and these are subdivided into 1,011 districts. Each department is administered by a Prefect, and each province by a Sub-Prefect. Municipal councillors are elected by direct vote, and foreigners are eligible.

Area and Population.

There has been no enumeration of the population in recent years. The census returns of 1862 showed a total population of 2,487,916; that of 1876 put the number at 2,699,106, of whom about 13·8 per cent. were white, 1·9 per cent. negroes, 57·6 per cent. Indian, 24·8 per cent. mestizos (Cholos and Zambos), and 1·9 per cent. Asiatic, chiefly Chinese. It was estimated (1927) that the population approximated 6,147,000 of which 600,000 were white. The language is Spanish, but the Indian population has its own language, either Quechua or Aymara.

To promote the assimilation of the Indian population, estimated at 4,000,000, the Government in 1930 declared June 24 of each year to be a national holiday, 'day of the indigene,' to be celebrated with appropriate ceremonies. By a decree issued in 1927, the Indians were freed from the peonage system which existed in some regions.

The population of the Department of Lima, containing the capital, according to the official census in November, 1931, was 380,708, and of the Department of Callao 70,881. Lima city has 281,425 inhabitants; Callao City, 63,728. The estimated population in 1928 of other cities was: Arequipa 46,000; Cuzco 40,000; Chiclayo 35,000; Ica 20,000; Trujillo 30,000; Chinchu 20,000; Huancayo 20,000; Ayacucho 20,000; Iquitos 10,000; Huaráz 20,000; Piura 15,000.

Revised estimates in 1930, allowing for the cession of 43,970 square miles to Colombia (Salomon-Lozano Treaty, 1927), and of 7,670 square miles to Chile in 1928, put the present area at 482,133 square miles. The areas of the 23 departments (and total area of the various islands) are given below with the population, according to the census returns of 1876 (the latest official one) and an official estimate for 1927. The chief towns are shown in brackets:—

² Including 38,225 of the former Department of Tarapaca, ceded to Chile.

Efforts to encourage immigration of Europeans, including Germans, Austrians, Poles and Cossacks by opening up to them some 3,000,000 acres have been only partially successful, and many have had to be repatriated since 1929.

The long-standing dispute with Chile over the provinces of Tacna and Arica (see STATESMAN'S YEAR BOOK for 1928, page 1198) reached an amicable stage in July, 1928, when the two countries resumed diplomatic relations and made a fresh attempt to settle the question by direct and friendly negotiations. On June 3, 1929, a settlement was reached at Lima, Tacna going to Peru and Arica to Chile. Demarcation and joint policing of the boundary were accomplished in August, 1930.

As to the boundary dispute with Bolivia an arrangement has been come to by direct negotiations between Bolivia and Peru. The frontier line between them was fixed from the mouth of the Heath to that of the Yaverija (1912), and is being finally demarcated by a joint commission. Those with Colombia and Ecuador (for the possession of over 100,000 square miles of land rich in rubber, timber, and probably gold, lying about the head waters of the Amazon) were referred to the mediation of the United States, Argentina, and Brazil. Direct negotiations may possibly be initiated between Peru and Ecuador. The Salomon-Lozano Treaty, establishing the boundary between Peru and Colombia, was ratified by the former in 1927, and by Colombia in 1928, but on September 1, 1932, Peruvian civilians from Iquitos seized the Colombian town of Leticia, east of Iquitos, and demanded a revision of the treaty. By an agreement signed at Geneva on May 25, 1933, between Colombia and Peru, a League of Nations Commission took over the administration of Leticia on June 23, 1933. Negotiations between Peru and Colombia were due to commence at Rio de Janeiro in October, 1933. A definite arrangement has been made with Brazil as to boundary, favourable, on the whole, to Peru, and this was finally demarcated in 1927 by a joint commission.

The region north of the Marañon from the Pongo de Manseriche is claimed by Ecuador and Peru.

Religion.

Religious liberty exists, but the Roman Catholic religion is protected by the State, and in 1929, a decree was issued permitting only Roman Catholic religious instruction in schools, State or private. There is a Roman Catholic archbishopric (Lima, dating from 1545). 16 bishops and vicars-general, 4 Apostolic Prefects, 641 intermediate officials, 1,123 priests and 1,790 monks. The 1,109 churches, 51 convents and 72 religious houses are the property of the State. The Junta of Government in October, 1930, decreed that all marriages must be civil, regardless of religion and preceded by medical examination; liberal divorce regulations, including divorce for 'absence without just cause for 50 days,' were also established. Divorcees may re-marry immediately.

Education and Justice.

Elementary education is compulsory for both sexes between the ages of 7 and 14, and is free. The system is highly centralized; all teaching appointments are made by the Ministry of Education. In 1930, there were in Peru 3,562 primary schools with 6,476 teachers and 342,016 pupils; 36 secondary schools (excluding private schools under supervision) with 697 teachers and 11,826 pupils and 4 normal schools, with a registration of 1,610. Budget appropriations for education in 1932, 9,469,848 soles. Special schools for the Indians enroll about 1,780. There are also 30 travelling schools. Higher education is normally provided at the central university in Lima, called 'Universidad de San Marcos,' founded by Charles V. in 1551; its autonomy, previously limited in 1928, was restored by the Junta in 1930, but it was closed in 1932; it is to be reopened in 1934. It had in 1929, 169 professors and 1,531 students in five faculties and two institutes. There are small universities at Arequipa (founded in 1827), with (1932) 223 students, Cuzco with 106 students, Trujillo, 104 students, and the Catholic University (Lima) with 153 students. There are State Colleges of Agriculture, Arts and Trades, and Engineering in Lima.

Justice is administered in the Supreme Court at Lima composed of 11 judges and 3 fiscals, and in 13 Superior Courts throughout the Republic. There are 147 Courts of First Instance and 42 Minor Courts. The judges of the Supreme Court are chosen by Congress from lists of names presented by the Government; those of the Superior Courts and of the Minor Courts are chosen by the Government from lists of names presented by the Supreme and Superior Courts, respectively.

Finance.

The revenue and expenditure for 5 years were as follows in soles (10 soles = the old Peruvian pound :—

—	1929	1930	1931	1932 ¹	1933 ¹
	Soles	Soles	Soles	Soles	Soles
Revenue . . .	140,358,320	118,792,210	99,755,105	96,928,296	95,438,044

Actual receipts and expenditures in 1932 were around 85,000,000 soles.

For account of the old foreign debt of Peru and the arrangements reached regarding it with the Peruvian Corporation, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR BOOK for 1931, p. 1183.

The total debt of Peru (June 30, 1932) amounted to 532,011,848 soles, of which the internal debt amounted to 129,600,021 soles, and the foreign debt to 402,411,827 soles. The latter included 94,808,658 dollars (U.S.), calculated at the rate of 3.57171 soles for one dollar, U.S., and 3,669,488 $\frac{1}{2}$ sterling, at 17.38193 soles to £ . External debt service in 1930 took Lp. 1,449,780, of which guano exploitation, railroads and docks furnished 85 per cent.; internal debt service took Lp. 354,919. But in May, 1931, Peru suspended interest and sinking fund payments on external debt until economic conditions improve. British investments (1932) amounted to about 40,000,000 £ , of which about 2,000,000 £ was represented by the Peruvian Corporation. American investments total 200,000,000 dollars, of which (1931) holdings of Government bonds represented 75,000,000 dollars and direct interest in railways and industries represented 124,742,000 dollars.

Defence.

ARMY.

Military service is compulsory and universal, though only a limited number of the annual quota of conscripts is called up for active duty with the colours, the remainder being formed into local battalions, who receive instruction one day in the week (Sundays). The term of service is 2 years in the active army, 5 years in the first reserve, 5 in the second reserve, and 20 years in the National Guard.

The country is divided into 5 military districts, each furnishing a complete division. The division is made up of 2 regiments of infantry of 2 battalions each, with 1 machine gun company; 1 topographical section, 1 medical section, 1 commissariat section, 1 or 2 regiments of cavalry (2 squadrons), 1 regiment of mountain artillery.

The army at present is organized as follows: of infantry there are 20 regiments, of artillery 5 regiments, 5 mounted infantry companies, 5 battalions of engineers, 1 aviation squadron, and an independent commissariat corps.

The peace establishment of the army in 1931 was 1,165 officers and 7,880 other ranks. Police and gendarmerie amount also to about 8,000 including civil guards and mounted police. The civil guard has been reorganised into 11 cavalry regiments, 1 infantry regiment of 4 battalions, 1 independent battalion and 1 machine gun battalion. Rifle instruction is also given in Peruvian schools. There is a military academy and war college at Chorillos, near Lima. In May, 1927, the Peruvian army which for some years prior to 1924 had been in the hands of a French Military Mission, was entrusted to the technical direction of an ex-German general, who resigned in 1929.

The infantry is armed with the 1912 Peruvian model of the Mauser rifle, cavalry with carbine of the same type and model, artillery with the Schneider-Canet gun and machine gun battalion with Danish light machine guns, 'Maatsan'.

Aviation, both military and civil, is controlled by a Director-General of Aviation, under the Ministry of Marine and Aviation.

Army, Navy and Aviation appropriations in the 1932 budget were: Army, 14,358,142 soles; Navy and Aviation, 6,586,786 soles; total, 20,944,929 soles.

NAVY.

The Peruvian Navy consists of the following units:—2 obsolete cruisers, Almirante Grau and Coronel Bolognesi, 3,200 tons, 24 knots speed, each with 2 6-inch and 8 3-inch guns, built in 1906, and re-boilered and adapted for oil fuel in 1923–25; 3 destroyers; 4 submarines; 1 submarine tender, La Lima; 1 transport; 1 oiler; and a sailing training ship. In addition there are 3 river gun-boats on the Amazon. There is a naval school for cadets at La Punta, near Callao, and a submarine base on San Lorenzo Island, opposite Callao.

Agriculture and Industry.

The country may be divided into three zones: the coast strip, with an average width of 30 miles; the Sierra, or Uplands, lying between the coast range of mountains and the Andes proper; and the forest or wooded region, called the Montaña. In the arid coast region the government has brought under irrigation 62,400 acres during the last few years; large irrigation projects have been started in the Olmos desert near Pimentel in northern Peru, and near Arequipa in southern Peru.

About 80 per cent. of the population is dependent on agriculture, mainly with the help of irrigation. The chief agricultural productions of Peru are, in the order named: cotton, sugar, coffee, wool, hides, and skins. Cotton production for 1933 is estimated at 270,000 bales (of 480 lbs.); for 1932 it was 231,055 bales (52,573 metric tons); 1931, 232,515 bales; 1930, 250,686. Value of the 1933 crop is put at 67,000,000 soles; of 1932, at 37,000,000 soles. About 300,000 acres are devoted to cotton; exports in 1932, 46,271 metric tons. Output of cotton seed, 1932, 90,530 metric tons. The sugar industry is carried on chiefly by irrigation in the river valleys of the coast region and by sinking wells (1 lb. of sugar is estimated to require 500 gallons of water). Peru is a low-cost producer. About 50 large estates covering 120,000 acres raise 95 per cent. of the crop; production is around 380,000 tons, of which 324,777 tons were exported in 1932. Output of alcohol, 1931, 2,214,220 gallons. The chief coffee-growing districts are those of Chanchamayo, Perené and Paucartambo in Central Peru, where the Peruvian Corporation has done much useful colonising work on about 2,750,000 acres. Exports in 1932, 2,421,030 kilos. Cocoa cultivation is extending, especially in the Perené region. Wheat growing on the plateaus of the Andes is encouraged. Total area under wheat in 1932, 283,953 acres; production (1931), 94,835 metric tons. Rice is extensively grown; the quality is excellent, but the quantity, around 100,000 tons, is insufficient to meet local wants. The gathering of wild rubber, once the most important industry in the Amazon region of Peru, where it was shipped from Iquitos, 2,000 miles down the Amazon to the Atlantic, has declined in importance with the competition of plantation rubber. Exports of balata from this region have taken its place, but as the trees are felled, not tapped, this too is declining. Tobacco (in Northern Peru), wines and spirits, olives, ramie, and maize are also produced. The manufacture, importation and sale of tobacco is a Government monopoly; it can only be grown under licence. Silk culture is being tried in the coast region. Coca is grown for the Indian population which chews the leaf, but cocaine is manufactured in Lima, Otuzco, and several other towns, principally for export to Japan; exports about 3,000 pounds. In addition there are dyes, cinchona, and other medicinal plants. Alpaca, sheep, and llama wool are exported. Peru produced (1931) 1,904 metric tons of wool and 2,308 metric tons of alpaca. Total exports of wool, 1932, 4,136 tons; of hides, 1,718 tons.

The guano deposits on Huanillos, Punta Lobos, and other islands, amounting to 40 or 50 thousand tons, which had been granted to the Peruvian Corporation, reverted to the Peruvian Government on February 2, 1901; remaining deposits reverted to the Government in 1928. Output in 1932-33, 133,741 metric tons; output for 1933-34, about 127,650 metric tons.

Copper and petroleum are the chief minerals exploited. Exports of petroleum and derivatives, 1932, 7,883,918 barrels. The chief copper mine, the Cerro de Pasco, has been operated for three centuries. Exports of copper, 1932, 26,587 metric tons; 1931, 48,529 tons; 1930, 54,566 tons. Peru is the world's largest source of vanadium (furnishing 80 per cent. of world consumption) and perhaps the only country where vanadium is mined for itself alone. Gold is widely found, even in the rivers, but transport and labour difficulties hinder mining; present gold output is chiefly a by-product of copper and other mining. A decree of October 20, 1930, nationalized all gold deposits not already allocated. Nationals have priority in concessions. Iron deposits are large; the Government-owned field at Marcona has about 500,000,000 tons, it is estimated.

The following table shows the mineral production for two years (value in soles, the new unit; 10 soles = the former Peruvian pound):—

Mineral output, 1932 (proliminary estimate), included 22,890 metric tons of copper, 9,185,449 barrels of petroleum (excluding natural gasoline), 1,729 kilos of gold, 209,488 kilos of silver, and 1,164 metric tons of lead.

Total mineral production, which is largely controlled by foreign interests, in 1931 was valued at 126,839,359 soles. Mine concessions, 1931, numbered 6,672. Mine workers number, 1931, 16,209. Two smelters, both American-owned, and 2 petroleum refineries, 1 American and 1 Italian-Peruvian, are the largest industrial plants in Peru.

Commerce.

The value of the trade of Peru in five years (including the Department of Loreto) has been as follows:—

—	1929	1930	1931	1932	1933
	Soles	Soles	Soles	Soles	Soles
Imports . . .	189,852,460	140,261,247	102,473,580	72,062,663	91,473,896

Re-Exports to Peru from U.K. . .	86	56	41	36	35

Shipping and Navigation.

In 1932, 9,784 vessels of 13,314,510 tons entered, and 9,805 of 13,339,733 tons cleared, the ports of the Republic. Since December, 1928, the coasting trade has been largely reserved for Peruvian-owned vessels with Peruvian crews; they number (1933) 38 of 59,943 registered gross tons.

Internal Communications.

There are 11,200 miles of road suitable for motor traffic, including 53 miles of concrete, and 1,116 miles of macadam. There are now two paved concrete highways between Lima and the port of Callao, and others between Lima and Chosica, and Lima and Chorrillos.

In 1931 there were 7,979 motor cars, 4,242 motor lorries, 365 omnibuses and 241 motor cycles in Peru, a total of 12,827 vehicles of which 7,764 were in Lima and Callao.

In 1932 the total working length of the Peruvian railways was 2,803 miles, including 2,163 miles privately owned and 640 miles retained by the State. These are standard gauge (4 ft. 8½ in.), with the exception of five small lines. Passengers carried in 1931, 5,399,065; goods, 2,341,974 tons; gross revenue, 27,039,049 soles.

By an agreement between the Peruvian Government and the Marconi Company, the latter undertook the administration of the posts, telegraphs, and wireless services for a period of 21 years from May 1, 1921. In 1931, the Company through 1,104 offices handled 32,421,142 pieces of inland correspondence and 11,212,413 pieces of foreign mail. There were 283 telegraph and telephone stations in 1931, and about 11,813 miles of telegraph lines; number of telegraphic and wireless messages 3,601,306. The telephone system includes about 11,000 instruments. Three submarine telegraph cables connect Peru and Chile, and one connects Peru and the Republics to the north. There are numerous wireless stations in Peru; broadcasting stations are at Lima and Arequipa. In 1928 an air mail and passenger service between Lima and different points in the Republic was introduced; bi-weekly mail and passenger service between Lima, New York and Buenos Aires has been established.

Money and Credit.

Peru's currency unit is the Peruvian gold sol (by law of April 18, 1931), equal to one-tenth of the old Peruvian libra or pound: the gold sol will not be minted but will contain, theoretically, 42.1264 centigrams of fine gold. Debts contracted in the old Peruvian libra, or pound, are payable in soles at the rate of 10 soles to the pound. The sol, formerly worth 40 cents, U.S. currency, was thus stabilized at 28 cents. But Peru abandoned the gold standard on May 18, 1932; in 1933 the exchange value of the sol on New York ranged between 16 and 23.25 cents, U.S.; exchange on London (nominal) ranged between 23.86 and 18.40 soles to the £. Eventually gold 10-soles and 50-soles pieces will be minted. Silver is legal tender up to 20 soles. Silver coins are the sol, and half-sol, 5/10ths fine. Copper coins are 2 and 1 cent; and nickel coins 20, 10, and 5 cents. Peru has a paper currency issued by the Banco Central of Lp. 10, Lp. 5, Lp. 1 and 5 sol denomination. Stock of money on September 30, 1933, included gold coin, 39,846,000 soles (held chiefly by the Banco Central); subsidiary coins (silver and nickel), 24,053,000 soles; notes, 66,576,000 soles.

The Government bank of issue, known as the Banco Central de Reserva del Perú, was established March 9, 1922, and in September, 1931, was re-organized, on the advice of the Kemmerer Financial Mission, as the Central Reserve Bank with a thirty year charter and authorised capital of 30,000,000 soles (reduced to 10,000,000 soles in May, 1932). In July, 1932, a decree modified considerably the Bank's original statutes. Normally it is bound to hold not less than 50 per cent. of cover in gold, first-class bankers' acceptances and silver for deposits and notes in circulation. Note circulation, including residue of war-time issue of 'cheques circulaires,' on September 9, 1933, was 66,356,825 soles; deposits, 17,222,046 soles; reserves, 52,660,557 soles.

Three mortgage banks had on October 31, 1932, a combined capital of 8,750,000 soles, loans of 53,282,000 soles and bonds of 41,633,000 soles. Banks, domestic and foreign, are supervised by the Superintendent of Banks. On August 31, 1933, the paid-up capital and reserves of all banks amounted to 39,200,000 soles, and total deposits to 29,657,000 soles; savings deposits on the same date amounted to 23,483,000 soles.

Weights and Measures.

The metric system of weights and measures was established by law in 1869, and is coming into general use, except for the customs tariff. It came into force in Lima and Callao on September 1, 1916. Spanish measures are still in use.

POLAND.

(RZECZPOSPOLITA POLSKA.)

POLAND was an independent State until the end of the eighteenth century. The Poles are Slavonic in race and Roman Catholic in religion.

During the seventeenth century the position of Poland rapidly declined, and eventually, by the three partitions of 1772, 1793, and 1795, the Polish

Commonwealth, as it was then called, was divided between Prussia, Russia and Austria.

In 1807, Napoleon formed a part of the Old Commonwealth into a semi-independent State under the title of the Duchy of Warsaw and endowed it with a very liberal constitution, but in 1815, at the Congress of Vienna, this was undone, and Poland was re-partitioned between Prussia, Austria and Russia, except the small district of Cracow, which was constituted an independent republic and remained such until 1835, when it was annexed by Austria, despite a guarantee of neutrality by Prussia, Austria and Russia.

During the war Russian-Poland was invaded by the Germans and Austrians, and by the end of 1915 the whole country was occupied by the Austro-German forces.

On November 5, 1916, the German and Austrian Emperors, in a joint manifesto, proclaimed the independence of Poland, but neither the boundaries nor the constitution of the State were defined. Shortly afterwards a Provisional Council of State, consisting of 25 members, all Poles, was summoned in order to draft the constitution of the new State, but this body did not exist for long. In September, 1917, a new Supreme Authority, the Regency Council, consisting of three members, was appointed, and under their auspices a Ministry was formed and a new Council of State summoned. It was composed partly of elected and partly of appointed members, 110 in all. In October, 1918, this Council of State was dissolved by the Regency Council and the convocation proclaimed a Constituent Assembly to determine the constitution of the Polish State and take over the supreme authority.

On November 9, 1918, the Independence of Poland was solemnly proclaimed. On November 14, Marshal Pilsudski returned to Poland, assumed Supreme Power and convoked the Constituent Assembly (Sejm Ustawodawczy), which confirmed him in his office. On June 28, 1919, the Treaty of Versailles recognised the Independence of Poland. The same Treaty determined the western frontier of Poland from the sea to Upper Silesia. The fixing of the Polish-German frontier took place after the plebiscite in Upper Silesia and the territory east of the Vistula, according to the resolution of the Council of Ambassadors of August 12, 1920, and October 20, 1921. A resolution of the Council of Ambassadors has also fixed the Polish-Czechoslovakian frontier. Poland's eastern frontiers were determined by the Treaty of Riga, of March 18, 1921; the Allied Powers have acknowledged those frontiers, as also the frontiers with Lithuania fixed by the resolution of the Council of Ambassadors of March 15, 1923.

Presidents since the establishment of the Republic were :—

Marshal Joseph Pilsudski, Nov. 14, 1918—
Dec. 11, 1922.

Stanislas Wojciechowski, Dec. 20, 1922—
May 15, 1926.

¹ Assassinated.

President.—Ignace Moscicki, born on December 1, 1867, in Mierzanów, near Plock, elected President of the Polish Republic on June 1, 1926. Re-elected on May 8, 1933.

Constitution and Government.

The Constitution of the Polish Republic adopted by the Sejm (Parliament) on March 17, 1921, contains the following fundamental principles: The franchise is universal for both sexes, the voting age being 21 for the Sejm and 30 for the Senate. There are two chambers, a Diet (Sejm) and a Senate, both elected by general suffrage on the system of proportional representation. The President (Prezydent Rzeczypospolitej) convenes, opens, prorogues and closes the Sejm. By an amendment to the Constitution introduced in August, 1926, the President is empowered to dissolve the Sejm on the advice of the Cabinet, and to issue decrees with the force of law between the dissolution of one Parliament and the meeting of the next, the elections for which must be held within ninety days. It is the President's duty to convene the Sejm for an ordinary session each year before the month of November. By the revised Constitution of August, 1926, the Budget can only be discussed in the Sejm (Diet and Senate) from September to January, and if it is not passed by the latter date, the proposals of the Government come automatically into force. The President is the Supreme Commander of the army, except in time of war. He is elected for a term of seven years by the Diet and Senate united in a National Assembly. He can make treaties with foreign Powers. In the case of the President's death, his duties are to be assumed by the Speaker of the House. Any Polish citizen may be elected President. The President is not responsible either politically or personally, and therefore all his acts must be countersigned by a Minister. Freedom of conscience is granted to all citizens; and all citizens are equal before the law. Every citizen also has the right of preserving his nationality and developing his mother tongue.

The law of July 28, 1922, divides Poland into 64 electoral districts for the Sejm and 17 for the Senate, returning 444 deputies and 111 Senators. At the elections held on November 16 and 23, 1930, the following parties were returned:—Lower House: Government bloc, 247; National Club, 62; Peasants, 48; Socialists, 24; Christian Democrats, 15; National Workmen's Party, 10; Ukrainians, 18; Jews, 6; Germans, 5; Communists, 5; Lesser Groups, 5.

Senate: Government bloc, 74; National Club, 12; Peasants, 6; Socialists, 5; National Workmen's Party, 6; Ukrainians, 4; Germans, 3; Unclassified, 1.

The Executive, called the Council of Ministers (Rada Ministrów), was appointed on May 27, 1931, and re-constituted on March 21, 1932, and May 10, 1933, as follows:—

President of the Council of Ministers (Premier).—Janusz Jędrzejewicz (May 10, 1933).

Minister of Military Affairs.—Joseph Piłsudski.

Minister of Foreign Affairs.—Joseph Beck (November 2, 1932).

Minister of Finance.—Ladislav Zawadzki (September 7, 1932).

Minister of Justice.—Czesław Michałowski.

Minister of the Interior.—Bronisław Pieracki.

Minister of Industry and Commerce.—Dr. Ferdynand Zarzycki.

Minister of Agriculture.—Dr. Bronisław Nakonecznikow Klukowski (May 10, 1933).

Minister of Communications.—Ing Michał Budkiewicz (September 7, 1932).

Minister of Social Welfare.—Dr. Stefan Hubicki.

Minister of Religion and Education.—Macław Jędrzejewicz.

Minister of Posts and Telegraphs.—Ing Emil Kalinski (May 10, 1932).

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

The Polish Constitution provides for the granting of a wide measure of autonomy to County Councils. The County of Silesia received a large measure of autonomy by the constitutional law of July 15, 1920. The Silesian Sejm (Diet), elected in November, 1930, consists of 48 deputies, 41 Polish and 7 German. The autonomous rights of the Counties of Lwów, Tarnopol and Stanisławów, were formulated in the law of September 26, 1922. A uniform system for all the remaining Counties of Poland is in course of elaboration.

By a law of July 31, 1924, the language rights of the Ruthenian, White Ruthenian and Lithuanian minorities were guaranteed.

Area and Population.

The territory of Poland is made up of territories which after the three partitions of Poland in 1772, 1793 and 1795 belonged to Russia (262,166 sq. kilometres, or 101,196 sq. miles); to Prussia (17,808 sq. kilometres, or 6,973 sq. miles); and to Austria (80,089 sq. kilometres or 30,914 sq. miles).

The Republic is divided into the City of Warsaw and 16 counties (województwo), subdivided into 264 districts (powiaty), and self-governing cities (miasta wydzielone). It comprises an area of 149,274 sq. miles, and an estimated total population of 32,638,000 (January 1, 1933).

The second census was taken in Poland on December 9, 1931, and the following table shows the area and population of the counties :—

County	Area in sq. miles	Population (Census 1931)	County	Area in sq. miles	Population (Census 1931)

Religion.

The great majority of the population profess the Roman Catholic faith, but there is no established church in Poland and all denominations enjoy equal rights, though Article 114 of the Constitution declares Roman Catholicism to be the dominant religion.

According to estimates on January 1, 1932, there were in Poland 23,688,123 (74·9 per cent.) Catholics; 3,954,529 (12·5 per cent.) Russian Orthodox; 3,028,837 (9·8 per cent.) Jews; 851,973 (2·7 per cent.) Protestants; and other religions, 95,056 (0·3 per cent.).

According to the Concordat between Poland and the Vatican, concluded on February 10, 1925, three distinct rites of the Catholic Church are to be distinguished in Poland: (1) the Latin, with 2 Cardinals, 3 Archbishops, 16 Bishops and 19 suffragan bishops, 8,373 priests and 5,965 churches; (2) the Greek-Catholic, with 1 Archbishop, 2 Bishops, 3 Suffragan Bishops, 2,144 priests and 3,275 churches; and (3) the Armenian with 1 Archbishop and 12 churches.

The Autocephalous Orthodox Church in Poland, headed by a Metropolitan, forms an independent organisation in the frame of the General Orthodox Church, and is divided into 5 dioceses, with about 2,400 churches, 8 Bishops, and about 1,800 priests.

The Eastern Orthodox Church of Ancient rite without any ecclesiastical hierarchy, has 52 posts and 52 ministers.

The Evangelical Church in Poland is represented by its 4 principal branches, of which the Protestant Church possesses 145 posts and 120 ministers; the Reformed Church in Warsaw, 22 posts and 7 ministers; the Reformed Church in Wilno, 4 posts and 4 ministers; and the United Evangelic Church, 411 posts and 202 ministers.

The Jewish Community comprises 827 congregations with 1,600 rabbis and ministers.

The Karaite Jewish Community, headed by the Chacham, has 4 posts and 9 ministers.

The Moslem Community headed by a Mufti, possesses 19 mosques and 41 ministers.

Education.

All education is free, while elementary education is compulsory. The figures for the whole of the Republic for the year 1932-33, are as follows:— 26,838 Elementary schools, with 79,250 teachers and 4,510,631 pupils; 765 Secondary schools, with 13,705 teachers and 186,805 pupils; 205 Teachers' Colleges with 24,615 pupils, and 747 professional schools with 1,286 departments and 68,809 pupils.

The following table gives particulars as to the various Polish universities and high schools during the year 1932-33:—

Justice and Crime.

By a decree of the President of the Polish Republic of February 6, 1928, providing for the organisation of general courts of justice as from January 1, 1929, unification of all judiciary organisations was introduced for the whole territory of Poland. This decree was subsequently modified by the Law of March, 1929, and the decree of the President of the Polish Republic of November, 1930. A uniform penal code for the whole of Poland came into operation on September 1, 1932.

The highest judiciary instance in Poland, with 3 judges sitting, is the Supreme Court in Warsaw, divided into 2 chambers, Civil and Criminal.

Minor cases are tried before County Courts. More serious cases are dealt with by the Circuit Courts which also act as instances of appeal for cases tried before County Courts. Courts of Appeal are instances for appeal for cases tried before Circuit Courts.

The Supreme Court is a Court of Cassation for cases dealt with by Circuit Court.

In 1931 there were 8 jurisdictions of Courts of Appeal; Warsaw, Lublin, Wilno, Cracow, Lwow, Poznan, Torun and Katowice.

In the Supreme Court, in 1931, were 81 judges and 40 public prosecutors; in the 51 jurisdictions of District Courts, 972 judges, 210 examining judges, 343 public prosecutors; in the 8 Courts of Appeal, 220 judges, 41 public prosecutors; and in the 550 County Courts, 1,770 judges.

Social Insurance.

A new comprehensive Act on Social Insurance of March 28, 1933, is in operation as from January 1, 1934. This Act has unified former legislation.

The types of Social Insurance in Poland are as follows:—

(1) Health, including maternity, Insurance for all industrial and office workers; (2) Invalidity, old age, widows and orphans insurance for manual workers in industry and trade; (3) Similar special insurance for miners; (4) Invalidity, old age, widows, orphans, and unemployment insurance for office workers; (5) Insurance against accidents whilst at work, compulsory for office, industrial and agricultural workers; (6) Insurance against unemployment of industrial workers.

The dues paid to social insurance institutions, under the supervision of the Ministry of Social Welfare amounted in 1932 to about 418 million zlotys, the total revenue to about 502 million zlotys, and the costs of benefits and allowances to about 419 million zlotys.

The excess of assets over liabilities amounted to 845 million zlotys at the end of 1931.

² Estimates.

The principal items of expenditure for 1933-34 are (in thousand zlotys): Ministry of War, 822,700; education, 324,597; debt service, 338,287.

The national indebtedness of Poland consists of internal and external debts. On Dec. 31, 1933, the total internal debt amounted to 540,231,000 zlotys, and the external debt to 4,514,235,000 zlotys. The external debt comprised (in zlotys): United States, 2,664,080,000; France, 804,414,000; England, 207,727,000. At the same date obligations due to the execution of the Protocol of Insbruck amounted to 324,804,000 zlotys.

Defence.

Every able-bodied Polish subject is, according to the law of May 23, 1924, liable to serve in the army between the ages of 21 and 50. The duration of service is twenty-nine years. Service in the active army is for two years. The men then pass to the reserve, in which they remain for 18 years. At the age of forty they join the territorial army, in which they remain for 10 years.

In times of peace the Chief Command of the armed forces is exercised by the President of the Republic through the Minister of Military Affairs. The permanent collaborator of the latter is, in conformity with the Law of August 6, 1926, the General Inspector of the armed forces, who in case of war takes over the Chief Command. General questions relating to preparations for the defence of the country are examined by the Committee of National Defence, which, in virtue of the Law of October 25, 1926, is presided over by the President of the Republic. Members of this Committee are, the Prime Minister, the Minister of Military Affairs, the Minister of the Interior, the Minister of Foreign Affairs, the Minister of Finances and the General Inspector of the armed force.

The country is divided into 10 General Military Districts: Warsaw, Lublin, Torun, Lodz, Cracow, Lwow, Poznań, Grodno, Brześć, and Przemyśl. The strength of the army in 1932 was 17,905 officers and 265,980 other ranks, organised in 30 infantry divisions, 1 cavalry division and 12 independent cavalry brigades.

The air personnel consists of 7,919 officers and men, and comprises 6 aviation regiments, 1 naval aviation group, 1 balloon battalion, 1 meteorological company, 1 air service group. There are, in addition, police and customs forces amounting to 52,640 men. The mobilisable strength of the army is approximately 1,200,000 men.

There are the following fortresses in Poland: in the west, Thorn and Posen; in the south, Cracow and Przemyśl and armed camps; in the east, Brest Litowsk, Grodno, Osowiec; in the interior, Warsaw, Modlin, Deblin.

Poland has a river flotilla of 6 small gunboats, and a fleet of two gunboats, Piłsudski and Haller, 500 tons, have been built in Finland. There are also 1 surveying vessel, 1 transport, 4 mine-sweepers, and 5 ex-German torpedo-boats. Two destroyers and 3 submarines were recently completed in French yards. The defence estimates 1932-33 amounted to: for land and air forces, 791,970,000 zlotys; for naval forces, 40,680,000 zlotys. Total, 832,650,000 zlotys. Total for land forces for 1933-34, 822 million zlotys.

Production and Industry.

Agriculture.—Poland is essentially an agricultural country. The following table shows the area and yield of the principal crops for two years:—

Crops.	Area (acres)		Yield (metric tons)
	1930-31	1931-32	1930-31	1931-32
Wheat	4,495,161	4,265,482	2,264,914	1,346,428
Rye	14,263,033	13,951,060	5,702,631	6,110,461
Barley	3,144,215	2,981,874	1,475,733	1,400,837
Oats	5,367,038	5,436,843	2,309,469	2,390,831
Potatoes	6,715,530	6,709,172	30,988,385	29,974,529
Sugar Beet	367,300	286,792	2,761,248	2,378,571

Other important crops are flax, hemp, hops and chicory.

On July 16, 1920, a law was passed by the Sejm limiting the size of the larger estates and of holdings situated in the neighbourhood of large towns. The maximum has been fixed at 60 hectares (about 150 acres) for estates situated in industrial districts, at 300 hectares (about 1,000 acres) for Posen, Podolia, Volhynia, &c., and at 180 hectares (about 450 acres) for the other parts of the Polish Republic. Since the beginning of parcellation, i.e. during the years 1919-32, 2,104,300 hectares (5,260,750 acres) were parcelled out and 555,800 new farm-holdings created.

The forest area of Poland (1931) is 8,322,433 hectares (20,563,853 acres), of which 3,033,174 hectares (7,494,973 acres) belong to the State, and 5,289,259 hectares (13,068,148 acres) to private owners.

On June 30, 1933, Poland possessed 3,771,169 horses, 8,981,736 cattle, 2,555,920 sheep, 5,748,130 pigs, and 277,544 goats.

Industry.—In the textile industry on December 1, 1932, there were 1,809,028 spindles and 47,243 looms in the manufacture of cotton, and 772,740 spindles and 15,291 looms in the manufacture of wool. Other important industries are paper manufactures of various kinds, chemicals, timber, iron and oil refining. On December 31, 1932, there were 29 refineries employing 3,854 workmen, and producing 502,000 tons of refined products, of which kerosene amounted to 160,000 tons, and lubricating oils, to 91,000 tons. There were in 1931-32, 67 sugar refineries in Poland, producing 493,200 tons of sugar.

The output of the iron and steel industry in 1933 was as follows in metric tons (1932 figures in parentheses):—pig iron, 305,625 (198,674); raw steel, 817,077 (550,754); rolled steel, 564,432 (387,353).

Mining.—The following table shows the output of the more important minerals for three years (in metric tons):—

Internal Communications.

In December, 1930, Poland had 28,582 miles of road and 1,701 miles of navigable waterways, of which 298 miles are accessible for vessels of over 400 tons. On December 31, 1932, there were 12,417 miles of railways open for traffic in the Republic. Of this total, 10,976 miles were main line, and 1,441 miles narrow-gauge lines. Operating revenue (1931-32) was 1,293,998,000 zloty, and expenses 1,187,036,000 zloty. All the lines are property of the State.

At the end of 1932 there were in Poland 4,064 post offices, including 1,353 postal agencies, 4,898 telegraph stations, and 4,422 telephone exchanges with 183,967 instruments. The length of telegraph lines was 15,662 miles, of local telephone lines 16,691 miles, and of inter-urban telephone lines 35,391 miles.

In 1932 there were dispatched 691,377,016 letters, 10,229,083 parcels, 181,048,582 newspapers, and 27,191,830 money orders issued and paid. 3,088,872 telegrams were sent out, and 682,805,058 telephone calls recorded.

Shipping and Navigation.

In 1932, 3,610 vessels with a tonnage of 2,831,600 net registered tons and a cargo of 432,900 tons entered, and 3,604 vessels with a tonnage of 2,838,600 net registered tons and a cargo of 4,761,400 tons cleared at the port of Gdynia; 4,637 vessels with a tonnage of 2,750,204 net registered tons and a cargo of 728,103 tons entered, and 4,654 vessels with a tonnage of 2,773,146 net registered tons and a cargo of 5,047,949 tons cleared at the port of Danzig.

On July 1, 1933, the Polish mercantile marine numbered 32 vessels with a tonnage of 67,063 gross tons, and the Danzig mercantile marine, 42 vessels with a tonnage of 255,635 gross tons.

Currency and Banking.

The Polish national currency is the zloty, subdivided into 100 grosz. This currency was put into circulation on May 1, 1924, being then equivalent to the gold franc. The monetary reform of October 13, 1927, changed the gold contents, defining 1 kg. fine gold = 5,924.44 zlotys. Silver coins of 10, 5 and 2 zloty; nickel coins of 1 zloty, 50, 20 and 10 grosz; and bronze coins of 5, 2 and 1 grosz.

The Bank of Poland, created by Act of Parliament, opened its doors on April 28, 1924. The Bank is a joint stock company with a capital of 150,000,000 zlotys. The Bank enjoys for a period, to Dec. 31, 1944, the sole privilege of note issue. Bank notes in denominations of 20, 50, 100 and 500 zlotys are in circulation. The notes issued by the Bank, and the deposits must be covered by 30 per cent. In case of a lower cover, the Bank has to pay a special tax, which rises in proportion as the cover falls. At present the Bank is obliged to redeem banknotes in gold coin or in foreign currencies convertible into gold, where the sum presented for exchange exceeds 20,000 zlotys. The Post Office Savings Bank on December 1, 1933, had 1,141,787 depositors with 484,042,864 zlotys to their credit. On the same date, 369 other Savings Banks had deposits totalling 572,474,000 zlotys.

The amount of money in circulation (November 1, 1933) was 1,330,478,897 zlotys, consisting of 994,610,540 zlotys in Bank of Poland notes, 335,868,357 zlotys in metallic currency.

On November 30, 1933, there were 54 principal banks in Poland, with a capital of 216,099,000 zlotys, and deposits amounting to 397,365,000 zloty.

The weights and measures are those of the metric system.

PORTUGAL.

(REPÚBLICA PORTUGUESA.)

PORTUGAL has been an independent State since the twelfth century; until 1910 it was a monarchy. The last King was Manoel II. of the house of Braganza-Coburg, born November 15, 1889, younger son of King Carlos I. and Queen Mary Amélie, daughter of Philippe Count of Paris; he died July 2, 1932. On October 5, 1910, the republic was proclaimed, after a short revolution, and a provisional government established with Dr. Theophilo Braga as the Provisional President (October 5, 1910, to August 24, 1911). Thereafter there were duly elected Presidents, as follows:—

Dr. Manoel de Arriaga, 24 Aug., 1911— 29 May, 1915. ¹	Senhor João de Canto e Castro Silva Antunes, 16 Dec., 1919—5 Oct., 1919.
Dr. Joaquim Theophilo Braga, 29 May, 1915—5 Oct., 1915.	Dr. Antonio José de Almeida, 5 Oct., 1919— 5 Oct., 1923.
Dr. Bernardino Luiz Machado Guimarães, 5 Oct., 1915—11 Dec., 1917. ²	Senhor Manoel Teixeira Gomes, 5 Oct. 1923—11 Dec., 1925. ¹
Dr. Sidonio Bernardino Cardoso da Silva Paes, 11 Dec., 1917—14 Dec., 1919. ³	Dr. Bernardino Luiz Machado Guimarães, 11 Dec., 1925—1 June, 1926. ¹

A Provisional Government was in office from June 1—Nov. 29, 1926.

¹ Resigned.

² Deposed.

³ Assassinated.

The Powers formally recognised the Republic on September 11, 1911.

A new constitution was promulgated on May 28, 1932, providing for a President, to be elected for 7 years by direct suffrage by the heads of families; and for a National Assembly (one chamber) of 90 Deputies elected for 4 years—45 by the Administrative and Colonial Corporations and 45 by direct suffrage. A Privy Council of 10 members assists the President. Capital punishment is abolished. A Corporative Chamber functions alongside the National Assembly. On March 19, 1933, the new constitution was voted upon by the people and adopted.

President of the Republic.—General Antonio Oscar de Fragoso Carmona. (Elected November 29, 1926, re-elected, March 25, 1928.)

State of Parties at the elections held on November 8, 1925:—

Senate.—41 Democrats; 9 Nationalists; 20 others; total 70.

Deputies.—84 Democrats; 23 Nationalists; 53 others; total 160.

The Cabinet, which was formed on April 11, 1933, is as follows:—

In 1930 the population of the Continent consisted of 3,034,532 males and 3,325,815 females, or 91 females to every hundred males. Of the total population in 1930, 27,502 were foreigners. In 1932, the movement of the population was: births, 208,062 (107,123 males and 100,939 females); marriages, 45,888; deaths, 118,895 (60,767 males and 58,128 females); still-born, 9,185. Divorces in 1931, 828 (958 in 1930).

At a special census on Dec. 1, 1930, the population of Lisbon was 594,390 and that of Oporto 232,280. Other principal towns with their population in 1930 (census) were: Coimbra, 27,333; Évora, 22,061; Covilhã, 15,640; Castelo Branco, 9,820.

The number of emigrants in 1932 was 6,040, of whom 3,823 went to Brazil, 421 to North America, 636 to Argentina, and 1,160 to other countries.

Religion

There is freedom of worship in Portugal; the predominant faith is the Roman Catholic. Portugal, including the Azores and Madeira, is divided into three ecclesiastical provinces, with their sees severally at Lisbon, Braga and Évora. The Archbishop of Lisbon (Patriarch since 1716) has seven suffragans, of whom only two are on the European mainland; while the Archbishop of Braga (the oldest see in Portugal) has five, and the Archbishop of Évora two. The Azores, Madeira, and the Portuguese colonial possessions of West Africa, continental and insular, with five episcopal sees, constitute part of the ecclesiastical province of Lisbon. In East Africa there is also the province of Mozambique. In Asia there is a province of Goa with four suffragan sees (Macao included).

Education.

According to the census of 1920, 54·7 per cent. of the Portuguese nation are still unable to read or write. Primary education is compulsory, and is rigorously enforced by a decree of the Provisional Government of March 29, 1911. In 1931-32 there were 65 infant schools with 100 teachers and 4,134 pupils; 8,247 public elementary schools with 441,812 pupils and 9,697 teachers; 37 secondary schools with 17,371 pupils and 808 teachers, and 5 primary normal schools with 1,086 pupils and 50 teachers. For higher education there are 3 Universities: at Lisbon (founded in 1911), Coimbra (founded 1290), and Oporto (founded 1911). In 1931-32 the number of students at the universities was: Lisbon, 2,761; Coimbra, 1,797; and Oporto, 1,426. There is also the Technical University at Lisbon (founded in 1930). There are also special colleges for music and art (Lisbon and Oporto), commercial, industrial and agricultural schools, and a military school and a naval school at Lisbon.

In 1932 there were 675 newspapers and periodicals published in Portugal.

Justice and Crime.

The Republic is divided for judicial purposes into 157 comarcas; in every comarca there is a court of first instance. There are three courts of appeal (Tribunaes de Relação) at Lisbon, Coimbra, and Oporto, and a Supreme Court in Lisbon. There are also 7 municipal and 936 district courts.

Finance.

The estimated revenue and expenditure for five years, ended June 30, are shown as follows (in escudos):—

Defence.

ARMY.

Military service is compulsory for every citizen from 17 years of age to 45. The terms of service are 4 years in the Active Service, 16 years in the Active Reserve, 5 years in the Territorial Reserve and 3 years in the recruiting Reserve. The recruits are enlisted from March 1 to March 5.

Portugal and the adjacent islands are divided into 4 Military Regions: Porto, Coimbra, Tomar and Evora, and 3 Military Governments: Lisbon, Azores and Madeira, including 22 recruiting and reserve districts.

The total peace strength in June, 1933, was 4,395 officers and 26,734 other ranks. The overseas garrisons comprise 382 officers and 10,286 other ranks.

The Republican Guard consists of 8 Infantry Battalions and 1 Cavalry Regiment, with a total of 215 officers and 5,479 other ranks.

The Fiscal Guard consists of 3 Battalions in the Continent and 4 Companies in the Islands, and its strength at the end of December, 1931, was 5,165 officers and men.

The Portuguese Army is armed with rifles, Mauser-Vergueiro, 6.5 mm. and Lee-Enfield; Cavalry, Mannlicher, 6.5 mm. carbine; Artillery, 7.5 cm. Schneider-Canet gun, 9 cm. Krupps gun, 7 cm. Mountain Schneider-Canet gun, 11.4 cm. English howitzer, 15.2 cm. Vickers howitzer and 15 cm. Schneider-Canet du Bocage, 7.5 cm. anti-aircraft guns, 303 Berthier machine guns, 303 Vickers machine guns, 303 Madsen machine guns, and medium tanks. The military flying service had in 1931, 66 machines.

The military estimates for 1933-4 amounted to 318,737,736 escudos.

NAVY.

The Portuguese navy comprises:—1 cruiser (Vasco da Gama, 3,000 tons); 2 sloops (República and Carvalho Araújo, 1,200 tons); 2 second class sloops (Gonçalo Velho and Gonçalves Zarco, 1,400 tons, built in England, 1932); 2 destroyers (Vouga and Lima, 1,600 tons); 2 destroyers (Tâmega and Guadiana, 600 tons); 4 torpedo boats (Sado, Liz, Arc and Mondego, 250 tons); 6 gunboats (type Beira, 400 tons); 2 submarines (300 tons); 1 sailing training ship (Sagres, 3,500 tons); 1 hydrographic survey ship (5 de Outubro, 1,365 tons) and 10 auxiliary service ships. Under construction there are 2 first-class sloops (Afonso de Albuquerque and Bartolomeu Dias, 2,300 tons); 3 destroyers (Troja, Douro and Dão, 1,600 tons); 8 submarines (1,800 tons); 1 second class sloop (Pedro Nunes, 1,300 tons). A naval flying service was established in September, 1917. On December 31, 1931, there were 21 machines. The naval personnel on December 31, 1931, included 1,311 officers and N.C.O's and 5,522 other ranks.

Production and Industry.

According to an estimate of the Ministry of Agriculture the cultivated area of Portugal (not including the islands) in 1931 was 15,917,654 acres (70 per cent.). Of the whole area of continental Portugal 37.4 per cent. is annually cultivated under cereals, pulse, pasture, etc.; 5.4 per cent. is under vineyards; 6.2 per cent. under fruit trees; 26 per cent. under forest; 25 per cent. is waste.

In 1932 the wheat crop was 637,000 metric tons; maize, 340,600 tons; oats, 94,100 tons; barley, 45,100 tons; broad beans and French beans are also cultivated. Other products in 1932 were rice (25,600 metric tons) and potatoes. Wine (135,359,000 gallons in 1932) and olive oil (430,372 hectolitres or 9,468,184 gallons in 1932) are also produced.

The live stock in continental Portugal in 1925 consisted of 80,078 horses, 236,300 asses, 84,410 mules, 767,904 cattle, 3,683,828 sheep, 1,557,743 goats, and 1,117,354 pigs. Wool production in 1931 was 2,793 metric tons.

The forests cover 26 per cent. of the total area of the country; pine extending to 2,795,020 acres; oak, 1,205,148 acres; cork, 1,382,373 acres; chestnut, 210,513 acres; other trees, 165,532 acres: total, 5,758,586 acres. Cork is an important product; production was 84,283 metric tons in 1930, and 74,288 tons in 1931. Most of the product is exported in the crude condition; in 1932 exports were 34,366 metric tons of unmanufactured cork and 21,286 tons of cork stoppers.

Portugal possesses considerable mineral wealth, but for want of electric power, valuable mines remain unworked. The total mineral production in 1932 amounted to 497,012 metric tons, of which coal accounted for 257,485 tons; cupriferous pyrites for 237,846 tons; lead, 109 tons; copper (precipitated), 798 tons; tin, 542 tons, and wolfram 262 tons.

The fishing industry is of importance. In 1932 there were 54,175 men and boys employed, with 14,273 boats of 55,598 tons. In 1932, the sardine catch was 111,916 metric tons, valued at 69,010,284 escudos. Exports of tinned sardines amounted to 44,174 tons in 1932, valued at 153,211,127 escudos. The centre of the sardine industry is at Setubal, about 10 miles south of Lisbon. It is the second principal industry in the country.

The principal manufacturing industry is the production of textiles, which employs some 48,000 operatives—25,000 in cottons, and the remainder in woollens, silks and linen goods.

A characteristic industry of Portugal is the manufacture of azulejos or porcelain tiles. This was inherited from the Moors, and tiles are used extensively for interior and exterior decoration of public and private buildings. At Sacavem, near Lisbon, a large factory makes tiles and chinaware. There are porcelain factories at Vista Alegre, Gaya and Coimbra. In Peniche, an old fishing village on the north coast of Lisbon, there is a local pillow lace industry, and at Guimaraes famous embroidery is made.

Shipping, Navigation, and Internal Communications.

In 1931, 7,217 vessels of 24,688,340 tons entered, and 7,037 vessels of 23,334,152 tons cleared the ports of Portugal (continental and islands). Of those entering, 3,048 (4,535,432 tons) were Portuguese, 1,354 (8,486,085 tons) British, and 739 (3,889,160 tons) German. In 1933 the merchant marine of Portugal consisted of 163 steam vessels and 86 sailing vessels of 237,908 tons and 23,605 tons respectively.

Portugal has 824 miles of State-owned railway, 735 miles being normal gauge and 89 miles narrow gauge. According to an agreement dated March 11, 1927, the Companhia dos Caminhos de Ferro Portugueses, to which a number of private lines already belong, took over two sections of the State railways in return for an annual contribution of a fixed percentage of earnings. There are also six privately owned lines 1,177 miles in length, 882 miles normal and 295 miles narrow gauge. On January 1, 1931, total railway mileage was 2,125 miles. In 1932, 22,973,726 passengers were carried, and 4,043,066 tons of merchandise transported. There were in 1931, 14,304 km. (8,882 miles) of road. Length of telegraph lines in 1931 was 9,022 km. (5,603 miles). Number of offices, 744; of telegrams, 2,217,062 sent and 2,590,136 received. There are 13 wireless stations. The State owned 263 km. (163 miles) of telephone line in 1931, and the Anglo-Portuguese Telephone Co. Ltd. owned 137,329 km. (85,281 miles) of inter-urban lines, and 100,690 km. (62,528 miles) in Lisbon, and 43,128 km. (26,782 miles) in Oporto.

Banking, Money, Weights and Measures.

The Government financial institution is the Bank of Portugal, with a capital of 100,000,000 escudos. By a Decree of June 29, 1931, the term of the Bank as the bank of emission was extended for a period of thirty years as from July 1, 1931. The privilege of note issue then ceases. The limit of fiduciary circulation is 2,200,000 contos. The cash on hand of the bank on December 27, 1933, was: gold, 741,740,000 escudos. The notes in circulation amounted to 1,981,762,000 escudos.

There are 37 other banks registered on the mainland and 18 in the Islands with a capital of 1,731,492,288 and 58,392,167 escudos respectively, and total deposits on August 31, 1933, of 3,452,506,361 and 252,870,825 escudos respectively.

The Decree of the Provisional Government of May 22, 1911, which established a new monetary system, was altered in the middle of 1931. The unit is the gold escudo, of 100 centavos, which is the standard coin with the weight of 0.0739 grams, and the fineness of 900/1000. The British sovereign and half-sovereign of 7.98805 and 3.99402 grams of gold respectively and fineness of 916-2/3 per 1,000 will continue to be a legal coin in the country with the value of 110 and 55 gold escudos respectively. 1,000 escudos are called a conto. The Bank of Portugal paper notes of 2.5, 5 and 10 escudos will be taken out of circulation before the 31 December, 1933, and they will be replaced by silver coins of the same denominations. The gold coins are of 250, 100 and 50 escudos; the silver coins, 10, 5 and 2½ escudos; Alpaca coins, 1 escudo and ½ escudo; bronze coins, 20, 10 and 5 centavos.

The metric system of weights and measures is the legal standard. The chief old measures still in use are:—

The Almude	{	of Lisbon	= 3.7	imperial gallons.
„ Alqueire	„	Oporto	= 5.6	„
„ Moio	„	„	= 0.36	„ bushel.
„ Moio	„	„	= 2.78	„ quarters.

On August 15, 1914, partial autonomy was granted by the Home Government to all Portuguese colonies, giving each the right to establish its own code of laws for civil and financial Government.

The Cape Verde Islands consist of ten islands and four islets which are administered by a Governor, whose seat is at Praia, the capital. The islands are divided into two groups, named Barlavento (windward) and Sotavento (leeward); the prevailing wind being north-east. The former is constituted by the islands of São Vicente, Santo Antão, São Nicolau, Santa Luzia, Sal and Boa Vista, and the small islands named Branco and Raso. The latter is constituted by the islands of Sant' Iago, Maio, Fogo and Brava, and the small islands named Rei and Rombo. São Vicente is a coaling station which supplies all navigation to South America. The total area is 3,845 square kilometres (1,484 square miles). The population is estimated at 148,533. There are 157 primary schools, one secondary school and one Lycée in the Island of São Vicente. Military force consists of 4 officers and 84 men. The chief products are sisal, castor oil, coffee, mustard, brandy, oranges and hides. Other products are maize, manioc, beans, tobacco, cane sugar, sweet potatoes. The coffee is of excellent quality; exports in 1931 were 28,345 kilos. The total number of animals in 1931 was 143,386. The estimated public revenue in 1932-33 is 19,417,650 escudos, and the expenditure 19,399,873 escudos (17,883,873 ordinary and 1,516,000 extraordinary). The imports in 1931, 63,386,378 escudos; exports, 2,318,499 escudos. The metric system of weights and measures is used. The currency is Portuguese. In 1931, 972 ships, including 483

British, entered the Porto Grande of São Vicente, the capital, which is a naturally-favoured coaling station. 146,928 tons of coal were imported in 1931.

Portuguese Guinea, on the coast of Senegambia, is bounded by the limits fixed by the convention of May 12, 1886, with France, and is entirely enclosed on the land side by French possessions. It includes the adjacent archipelago of Bijagoz, with the island of Bolama, in which the capital of the same name is situated. Area is 36,125 square km. (13,944 square miles). Population (1930), 364,929. There are 14 schools, 2 central, 2 mixed, and 10 rural. The chief commercial products are rice, wax, oil, seeds, hides. Estimated public revenue in 1932-33 is 21,583,863 escudos, and expenditure 21,417,962 escudos. Military force 287 (8 officers and 279 other ranks, including 264 natives). Imports in 1931, 18,360,651 escudos; exports, 29,467,670 escudos. The chief port is Bissan. Other ports: Bolama, Cacheu and Bubaque. There are 592 miles of telegraph lines and 1,740 miles of roads.

The islands of S. Tomé and Príncipe, which are about 125 miles off the coast of Africa, in the Gulf of Guinea, were discovered in 1471, and now constitute a province under a Governor. Area of the islands 315 square miles. According to the census of 1921 the population of the two islands was 59,055; 52,150 in S. Tomé and 6,905 in Príncipe, and the distribution was as follows: whites, 1,115; natives, 57,123; others, 817. The chief commercial products are cacao, coffee, coconut and copra, palm oil and cinchona. On January 1, 1930, there were 17,953 animals in the colony. Revenue, 1931-32, 10,729,842 escudos; expenditure, 10,700,698 escudos. Military force consists of 145 men (135 natives). Imports at S. Tomé and Príncipe (1931), 20,449,188 escudos; exports, 54,466,290 escudos. On S. Tomé a railway of 10 miles is open for traffic. There are 28 miles in course of construction. There are 124 miles of roads.

Angola (Portuguese West Africa), with a coast-line of over 1,000 miles, is separated from French Congo by the boundaries assigned by the convention of May 12, 1886; from the Belgian Congo by those fixed by the convention of July 27, 1927; from British South Africa in accordance with the convention of June 11, 1891, and from South-west Africa in accordance with that of December 30, 1886. The area is 1,235,006 square km. (476,712 square miles). The colony has belonged to the Portuguese since 1575, with the exception of the years 1641 to 1648, when it was held by the Dutch. It is under a High Commissioner, who resides at Luanda, and is vested with large powers. By a decree of July 24, 1930, and a ministerial order of June 28, 1932, it is divided into 8 administrative districts and 1 Intendencia. The important towns are S. Paulo de Loanda (capital), Benguela, Mossamedes, Lobito, Sa da Bandeira, Malange and Huambo (Nova Lisboa), the future capital. The population numbered 2,599,166 in 1931, and the population is now estimated to include 40,000 Europeans, of whom 90 per cent. are Portuguese.

For primary education there are 70 schools (2 infant schools and 68 elementary schools); for secondary education, 3 schools, viz. 1 higher-grade school, a Central College at Loanda and a National College at Lubango (Huila). There are also 106 professional schools.

The military force is composed of 122 officers and 4,497 other ranks (4,200 natives and 297 Europeans).

The ordinary budget for 1932-33 balanced at 142,960,000 angolares and the extraordinary budget at 2,738,266 angolares. (1 angolar = 1 escudo.

108 angolares = 1*l.* sterling.) The sums due by the Colony to the Portuguese Government have been agreed at 5,000,000*l.*, on which 3 per cent. interest is payable; and about 1,000,000*l.*, on which 6 per cent. is to be paid. The capital sums are to be repaid in 50 years, starting in 1932.

The principal crops are coffee, maize, sugar, palm oil and palm kernels. Other crops are cotton, wheat, tobacco, cocoa and sisal. Wax is also an important product. In 1931 there were 1,569,849 cattle, 150,485 sheep, 363,252 goats and 286,784 swine. The country possesses valuable diamond deposits. Copper and lignite exist but are not worked. Salt is also found.

Imports, 1931, 146,966,123 angolares; exports, 204,310,014 angolares. The chief imports of the province are textiles (20,091,298 angolares in 1931), and the chief exports in 1931 were coffee (11,838 metric tons), maize (55,335 metric tons), diamonds (357,525 carats), sugar (21,799 metric tons), wax (1,396 metric tons), and coconut (5,563 metric tons). The trade is largely with Portugal. Exports to United Kingdom (Board of Trade figures), 22,423*l.* in 1932, 4,715*l.* in 1933; imports from United Kingdom, 226,049*l.* in 1932, 241,308*l.* in 1933. Re-exports to Angola from U.K. were 8,708*l.* in 1933 and 8,818*l.* in 1932.

The Portuguese National Navigation Company has most of the carrying trade to and from Europe; the steamers of 3 British lines and one German line visit ports of the Colony regularly. The length of railways open for traffic is 1,425 miles, made up as follows: Loanda-Malanje line, 261 miles (metre gauge); Canhoca-Golungo Alto, 19 miles; Bengo-Cunga branch, 56 miles; Calumbo branch, 32 miles; Amboim line, 66 miles; Mossamedes-Chela Mountains, 155 miles, and the Benguela railway, from Lobito to the Luoa River, the new Angola-Belgian Congo frontier, 836 miles. In July, 1918, the Government purchased the Trans-African railway. There are 17,215 miles of good roads, and 20,713 miles of secondary roads. Angola is connected by cable with East, West, and South African telegraph systems. There are 5,790 miles of telegraph lines, 259 miles of telephone line, and 19 wireless stations.

As from July 1, 1928, the Angolan escudo has been superseded by a new unit the 'angolar,' 80 angolares being the equivalent of 100 Angolan escudos. A new coin has also been introduced, called a 'macuta,' equal to 5 centavos.

Governor-General.—Colonel Eduardo Ferreira Viana.

Mozambique (Portuguese East Africa) is separated from British Central and South Africa by the limits of the arrangement between Great Britain and Portugal in June, 1891. It is separated from Tanganyika Territory, according to agreements of October and December, 1886, and July, 1890, by a line running from Cape Delgado at 10° 40' S. lat. till it meets the course of the Rovuma, which it follows to the point of its confluence with the 'Msinje, the boundary thence to Lake Nyasa being the parallel of latitude of this point. In accordance with the Treaty of Versailles the Peace Conference on September 23, 1919, allotted to Portugal 'as the original and rightful owner' the territory south of the Rovuma, known as the 'Kionga Triangle' (formerly part of German East Africa).

Portuguese East Africa, with an area of 297,657 square miles, comprises two distinct entities: (1) the territory administered by the State (245,776 square miles), and (2) the territory of Manica and Sofala under the Companhia de Moçambique (51,881 square miles). The first is divided into 7 districts: Lourenço Marques, Inhambane, Quelimane, Tete, Mozambique, Cabo Delgado and Nyassa, each with its own Governor. The district of Cabo Delgado and Nyassa was formed from the former territories of the Companhia do Niassa (Nyassa Company) when its contract expired on October 27, 1929. Lourenço Marques (population 42,779 in 1931) is the capital of the Province. There is a Government Council composed of officials and elected representatives of the commercial, industrial and agricultural classes, and also an Executive Council. The existing organization of the Province is that which was established by decree of May 23, 1907, with some modifications introduced by the Law of October 9, 1922. The population of the colony (1930), including the chartered company, was 3,995,831 (35,570 Europeans). Elementary education is provided by 28 primary schools, 60 intermediate schools, and 6 private schools in the area administered by the state, and by 8 primary schools, and 43 intermediate schools in the company's area. There is also 1 central high school, and 7 state professional schools. There are also 240 missionary schools.

The military force of the Colony consists of 177 officers and 2,637 other ranks (395 Europeans and 2,242 natives).

Revenue and expenditure for 1932-33 were estimated at 356,402,149 escudos paper, and 340,933,897 escudos paper respectively. The chief products of the Province are sugar, maize, cotton, copra, sisal and mining products. In 1929 there were 490,749 oxen, 277,504 goats, 100,614 sheep, and 105,157 pigs. The principal ports are Mozambique, Beira, Porto Amelia, Quelimane, Chinde, Inhambane and Lourenço Marques. Imports in 1932 amounted to 2,235,542%, and exports to 1,083,987%. At the port of Lourenço Marques there entered, in 1931, 763 vessels of 3,898,053 tons; and cleared 771 vessels of 3,925,408 tons. Trade with United Kingdom (Board of Trade figures): exports to United Kingdom, 171,743% in 1932, 88,160% in 1933; imports from United Kingdom, 1,698,963% in 1932, 1,587,711% in 1933; re-exports from U.K., 45,519% in 1932, 42,304% in 1933. There are in the area administered by the Government 516 miles of 3 ft. 6 in. gauge railway owned by the State.

The Manica and Sofala region is administered by the Mozambique Company, which has a royal charter granting sovereign rights for 50 years from 1891. The seat of the administration is Beira (population 23,694). Under the Company's administration the country on either side of the Beira Railway has become settled, there is convenient transport by rail and river, and facilities are granted for securing titles and working mines. The census population of the Mozambique Company's territory (1928-29) was 3,616 Europeans, 3,552 non-natives, and 306,759 natives, total 313,927. On August 1, 1931, there were 3,960,261 natives (1,896,981 males and 2,063,280 females). Imports into this territory amounted in 1930 to 80,250,344 escudos; exports, to 75,209,406 escudos. Exports in 1928 included maize (19,162 metric tons), sugar (33,697 metric tons), and gold and silver (184,738 escudos in 1927). There entered at Beira in 1930, 644 vessels with a tonnage of 3,172,592; and cleared, 643 vessels with a tonnage of 3,180,695. 2,500 miles of roads are now available for motor traffic in the Company's territory.

The Delagoa Bay Railway has a length of 57 miles in Portuguese territory, and is continued for 290 miles to Pretoria. Till recently the commercial relations and transit of goods by this railway between the Portuguese and British possessions were regulated by the agreement signed April 1, 1909. A new agreement has been negotiated recently. A railway was constructed before the war to a point near the Swaziland border, 40 miles being open for traffic, but the linking up of this section with the South African Railways to provide a direct route from Lourenço Marques to Johannesburg has not yet been arranged. The Gaza Railway (2 ft. 6 in. gauge) from João Belo to Chikomo has 61 miles open for traffic.

The Beira Railway has a length of 200 miles in the territory administered by the Mozambique Co., and links up at the frontier with the Rhodesian Railway system. The Trans-Zambesia Railway, 175 miles in length, from Dondo, on the Beira Junction Railway, to Murraça, on the southern bank of the Zambesi, was opened for traffic on July 1, 1922. On the northern bank of the Zambesi, the Central Africa Railway (61 miles long, of which 45 miles are in Portuguese territory) connects at Port Herald with the Shiré Highlands Railway. When a bridge is constructed over the Zambesi these three railways will give a continuous connection between British Nyasaland and the port of Beira.

The Government has been working on a definite plan, and the finished scheme for the Province south of parallel 22, the southern boundary of the Mozambique Co.'s territories, embraces the following lines: Moamba to Xinavane, 55 miles (completed); Xinavane via Chissane to Chai-Chai, or via Chibuto to Chigomo, 70 miles (not yet begun); Chai-Chai via Manjacasse to Chigomo, 51 miles (completed); Chigomo via Jinagai to Inharrime, 51 miles (projected); Inharrime to Inhambane, 55 miles (completed). Activities north of the Mozambique Co. are represented by two lines of penetration, one from the port of Quelimane, which taps what is said to be the richest region on the whole coast and now extends to Mocuba on the river Lujella, and the other from Lumbo, on the mainland opposite the island and port of Mozambique, capital of the district of that name and formerly capital of the Province, to Moenta.

Beira is connected by telegraph with Salisbury in Mashonaland, and Lourenço Marques with the Transvaal system. Quelimane has telegraphic communication with Chiromo. In 1925 there were 7,452 miles of telegraph line. There are 12,400 miles of roads.

Since September 1, 1922, the escudo currency has been in vogue in Portuguese East Africa, but at Lourenço Marques and Beira, libra esterlina (sterling) notes used still to be issued by the local banks. This right was rescinded in 1926, and the sterling notes are to be withdrawn from circulation within ten years.

The metric system is used. Certain English weights and measures are also in current use.

Governor-General.—Colonel José Ricardo Pereira Cabral.

Governor of Mozambique Company's Territory.—Captain Carlos de Almeida Pereira.

Portuguese India consists of Gôa, containing the capital, Pangin, or Nova-Gôa, on the Malabar coast; Damão, on the coast about 100 miles north of Bombay; and Diu, a small island about 140 miles west of Damão. The total area of the colony is 3,783 square km. (1,460 square miles), with a population in 1931 of 569,187 (273,092 males and 296,095 females). In 1930-31 there were 90 elementary schools, 3 secondary schools, also a medical school and a teachers' training college. In Gôa there are 501 salt works employing 1,968 men, the annual production amounting to about 12,200 tons. In Damão there are 11 salt works, and in Diu 5. In 1906 deposits of manganese were discovered near Mormugão and 6 concerns with 21 mines are at work. The military force consists of 41 officers and 1,391 other ranks. The Mormugão railway (51 miles) connects this port with the lines of British India. The estimated revenue of Gôa, &c., in 1931-32 balanced at 6,991,281 rupees. The trade is largely transit. In 1931 the imports by sea and land amounted to 56,362,227 rupees, the exports to 4,668,175 rupees. Chief exports are: coconuts, fish (fresh and salted), spices, caju-nuts, salt, and copra. There are in Portuguese India 46 telegraph offices and 262 miles of telegraph line and 75 miles of telephone line.

Governor-General.—General Graveiro Lopes.

Macao, in China, situated on an island of the same name at the mouth of the Canton River, forms with the two small adjacent islands of Taipa and Colôane a province, the city being divided into two wards, one inhabited by Chinese and the other by non-Chinese, each having its own administrator. The population, according to the census of 1927, is 157,175 (3,846 Portuguese, 152,738 Chinese and 591 of various nationalities). Estimated revenue in 1932-33, 5,254,040 patacas, and expenditure 5,222,413 patacas. The military force consists of 30 officers and 854 men. For education there are the Seminary of S. José, the Central College of Macao, and about 200 elementary schools. The trade, mostly transit, is in the hands of Chinese. Imports in 1930, 20,571,497 patacas (approximate value of the pataca is 2s.); exports, 11,014,782 patacas. The colony has 118 miles of telephone line and a wireless station. It is served by various British, Japanese and Dutch steamship lines.

Portuguese Timor consists of the eastern portion of the island of that name in the Malay Archipelago, with the territory of Ambeno and the neighbouring islands of Pulo Cambing and Pulo Jako, a total area of 7,800 square miles. By treaty of April, 1859, ratified August 18, 1860, the island was divided between Portugal and Holland; by convention of October 1, 1904, ratified in 1908, a boundary arrangement was made between the two Governments, certain enclaves being exchanged and the possession of other territories settled. This possession, formerly administratively joined to Macao, was in 1896, confirmed in 1926, made an independent province. Population in 1931, 474,363. There are 12 schools, and 5 colleges directed by the Missions. In 1929, there were 1,022 students. Estimated public revenue and expenditure for 1931-32 were 1,310,769 and 1,309,531 escudos respectively. Military force not less than 323 men (212 natives). Imports (1931) 859,697 patacas; exports, 2,090,778 patacas. Chief exports are: coffee, sandal-wood, sandal-root, copra, and wax. The port is Dilly, the capital. There is a good road system of 250 miles, telephone lines of 1,656 miles and a wireless station at Dilly.

ROME, SEE AND CHURCH OF.

(CITTÀ DEL VATICANO)

FOR many ages until Pius IX.'s reign, with some comparatively short breaks, the Popes or Roman Pontiffs bore temporal sway over a territory stretching across Mid-Italy from sea to sea and comprising an area of some 16,000 square miles, with a population finally of some 3,125,000 souls. Of this dominion the whole has been incorporated with the Italian Kingdom. Furthermore, by an Italian law dated May 13, 1871, there was guaranteed to His Holiness and his successors for ever, besides possession of the Vatican and Lateran palaces and the villa of Castel Gandolfo, a yearly income of 3,225,000 lire, but this allowance remained unclaimed and unpaid until February 11, 1929, when a settlement of the 'Roman question' was arrived at by three treaties between the Italian Government and the Vatican. On that day there was signed (1) a Political Treaty, which recognized the full and independent sovereignty of the Holy See in the city of the Vatican; (2) a Concordat, to regulate the condition of religion and of the Church in Italy; and (3) a Financial Convention, in accordance with which the Holy See shall receive 750,000,000 lire in cash and 1,000,000,000 lire in Italian 5 per cent. State bonds. This sum is to be a definitive settlement of all the financial claims of the Holy See against Italy in consequence of the loss of its temporal power in 1870. The treaties were ratified and the sum of 750,000,000 lire paid on June 7, 1929.

The Pope exercises the Sovereignty and has full legal, executive and judicial powers. A Governor, directly and exclusively responsible to the Pope, exercises executive powers. The Judicial power is delegated to a tribunal in first instance, to the Sacra Romana Rota in appeal and to the Supreme Tribunal of the Segnatura, which is the ultimate authority where there is an appeal.

In its diplomatic relations with foreign countries, Città del Vaticano is represented by the Segreteria di Stato del Sommo Pontefice.

The area of the Vatican City is 44 hectares (108·7 acres). It includes the Piazza di San Pietro (St. Peter's Square), which is to remain normally open to the public and subject to the powers of the Italian police. It has its own railway station (opened November, 1932), postal facilities, coins and radio. The official journal is the Acta Apostolicæ Sedis. Thirteen buildings in Rome, although outside the Vatican City, enjoy extra-territorial rights. The new building of the Pontifical Gregorian University in Rome, under the direction of the Jesuits, was formally opened in November, 1930.

The census of the population of the Vatican City on December 31, 1932, showed 1,025 inhabitants, including: Italians, 853 (578 men and 275 women); Swiss, 121 (4 women).

Supreme Pontiff.—Pius XI. (Achilles Ratti), born at Desio, May 31, 1857; Archbishop of Milan and Cardinal, June 13, 1921; elected Supreme Pontiff, as successor of Benedict XV., February 6, 1922.

Secretary of State.—Cardinal Pacelli. (Appointed February 10, 1930.)

The election of a Pope ordinarily is by scrutiny. Each Cardinal in conclave writes on a ticket his own name with that of the Cardinal whom he chooses. These tickets, folded and sealed, are laid in a chalice which stands on the conclave altar; and each elector approaching the altar repeats a prescribed form of oath. Thereupon the tickets are taken from the chalice by scrutators appointed ad hoc from the electing body; the tickets are compared with the number of Cardinals present, and when it is found that any Cardinal has two-thirds of the votes in his favour he is declared elected.

From the accession of Innocent IX., 232nd in the usual list of Roman Pontiffs, to Pius XI., 261st, the Popes (all Italian) have been as follows:—

The Roman Pontiff (in orders a Bishop, but in jurisdiction held to be by divine right the centre of all Catholic unity, and consequently Pastor and Teacher of all Christians) has for advisers and coadjutors the Sacred College of Cardinals, consisting, when complete, of 70 members, namely, 6 Cardinal-Bishops (holders of the suburbicary sees), 50 Cardinal-Priests, and 14 Cardinal-Deacons. In practice, however, while the total number of Cardinals is never allowed to exceed 70, the number of Cardinal-Priests frequently exceeds 50, while there are usually many vacancies among the Cardinal-Deacons. In March, 1934, the Sacred College consisted of 5 Cardinal-Bishops, 47 Cardinal-Priests, and 3 Cardinal-Deacons.¹ The following list gives the names, dates, and offices of these 55 Cardinals:—

¹ The terms Cardinal-Priest and Cardinal-Deacon have for centuries ceased to imply severally the particular orders of priest or deacon. Nowadays in the Sacred College a presbyteral title is freely given to one in episcopal or diaconal orders, and a diaconry to a priest or even to a simple clerk.

Though primarily belonging to the local Roman Church, the Cardinals, drawn from every nation of Christendom, are now regarded as Princes of the Church at large. Originally they were simply the parish rectors of Rome, or the deacons of Roman deaconries. In 1586 their number was finally settled by Sixtus V., at seventy. The Cardinals compose the Pope's Senate or Council and the various Sacred Congregations, govern the Church while the Apostolic See is vacant, and elect the deceased Pontiff's successor. They received the distinction of the red hat under Innocent IV., during the first General Council of Lyons, in 1246; and the title of Eminence from Urban VIII., in 1630. In 1930 all Archbishops and Bishops of the Catholic Church had conferred upon them by the Pope the title of 'Excellency.'

The central administration of the Roman Catholic Church is carried on by a number of permanent committees called Sacred Congregations, composed of Cardinals, with Consultors and Officials. There are now twelve Sacred Congregations, viz., Holy Office, Consistorial, Discipline of the Sacraments, Council, Religious, Propaganda Fide, Rites, Ceremonial, Extraordinary Ecclesiastical Affairs, Seminaries and Universities, the Basilica of St. Peter's, and for the Oriental Church. Besides these there are several permanent Commissions, for example, one for Biblical Studies, another for Historical Studies, another for Preservation of the Faith in Rome, another for Codification of Canon Law. Furthermore, the Roman Curia contains three tribunals, to wit, the Apostolic Penitentiary, the Supreme Tribunal of the Apostolic Signature, and the Sacred Roman Rota; and, lastly, various offices, as the Apostolic Chancery, the Apostolic Datary, the Apostolic Chamber, the Secretariate of State, etc.

The States wherewith the Holy See maintains diplomatic relations are Austria, Bavaria, Belgium, Czechoslovakia, France, Germany, Hungary, Yugoslavia, Monaco, the Netherlands, Poland, Portugal, Rumania, Russia, Spain, and the United Kingdom (1914), together with most of the American Republics, except the United States and Mexico.

In December, 1930, the issue of Papal coinage was resumed, after a lapse of 60 years. The new coins are eight in number, and will have the same fineness and value as the corresponding Italian coins. Two are of bronze and worth 5 and 10 centesimi respectively. There are two other coins in nickel, worth 20 and 50 centesimi, and three silver coins worth respectively 1, 5 and 10 lire. In addition, there is a gold piece of 100 lire. In virtue of a special convention between the Vatican City and the Italian Government (to remain in force for 10 years), each State allows the currency of the other to circulate in its territory. The Vatican City has, however, given an undertaking that the total value of the bronze, nickel and silver coins issued by it in any year will not exceed 1,000,000 lire.

Within the British Empire the present number of Roman Catholic residential sees is 202, viz., 39 archbishoprics and 122 bishoprics, besides 75 apostolic vicariates (mostly held by Bishops of titular sees), and 26 apostolic prefectures: while the Roman Catholic population subject to King George V. is estimated at 16,236,088 souls, of whom 6,290,147 are in Europe; 8,300,951 in Asia; 1,314,644 in Africa; 3,880,572 in British America; and 1,449,574 in Australasia. In the United States (including possessions) there were in 1933 29,693,915 Roman Catholics. Throughout the world the Roman Catholic population is reckoned at 334,664,791 souls, of whom 528,158,020 are of the Latin Rite (Catholic Directory, London).

RUMANIA.

(ROMÂNIA)

Reigning King.

Carol II, born October 16, 1893, son of the late King Ferdinand and Queen Marie, married March 10, 1921, Princess Helen, daughter of the late Constantine, King of the Hellenes (this marriage was dissolved June 21, 1928, when the Princess received the title of Princess of Rumania).

On December 28, 1925, Prince Carol renounced his right of succession to the Throne; this was confirmed by Act of Parliament on January 4, 1926, when his son, Prince Mihai, was declared Heir to the Throne. On June 7, 1930, Prince Carol returned to Rumania and was proclaimed King in virtue of an Act of Parliament on June 8, 1930.

Son of the King.—Prince Mihai (Michael), born October 25, 1921, proclaimed King in virtue of his father's renunciation of the succession on the death of his grandfather, King Ferdinand, July 20, 1927, under a Regency. Ceased to be King on his father's accession, June 8, 1930, when he received the title of Prince of Alba Julia.

Sisters and brother of the King.—(1) Elisabeth, born October 11, 1894, married February 27, 1921, to the Diadoch, afterwards George II., King of the Hellenes; (2) Marie, born January 8, 1900, married to Alexander, King of the Serb, Croat, and Slovene State, June 8, 1922; (3) Nicholas, born August 18, 1903; (4) Ileana, born January 5, 1909, married July 26, 1931, to the Archduke Anton of Austria-Tuscany.

The union of the two Principalities of Wallachia and Moldavia was publicly proclaimed at Bucharest and Jassy on Dec. 23, 1861, the present name being given to the united provinces. The first ruler of Rumania was Colonel Cuza, who had been elected 'Hospodar,' or Lord, of Wallachia and of Moldavia in 1859, and who assumed the government under the title of Prince Alexandru Joan I. A Palace conspiracy in February, 1866, forced Prince Alexandru Joan to abdicate, and led to the election of Prince Carol I. The representatives of the people, assembled at Bucharest, proclaimed Rumania's independence from Turkey, May 10, 1877, which was confirmed by Art. 43 of the Congress of Berlin, signed July 13, 1878. King Carol I. of Hohenzollern-Sigmaringen reigned as Prince from 1866 to 1881, and as King from 1881 to 1914. On April 11, 1918, Bessarabia was joined to Rumania; the Bukovina on November 28, 1918; and Transylvania on December 1, 1918.

Constitution and Government.

The Constitution of Rumania was adopted on March 28, 1923. According to this the subsoil and the forests are nationalized. The Senate consists of 170 members (Old Kingdom, 82; Transylvania, 45; Bessarabia, 24; and Bukovina, 19), including 4 for the Universities and 19 Bishops. The Heir to the Crown is also a Senator. There are also life senators—former Premiers who held office for at least 4 years; former Presidents of the High Court of Justice who held office for at least 5 years; former Commanders-in-Chief of the army who have held office (in peace time) for at least 4 years. The Chamber of Deputies consists of 387 members. A Senator must be 40 years of age, and a Deputy 25. Members of either House must be Rumanians by birth or naturalisation, in full enjoyment of civil and political rights, and domiciled in the country. All citizens of 21 years, paying taxes, are electors. Both Senators and Deputies receive 500 lei per each day of actual attendance, besides 6000 lei per month and free railway passes. The King has a suspensive veto over all laws passed by the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate. The executive is vested in a council of Ministers.

The elections held on December 22, 1933, resulted in the return of the following parties:—Lower House: Government (Old Liberals), 300; National Peasants, 29; Young Liberals (Professor Bratianu), 10; Peasant Party (M. Lupu), 11; Anti-Semites (M. Cuza), 9; National Agrarians (M. Goga), 8; Radical Peasants (M. Junian), 6; Agrarian Union (M. Argetoianu), 5; and Hungarian Party, 9; total, 387. Senate: Old Liberals, 244; other parties, 2; total, 246.

The Cabinet (appointed January 10, 1934), is now composed as follows:—

Prime Minister.—George Tatarescu.

Minister of Interior.—I. Inculetz.

Minister of Foreign Affairs.—Nicholas Titulescu.

Minister of Finance.—M. Slavesco.

Minister of Justice.—Victor Antonescu.

Minister of Domains and Agriculture.—Basil Sassu.

Minister of Education.—Constantine Angelescu.

Minister of Communications.—R. Franasovici.

Minister of Defence.—General Uica.

Minister of Labour and Public Health.—Dr. Costinesco.

Minister of Industry and Commerce.—M. Teodorescu.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

For purposes of local government Wallachia is divided into 17 districts, Moldavia into 13, the Dobruja into 4, Bessarabia into 9, the Bukovina into 5, and Transylvania (with the Banat, Crisana and Maramuresh) into 23 districts, each of which has a prefect, a receiver of taxes, and a civil tribunal. In Rumania (1919) there are 71 districts and 8,854 communes, 165 urban and 8,689 rural. In the rural communes there are 11,522 villages and 1,048 hamlets. The appellations 'urban' and 'rural' do not depend on the number of inhabitants, but are given by law.

Area and Population.

As a result of the Treaties of Peace of 1919 Rumania was enlarged, and the area and population of the New Kingdom, according to the census taken on December 29, 1930, are shown as follows:—

Country	Area in sq. miles	Population
Old Rumania	53,489	8,786,472
Bessarabia	17,146	2,863,409
The Bukovina	4,030	853,524
Transylvania	22,312	3,217,149
Crisana-Maramuresh	14,296	1,862,411
The Banat	11,009	942,072
Total	122,282	18,025,037

By the Treaty of Bucharest (August 7, 1913) between Bulgaria and Rumania, the former ceded to the latter 2,969 sq. miles of territory, with a population of 273,090, mostly Turks. The new land was formed into two departments, Durostor and Caliacra.

The number of births, deaths, and marriages, with surplus of births over deaths, was as follows for four years:—

Years	Births	Deaths	Marriages	Surplus of Births over Deaths
1929	600,556	377,646	159,485	222,910
1930	625,341	346,714	166,824	278,627
1931	604,982	378,507	166,966	226,475
1932	662,049	399,346	175,137	267,703

The populations of the principal towns in Rumania in 1930 (according to the census of December 29) were as follows:—

Bucharest	631,283	Ploësti	77,325
Chishinau	117,016	Arad	77,225
Cernautzi	111,122	Braïli	68,310
Yassy	102,595	Craiova	63,063
Galatz	101,148	Brasov	59,234
Cluj	93,550	Constantza	58,258
Timisoara	91,866	Satu Mare	49,914
Oradea Mare	82,325	Sibiu	48,013

Religion, Education, Justice, &c.

Of the total population of Rumania (in 1930) 13,027,305 belonged to the Orthodox Church, 1,320,000 were Greek Catholics, 1,196,357 were Roman Catholics, 717,162 Reformists, 392,200 Lutherans, 72,000 Unitarians, 984,213 Jews, 156,000 Moslems and 160,000 others. The National Orthodox Church of Rumania is administered by a Holy Synod under the presidency of Mgr. Miron Cristea, who was enthroned as first Patriarch of Rumania on November 1, 1925. To the Holy Synod belong all the Metropolitans (of Yassy, Chishinău, Cernăuți, and Sibiu), all the Bishops (of Râmnicul-Vâlcea, Galatz, Constantza, Curtea de Argeș, Buzău, Roman, Ismail, Cetatea-Albă, Bălți, Arad, Caransebeș, Oradea) and all the Archimandrites (one for each Metropolitan and Bishopric).

There is a Uniat (Greek-Catholic) Rumanian Metropolitan at Blaj, with diocesan bishops at Lugosh, Cluj, Oradea, and Baia-Mare. There is a Latin archbishop in Bucharest, with diocesan bishops at Alba Julia, Oradea Mare, and Yassy. There are Reformed bishops at Cluj and Oradea Mare; a German Lutheran bishop at Sibiu; a Magyar Lutheran superintendent at Arad; and a Unitarian bishop at Cluj. The clergy of the National Orthodox Church and of the Uniat Rumanian Church are paid by the State. The clergy of the other denominations receive subventions from the State. Full liberty of religion is assured to every creed or sect.

Education is free and compulsory 'wherever there are schools.' In 1930-31 there were 14,900 elementary schools with 34,754 teachers and 1,973,949 pupils.

There were in 1930-31, 820 secondary schools with 158,790 pupils and 11,164 teachers and 25 higher educational institutions having 9,913 students and 590 professors.

There are also 2 commercial academies at Bucharest and in Cluj; 2 agricultural academies in Bucharest and in Cluj; 2 polytechnic institutes in Bucharest and Tomișoara; 1 academy of architecture at Bucharest; 1 law academy at Oradea Mare; 10 theological institutes; 4 music academies at Bucharest, Yassy, Cluj, and Cernăuți; 3 plastic academies at Bucharest, Yassy, and Cluj.

There are 4 universities: at Bucharest, founded in 1864 (602 professors and 16,516 students in 1930-31), Iasi (Yassy), founded in 1860 (372 professors and 4,889 students in 1930-31), Cluj (Kolozsvár), in Transylvania, founded in 1919 (350 professors and 3,950 students in 1930-31), and Cernăuți (Czernowitz), in Bukovina, founded in 1920 (101 professors and 2,311 students in 1930-31). At Chisinau, in Bessarabia, there is a Faculty of Theology with 18 professors and 354 students in 1930-31.

Justice is administered by a court of cassation, 12 appeal courts, 72 tribunals, and 465 justices of the peace. Assistance is given to the sick in 530 hospitals and hospices (departmental, communal, rural, and private).

Finance.

The following table shows (in thousands of lei) the estimated ordinary revenue and expenditure for years ending March 31 (old style):—

The public debt of Rumania amounted on April 1, 1933, to 138,148,069,416 lei, of which 83,500,000,000 lei were external debt, 13,500,000,000 lei internal debt, and 39,583,511,656 lei for War debt. There were also external Relief Bonds outstanding totalling 1,564,557,760 lei.

Defence.

Military service in Rumania is compulsory and universal from the ages of 21 to 50. The normal terms of service are 2 years in the active army, 18 years in the regular army reserve, and 9 years in the militia. Young men exempted from service in the ranks, and those surplus to the annual contingent, are posted to a supplementary reserve.

The peace establishment of the army in 1933 was 14,649 officers and 231,426 other ranks organised in 21 divisions, 1 corps of light infantry of 2 divisions, 3 cavalry divisions, and 1 independent cavalry brigade. The air personnel (1931) amounted to 11,836 all ranks, with 773 aeroplanes.

The infantry is armed with the Mannlicher rifle; the Rumanian artillery is still largely armed with guns of the Krupp type, but a considerable number of batteries have the French type of 75-mm. field guns and French medium and light howitzers.

In the Black Sea are 4 destroyers, 3 ex-Austrian torpedo boats and 4 motor gunboats, a submarine and a depot ship. The Danube force comprises 7 monitors (600 tons), armed with 4·7-in. guns, 3 vedettes and some small craft. There is a naval base at Sulina, on the Black Sea. The naval school is in Constantza. The expenditure for 1933 amounted to: land forces, 5,413,177,400 lei; naval forces, 52,925,259 lei; air forces, 168,599,411 lei.

Production and Industry.

According to a statistical estimate, the distribution of the soil of Rumania with respect to agriculture in 1932 was as follows:—Ploughed land, 31,123,907 acres; meadows and pasture, 9,831,983 acres; vineyards and fruit trees, 1,366,720 acres; and other lands, 12,542,576 acres.

For 2 years the chief agricultural crops for Greater Rumania were as follows:—

Crop	Area cultivated		Production
	1931	1932	1931	1932
	Acres	Acres	Metric Tons	Metric Tons
Wheat . . .	8,662,049	7,087,991	3,682,292	1,511,476

Maize . . .	11,743,778	11,787,357	6,063,333	5,992,970

In 1931, Rumania had 1,988,126 horses, 4,079,467 cattle, 12,356,015 sheep, 424,855 goats, and 3,221,472 swine.

The catch of fish in 1932 from State properties amounted to 15,089 metric tons.

The principal minerals are salt, lignite, iron and copper ores, petroleum and natural gas. Petroleum wells, both government and private, are worked at Prahova, Dambovitza, Bacau, and Buzau. The total output of crude oil in 1930 was 5,792,311 metric tons; in 1931, 6,756,054 metric tons; in 1932, 7,336,664 metric tons; and in 1933, 7,375,617 metric tons. The salt mines are situated in the region of the lower Carpathians, from Bukovina to the west of Oltenic, an area of over 250 square miles. Salt mining has been a state monopoly since 1863 (production in 1932 was 288,070 metric tons, as compared with 254,808 metric tons in 1931). Output of lignite, in 1930, 2,071,057 metric tons; in 1931, 1,631,861 metric tons; in 1932, 1,463,928 metric tons. The output of natural gas in 1932 was 1,456,036,131 cubic metres; in 1931, 1,383,071,961 cubic metres; iron ore, 8,051 metric tons in 1932, 61,907 metric tons in 1931.

Industries of some importance are flour milling, brewing, and distilling. In 1932 there were 3,524 industrial establishments employing 132,389 workmen, 19,920 technical and administrative employees, with an invested capital of 40,549,182,000 lei.

Commerce.

The values of the imports into and exports from Rumania exclusive of gold and silver (in 1000 lei) were:—

Years	Imports	Exports	Years	Imports	Exports
1930	22,540,929	28,525,585	1932	11,935,457	16,654,537
1931	15,754,569	10,047,002	1933	11,592,204	14,101,342

The principal items in the Rumanian foreign trade in 1931 and 1932 were as follows (in million lei):—

Shipping and Communications.

The European Commission of the Danube, called into being in 1856, consisted before the war of 8 delegates, one representing each of the following Powers: Austria-Hungary, France, Germany, Great Britain, Italy, Rumania, Russia, and Turkey. By Article 846 of the Treaty of Versailles, only representatives of Great Britain, France, Italy and Rumania constitute the Commission at present. It has its seat at Galatz. Since November 24, 1904, it has existed, or will exist, for successive periods of 3 years unless denounced by one of the contracting Powers a year before the conclusion of any such period. By the operations of the Commission the Danube below Braila and along the Sulina branch has been deepened and corrected, so that at Sulina the depth has been increased from 9 ft. to 24 ft., and of the Sulina branch the minimum depth has been increased from 8 ft. to 18½ ft., while by canalisation and other works the navigation has been shortened from 43½ to 33½ nautical miles. The income of the Commission is derived entirely from taxes levied on shipping leaving the river. Receipts in 1932, 7,759,478 gold francs; expenditure 6,296,634 gold francs. The Commission has its own flag.

The tonnage cleared from the Danube ports in 1932 was 1,322,199 tons, as against 1,553,211 tons in 1931; and at Constanza, 1,626 vessels of 4,382,431 tons, as against 1,565 vessels of 3,841,555 tons in 1930.

Railway history in Rumania commenced in 1860. All the main railway lines are owned and operated by the State, but there are also several privately owned lines, mainly in Transylvania. The length of Rumanian State Railways in 1932 was 6,902 miles. The quantity of freight carried in 1932 was 20,628,000 metric tons; number of passengers, 24,416,000; gross receipts, 8,131,302,000 lei. The State has, besides, under the general railway direction, a commercial navigation service on the Danube and Black Sea.

Within Rumania there were 66,212 miles of roads in 1931, of which 36,458 miles are of macadam, 5,912 miles gravel roads, and the remainder are classified as natural dirt roads.

The Compagnie Internationale de Navigation Aerienne runs a daily air service from April to October between Paris, Bucharest and Constantinople.

The reorganisation of the post-office under an autonomous regime took place on August 3, 1929, in accordance with the Law for the Commercialisation of State Enterprises. In 1931, 129,587,150 ordinary letters were handled by the post-office, of which 106,894,645 were inland letters and 22,683,505 foreign. In 1930 there were 34,506 miles of telegraph wire and cable for internal use and 3,863 miles for international connections. The number of telegrams sent was 6,282,341. In 1932 Rumania had 117,197 miles of urban system telephone lines in Bucharest only, and 44,456 miles of inter-urban system. The number of urban telephone conversations was 183,000,000, and the inter-urban ones, 3,211,008. Number of conversations, 92,299,458. A concession of the public telephone system for a minimum period of 20 years was granted to the International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation of New York in July, 1930, and a Rumanian company called S. A. de Telefoane was formed and took over the whole of the system on January 1, 1931.

A radio station at Baneasa was completed in 1929.

Banking, Money, Weights, and Measures.

The National Bank of Rumania on January 27, 1934, had, gold and gold exchange 10,110,318,000 lei, notes in circulation, 20,833,914,000 lei, discounts 8,462,364,000 lei. The privilege of the National Bank to issue currency notes was prolonged to December 31, 1960, according to a convention signed in May, 1925. The capital of the bank was at the same time raised to 100 million lei. Other public credit institutions are a Savings Bank, a Deposit and Consignment Bank, an Agricultural Loan Bank, a Rural Crédit Foncier, 2 Urban Crédit Fonciérs (at Bucharest and Jassi), an Agricultural Bank, and a Cassa Rurala, an institution whose purpose is to buy properties and sell them in lots to peasants. There are also three private banking institutions. On December 31, 1929, there were 1,097 banks in Rumania with a paid-up capital of 11,180,000,000 lei; their assets and liabilities balanced at 122,835,000,000 lei.

A unified paper currency came into use for the whole of Rumania on August 1, 1920.

The metric system for weights and measures was introduced into Rumania in 1876. The unit of the monetary system was made the leu (of 100 bani), equivalent to the franc. Silver is legal tender up to 50 lei only. The gold coins of 20-, 10-, and 5-lei which were formerly in circulation have been withdrawn since the stabilization of the currency on February 8, 1929. The value of the leu was fixed at 10 milligrammes gold (.900 fine), which is equal to 813.588 to the £ sterling. Nickel is coined in 5-, 10-, and 20-centime (bani) pieces.

UNION OF SOCIALIST SOVIET REPUBLICS

(RUSSIA.)

ON March 12, 1917, a revolution broke out in Russia, as a result of which the Emperor Nicholas II abdicated. A Provisional Government under Prince George Lvoff was set up by the Duma, which held office until May 16, 1917, when it was reorganised. On August 6, 1917, a new Cabinet under M. Alexander Kerensky was formed. This too was reorganised on October 8, 1917, and maintained itself until November 7, 1917, when the Military Revolutionary Committee of the Petrograd Soviet seized the government authority, and handed it over the next day to the All-Russian Congress of Soviets.

The Constitution of the new State was adopted at the fifth All-Russian Congress of Soviets, on July 10, 1918, and additions or alterations were made at subsequent Soviet Congresses (December, 1920-23). On December 30, 1922, delegates from the four principal Soviet Republics met at Moscow and concluded a Treaty of Union, setting up a Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, covering Russia (R.S.F.S.R.), Ukraine (U.S.S.R.), White Russia (W.R.S.S.R.), and the Transcaucasian Federation (T.S.F.S.R.). In September, 1924, the Uzbek S.S.R. and the Turkoman S.S.R. were formed and joined the Union. On December 5, 1929, the seventh Republic, that of Tajikistan was formed. The Constitution of the Union was ratified by the Second Union Congress of Soviets, which met in January and February, 1924.

The Government of the Union consists of a Union Central Executive Committee and a Union Council of People's Commissaries. The former is elected by the Union Congress of Soviets, the supreme authority of the Union, and between Congresses is the sovereign legislative, administrative, and judicial authority of the Union. It is convened three times a year, and consists of two chambers—the Union Council, since March, 1931, consisting of 472 members elected on the principle of proportional representation of the seven constituent Republics, and the Council of Nationalities, since March, 1931, of 138 members, elected on the basis of 5 members for every independent and autonomous republic, and 1 member for every autonomous region. All legislation must be adopted by both chambers. The Presidium, or Standing Committee, which transacts current business, is composed of 27 members, 9 from each chamber and 9 elected at a joint meeting.

Chairmen of the Union Central Executive Committee.—M.M. Kalinin (R.S.F.S.R.), Petrovsky (Ukraine), Cherviakov (White Russia), Musabekov (Transcaucasia), Aitakov (Turkoman S.S.R.), Faizula-Khodzhaev (Uzbek S.S.R.), Nusratula (Tajik S.S.R.).

Subordinate legislative and executive authority is vested in the Union Council of People's Commissaries, or Cabinet. Each People's Commissary is, since March, 1934, assisted by a maximum of two deputies and a council which meets at intervals. Decisions of the Union Council of People's Commissaries may be revised by the Presidium of the Union Central Executive Committee. During the periods between the Sessions of the Central Executive Committee and those of the Congresses of the Soviets, the Presidium of the Central Executive Committee is the sovereign authority of the Union and, in accordance with Article 1 of the Constitution, it has among other rights the prerogative of carrying on diplomatic negotiations of concluding political and other treaties with other Powers, of altering the external frontiers of the Union, of declaring war and concluding peace, and of ratifying international treaties. The Council of People's Commissaries is also responsible to the full Central Executive Committee and to the Union Congress of Soviets, to which it makes a report as a whole, in addition to the departmental reports.

The following is the constitution of the Union Council of People's Commissaries (January, 1933):—

President.—V. M. Molotov.
Vice-Presidents.—J. E. Rudzutak, V. V. Kuybyshev.
Foreign Affairs.—M. M. Litvinov.
War and Marine.—K. E. Voroshilov.
Home Supplies.—A. I. Mikoyan.
Foreign Trade.—A. Rosenholz.
Agriculture.—J. A. Yakovlev.
Land Transport.—G. K. Orjonikidze.
Water Transport.—N. Yanson.
Posts and Telegraphs.—A. I. Rykov.
Workers' and Peasants' Inspection.—J. E. Rudzutak.
Heavy Industry.—M. Kaganovitch.
Light Industry.—I. E. Liubimov.
Timber Industry.—S. Lobov.
State Farms.—T. A. Yurkin.
Finance.—G. F. Grinko.
President of the State Planning Commission.—V. V. Kuybyshev.

In addition, the Procurer-General of the Republic enters the Council with a consultative voice, as does also the chairman of the Unified State Political Department (O.G.P.U.).

A Commission of Execution under the presidency of Molotov (established December 25, 1930) has been charged with the task of verifying the actual carrying out of Government directions for Socialist construction by State institutions, and with the perfecting of the work of the Government machinery. As a step towards decentralization the Supreme Economic Council was reorganized in January, 1932, into the three commissariats of Heavy Industry, Light Industry, and Timber Industry.

Each of the seven constituent States of the Union—R.S.F.S.R., Ukraine, White Russia, Transcaucasia, Uzbekistan, Turkmenistan, and Tajikistan—retains its own Central Executive Committee and Council of People's Commissaries. Certain of the departments mentioned above are the exclusive prerogative of the Union Government. Others exist both in the Union Government and in the individual Republics, and a number exist only in the individual Republics.

The British Government recognised the Government of the U.S.S.R. de jure on February 1, 1924.

Constitution and Government of the R.S.F.S.R. (Russia Proper).

The greater part of the former Russian Empire is under the rule of the Soviet Government. But a number of States have gradually evolved and are maintaining themselves on the borders of the old Empire. Five have received formal recognition by the Western Powers, viz., Finland, Poland, Estonia, Latvia, and Lithuania. A number of other independent Republics, which have adopted the Soviet form of Government, are federated with the Government of Russia. These include: White Russia, the Ukraine, the Uzbek, Turcoman and Tajik S.S. Republics, Armenia, Georgia, Azerbaijan. (The last three constitute the Transcaucasian Federal Soviet Republic.)

All the remaining territory of the former Russian Empire constitutes the Russian Socialist Federal Soviet Republic (R.S.F.S.R.). This contains the provinces of Russia proper, autonomous republics (Kirghiz, Tartar, Bashkir, Dagestan, Yakutsk, Crimean, Karelian, German on the Volga, Chuvash, Buriat-Mongol, Kazak, and the Kara-Kalpak), and autonomous regions or areas (Komi, Mariiskaia, Votjak, Kalmyk, Karatchayev, Chechenian, Kabardino-Balkarsk, Northern Osetian, Ingushetian, Adygeisk, Oiratsk, Mordvinian, etc.). The autonomous republics are governed by their own Central Executive Committee and Council of People's Commissaries: the regions and areas are governed by executive committees elected by the local Congress of Soviets.

So far as the Russian Socialist Federal Soviet Republic is concerned, a Constitution was adopted by the fifth All-Russian Soviet Congress, the text of which was published on July 19, 1918, and subsequently amplified, 1919-1925, and this remains the constitutional model for the other States of the Union. According to the Constitution, which has been declared a 'fundamental law' of the Republic, Russia is a Republic of Soviets (Councils) of Workers', Soldiers', and Peasants' Deputies; and all central and local authority is vested in these Soviets. Private property in land is abolished, all land being the common property of the people; all forests, mines, waters having a national importance and all livestock and fixtures, model estates and agricultural concerns are national property. The State owns all factories, mines, railways, and other means of production and transport, but may lease them to private individuals, corporations, or State trusts.

The R.S.F.S.R. is a free Socialist community of all the labouring masses of Russia. Freedom of conscience, of opinion, of the Press, and of meeting is provided by the Constitution. In order to protect the conquests of the Revolution, universal military service is incumbent on all citizens. The privilege of defending the Revolution with arms is, however, reserved for the labouring classes only; the non-labouring sections of the population will discharge other military duties. The political rights of Russian citizenship will be granted without any formalities to foreigners residing on the territory of the Russian Republic for purposes of labour.

The highest authority in the State is the All-Russian Congress of Soviets, which consists of representatives of town Soviets on the basis of one delegate for every 25,000 electors, and of Regional Congresses of Soviets on the basis of one delegate for every 125,000 inhabitants. The Congress elects an All-Russian Central Executive Committee, consisting of 400 members, which constitute the supreme legislative, administrative, and controlling body in the Republic, and meets not less frequently than once in four months, current affairs being administered by a Standing Committee (Presidium). The Central Executive Committee also forms a Council of People's Commissaries for the general administration of the affairs of the Republic, to consist of 11 People's Commissariats and the Chairman of the Council of People's Commissars.

The franchise is enjoyed irrespective of religion, nationality, residence, sex, etc., by all citizens over 18 years of age who earn their livelihood by productive labour, and soldiers and sailors (including the commanders) in the Red Army and Navy.

The following classes are deprived of the franchise: Those employing others for profit, or living on unearned income, monks and priests of all religions, agents and employees of the former police, secret service, etc., members of the former reigning dynasty, imbeciles and wards, and persons deprived of civic rights by the criminal courts.

In accordance with the latest decrees, however, persons employing hired labour, or enjoying unearned incomes or engaged in trade, may be granted the right to vote by the regional election commissions, providing they can present a certificate from the local factory workshop committee, a local working peasant organisation, or local trade union committee, testifying that at the time of the election the given individual lives on an income derived from his own labour and does not exploit the labour of others.

Individuals engaged in agriculture and employing hired labour within the limits specified in the agricultural codes of the Constituent Republics of the Union are not deprived of their vote if they are otherwise eligible. Similarly the vote is enjoyed by people who are in receipt of interest from deposits in workers' savings banks, or from Government or municipal loan scrip, providing they are otherwise eligible.

Provision is also made in the Constitution for local government by means of local Soviets in villages and towns, with district and regional Congresses, which meet annually. Each Congress elects an Executive Committee, which administers the territory under its control until the next Congress.

Chairman of A.R.C.E.C.—M. Kalinin.

Secretary.—A. Kiselev.

R.S.F.S.R. Council of People's Commissaries.

Chairman.—D. Sulimov.

Agriculture.—A. I. Muralov.

Finance.—V. N. Yakovlev.

Justice.—N. Krylenko.

Education.—A. S. Bubnov.

Health.—Gregor Kaminski.

Social Welfare.—I. A. Nagovitzyn.

Workers' and Peasants' Inspection.—
N. I. Ilyin.

Light Industry.—K. K. Stryevsky.

Municipal Economy.—N. P. Komarov.

State Planning Commission.—M. I.
Rogoff.

Supplies.—M. Volkov.

The People's Commissariat for the Interior was liquidated on January 1, 1931. Its functions were transferred to the Executive Committees of the Soviets and the organs of the People's Commissariat for Justice.

Area and Population

PROGRESS AND PRESENT CONDITION.

The total area of the Soviet Union in 1927 was given as 21,352,572 sq. kilometres, or 8,241,921 square miles. On January 1, 1933, the population of the U.S.S.R. was estimated at 165,768,400. Figures of population and area are as follows (capitals in brackets) :—

Constituent Republics of the Union	Area in Sq. Miles (Jan. 1, 1927)	Total Population (Jan. 1, 1933)
R.S.F.S.R. (Moscow)	7,626,717	118,983,200
Ukrainian S.S.R. (Harkoff)	174,201	31,901,400
White Russian S.S.R. (Minsk)	48,751	5,439,400
Transcaucasian S.F.S.R. (Tiflis)	71,255	7,074,000
Uzbek S.S.R. (Tashkent)	74,786	4,918,400
Turkoman S.S.R. (Ashkhabad)	189,603	1,268,900
Tajik S.S.R. (Stalinsbad)	56,608	1,183,100
Total	8,241,921	165,768,400

On April 1, 1932, the populations of Transcaucasia were estimated as follows:—Georgia, 2,883,200; Armenia, 1,032,700; and Azerbaijan, 2,510,800.

The following table shows the growth of the population in the U.S.S.R. during the last 35 years :—

Year	Population	Year	Population
1897	106,422,300	1928	150,424,800
1914	130,312,700	1931	160,480,300
1918	142,576,900	1932	163,166,100
1926	147,027,900

The R.S.F.S.R. contains 12 autonomous Republics and 14 autonomous regions. The Ukraine contains 1 autonomous Republic (Moldavia). The 12 autonomous Republics of the R.S.F.S.R. are shown as follows (the capitals are in brackets) :—

* The new designation of Petrograd (March, 1924).

2 Formerly Nizhni Novgorod.

* Formerly Tver.

During the period of the first five year plan a number of new towns came into existence in the new industrial regions. These include Magnitogorsk, Berezniki, Krasnouralsk (in the Urals), Novoye Zaporozhe (in the Ukraine), Anjero-Sudjeansk, Stavinsk, Prokopievsk, Kemerovo (in West Siberia), Cherenkhovo, Igarka (in East Siberia), Karaganda, Kaurad (in Kazakhstan), Khibinogorsk (in the Leningrad region, in the arctic circle), Kundalaksha (in Karelia), Bobriki (in the Moscow region) and others. Some of them, e.g., Magnitogorsk, Prokopievsk, Novoye Zaporozhe have populations numbering over 100,000.

Religion.

By decree of Jan. 23, 1918, the Soviet Government disestablished the Church and appropriated certain categories of its property. From the time of the Revolution of March, 1917, till May, 1929, all religions might be freely professed in the Union. In May, 1929, a decree was issued which altered several paragraphs of the Constitution of the R.S.F.S.R. Paragraph 4 of the constitution of the R.S.F.S.R. in the new text reads as follows: 'With the aim of ensuring real freedom of conscience for the workers, the church is separated from the State and the school from the church, and freedom of religious worship and anti-religious propaganda is permitted to all citizens.' Before the revolution the prevailing religion of the country was the Græco-Russian, officially called the Orthodox Faith.

It is estimated that there are more than 12,000,000 dissenters in Great Russia alone. Roman Catholics are most numerous in the former Polish Provinces, Lutherans in those of the Baltic, and Mohammedans in Eastern and Southern Russia, while the Jews are almost entirely settled in the towns and larger villages of the western and south-western provinces. The Soviet authorities are now endeavouring to settle Jews who have lost their business or occupation as a result of the wars and revolution on the land—particularly in the Crimea. For colonizing Jews in the Far East the Soviet Government in 1928 allotted an area of 20,000 sq. kilometres in the district of Byro-Bidjan. In 1924, 76,000 Jews were engaged in agriculture; in 1927, 165,000; in 1931, 300,000.

Education.

Education in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics is conducted by the Commissariats for Education of the constituent and autonomous Republics of the Union. With regard to the autonomous republics, the higher educational institutions and also the scientific institutions situated in their territory are subordinated to the Commissariat for Education of the particular Federal Republic of which they form an autonomous part.

Education is obligatory, and certain classes of private schools (under State control) are permitted. In the school year 1932-33, 98 per cent. of the children in the U.S.S.R. (from 8 to 17) were educated in the primary schools. Co-education has been adopted in all schools. The principle of 'labour' education is applied differently in the schools of each grade; in taking part in the self-government of the schools, the pupils are taught the art of self-government as citizens. Technical work is conducted as a part of the general industrial life of the country. School education is becoming increasingly technical in the U.S.S.R.

At the beginning of 1933, instruction in the U.S.S.R. was being given as follows:—In the primary schools, to 18,754,000 children; in the secondary schools, to 4,359,000 children; in the technical schools, to 949,000 children; in the factory schools, to 1,177,000 children; in the workers' faculties, to 444,000 students; and in the higher educational institutions (universities, technical colleges, etc.), to 501,000 students.

In 1929 there were in the U.S.S.R.: 29,006 libraries, 5,585 clubs, 21,941 cottage reading-rooms, 1,219 people's homes, 1,062 peasants' homes, 1,201 theatres, 37 concert halls, 38 circuses, 4,093 cinemas, 719 music halls, 44,774 'red' corners.

Previous to the Revolution universities existed in the following places in the territory now included in the R.S.F.S.R. and administered by the People's Commissariat for Education: Moscow (2), Leningrad, Kazan, Saratov, Tomsk, Perm, Irkutsk. The Universities of Dorpat and Warsaw, evacuated during the war, were reorganised in 1918 as the Voronezh and Don Universities, and in the same year another was set up at Nizhni-Novgorod (Gorky). Other universities are at Vladivostok, Sverdlovsk, Kazakstan (Alma-Ata), Kiev, Dniepropetrovsk, Kharkov, Odessa, Stalin'sk (in the town of Stalin in the Ukraine), Georgian State University (in Tiflis), the Central Asiatic State University (in Tashkent), and the White Russian State University (in Minsk).

Owing to the urgent need of specialists, a reorganization of the system of higher education was begun in 1929-30. Existing universities and institutes, which formerly had a more general character, were classified and given over to the control of corresponding economic institutions. Thus all institutions for higher education which prepared specialists for industry were taken over by the Supreme Economic Council (now divided into 3 Commissariats); those preparing agronomists to the Commissariat for Agriculture; and so on.

Justice and Crime.

The basis of the Judiciary System is the same throughout the whole of the Soviet Union, but the Constituent Republics have the right to introduce modifications and to make their own rules for the application of the code of laws. The Supreme Court of the U.S.S.R. is the chief Court and supervising organ for all Constituent Republics.

In accordance with the declaration by the Central Executive Committee of the U.S.S.R. on October 29, 1924, the fundamental objects of the judiciary system of the U.S.S.R. are to safeguard the conquest of the proletarian revolution and to protect the workers' and peasants' government and the laws laid down by the latter.

In the main, there is very little difference between the code of laws and their application in the separate republics. The legal system of the R.S.F.S.R., therefore, can be taken as an example of that in force in all the other Republics of the Union.

The Law Courts of the R.S.F.S.R. are divided into People's Courts and Special Courts. The People's Courts consist of the People's Judge and two Assessors, and their function is to examine as the First Instance, most of the civil and criminal cases, except the more important ones, some of which are tried at the Regional Court, and those of the highest importance at the Supreme Court. The Regional Courts supervise the activities of the People's Courts and also act as Courts of Appeal from the decisions of the People's Court. The Supreme Court exercises supervision over all the Courts of the Republic, and forms an Appeal Court from the Regional Court.

The Judges of the People's Courts and the Presidents and Members of the Regional Courts are selected for one year by the Regional Executive Committee, from individuals who enjoy electoral rights and who have the necessary qualifications with regard to their public or legal work.

The People's Assessors are called upon for duty for six days in a year from lists of electors drawn up in the rural districts, industrial enterprises and army corps. The People's Assessors for the Regional Court must have had at least two years' experience in public or trade union work. The list of Assessors for the Supreme Court is drawn up by the Central Executive Committee of the Republic.

In addition to the People's Courts there are the following Special Courts :— (1) the Labour Section of the People's Court, whose duty it is to supervise the regulations relating to the working conditions and the protection of labour as well as to give decisions on conflicts arising between employers and employees, the violation of regulations; (2) Rural Commissions, which settle disputes concerning agrarian matters, such as claims relating to the use of the land, etc.; (3) Arbitration Committees, which settle disputes arising between separate State organs concerning property rights, with certain exceptions; (4) Military Tribunals, which deal with military offences, espionage, and other classes of crime, when there is no other Law Court on the spot but a military tribunal; (5) Disciplinary Courts, which deal with offences and neglect of official duties committed by members of the Central Executive Committee and similar State organs.

The People's Commissary for Justice is the State Chief Prosecutor, and in every region and district there is a Regional Prosecutor who is immediately subordinate to the Chief Public Prosecutor of the Republics. The duties of the Public Prosecutors are the supervision of the correct application of the law by all State organs.

In 1933 there was instituted the higher prosecuting magistracy.

Finance.

The revenue and expenditure for five years are shown as follows (in millions of roubles) :—

On September 1, 1917, the total indebtedness of Russia amounted to 32,300 million roubles, made up as follows:—Pre-war debt, 8,800 million roubles; seven internal war loans, 10,500 million roubles; loans contracted abroad, 8,000 million roubles; short-dated loans, 5,000 million roubles. According to an estimate made in 1924 the foreign loan was then reckoned at 15,853 million roubles. On March 31, 1933, the indebtedness of Russia to Great Britain was £1,058,973,000 (including interest since December 31, 1918). All these debts were cancelled by decree of January 28, 1918. The debt to the United States is 800 million dollars—250 million for war purchases, 150 million for former private loans, and 400 million advances by private American industrialists to the Soviet Government.

On January 1, 1933, the internal debt was 10,088,900,000 roubles.

Defence.

I. ARMY.

The military system of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics was reorganized in 1925.

The Red Army is now organized on a basis of universal military service. Service is divided into (a) preparatory; (b) service with the colours; (c) reserve service. Preparatory training is on a militia basis and begins at the age of 19: it consists of a preliminary course of 96 hours, lasting 1½ months, and a supplementary course of 280 hours, lasting 28 days, the whole spread over 2 years. The average number of men called up each year is 1,200,000. Of these 400,000 are freed from military service. Of the remaining 800,000, 260,000 go to regimental cadres; 200,000 are trained for territorial formations; and 340,000 are given extra-military training. The strength of the active army is about 562,000.

The whole territory of the U.S.S.R. is divided, for the purposes of the Army, into 10 military districts.

The Red Army is organized as follows: Infantry, consisting of 21 Rifle Corps, 26 Rifle Divisions, 45 Territorial Divisions, and 213 Regiments, or 639 Battalions in all. Cavalry, consisting of 13 Cavalry Divisions (including 4 territorial divisions), and 7 separate Cavalry Brigades; Artillery, 21 Regiments and 71 Light Artillery Regiments; Engineers, 29 Battalions.

On January 1, 1931, the total number of effectives was given as 562,000 (including 37,700 commanding personnel of middle and higher rank). Of these, 504,303 (including 30,354 of middle and higher rank) belonged to the land forces; 28,658 (including 4,946 of middle and higher rank) to the air forces; and 29,039 (including 2,397 of middle and higher rank) to the naval forces.

The formations organized on a military basis consisted of 28,150 OGPU frontier guards, 17,240 OGPU frontier troops stationed in the home country, and 13,200 escort troops. The land, sea and air forces possessed 750 aeroplanes.

Those on active service both in the Standing Army and the Territorial Forces, in the Navy, etc., whilst subject to the Rules and Regulations and Military Discipline, at the same time enjoy all the civic rights of Soviet citizens.

II. NAVY.

The proposed reconstruction of the Soviet Navy proceeds slowly, though it has been officially stated on more than one occasion that a complete reconstitution of the forces is contemplated. There are four battleships, the Parizhskaia-Kommuna, Marat, Oktiabrskaja-Revoliutsia, and Mikhail Frunze, of which only the first two appear to have undergone any considerable refit.

Part of the Black Sea Fleet taken over by General Wrangel, and comprising one battleship, 10 destroyers, 4 submarines and other vessels are still at Bizerta under French protection, and have ceased to have any effective value as fighting units.

State dockyards were at Nevsky, New Admiralty and Galernyi Ostrov, Leningrad; Kronstadt, Sevastopol, and Vladivostok. Guns were made at the Putiloff steel works; 3 or 4 submarines are reported to be under construction at Leningrad, but otherwise very little work appears to be in hand.

The following table gives the principal ships at present in service. The former division into Baltic and Black Sea fleets may be considered to have lapsed, as ships now pass freely through the Dardanelles from one station to the other.

Date of Launch	Name	Displacement	Horse-power	Speed	Officers and Men	Main Armament
Battleships.
1911	Oktiabrskaii- Revolutsia Parizhskaii- Kommuna Marat Mikhail Frunze	23,000	42,000	23	59—1,066	12 12in.; 16 4·7in.

1905	Komintern	6,750	19,500	23	573	14 5·1 in.; 4 3in. A.A.
1915	Profratern	6,800
1915	Tchernonaya Ukraina	7,600	50,000	29·5	624	15 5·1in.; 4 4in. A.A.
1916	Krasnii Kavkaz

These ships are the former Gangut, Sevastopol, Petropavlovsk, and Pollava.

There remain not more than 24 destroyers of any fighting value. The modern submarines are about 10 in number. There are also 3 gunboats, several mine-layers and mine-sweeping trawlers, motor-boats, and surveying and training ships. The flying service includes 50 or 60 planes. A small force is at Vladivostok. There is a flotilla on the Dnieper, and a small force is in the Caspian. There are no naval vessels of any importance in the White Sea.

The total budgetary expenditure for the Red Forces (land, naval, and air) in 1931 was estimated at 1,290,000,000 roubles. Naval personnel numbers 29,039 officers and men.

Production and Industry.

The Soviet Union, not long since predominantly agricultural in character, is becoming an industrial-agricultural country. In 1913 industrial production was 42·1 per cent. of the total, and agricultural production 57·9 per cent. In 1932 industrial production was 70 per cent., and agricultural production 30 per cent.

Forest land occupies 950,000 hectares (44 per cent. of total territory); pasture, 241,084 hectares (11 per cent.); arable land, 197,611 hectares (9 per cent.); grassland, 46,415 hectares (2 per cent.); gardens and orchards, 11,461 hectares (0·5 per cent.); non-agricultural land, 675,000 hectares (31 per cent.).

The total area under cultivation (including single-owner peasant farms, State farms and collective farms) was 118,500,000 hectares in 1929; 128,000,000 hectares in 1930; and 136,407,000 hectares in 1931, and 134,400,000 hectares in 1932. The total area of the single-owner peasant farms (excluding the State farms and collective farms) was, for the years mentioned, in hectares, as follows:—1929, 112,000,000; 1930, 86,000,000; 1931, 45,800,000; 1932, 29,400,000

The area cultivated by the collective farms in 1929–30 was over 36,000,000 hectares, in 1930–31, 80,900,000 hectares, in 1932, 91,570,000 hectares. On September 1, 1933, 15,455,100 peasant farms, i.e., 65 per cent. of all peasant holdings, had been collectivized.

The following table shows the acreage and yield of the principal crops for three years:—

Tobacco was planted in 1932 on 98,800 acres, and makhorka (coarse tobacco) on 147,500 acres.

The total grain crop in 1933 amounted to 898,000,000 metric hundredweights, as against 698·7 metric hundredweights in 1932.

The number of animals (million heads) in the Soviet Union is shown as follows for five years:—

—	1929	1930	1931	1932	1933
Horses, of all kinds	34·0	30·2	26·2	19·6	16·6

Of the whole of the forest land of the U.S.S.R., a large portion is administered and worked, or let out as concessions, by the State, and the other is granted for use to the peasantry free of charge, the latter being 72,900,000 acres in extent.

The Forest Lands of the U.S.S.R. are estimated to cover 2,310,000,000 acres, of which 1,984,547,500 acres are situated in the R.S.F.S.R. and 55,782,500 in the other constituent Republics of the Union. Of the total forest area, however, some 780,000,000 acres are in swamps or marshes. In European Russia there are 405 million acres of forest land, most of it being in the North, some in the Centre, but very little in the South.

A large proportion of the forest lands of the U.S.S.R. lies in Asiatic Russia (some 360,000,000 acres in extent) where, owing to the absence of roads, it is not accessible for working. The forests of the Caucasus, on the other hand, are capable of furnishing the world's market with an inexhaustible supply of many valuable varieties of timber. A total of 18,600,000 acres in the Caucasus is covered by forest lands.

The Soviet Union is rich in minerals. The output of some of the principal ores was as follows:—Iron, 1932, 12,076,100 metric tons; 1931, 10,731,000 metric tons; manganese, 1931, 900,000 metric tons; copper, 1932, 1,210,000 metric tons; 1931, 1,168,400 metric tons.

The total gross output of coal in 1932 was 64,300,000 metric tons; in 1931, 55,860,000 tons. The output of pig-iron in 1932 was 6,206,000 tons (4,885,000 metric tons in 1931); of steel, 5,885,000 metric tons (5,300,000 metric tons in 1931).

The output of the State oil industry was as follows (in metric tons):—1931, 22,322,000; 1932, 22,290,000; 1933, 21,440,000. The quantities of oil refined in the country were (in metric tons):—1933, 18,511,700; 1932, 20,215,000, and exports, 1931, 5,224,302; 1932, 6,010,000.

The organization of industry in Soviet Russia is based on State ownership and control, and is administered in accordance with the Decree of April 10, 1923, and subsequent slight modifications, by State Trusts and Combines. The Trusts in the large scale and middle sized State industries number over 600, but there are 291 big Trusts and these cover about 80 per cent. of the total State industries. A small number of Trusts, called Monopoly Trusts, combine all the enterprises of a given branch of industry in the whole Union. Such are, for instance, the Rubber Trust, Silk Trust, Urals Asbestos Trust, etc. In some industries there are several trusts. Thus the Oil, Cement and a few other industries have four trusts each, but in the vast majority of industries in the Soviet Union there are a number of separate Trusts in the various parts of the Union.

The number of employees in the U.S.S.R. in 1928-29 was 12,150,000; in 1929-30, 13,684,000; in 1931, 18,600,000; in 1932, 22,804,000.

Commerce.

The foreign trade of the U.S.S.R. is organized as a state monopoly. Importation and exportation of goods are effected by special licences issued by the Commissariat for Foreign Trade and its respective departments in pursuance of a plan annually sanctioned by the Government. The right of purchasing goods for importation, and that of selling Russian exports abroad is vested in the Trade Delegations of the U.S.S.R. in foreign countries. By special decrees respective Government Departments select those State and co-operative organizations which are authorized, under the control of the Trade Delegation, to engage in foreign trade.

For the purpose of encouraging the participation of foreign capital in the foreign trade of the country there have been formed in the U.S.S.R. 'Mixed Companies' in which shares are held by the Soviet Government and foreign concerns. There are 18 export organizations, 12 import organizations, and 7 export and import organizations. The Co-operative Organizations which are granted the right of 'exit to the foreign markets' are Centrosoyus (Central Union of Co-operative Societies), Selskosoyus and several other organizations.

The following table gives the value of imports and exports for five years :—

Shipping.

During the period of the Five Year Plan (1929–32) 81 ships of a total capacity of 249,000 tons were built in the U.S.S.R. and handed over for exploitation. The goods turnover at the seaports of the U.S.S.R. in 1932 was 50 million tons. Total of the merchant marine, July 1, 1933, 443 vessels of 843,212 gross tons.

During the first Five Year Plan (1929–32) there were built and handed over for exploitation to the river transport system of the U.S.S.R. 211 automatically propelled vessels of a total capacity of 48,505 H.P., and 227 vessels not automatically propelled of a total tonnage of 80 million tons.

Internal Communications.

There are 106,000 kilometres of navigable inland waterway in the Soviet Union. In 1931 a People's Commissariat of Water Transport was established to control sea and river transport.

The length of exploited railways of the U.S.S.R. in 1930 was 77,046 kilometres; in 1931, 80,900 kilometres; in 1932, 83,400 kilometres. The goods traffic on the Soviet railways was as follows: 1931, 254,900,000 tons; 1932, 267,000,000 tons; passenger traffic, 1931, 708,900,000; 1932, over 900,000,000.

An agreement was reached in June, 1930, regarding a through railway freight service connecting Europe and Asia via the railways of the Soviet Union.

Civil Aviation only started in the U.S.S.R. in 1922. In 1932 the total length of the air lines in the U.S.S.R. was approximately 50,000 kilometres, the distance flown approximately 7,000,000 kilometres, the number of passengers transported 32,600, goods and mail carried over 1,000 tons.

Money, Weights and Measures

MONEY.

The monetary unit is the Chervonets, equal to 10 roubles of the pre-revolution gold coinage. It contains 7·74234 grammes of fine gold. Up to November, 1931, the par of exchange with the pound sterling was officially fixed at 9·458 roubles. Thereafter, owing to the abandonment of the gold standard by Great Britain, it was fixed at from 7 r. 30 k. to 7 r. 40 k.

The currency in circulation is (1) Chervontsi notes in denominations of 1, 2, 3, 5, 10, 25 and 50, issued by the State Bank against gold cover, but inconvertible at present; (2) Treasury Notes in denominations of 1, 3, and 5 gold roubles; (3) silver coins: either bank silver (90 per cent. silver and 10 per cent. copper) in denominations of 1 rouble and 50 kopecks; or change silver (50 per cent. silver and 50 per cent. copper) in denominations of 20, 15, and 10 kopecks; (4) copper coins in denominations of 1, 2, 3, and 5 kopecks and half kopecks; (5) bronze coins in denominations of 1, 2, 3, and 5 kopecks. Owing to the scarcity of silver nickel pieces (the first ever to be used in Russia) of 10, 15 and 20 kopecks were introduced in 1932.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

The metric system of weights and measures has been in use since January 1, 1927.

The old Russian weights and measures were as follows:—

1 Verst (500 sazhens)	. . .	= 3,500 ft., or two-thirds of a statute mile (0·662879).
1 Sazhen (3 arshins)	. . .	= 7 feet English.
1 Arshin (16 vershoks)	. . .	= 28 inches.
1 Square verst	. . .	= 0·439408 square mile = 281·221 acres.
1 Dessiatin	. . .	= 2·69972 English acres.
1 Pound (96 zlotniks = 32 lots)	. . .	= $\frac{9}{16}$ of a pound English (0·90283 lb.).
		{ = 36 lbs. English.
1 Pood (40 pounds)	. . .	{ = 0·32243578 cwt.
		{ = 0·016121789 ton.
1 Vedro (10 shloffs)	. . .	= 2½ imperial gallons (2·7056).
1 Chetvert (8 chetveriks)	. . .	= 5·7719 imperial bushels.

The Soviet Government issued a decree adopting the Gregorian Calendar as from February 14, 1918. A six-day week (five working days and one holiday for all) was adopted at the end of 1931.

SOVIET CENTRAL ASIA.

Soviet Central Asia embraces the Uzbek Socialist Soviet Republic, the Turkoman Socialist Soviet Republic, the Tazhik Socialist Soviet Republic, the Kara-Kalpak Soviet Socialist Republic, the Autonomous Region of Kirghizia (Kara-Kirghizia) as well as the regions to the north of Tashkent, which are now included in the Autonomous Kazak Republic.

Turkestan was conquered by the Russians about 60 years ago. In 1866 Tashkent was occupied and in 1868 Samarkand, and subsequently further territory was conquered and united with Russian Turkestan. In the '70's Bokhara was subjugated, the Emir, by the agreement of 1873 recognizing the suzerainty of Russia. In the same year Khiva became a Vassal State to Russia. Until 1917, Russian Central Asia was divided politically into the Khanate of Khiva, the Emirate of Bokhara, and the Governor-Generalship of Turkestan.

After the outbreak of the Revolution various political parties contended for power in Turkestan. In the summer of 1919 the authority of the Soviet Government became definitely established in these regions, and subsequently the native dynasties in Khiva and Bokhara were expelled. The Khan of Khiva was deposed in February, 1920, and a People's Soviet Republic was set up, the mediaeval name of Khorezm being revived. In August, 1920, the Emir of Bokhara suffered the same fate, and a similar regime was set up in Bokhara. The former Governor-Generalship of Turkestan was formally constituted an Autonomous Socialist Soviet Republic within the R.S.F.S.R. on April 11, 1921.

In the autumn, 1924, a decision was accepted by the Congresses of the Soviets of Turkestan, Bokhara and Khiva Republics to redistribute the territories of these Republics on a national basis; at the same time Bokhara and Khiva became Socialist Republics. As a result of the redistribution completed in May, 1925, the New States of Uzbekistan, Turkmenistan and Tajikistan and several Autonomous Regions were established. The remaining districts of Turkestan populated by Kazaks (Kirghiz) were reunited to Kazakhstan.

The Autonomous Kazak Socialist Soviet Republic, comprising the Governments of Uralsk, Turgai, Akmolinsk and Semipalatinsk, had already been created within the R.S.F.S.R. (August 26, 1920). To this Republic were added the parts of the former Governorship of Turkestan inhabited by a majority of Kirghiz, and comprising the greater parts of the old Provinces of Sir-Darya and Semirechinsk, together with the eastern part of Ferghana and the foothills of the Pamirs. Area, 94,956 sq. miles. Within this Autonomous Kirghiz Republic, two Autonomous Regions were established, in the interests of distinct sub-groups of Kirghiz tribesmen, that of Kara-Kalpakia, extending south-east of the Sea of Aral, and Kirghizia, covering most of the old Semirechinsk Province. On March 7, 1927, Kirghizia was reorganized into an Autonomous Republic, formerly part of the R.S.F.S.R. The remaining parts of Russian Turkestan, with the territories of the old native states of Khiva and Bokhara and the Trans-Caspian Province, constitute the two Socialist Soviet Republics of Uzbekistan and Turkmenistan. In October, 1924, the Central Executive Committee of the U.S.S.R. decided to admit these two Republics to membership of the Union, a decision which was confirmed by the Third Union Congress of Soviets in May, 1925.

On May 1, 1930, the completed line of the Turkestan-Siberian railway was opened. The railway is 906 miles long.

TURKMENISTAN.

(TURKOMAN SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLIC.)

The Turkoman Soviet Socialist Republic was formed on October 27, 1924, and covers the territory of the former Trans-Caspian Region of Turkestan, the Charjiui vilayet of Bokhara, and a part of Khiva situated on the right bank of the Oxus. In May, 1925, the Turkoman Republic entered the Soviet Union as one of its Constituent Republics. It is bounded on the north by the Autonomous Kazak Republic (Kazakstan), by Persia and Afghanistan on the south, by the Uzbek Republic on the east and the Caspian Sea on the west.

Area and Population.—The principal Turkoman tribes are the Tekkés of Merv, and the Tekkés of the Attok, the Ersaris, Yomuds and Goklans. All speak closely related varieties of a Turkoman language (of the South-Western group of Turkish), and they are Sunni Mohammedans. The country passed under Russian control in 1881, after the fall of the Turkoman stronghold of Gök-Tépé.

The area of Turkmenistan is 491,216 square kilometres (189,603 sq. miles), and its population on January 1, 1931, was 1,137,900. The nationalities of the population are as follows: Turkoman, 72 per cent.; Uzbeks, 10·5 per cent.; Russians, 7·5 per cent.; others, 10 per cent.

The capital is Ashkhabad (Polterask), and other large towns are Merv, Leninsk, Kerki, Tashauz.

Production.—The main occupation of the people is agriculture, based on irrigation. Turkmenistan produces cotton, wool, Astrakan fur, etc. It is also famous for its carpets, and produces a certain special breed of Turkoman horses. It is fairly rich in mineral resources, producing ozokerite, oil, sulphates, common salt, sulphur, etc.

Motor communication has been established between Ashkhabad and Moshed (Persia), and an air line runs between Leninsk and Tashauz. Turkmenistan (particularly the territory along the railway line) is connected by telegraph with the rest of the Union.

In 1932 the total area under cultivation was 473,000 hectares, of which 180,000 hectares were under cotton.

The gross production of Turkoman State and co-operative industry in 1932 was valued at 119,000,000 roubles.

Education.—In 1932–33 the public educational system comprised 2,039 primary and secondary schools with 103,200 pupils; 5 higher educational institutions with 2,000 students; 30 higher technical schools with 30,000 students; and 3,846 institutions for the liquidation of illiteracy with 150,000 pupils. The new alphabet, based on Latin characters, has been made compulsory in all schools and government offices.

UZBEKISTAN.

(UZBEK SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLIC.)

The Uzbek Soviet Socialist Republic was formed on December 5, 1924, from lands formerly included in Turkestan, Bokhara and Khorezm. It includes a large part of the Samarkand region, the southern part of the Sir-Darya, Western Fergana, the Western Plains of Bokhara, and the Uzbek regions of Khorezm. In May, 1925, Uzbekistan, by the decision of the Congress of Soviets of the U.S.S.R., was accepted as an equal member into the Soviet Union.

Uzbekistan lies between 36° 40' N. latitude and 59° 50'–75° E. longitude. It is bordered on the north by the Kazak Autonomous Republic, on the east by the Kirghiz Autonomous Republic and Chinese Turkestan, on the south by Afghanistan, and on the west by the Turkoman Soviet Socialist Republic.

Area and Population.—The Uzbeks, who form the majority of the population over the area of the old States of Khiva and Bokhara, and the Provinces of Samarkand and Ferghana, were the ruling race in Central Asia, until the arrival of the Russians during the third quarter of the nineteenth century. The several native States over which Uzbek dynasties formerly ruled were founded in the fifteenth century upon the ruins of Tamerlane's empire. The Uzbeks speak Jagatai Turkish, which is clearly related to Osmanli and Azerbaijan Turkish, and are Sunni Mohammedans.

The area of Uzbekistan is 340,346 square kilometres. The population on January 1, 1931, of Uzbekistan (excluding Tajikistan) was 4,685,400, of whom about one-fifth lived in towns. The population is composed of: Uzbeks, 76 per cent.; Russians, 5·6 per cent.; Tajiks, 5·5 per cent.; others, 12·9 per cent. The capital of the Republic is Tashkent; other important cities are Bokhara, Khiva, Andijan, Kokand, Namianghan, Samarkand.

Production.—Uzbekistan is a land of intensive farming, based on artificial irrigation. By the middle of 1932, 72·6 per cent. of the peasant farms had been collectivized. Cotton growing has been developed. In 1932 the area under cotton was 945,900 hectares. Uzbekistan also produces fruits, wool, and silk. Its industry consists of cotton spinning (51 factories), oil and coal-mining. In 1928–29 the gross production of large industries amounted to 70 million roubles. The gross production of all industry in 1932 was valued at 500,000,000 roubles.

Education.—In 1932 there were in elementary schools 531,000 pupils; in secondary schools 130,000 pupils; in six-year schools 25,300 pupils; in schools for peasant youth 11,300 pupils; and in institutions for the liquidation of illiteracy 710,000 pupils. There are also higher educational establishments and technical schools.

The total length of railway in 1930 was 1,789 kilometres, of which 734 kilometres (455 miles) form that part of the line which connects central Asia with Russia. From this main line branches lead to Karsho-Kitab, Kerki-Termez, Jalalabad, Namanchan, Andijan and other centres. On the territory of the Republic there are 113 postal telegraph institutions, an air-line which serves all of Central Asia, and this air-line is most developed in Uzbekistan.

TAJIKISTAN.

(TAJIK SOCIALIST SOVIET REPUBLIC.)

The Tajik Socialist Soviet Republic was formed from the former regions of Bokhara and Turkestan where the population consisted mainly of Tajiks. Its equality with the other six republics of the Soviet Union was established on October 17, 1929.

Tajikistan is situated between 39° 40' and 36° 40' N. latitude and 67° 20' and 75° E. longitude, north of the Oxus. On the west and north it is bordered by Uzbekistan and by the autonomous Republic of the Kirghiz; on the east by Chinese Turkestan and on the south by Afghanistan.

Area and Population.—The Tajiks speak an Iranian dialect, little different from Persian, and they are considered to be the descendants of the original Aryan population of Turkestan. Unlike the Persians, the Tajiks are mostly Sunnis.

The area of the territory is 145,100 square kilometres (56,608 sq. miles), and the population on January 1, 1931, was 1,174,100, divided according to nationality as follows: Tajiks, 78·4 per cent.; Uzbeks, 17·9 per cent.; Russians, 0·8 per cent.; others, 2·9 per cent. The capital is Stalinabad (formerly Dushambe).

Production.—The occupations of the population are mainly farming and cattle-breeding. Gold, oil and coal are being produced, but by very primitive methods. Irrigation is being developed and cotton growing extended by the latest technical methods. In 1932 the area under cultivation was 1,008,000 hectares, of which 135,000 hectares were under cotton. Gross industrial production in 1932 was valued at over 80 million roubles.

In regard to roads, it is the poorest region in Central Asia. The only means of communication up to the time of the formation of the Republic were camel-tracks. A railway line has been completed between Termez and Stalinabad (about 200 kilometres—124 miles). Automobile transport roads are also being built, 2,500 kilometres (1,550 miles) of roads having already been completed by the beginning of 1932. A steamship line on the Oxus runs between Termez Saraya and Jilikulam on the river Vakhsh. Stalinabad is connected by an air line with Termez and Kagan.

In 1932 there were 114,000 pupils in elementary and secondary schools. The republic has 3 higher educational institutions. In Stalinabad a base has been organized for the All-Union Academy of Science. Literacy among the population has increased from 0·5 per cent. in pre-revolutionary times to 30 per cent. in 1932.

There are 12 post and telegraph offices.

OTHER ASIATIC TERRITORY OF THE SOVIET UNION.

The remainder of the Asiatic territory of the U.S.S.R. is divided as follows:—

Region	Area in sq. km.	Population, Jan. 1931	Region	Area in sq. km.	Population, Jan. 1931
Far Eastern Region	2,333,500	1,593,400	Western Siberian Region . . .	1,304,800	8,767,200
Yakutsk Autonomous Republic			Eastern Siberian Region (exc. the Buriat-Mongol Republic) . .	3,170,400	2,568,400
Buriat-Mongol Autonomous Republic . . .	4,023,300	308,400
	339,100	575,000

Habarovsk is the principal city of the Far Eastern Region. The Kamchatka Peninsula occupies 40 per cent. of the area of the whole region. The population of Kamchatka, which is very sparse, derives its income mainly from fishing and hunting. Agriculture and cattle-breeding are being developed in Kamchatka. There are three big State farms, with over a thousand head of cattle, and of an area of some hundreds of hectares, and collective farms are being organized. The majority of the population in the Vladivostok area is engaged in agriculture, industry and transport. The forests constitute one of the most important of the natural resources. The total forested area is 900,000 square kilometres, of which at least one-half can be exploited. Nearly three million acres are under cultivation and many diverse crops are raised. The country is rich in fur-bearing animals of many varieties, and is an important fish-producing centre, being practically the only one in Siberia. Of the other industries of importance are wood-working and flour-milling. In addition to the vast mineral, timber, fur and fish resources, there is a comparatively good transport system, with a fairly well-developed railway system, and navigable rivers flowing into ice-free waters.

YAKUTSK REPUBLIC

The two principal industries of the Yakutsk Republic are hunting and gold mining. The gold mining industry of the republic has shown steady development. The Soviet Trust Soyus-Zoloto and a number of individual prospectors are working the fields. Silver- and lead-bearing ores are worked, and coal. There is also some trade in salt. During the period of the Five Year Plan (1929-32) a sum of 166 million roubles was invested in the industries of Yakutia. Over 70,000 hectares of land are now under cultivation. In 1932, 50 per cent. of all the peasant holdings were collectivized. A severe climate and lack of railways are serious obstacles to the economic development of the republic. There is an air service between Irkutsk and the town Yakutsk, the capital of the republic, which is being used to an increasing extent for the transportation of gold and valuable furs.

In 1932 there were 442 schools, with 39,000 pupils or 86 per cent. of the children of school age. There were also 50 higher schools, with about 9,000 pupils. The literate proportion of the population before the revolution was 2 per cent. ; in 1932 it was 70 per cent.

BURIAT-MONGOL REPUBLIC

The Buriat-Mongol Republic is situated to the south of the Yakutsk Republic. There are a number of enterprises, principally in the leather and glass industries. Cattle breeding is, however, the principal occupation of the population. In 1930 there were the following head of cattle in the republic : horses, 309,600 ; sheep and goats, 1,387,000 ; pigs, 99,600. The gross production of industry in 1932 was 11.5 million roubles. The sown area in 1932 was 376,300 hectares and 60.9 per cent. of all the peasant holdings were collectivized.

The number of pupils in the primary schools in 1932-33, was 67,200 and in the secondary schools, 4,900. Buriat Mongolia has 3 higher educational institutions and 87 per cent. of the population is literate.

SIBERIAN REGIONS

Siberia is now divided into the Western Siberian Region, with its capital at Novo-Sibirsk ; and the Eastern Siberian Region, with its capital at Irkutsk. Other large cities in this area are Omsk with a population of 161,475, Tomsk and Irkutsk with approximately 100,000 each, Barnaul and Krasnoyarsk with 75,000 persons each, and Biisk with 46,000. The Siberian Region extends from the Arctic Ocean to the Mongolian border, and includes fertile agricultural districts and industrial sections in the south, while most of the northern territory is an unsettled forest and similar to the Yakutsk Republic. In 1930 the total area under cultivation in the whole of Siberia (including the Buriat-Mongol Republic) was 8,546,000 hectares. In 1931 the area under grain was 8,815,800 hectares. It produces a relatively high percentage of wheat, and its output is considerably above its own requirements, thus allowing a large proportion for export. The Siberian Region possesses some of the largest coal resources known. The Kuznetsk Basin is estimated to contain 400,000 million metric tons. There are other rich coal areas in Siberia, particularly the Cherenkhov and Minusinsk Basins. Within the Kuznetsk Basin lie also the extensive iron ore deposits of Telbes. Siberia is rich in non-ferrous metal ores, especially copper, the resources of which are estimated to exceed 100 million metric tons. Many big industrial plants (such as those of the Kuznetsk Metal Combine), have been or are being built.

THE TRANS-CAUCASIAN SOCIALIST FEDERAL SOVIET REPUBLIC.

The natural boundaries of Trans-Caucasia are—on the north, the Caucasus Mountains, separating it from Northern Caucasia ; on the west, the Black Sea ; on the south, mountains, steppes and rivers which divide it from Persia ; and on the east the Caspian Sea. The area of the Trans-Caucasian Republic is 184,492 square kilometres (71,255 sq. miles), or 0.8 per cent. of the whole Soviet territory. After the November revolution Trans-Caucasia became separated from the rest of Russia and split up into three separate Republics : Georgia, Armenia and Azerbaijan. In April, 1920, Azerbaijan became a Soviet Republic. Towards the end of the same year, Armenia also became a Soviet Republic, and in 1921 a Soviet Government was established in Georgia. The three Republics, on March 12, 1922, concluded an agreement whereby they formed a Trans-Caucasian Federation, thus establishing the Trans-Caucasian Socialist Federal Soviet Republic. Its population on January 1, 1931, was 6,426,700, made up as follows: Georgians, 31 per cent.; Turko-Tartars, 28.5 per cent.; Armenians, 23 per cent.; Russians, 5.8 per cent.; others, 11.7 per cent.

In 1930 the total length of railway lines (not counting lines being built) was over 2,300 kilometres. The main lines run from Batoum, through Tiflis to Baku and along the Caspian Sea through Derbent to the R.S.F.S.R. There is also a railway running from Tiflis to the south in Armenia. This line passes through the Allavert copper mines and through Leninkan and Erivan to Persia. The railways in Trans-Caucasia, as in the rest of the Union, belong to the State.

The area under cotton in Trans-Caucasia in 1932 was 270,000 hectares.

The production of Trans-Caucasian industry in 1932 was valued at 1,386,200,000 roubles.

ARMENIA.

(ARMENIAN SOCIALIST SOVIET REPUBLIC.)

On April 2, 1921, Armenia was proclaimed a Soviet Republic. The Armenian Soviet Government, with the Russian Soviet Government, was a party to the Treaty of Kars (March, 1921) which confirmed the Turkish possession of the former Government of Kars and of the Surmali District of the Government of Erivan.

Area and Population.—Armenia (capital Erivan), which covers an area of 30,948 square kilometres (11,945 sq. miles), adopted the Soviet Constitution in November, 1920. On January 1, 1931, the population was 1,032,700, made up as follows: Armenians, 84·7 per cent.; Turko-Tartars, 8·8 per cent.; Russians, 2·2 per cent.; others, 4·3 per cent. Population 1933, 1,07,000. The population of Erivan on October 1, 1929, was about 75,000.

Agriculture.—Armenia is essentially an agricultural country; in 1932 the aggregate cultivated area of Armenia amounted to 400,000 hectares, in 1932 over 30,000 hectares were under cotton. During the twelve years that Soviet Armenia has been in existence a number of canals have been built, also irrigation systems, watering about 125,000 hectares of land, mostly under cotton crops. At the beginning of 1932, over 40 per cent. of peasant farms had been collectivized. Irrigation works have been constructed to a total length of 350 kilometres (187 miles). The principal of these is the Shirak Lenin Canal, 22 kilometres (13 miles) long, commenced in 1922 and completed in 1925. During the ten years of the existence of Soviet Armenia 6 large canals have been constructed, which have given to the peasants 40,000 hectares of new arable land.

The production of Armenian industry in 1932 was valued at 150,000,000 roubles.

In 1926 a new electric station was erected at Erivan and the construction of a number of powerful electric stations was started. In November, 1928, work was started on another powerful electric station in Leninakan. There are now hydro-electric stations in Armenia, the latest of which, Dzorages, was opened in November, 1932.

The number of pupils in the primary and secondary schools is 162,000. Armenia has 9 higher educational institutions, 64 technical schools and 10 workers' faculties. The population was 70 per cent. literate in 1932. Five newspapers are published in Armenia.

AZERBAIJAN.

(AZERBAIJAN SOCIALIST SOVIET REPUBLIC.)

The 'Mussavet' (Nationalist) party which dominated the National Council or Constituent Assembly of the Tartars, declared the independence of Azerbaijan on May 28, 1918, with a capital, first at Ganja (Élizavetopol) and later at Baku. A Government of 12 ministers was formed, which the British Government recognized as a de facto administration in February, 1920. On April 28, 1920, the 'Hummet' or Bolshevik Party overthrew the existing Government. On September 30, 1920, a military and economic treaty was concluded between Azerbaijan and Russia, and in the following year Azerbaijan was declared a Soviet Republic.

Area and Population.—Azerbaijan covers an area of 84,679 square kilometres (32,686 sq. miles) and has a population (1926) of 2,313,172. Its capital is Baku, population 709,000 (1933). Azerbaijan includes the Nakhichevan Socialist Soviet Republic and the Nagorni Karabakh Autonomous Region. It has a temperate climate throughout the year. On January 1, 1931, the population of Azerbaijan was 2,510,800, made up as follows: Turko-Tartars, 63·3 per cent.; Armenians, 12·4 per cent.; Russians, 9·7 per cent.; others, 14·6 per cent. 77·6 per cent. of the total population live in the country districts.

Agriculture and Industry.—Azerbaijan is in the main an agricultural country, the chief products being grain, cotton, vine, kitchen and garden produce, and to some extent also tobacco and silk. In the mountain regions the occupation of the people is cattle-breeding. The area under cultivation in 1929-30 was over 1,100,000 hectares (as compared to 961,000 hectares in 1913). In 1932 the area under cotton was 229,000 hectares. On January 1, 1933, 51·3 per cent. of peasant farms had been collectivized.

The most important industry is the oil industry, especially in the Baku Region. The total output of oil was: in 1928-29, 8,802,000 tons; in 1929-30, 10,900,000; in 1931, 13,443,000 tons; in 1932, 12,000,000 tons. All the oilfields have been electrified and are now connected with the town of Baku and, for the most part, with the new workers' settlements which have been constructed more or less on the American type. Amongst the other industries in Azerbaijan are copper, salt, textiles, and fishing industries. The total production of State industries in 1932 was valued at 1,002,177,000 roubles.

In 1932 there were 335,000 pupils in elementary and secondary schools, 17 higher educational institutions with 12,000 students.

GEORGIA.

(GEORGIAN SOCIALIST SOVIET REPUBLIC.)

The independence of the Georgian Social Democratic Republic was declared at Tiflis on May 26, 1918, by the representative body, the National Council, elected by the National Assembly of Georgia on November 22, 1917. The Act of Independence of Georgia was confirmed on March 12, 1919, by the Constituent Assembly, which had been elected on a basis of universal suffrage.

The Government, which was controlled by the Mershevik Party, received de jure recognition by the Allies on January 27, 1921. In February, 1921, however, a Soviet Government was set up.

Area and Population.—Georgia occupies the whole of the western part of Trans-Caucasia and covers an area of 69,900 square kilometres. Its population on January 1, 1931, was 2,883,200, made up as follows: Georgians, 67·7 per cent.; Armenians, 11·6 per cent.; Turko-Tartars, 5·2 per cent.; Ossetians, 4·3 per cent.; Russians, 3·6 per cent.; others, 7·6 per cent. Georgia embraces the Abkhasian Socialist Soviet Republic, the Ajaristan Autonomous Soviet Republic and the Autonomous Region of Southern Ossetia.

Education.—In 1932 there were 440,800 children in elementary schools; 126,900 children in secondary schools; and 16,180 pupils in industrial, agricultural and social-economic high schools. There is a State University (16,000 students), a polytechnic institute, a Trans-Caucasian Communist University, an Academy of Art and a Conservatoire.

Tiflis (population 414,000 in 1933) is not only the capital of Georgia, it is also the capital of Trans-Caucasia. It is one of the oldest towns of Georgia, but it is now being to a certain extent rebuilt and modernized.

Agriculture and Industry.—Agriculture is important; area cultivated, 920,500 hectares; 35,000 hectares under tea. On January 1, 1933, 36·6 per cent. of peasant farms had been collectivized. The gross production of Georgian industry in 1932 was valued at 188,200,000 roubles. Georgia is very rich in forest lands where fine varieties of timber are grown. The most important mining industry of Georgia is the exploitation of the manganese deposits, the richest of which lie in the Chiatura region. Manganese deposits in Georgia are calculated at 250,000,000 tons, distributed over an area of 140 square kilometres. There are also coal seams, the most important of which are at Tkvargelskoe (deposits estimated at 250,000,000 tons), and Tkribulskoe (deposits of 80,000,000 tons). The most powerful electric station in Trans-Caucasia is in Georgia on the River Kura, the Zemo-Aychal hydro-electric station of 36,000 h.p. The second most powerful station is the Abash Hydro Electrical Station; a number of other stations are either in the course of construction or are to be constructed shortly.

The railway system of Georgia extends to 570 miles. The trunk line leading from Batum through Tiflis to Baku on the Caspian Sea has several narrow gauge branches on Georgian territory to the coal mines of Tskhibuli, to the port of Poti, to the manganese mines of Chiaturi, to the mineral springs of Borjomi and the health resort Bakuriani, to the towns Signakh and Telavi, in Kakhetia, and to the Armenian frontier, across the coal mine district of Alverdi. The last branch divides in Armenia, going on the one side to Tabriz in Persia, and on the other to Erzerum in Anatolia. All the railway lines on the territory of Georgia belong to the State.

A railway line from Akhal-Senaki along the Black Sea coast, through Sukhum to Tnapse, is being constructed. The section to Orenburg, a distance of 80 kilometres, is in operation.

UKRAINE.

(UKRAINIAN SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLIC.)

The Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic was proclaimed on December 27, 1917, that is, soon after the Soviet Revolution of November 7, 1917, and was finally established in December, 1919. In December, 1920, the Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic concluded a military and economic alliance with the Russian Socialist Federal Soviet Republic and the following united People's Commissariats were formed:—For military and naval affairs, the Supreme Economic Council, Foreign Trade, Finance, Labour, Transport and Posts and Telegraphs.

On July 6, 1923, the Ukrainian Socialist Soviet Republic formed, together with the other Soviet Socialist Republics in Russia, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

Area and Population.—The Ukrainian S.S.R. covers an area of 451,731 sq. kilometres (166,868 sq. miles), i.e. 2·3 per cent. of the whole Soviet Union, and includes the Autonomous Moldavian Republic (see below).

The population of the Ukraine on January 1, 1931, was 31,403,200, of whom 80 per cent. were Ukrainians, 9·2 per cent. Russians, 5·4 per cent. Jews, and 5·4 per cent. of other origins.

The principal towns are the capital, Kiev (513,789), Kharkov (population 646,000 in 1933), Odessa (420,888), Dniepropetrovsk (233,801), Stalin (912,100), and Nikolaev (104,945). In accordance with the Government decision to erect fourteen Socialist towns in the Donetz basin, the construction of the first town, to be known as 'Gorlovka,' was commenced in April, 1930. The total cost of construction of these towns will amount to 634 million roubles.

The population of the Ukraine belongs to a variety of churches, the chief being the Orthodox Greek Church, and the Catholic church. There are also some Protestants, and adherents of other Christian Sects, as well as Jews and others.

Education.—In 1932 there were 4,426,200 pupils in schools, of whom 98 per cent. were between 8 and 12 years old. There were 172 higher schools, with 92,500 pupils; 684 technical high schools with 152,300 pupils; and 545 workers' faculties, with 80,900 pupils. There was also a very large number of persons enrolled in institutions for the liquidation of illiteracy. There is an Ukrainian Academy of Sciences.

Finance.—The budget of the Ukrainian S.S.R. in 1933 balanced at 930,000,000 roubles.

Agriculture.—Before the war nine-tenths of the grain exported from Russia came from the Ukraine. In 1932 the sown area of the Ukraine was 25,700,000 hectares; 1,240,000 hectares were under sugar-beet. Sixty-nine per cent. of all the peasant holdings had been collectivized; the tractors in use in agriculture aggregated 450,000 h.p.; 79 per cent. of the total sown area was cultivated by the collective farms; the sown area of the state farms in 1932 was over 3 million hectares.

Industry.—Some of the industries of the Ukraine are amongst the most important in the whole of the U.S.S.R. The Ukraine accounts for 80 per cent. of the coal output of the Union, 70 per cent. of the pig iron, 50 per cent. steel, 60 per cent. of the iron ores, 85 per cent. of sugar, 66 per cent. to 70 per cent. of agricultural machinery, 95 per cent. of manganese ores. In 1932 the value of State industrial production in the Ukraine was 4,800 million roubles, and the number of workers employed in census industry was 1,400,000. Big electrification works are being carried on in the Ukraine. In 1932 the total of electricity supplied was 1,600,000 kilowatts. The most important industries are metal, sugar, and flour-milling.

Railways.—The total length of railways of the Ukrainian S.S.R. on January 1, 1931, was 13,780 kilometres (over 7,000 miles), and the navigable rivers 2,851 kilometres (1,782 miles).

MOLDAVIA.

(MOLDAVIAN AUTONOMOUS SOCIALIST SOVIET REPUBLIC.)

Moldavia was formed as a separate republic on October 12, 1924, from an area of 8,288 square km. on the left bank of the Dniestr River. On January 1, 1931, the population of Moldavia was 613,900, of whom 30 per cent. were Moldavians, 48·5 per cent. Ukrainians, 8·5 per cent. Russians, 8.5 per cent. Jews, and 4.4 per cent. of other origin. The capital is Tiraspol. Agriculture is the principal industry. There are 240 km. of railways and about 1,600 km. of roads.

In 1933 the total area under cultivation was 237,840 hectares. By the end of 1931 over 70 per cent. of peasant farms had been collectivized. Industrial production in 1931 was valued at 67,400,000 roubles.

The Republic has 3 higher educational institutions and 11 technical schools.

WHITE RUSSIA.

(WHITE RUSSIAN SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLIC.)

The White Russian Soviet Socialist Republic was formed on January 1, 1919. At present, its territory covers 128,790 sq. kilometres (48,940 sq. miles), and includes the former provinces of Minsk, Vitepsk, Mogilov, and a section of the Grodno provinces as well as the Gomel province. The most important towns of White Russia are Minsk, Vitepsk and Gomel. On January 1, 1931, the population numbered 5,246,400, of whom 80.6 per cent. were White Russians, 8.2 per cent. Jews, 7.9 per cent. Russians, and 3.3 per cent. of other origin. About 16 per cent. of the population live in towns. White Russia forms one of the constituent Republics of the U.S.S.R. Its constitution is similar to that of the R.S.F.S.R.

Education.—In 1931-32 there were 1,002,590 pupils in schools. There were 32 higher educational institutions, with 15,130 pupils; 130 technical high schools, with 32,200 pupils; 61 workers' faculties, with 15,760 pupils; 1,600 secondary schools, with 189,500 pupils; and 7,027 elementary schools, with 750,000 pupils. There are also 21 scientific institutions and an Academy of Sciences. There are 3 institutions of university rank—the White Russian State University, the Communist University, and the Agricultural Academy with 4,418 students.

Finance.—The budget in 1932 amounted to 224,700,000 roubles.

Agriculture.—The area under cultivation (in hectares) in 1928 was about 3,162,000 in peasant farms, including about 138,000 flax, about 455,500 potatoes, and 2,399,000 under grain. The total number of heads of farm stock was 9,030,900 in peasant farms, including 1,091,800 horses, 2,096,200 cattle, 3,449,600 sheep and goats, and 2,293,300 pigs. In 1931 the total area under cultivation was 3,754,000 hectares, of which 2,519,000 hectares was under grain. On January 1, 1933, 43 per cent. of the peasant farms had been collectivized.

Industry.—The gross production of the State industries of the White Russian Soviet Socialist Republic in 1932 was valued at 1,100,000,000 roubles. The number of workers employed in the State industries in 1927-28, according to the census, was 39,386, and in 1928-29, 47,113. In 1932, 82,760 workers were employed in State industries. Capital investments in the White Russian industries amounted to 24.8 million roubles in 1928-29, and 43.9 million roubles in 1929-30.

SALVADOR.

(REPUBLICA DE EL SALVADOR.)

Constitution and Government.—In 1839 the Central American Federation, which had comprised the States of Guatemala, Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua, and Costa Rica, was dissolved, and Salvador became an independent Republic. Its Constitution, proclaimed in 1824 under the Federation, and frequently modified down to 1886, vests the legislative power in a single Chamber of 42 Deputies, 3 for each department, elected for one year by universal suffrage.

The President is elected for four years. He has a Cabinet of four members in charge of the departments of:—Foreign Relations, Justice, and Instruction; War, Marine, and Aviation; Interior, Government, Agriculture, Charities, Sanitation, and Public Works; Finance, Public Credit, Industry, and Commerce.

President.—General Maximiliano Hernández Martínez. Appointed December 4, 1931, confirmed by Congress February 7, 1932; to serve until February 28, 1935.

Area and Population.—Salvador is the smallest and most densely populated of the Central American States. Its area is 34,126 square kilometres, or 13,176 square miles, divided into 14 departments, each under a governor appointed for 4 years. Population, based on the census of May 1, 1930, was 1,459,578; estimated, December 31, 1932, 1,522,186. Aboriginal and mixed races, Ladinos or Mestizos, constitute the bulk of the population. The language of the country is Spanish. The capital is San Salvador, with (1932) 98,555 inhabitants. Other towns are Santa Ana, population 78,321; San Miguel, 41,453; Zatatocuca, 24,572; Ahuachapán, 29,520; San Vicente, 26,131; Sonsonate, 20,532.

The number of births in 1932 was 61,133, of which 41·16 per cent. were legitimate and 58·84 per cent. were illegitimate; the number of deaths, 32,773.

Religion, Education and Justice.—The dominant religion is Roman Catholicism. There is an archbishop in San Salvador and a bishop at Santa Ana and San Miguel respectively. Education is free and obligatory; in 1929 the State took over control of all schools, public and private. There were in 1932 1,145 primary schools (state, municipal and private), with 1,700 teachers and about 52,465 pupils. There are 10 travelling teachers for the rural districts. Secondary education is given (1932) at the National Institute (378 pupils) and at 17 recognized private Lyceums, of whom 11 furnish commercial instruction. Two normal schools, one for men and one for women, have a total enrolment of 119. There is a National University with 491 students and 68 professors in 1932. Expenditure on public instruction in 1932, 1,490,000 colones.

Justice is administered by the Supreme Court of Justice, one court of third instance (in the capital) and several courts of first and second instance, besides a number of minor courts. All judges of second and third instance are elected by the National Assembly for a term of 2 years, while the judges of first instance are appointed by the Supreme Court for a similar period.

Finance.—Revenue and expenditure for five fiscal years (2 colones = 1 dollar U.S.; 9·72 colones = 1£ sterling at par):—

	1929-30	1930-31 ¹	1931-32 ²	1932-33	1933-34 (Estimates)
	Colones	Colones	Colones	Colones	Colones
Revenue	24,617,963	20,487,137	15,298,603	16,942,243	17,932,531

² Eleven months.

coins are minted in small denominations up to 12½, 20, 50, and 100 centavos each; the popular 12½ centavo piece is known as the 'real'; nickel coins in denominations of 1, 3, 5, and 10 centavos each are also issued. The coinage of silver is limited to 10 per cent. of the total fiduciary circulation, and that of nickel to 5 per cent.

National gold coins and gold coins of the United States of all denominations are unlimited legal tender, the United States coins having a fixed value of 2 colones to the dollar. Other foreign money is not legal tender. National and United States silver coins are legal tender up to 10 per cent. of each payment, and national nickel coins in amounts up to 2 per cent. of each payment.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

On January 1, 1886, the metric system of weights and measures was made obligatory. But other units are still commonly in use, of which the principal are as follows:—

Libra	.	= 1·043 lbs. av.		Arroba	.	= 25·35 lbs. av.
Quintal	.	= 104·3 lbs. av.		Fanega	.	= 1·5745 bushels.

SAN MARINO.

THE independent Republic of San Marino, which claims to be the oldest State in Europe, is embraced in the area of Italy. A new treaty of friendship with the Kingdom of Italy was concluded June 28, 1907, revised in 1908 and in 1914. The Republic has extradition treaties with England, Belgium, Holland, and United States. The legislative power of the Republic is vested in the Grand Council of 60 members elected by popular vote, a third of whom are renewable every three years, and two of whom are appointed every six months to act as Regents (Capitani reggenti). The regents exercise executive power, assisted by various nominated congresses, viz., Congresso Economico di Stato, Congresso dei Legali, Congresso degli Studi, Congresso militare. The administration of justice is under magistrates, who are Italian citizens. There are several elementary schools and one high school, the diplomas of which are recognized by Italian universities.

The frontier line is 24 miles in length, area is 38 square miles, and population (September, 1932) 13,948.

The revenue and expenditure for 1932-33 balanced at 5,134,880 lire, and the Financial Estimates for 1933-34 at 4,410,150 lire. There is no public debt. The militia consists of all able-bodied citizens between the ages of 16 and 55, with the exception of teachers and students. The chief exports are wine, cattle, and the building stone quarried on Mount Titano. Italian and Vatican City currency is in general use, but the Republic issues silver coinage, values 5, 10 and 20 lire, and separate postage stamps. An electric railway from Rimini to the city of San Marino was completed in June, 1932. Length, 20 miles.

Consul-General of San Marino in London.—Commendatore Melvill Allan Jamieson, 42 Pall Mall, S. W. 1.

Consul-General of Great Britain in San Marino.—D. F. S. Filliter (Resides at Leghorn).

SIAM.

(SAYAM, OR MUANG-THAI.)

SIAM is called by its inhabitants Thai, which means 'free,' or Muang-Thai, 'the land of the free.' The word Siam is probably identical with Shan, applied in Burma to the Lao race, as well as to the Shan proper and the Siamese.

Reigning King.

Prajadhipok, born November 8, 1893, succeeded to the throne on the death of his brother, Rama VI., on November 26, 1925, being the seventh monarch of the present reigning dynasty.

Government.

Until June 24, 1932, the Constitution of Siam was an absolute monarchy. On the date mentioned a coup d'état was effected and, the King accepting an invitation to rule as a constitutional monarch, a Siam Temporary Constitution Act was promulgated on June 27. The temporary constitution was later replaced by a permanent constitution, which was signed by the King on December 10, 1932. Under this constitution supreme power belongs to the nation, and the King, who is the head of the nation, exercises the legislative power by and with the advice and consent of the Assembly of the People's Representatives, and the executive power through the State Council, which is composed of 14 to 24 members. The president and 14 members of this Council shall be selected from the Assembly. Of the Assembly one-half will be nominated by the King and the other half elected by popular vote. This system of election will last for not more than ten years, after which all the members will be elected by the people.

The State Council is charged with the duty of conducting the government of the State. The Ministries are under the charge of State Councillors, whose names are as follows (October, 1933):—

Minister of the Interior.—Phya Udombongs Benyasvasti.

Minister of Economic Affairs.—Phya Komarakul Montri.

Minister of Defence.—Phya Prasert Songkram.

Minister of Foreign Affairs.—Phya Abhibal Rajamaitri.

Minister of Justice.—Phya Nitisastra Baisal.

Minister of Finance.—Chao Phya Sridharma Dhibes.

Minister of Public Instruction.—Colonel Phya Phahol-Pholphayuha Sena.

The Kingdom of Siam is divided (April, 1934) into 10 circles (Monthons), of which 9 have each a Lord-Lieutenant, who has under him subordinate governors in charge of the various provinces (Changwats) of his circle. The Circle of Krungdeb (Bangkok) is under the control of a Lord Prefect. The 10 circles are subdivided into 70 provinces (Changwats), 406 districts (Ampurs), 57 subdistricts (King-Ampurs), and 4,981 communes (Tambons).

A treaty for a modification of British extra-territorial rights in Siam and for the cession of the Siamese tributary States of Kelantan, Trengannu and Kedah to Great Britain was signed at Bangkok on March 10, 1909. All the old commercial treaties which granted extra-territorial rights and imposed limitations upon customs tariffs have been revised. Siam now possesses full jurisdictional and fiscal autonomy, subject to certain temporary limitations. The list of these new treaties and the date of the ratifications are as follows: United States of America, September 1, 1921; Japan, December 29, 1924; France, January 12, 1926; Denmark, March 28, 1926; Great Britain, March 30, 1926; Spain, July 28, 1926; The Netherlands, August 24, 1926; Portugal, August 30, 1926; Sweden, October 25, 1926; Norway, February 9, 1927; Italy, March 18, 1927; Belgium-Luxemburg, March 25, 1927; Switzerland, December 16, 1931. A treaty of friendship and commerce between Germany and Siam was ratified on October 24, 1928.

Area and Population.

The area of Siam is 200,234 square miles, about 45,000 being in the Malay Peninsula. The first detailed census in Siam was taken in 1905, but included only 12 of the circles or Monthons. The first census of the whole country was taken in 1909.

The census taken on July 15, 1929, gave a population of 11,506,207 (as compared with 9,207,355 at the census taken on April 1, 1919), of whom 5,795,065 were males, and 5,711,142 females. Of the former, 2,909,750 were under 21 years of age. The estimated population on March 31, 1930, was 11,684,000 (5,888,000 males and 5,796,000 females). The following table gives the details of the last census for each circle :—

Total	200,234	11,506,207	57

The population of Siam, according to the census for 1929, was made up as follows : Siamese, 10,493,304 ; Chinese, 445,274 ; Indians and Malays, 379,618 ; Cambodians, 60,668 ; Annamites, 5,321 ; Shans, 27,505 ; Burmese, 4,880 ; Europeans and Americans, 1,920 ; Japanese, 295 ; others, 87,422.

Religion and Education.

The prevailing religion is Buddhism. In 1929-30 there were 10,958,426 Buddhists, 498,311 Mohammedans, and 49,462 Christians. On March 31, 1931, there were 16,658 Buddhist temples, and 130,240 priests.

The Minister of Public Instruction is responsible for education throughout the country, with the exception of certain Departmental Schools, such as the Military, Naval, Law Colleges, and the Police School.

Elementary education is compulsory, except in the capital, and in the majority of schools, free.

On March 31, 1932, Government schools numbered 260, with 43,920 pupils and 1,933 teachers. There were 5,471 local elementary schools, with 691,117 pupils and 13,072 teachers. Private schools numbered 1,150, with 53,809 pupils and 2,397 teachers, including schools connected with American, French, and English Missions. Over 85 per cent. of local schools and 50 per cent. of the Government Schools are situated in the monasteries.

The Chulalankarana University, founded at Bangkok in 1917, is composed of five faculties (Medicine, Arts and Science, Political Science, Engineering, Nursing and Midwifery).

In 1931-32 the Education Department spent approximately 2,431,477 l. ticals on education.

The estimate of capital expenditure for 1933-34 is 545,118*l.*, which includes construction of railways, 227,273*l.*; irrigation, 135,573*l.*; state highways, 100,000*l.*

Since 1927-28, capital expenditure on the above objects has been financed from ordinary revenue by means of a lump provision for the 'Avoidance of Debt.'

Defence.

Under the Military Service Act of 1933 every able-bodied man is liable to serve two years with the colours; seven years in the first reserve, with a maximum service of two months per annum; ten years in the second reserve, with a maximum service of 30 days per annum; six years in the third reserve.

The army is organized in 18 battalions of infantry, 12 squadrons of cavalry, 8 groups of artillery, 2 battalions of engineers, and 2 battalions of signallers.

The Air Force consists of 3 wings, and one aviation school, one gunnery school, one central repair shop and one chief workshop for aeroplane and motor construction.

The average effectives in 1933 were 1,933 officers and 24,486 other ranks in the army, and 98 officers and 2,486 other ranks in the air force.

Siam maintains a small naval force, which consists of three gunboats, three destroyers, three torpedo-boats, the Royal yacht Maha Chakri, and various small craft, including five modern coastal motor-boats; the ex-British sloop Havant, renamed Chow Phryya, serves as a sea-going training ship. There are 4,800 officers and men on the active list, besides a reserve of 20,000.

At the mouth of the Menam River are the Paknam forts. The bar prevents ships of more than 13 feet draught from ascending to Bangkok. The naval arsenal dock has recently been reconstructed.

Expenditure on Defence for 1933-34 is estimated at 899,349*l.* for the army; 254,563*l.* for the navy; 162,988*l.* for the air services; 60,489*l.* for other departments; total, 1,377,389*l.*

Production and Industry.

According to the 1929 census 83.05 per cent. of the occupied persons (7,519,757) were engaged in agriculture, 1.10 per cent. in fishery, 2.19 per cent. in industrial pursuits.

The chief produce of the country is rice, which forms the national food and the staple article of export. The figures of the rice crop for the past three years are as follows: 1930-31, area, 7,273,796 acres, yield, 4,787,997 tons; 1931-32, area, 6,453,040 acres, yield, 4,036,238 tons; 1932-33, area, 8,034,476 acres, yield, 5,329,588 tons. In Bangkok and district there are some 75 rice mills, and about 700 in the Provinces.

The harvested area and yield of certain other crops in 1931-32 was as follows:—para-rubber, 104,630 acres, 182,793 piculs; coconuts, 91,379 acres, 152,837,870 nuts; tobacco, 22,653 acres, 118,937 piculs; pepper, 4,848 acres, 52,827 piculs.

The live-stock on March 31, 1932, consisted of 9,820 elephants, 313,994 horses and ponies, 4,972,173 bullocks, and 4,895,177 buffaloes.

Much of Upper Siam is dense forest, and the cutting of teak is an important industry, almost entirely in British hands. Siam teak wood is mainly produced in the north of Siam, the dry logs being floated by river to Bangkok during the rainy months of the year. In 1932-33 the exports of teak amounted to 37,719 tons, valued at 301,094*l.* Planting of rubber trees is proceeding in the Malay Peninsula, exports of rubber and rubber waste for the year 1932-33 being 3,441,840 kilogrammes valued at 35,701*l.*

The mineral resources of Siam are extensive and varied, including tin, tungsten, coal and iron, zinc, manganese, antimony, lead, copper, molybdenum, rubies, sapphires and silver. Tin mining is carried on in all the Southern or Peninsula circles of the Siamese portion of the Malay Peninsula and in the Rajaburi circle. The total output of metallic tin in 1927-28 was 131,323 piculs; in 1928-29, 143,165 piculs; in 1929-30, 184,948 piculs; in 1930-31, 262,583 piculs; in 1931-32, 156,168 piculs.

Commerce.

Shipping and Communications.

In 1932-33, 983 vessels of 1,145,241 tons entered, and 982 of 1,142,243 tons cleared the port of Bangkok. Of those entering 232 (322,324 tons), and of those clearing 232 (319,110) tons were British.

On March 31, 1933, there were 2,967 kilometres (1,857 miles) of State Railways open to traffic and 167 kilometres (104 miles) were under construction. The Northern Line runs from Ban Paji to Chiangmai (410 miles), the extreme northern terminus. The Southern Line (748 miles) runs from Bangkok down the Peninsula to the frontier station of Padang Besar, where it connects with the Federated Malay States Railway from Penang, and to Singapore. Another line branching off from Haad Yai runs along the East Coast of the Peninsula to Sungei Golok, where it connects with the Federated Malay States Line. There are branches to Singora, Nakorn, Sritamaraj and Kantang. The North-Eastern Line (164 miles) is being extended from Korat to Khonkaen, the first section, from Korat to Bua-Vai (51 km.), being already open to traffic. The Korat-Ubol Line has now been completed and opened to traffic to Warindra, the station for Ubol. The line to Khon Kaen is expected to be ready in 1933. The extension from Krabinburi, the present terminus of the Eastern Line, to Aranya Pradesa on the Cambodian frontier was completed in 1927. In January, 1922, a through express service between Bangkok and Penang was introduced; the distance is now traversed in 27 hours, using Diesel electric locomotives. A similar service between Bangkok and Chiangmai on the Northern Line was inaugurated in November, 1922, the journey being accomplished in 26 hours. The Northern and Southern Railway systems are linked together by means of a railway bridge over the Menam Chao Phya (opened January 1, 1927), and both systems terminate in the central railway station of Hua Lampong. All State Railways are under one management. Gross earnings of the State Railways in 1931-32 were 977,807*l.*; working expenses, 665,609*l.*; and net receipts, 225,591*l.* The number of passengers carried was 3,631,181, and total goods carried 993,724 tons.

Private lines of an aggregate length of 66 miles include those (worked by companies) from Bangkok to Paknam at the mouth of the Menam, and from Bangkok to Tachin and Meklong on the coast to the west of the Menam, also from Thouburi to Bang Bua Thong, together with a tramway connecting the Northern Line (Northern branch) with Phrabat.

According to the report of Department of Ways for the year 1930-31, the length of state highways on March 31, 1929, was 1,423 miles, of which 871 miles were under maintenance, 54 miles under improvement, and 498 miles under construction. In addition there were 731 miles of provincial highways, particularly in the North-Eastern provinces. Of the above state highways, only 66 miles were classified as first-class road, the bulk being third-class road.

The following figures relate to civil aviation in 1932-33: length of routes opened, 384 miles; miles flown, 71,612; passengers transported, 50; merchandise transported, 5,499 lbs.; mails, 26,251 lbs. Carrying of mails by military planes was superseded on August 24, 1931, by a civil air transport company.

In 1932-33 there were 761 post offices of which 308 were licensed or contract post offices, and 335 railway station offices. The volume of mail matter dealt with during the year aggregated 13,693,998 pieces. The value of Inland Money Orders issued was 7,987,711*·75 baht; foreign money orders issued, 67,773·*68 baht; foreign money orders paid, 40,752 baht.

There were (1932-33) 657 telegraph offices. Number of inland telegrams was 208,671; foreign messages sent, 140,352; foreign messages received, 71,904; length of line, 9,345 598 kms.

In 1933 there were 24 telephone exchanges, 19 of which were in the provinces. Subscribers numbered 2,670. Number of calls was 17,363,415.

Three wireless stations on the Telefunken system have been erected, one at Bangkok, one at Singora, and one at Koh-Khan. The two former are under the control of the Siamese naval authorities, the third under that of the Post and Telegraph Department.

A new high-powered station, also on the Telefunken system, has been erected at Bangkok, and was opened on Jan. 15, 1929.

Direct wireless communication on a commercial basis was established with Germany, England, France, Java, Philippine Islands, Hong Kong, Japan and India. The growth of the radio traffic since its transfer to the Ministry of Commerce and Communications was as follows: 798,465 words handled in 1929-30; 879,209 in 1930-31; 892,861 in 1931-32.

Additional radio facilities for direct traffic with Europe consist of a beam transmitting station in Bangkok with a receiving station in Laksi.

Money, Weights and Measures.

In Bangkok there are branches of the Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank, the Chartered Bank of India, Australia and China, the Banque de l'Indo-Chine, the Mercantile Bank of India, and the Bank of Canton. A number of Chinese Banks have established branches here during recent years. There is also a branch of the Chartered Bank of India, Australia and China at Bhuket. A Siamese bank, with a British manager, was established under Royal Charter in 1906, with the name of the Siam Commercial Bank, Limited. It now has branches at Chiangmai and Nakawn Lampang in Northern Siam.

On April 1, 1913, the Siamese Treasury Savings Bank was opened with 529 depositors. By March 31, 1931, the number was 23,576, with a total deposit of 268,139 $\frac{1}{2}$; March 31, 1932, 344,209 $\frac{1}{2}$.

Under the Currency Act of May, 1928, the unit of currency is the baht, divided into one hundred satang. The baht is a silver coin like the tical (a word of foreign origin) which it replaces. It weighs 15 grammes 900 fine, and is equivalent to 0.66567 grammes of fine gold, corresponding to a rate of 11 bahts for 1 $\frac{1}{2}$ sterling. Siam departed from the gold standard on May 11, 1932, and the circulation medium is almost entirely paper. Other silver coins are 50 satang and 25 satang pieces. The 10 and 5 satang pieces are nickel, and the 1 satang piece, bronze. Notes and baht coins are legal tender without limit as to amount; 5 and 25 satang pieces legal tender up to 5 baht, and nickel and bronze coins legal tender up to 1 baht.

The Government in 1902 began to issue currency notes (5, 10, 20, 100 and 1,000 bahts, and since October, 1918, 1 baht notes). On March 31, 1933, there were 10,389,318 $\frac{1}{2}$ worth of currency notes in circulation; against these there was a reserve of 11,095,123 $\frac{1}{2}$, three-fifths in gold bullion, and the remainder in baht coins and short term securities or cash, in London, New York, and Paris.

The metric system was made compulsory, by a decree published on March 12, 1933, in the four metropolitan provinces of Bangkok, Ayuthia, Rajburi and Prachin, as from April 1, 1933. The actual weights and measures prescribed by law are: units of weight:—1 Standard Picul = 60 kilograms; 1 Standard Catty (1/100 Picul) = 600 grammes; 1 Standard Carat = 20 centigrammes. Units of length:—1 Sen = 40 metres; 1 Wah (1/20 Sen) = 2 metres; 1 Sawk (1/4 Wah) = 0.50 metre; 1 Keup ($\frac{1}{2}$ Sawk) = 0.25 metre. Units of square measure:—1 Rai (1 square Sen) = 1,600 sq. metres; 1 Ngan (1/4 Rai) = 400 sq. metres; 1 Sq. Wah (1/100 Ngan) = 4 sq. metres. Units of capacity:—1 Standard Kwien = 2,000 litres; 1 Standard Ban (1/2 Kwien) = 1,000 litres; 1 Standard Sat (1/50 Ban) = 20 litres; 1 Standard Tanan (1/20 Sat) = 1 litre.

SPAIN.

(ESPAÑA.)

A REPUBLIC was proclaimed in Spain on April 14, 1931. (The first Republic continued from 1873 to 1875.)

General elections took place on June 28, 1931, to summon 'a Constituent Cortes' for the drafting of a Constitution and electing a President. The one-Chamber Parliament (Congress) sat for the first time on July 14, 1931. This Parliament was dissolved October 9, 1933, and new elections were held on November 19, 1933. The new Parliament is composed of 473 members, including four women, divided among the following parties:—Right Wing: Agrarians, 150; Monarchists, 38; Independents, 20. Centre: Republican Radicals, 104; Republican Conservatives, 17; Republican Democrats, 10; Catalanian League, 26. Left Wing: Socialists, 62; Republicans, 11; Catalanians, 24; Communist, 1. Unclassified, 10.

The Constitution of the Republic was voted on December 9, 1931.

President of the Republic.—Niceto Alcalá Zamora y Torres; born July 6, 1877; elected December 10, 1931. Salary and allowance, 2,250,000 pesetas per annum.

For a list of the sovereigns and rulers of Spain, with dates of their accession, since the foundation of the Spanish Monarchy by the union of the crowns of Aragon and Castile, see the STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1932, p. 1286.

Government and Constitution.

I. CENTRAL GOVERNMENT.

The Constitution of the second Spanish Republic contains the following fundamental principles:—That Spain is a democratic Republic of workers of all classes, organized in a régime of Liberty and Justice; that the Republic constitutes an integral State consistent with the autonomy of the Municipalities and Regions; that it has no official religion, and that freedom of conscience is granted to all citizens; that all citizens are equal before the law; that Castilian (Spanish) is the official language, and that no citizen can be compelled to know or make use of a provincial language, except with the limitations set forth on the Statutes of the Regions. Spain renounces warfare as an instrument of national politics. The colours of the Republic are red, yellow and purple. The capital of the Republic is Madrid.

The legislative power rests with the people who exercise it by means of the Cortes (single chamber) or Congress of Deputies, who are elected for 4 years by universal suffrage, equal, direct and secret, on the system of proportional representation. All citizens over 23, without distinction of sex or civil status are eligible. Deputies, who are re-eligible indefinitely, are paid a salary of 1,000 pesetas per month besides travelling expenses. Electors, male or female, must be over 23.

Sixty days after the expiration of the mandate of the Cortes, or of its dissolution, new elections must take place, and the new Cortes shall sit thirty days as a maximum after the general elections are held. The Cortes will assemble without previous notification on the first law-day of February and October each year, and will sit at least during three months in the first period and two months in the latter. The Government and the Cortes have the initiative to make laws. The Cortes may authorize the Government to enact laws by decrees, on the recommendation of the Council of Ministers, on matters pertaining to the legislative power; with the limitation that such decrees can in no way refer to an increase of expenditures. The Cortes appoints from its own body a Permanent Committee, composed of 21 representatives elected proportionately from the different parties and presided over by the Speaker, which is entrusted with the suspension of public guarantees, the enacting of laws by decrees and the prosecution of members. The Cortes may propose a vote of censure on the Government or any of its Ministers, on the request of fifty of its members, but the Cabinet or the Minister in question is not obliged to resign in consequence unless the vote of censure is passed by an absolute majority of the Chamber. International agreements sanctioned by Spain and filed in the League of Nations, bearing on international law, are to be considered as constituting part of Spanish legislation; the government to produce before the Cortes in such cases the proper law for its adoption. The sanctioning of the laws voted by the Cortes can be submitted to a referendum, constituted by not less than 15 per cent. of the electors; but a referendum cannot affect the Constitution, the complementary laws, the ratification of International Agreements filed in the League of Nations, the Statutes of the Regions and the taxation laws. The people may also exercise their right of initiative in proposing laws to the Cortes, provided that the petition is made by 15 per cent. of the electors.

The President of the Republic is the Head of the State and personifies the Nation. He is elected conjointly by the Cortes and a number of 'compromisers' equal to that of Deputies. The 'compromisers' are elected by universal suffrage, equal, direct and secret. An additional clause in the Constitution prescribes that the Constituent Cortes shall elect the first President of the Republic by secret voting; an absolute majority of votes of all the Deputies in office being required for the proclamation.

The President of the Republic must be a Spanish citizen, over forty years, in full possession of his civil and political rights; the exceptions being military men in active service or on the retired list for not less than ten years, clergymen and ministers of the various churches and religions, members of reigning or ex-reigning families of any country whatsoever no matter how related to the head of such family. The President holds office for six years, and he cannot be re-elected until six years after the termination of his last mandate. The elections take place thirty days previous to the expiration of the presidential mandate. In case of absence or other causes his duties are to be assumed by the Speaker of the House, who in turn will be substituted in his duties by the Deputy-Speaker. Likewise, the Speaker of the House assumes office as President of the Republic in case of vacancy, and the election of the new President is to be convoked not beyond eight days, the elections to take place within the thirty succeeding days. The Cortes will maintain its powers, even if dissolved, for the exclusive purpose of the election of President.

The President appoints and dismisses the Premier and, upon the latter's recommendation, his Ministers. The President is empowered to declare War, but he can only sign the declaration under the conditions prescribed in the Covenant of the League of Nations, and after being authorised by a special law. He also issues decrees countersigned by his Ministers; ordains measures of urgency to safeguard the integrity of the Nation, upon immediate notification of his action to the Cortes, negotiates, signs and ratifies International Agreements, political and commercial treaties, as well as those bearing on the public treasury. In general, any Agreement calling for legislation unless sanctioned by the Cortes shall not bind the Nation in any way. The agreements entered with the International Labour Bureau are to be submitted to the Cortes within limited time, and after approval the President's ratification is to be communicated to the League of Nations for its proper filing. Other International Treaties and Covenants ratified by Spain shall also be filed in the League of Nations. Secret Treaties and clauses of a similar nature are not binding. In case of Spain's withdrawal from the League of Nations the President must be authorised by the Cortes before passing the notification of retirement. The President has the faculty of enacting laws by decree when the Cortes are not assembled, on the recommendation and by unanimous accord of the government and with the approval of two-thirds of the Permanent Committee, on momentous matters in defence of the Republic; such decrees to be only of a provisional character until such time as the Cortes have sanctioned them. The President may at all times convoke extraordinary Cortes. He can suspend the ordinary sessions during one month in the first period (February) and fifteen days in the second period (October). He can dissolve the Cortes not more than twice during his tenure of office, either by a justified decree or by convoking new elections within sixty days; a second dissolution must be examined by the new Cortes in its first sitting and an adverse voting by an absolute majority implies dismissal of the President.

The President can be dismissed at any time; sixty per cent. of the members constituting the Cortes are required for filing the demand, and from that moment the President ceases his functions until after the demand has been examined and voted upon.

The Constitution allows to all citizens freedom of opinions and ideas, but may hold these rights in suspense by a government decree in cases of impending danger to the Nation. If the Cortes are not assembled at the time, they are to be convoked within eight days. The suspension of constitutional rights cannot exceed thirty days; any extension of time must be previously authorized by the Cortes or the Permanent Committee.

A Tribunal of Constitutional Guaranty is created with jurisdiction over the entire Nation, whose duty it will be to decide on the unconstitutionality of the laws; the protection of individual rights; discrepancies arising in legislation between the State and the autonomous regions and among one another; the examination and approval of powers of the 'compromisers' chosen for the election of President; the responsibility incurred by the President of the Republic, the Premier and Ministers, the President and Magistrates of the Supreme Court and the Attorney-General. The Cortes will appoint the President of the Guaranty Tribunal, whether a deputy or not, and among other members there will be a representative for each region.

The Constitution may be reformed either on the recommendation of the Government, or when proposed by a quarter of the members of the Chamber; in both cases the proposal must determine the changes at issue, and to take in consideration the reform requires the vote of two-thirds of the Deputies during the first four years of constitutional régime and an absolute majority hereafter; the Cortes then automatically become dissolved and new elections must be convoked within sixty days. The new Parliament thus elected will act as Constituent Cortes to decide on the reform, and thereafter as ordinary Cortes.

Other main points incorporated in the new Constitution is the establishment of divorce; the legitimacy of the offspring of unmarried couples, and the rural problem affecting land and property.

The Government was constituted as follows on March 3, 1934:—

Prime Minister.—Don Alejandro Lerroux Garcia.

Minister of Foreign Affairs.—Don Leandro Pita Romero.

Minister of Justice.—Don Ramon Alvarez Valdés.

Minister of War.—Don Diego Hidalgo.

Minister of Marine.—Don Juan José Rocha Garcia.

Minister of Finance.—Don Manuel Marraco.

Minister of the Interior.—Don Rafael Salazar Alonso.

Minister of Education.—Don Salvador de Madariaga.

Minister of Public Works.—Don Rafael Guerra del Rio.

Minister of Labour.—Don José Estadella Arno.

Minister of Agriculture.—Don Cirilo del Rio Rodriguez.

Ministry of Industry and Commerce.—Don Ricardo Samper Ibañez.

Minister of Communications.—Don José Maria Cid Ruiz Zorrilla.

II. LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

The provinces are constituted by the association of Municipalities; Spanish dominions in Northern Africa will be organized under the autonomous principle in direct relation with the central government. All Municipalities will be autonomous in their respective spheres, and they will elect their Ayuntamiento, by universal suffrage, equal, direct and secret, which will be presided over by the Alcalde, elected from its own body, at whose side stand, in the larger towns, several Tenientes de Alcalde. Each island of the Canaries will have a corporation known as Cabildo Insular, to rule their special interests; the Balearic Islands may adopt a similar régime. Each province of Spain has its own Assembly, the Diputacion Provincial, the members of which are elected by the constituencies; the administration of the Diputaciones Provinciales is being radically reformed with the Republic.

The several regions in Spain have submitted to the Republican Government the autonomous principle, which the Constitution has embodied as follows: If one or more neighbouring provinces possessing similar historical and economical characteristics decide to form an autonomous region, consistent with the Spanish Nation, they will file their petition to the central government by means of a Statute, which must be passed for its proposal by the majority of Municipalities in the area. The approval of a Regional Statute requires the votes of at least two-thirds of the electors inscribed in the Census; in case of an adverse plebiscite five years must elapse before renewing the proposal of autonomy. The Statute can only come in force when approved by the Cortes. The federation of autonomous regions is in no way admitted. The Constitution excludes from the domain of the autonomous regions the following matters which the Central Government alone may deal with: the nationalisation of citizens and adherence to constitutional rights; Church legislation; diplomatic and consular representation; declaration of war, treaties of peace and in general international intercourse; defence of public surety; national debt; army, navy and national defence; tariff reform and commercial treaties; nationalisation of ships; extradition laws; jurisdiction of the Supreme Tribunal; finance laws regulated by the State; system of communications controlled by the State, post and telegraphs, airways, etc.

Any province forming part of an autonomous region may renounce its autonomous régime and return to the provincial régime by a similar plebiscite as that required when soliciting the autonomy.

PAIS VASCO.

The Basque Provinces (Alava, Guipuzcoa and Vizcaya) on November 11, 1933, approved the Basque Statute.

CATALONIA.

The Catalan Statute was approved by the Cortes on Sept. 15, 1932, thus granting the autonomy to the region of Catalonia, composed of the four provinces of Barcelona, Gerona, Lerida and Tarragona, with an area of 12,000 square miles and inhabited by a population of approximately 3,000,000. The representative organ is vested on the Generalitat, which will be integrated by a Parliament, a President and the Executive Council. The President of the Generalitat is elected by the Catalonian Parliament, which consists of 85 members.

The official language is both Castilian (Spanish) and Catalan, but for official intercourse of Catalonia with the rest of Spain, and communication between the State authorities and those of Catalonia, Spanish is to be the only official language. By a decree of November 8, 1933, Catalan is the official language in all judicial matters. The first elections to Parliament were held on November 20, 1932, and Parliament was opened on December 6, 1932.

President of Catalonia.—Don Luis Companys. Elected December 31, 1933

Two other regions—the Basques and Galicia—have announced their statutes to the Cortes. On December 21, 1933, the Basques formally delivered their statute to the Cortes.

Area and Population.

Continental Spain has an area of 190,050 square miles, but including the Balearic and Canary Islands, the total area is 196,607 square miles. The growth of the population has been as follows :—

The population of Ceuta (38,577) is included in that of Cádiz. Besides Ceuta, Spain has, on the African Coast, the Alhucema isles (pop. 842), the Chafarinas (317), Melilla (62,323), Peñon de la Gomera (234), Rio de Orc (342), and Nador (2,640). The North African possessions are no longer used as convict stations.

By Decree of September 21, 1927, the islands which form the Canary Archipelago were divided into two provinces, under the name of their respective capitals: Santa Cruz de Tenerife and Las Palmas. The province of Santa Cruz de Tenerife is constituted by the islands of Tenerife, Palma, Gomera and Hierro; and that of Las Palmas by Gran Canaria, Lanzarote and Fuerteventura, with the small barren islands of Alegranza, Roque del Este, Roque del Oeste, Graciosa, Montaña Clara y Lobos.

The following were the estimated populations of the principal towns on December 31, 1932, viz. :—

The movement of population for 3 years was as follows :—

Years	Marriages	Births	Deaths	Surplus of births
1929	168,805	653,668	407,486	246,182
1930	173,908	660,735	394,355	266,380
1931	175,016	649,066	408,581	240,485

Emigration figures for 4 years as follows :—

Year	Male	Female	Total	Year	Male	Female	Total
1929	63,709	38,279	100,988	1931	43,076	24,638	67,714
1930	59,415	35,533	94,948	1932	40,611	25,010	65,621

Emigration from Spain is chiefly to Argentina, Cuba, Brazil, Uruguay, and Mexico.

Religion.

The new Republican Constitution in force (Dec. 9, 1931) declares that Spain has no official religion. The great majority of the population adhere to the Roman Catholic Faith. The Constitution guarantees liberty of worship and freedom of conscience. Religious bodies are now treated as Associations, to be governed by a special law. Cemeteries are placed under exclusive civil jurisdiction. The State will no longer support the clergy and the buildings, etc. of the Church. Religious orders who take the papal vote become dissolved and their properties and estates subject to nationalisation. The remaining orders are to be inscribed in a special register in charge of the Ministry of Justice; they are prohibited from buying property other than that intended for living and the practice of religion; prohibition of exercising industry, commerce or education; submission to taxation; obligation to render an annual account of their investments.

Within the Peninsula, apart from Portugal, there are 9 metropolitan sees, and 61 suffragan sees, the chief being Toledo, where the Primate resides. In 1930 there were in Spain 66 cathedrals, 22 collegiate churches, 20,612 parish churches, and 17,157 chapels and sanctuaries.

Education.

The latest census returns (1930) show that 47.22 per cent. of the population could read and write, of which 0.94 could read only; and 45.46 per cent. could neither read nor write. The remaining 7.32 per cent. corresponds to the infant population under 6 years.

The Constitution of the Republic ordains that primary education is to be compulsory and free. Education is to be lay, but the churches are authorized, under State inspection, to teach their respective doctrines in their own schools.

The country is divided into eleven educational districts, with the universities as centres. The total sum spent in 1931 was 162,368,117 pesetas.

In 1930, there were 35,989 public schools attended by 2,292,486 boys and girls. Secondary education is conducted in 'institutions,' or middle-class schools, and there must be at least one of them in every province. There were in the year 1931, 94 institutions with 76,074 pupils (11,115 girls). These institutions prepare for the universities, of which there are eleven, attended by 35,717 students (2,246 women). The universities are at Barcelona, Granada, Madrid, Murcia, Oviedo, Salamanca, Santiago, Sevilla, Valencia, Valladolid, and Zaragoza. There are, besides, a medical and science faculty at Cádiz in connection with the University of Seville, and in the Canary Islands an educational establishment dependent on the University of Seville. In 1931 the total sum expended on education and the fine arts was 201,652,869 pesetas.

Justice and Crime.

Justice is administered by Tribunales and Juzgados (Tribunals and Courts), which conjointly form the Poder Judicial (Judicial Power). Judges and Magistrates cannot be removed, suspended or transferred except as set forth by law.

The Judicature is composed of:—1 Tribunal Supremo (Supreme High Court); 15 Audiencias Territoriales (Divisional High Courts); 50 Audiencias Provinciales (Provincial High Courts); 530 Juzgados de Primera Instancia (Courts of First Instance); and 9,267 Juzgados Municipales (District Court, or Court of Lowest Jurisdiction held by Justices of the Peace).

The Tribunal Supremo consists of a President (the new Constitution enacts that the appointment is to be made by the President of the Republic), three Courts of Justice, one for administrative purposes, and one for trying military cases (formerly under military jurisdiction); it is empowered with disciplinary faculties; is Court of Cassation in civil and criminal trials; decides in first and second instance disputes arising between private individuals and the State.

The Audiencias Territoriales have power to try in second instance sentences passed by judges in civil matters, and in first instance all criminal trials of the province.

The Audiencias Provinciales are Courts competent to try and pass sentence in first instance on all cases filed for delinquency. The Republic has re-instated the jury system, which was suppressed during the Dictatorship.

The Juzgados Municipales are constituted of a Judge and two Deputy Judges. This Court is competent to try small civil cases not exceeding 20,000 pesetas (£800) in value, and petty offences.

On July 1, 1925, the 'Court of Minors' (Tribunal de Niños) was established for trying cases of delinquency of boys and girls from 9 to 18 years of age. There is also the 'Tribunal Industrial,' for deciding labour disputes. The new penal code, approved by the Cortes on September 6, 1932, abolishes the death penalty and also imprisonment for life. The maximum penalty for any offence is 30 years' imprisonment.

Old Age Pensions and Social Insurance.

By a law dated February 27th, 1908, the 'Instituto Nacional de Prevision' was created for the purpose of granting Old Age Pensions, and administering a system of social insurance. The funds of the Institution are made up of an endowment, annual State subsidy, and private and public donations. The maximum annual pension obtainable is 1,500 pesetas (£60).

Defence.

ARMY.

Military service in Spain is compulsory. The total term of service is for 18 years. The law in force (Decree of February 20, 1925) provides for active service in the army to be normally for 2 years. At present the term of service with the Regular Army is 1 year, and 5 years in the First Reserve. Conscripts are called up in two contingents.

The army has undergone a radical change under the Republic. Thirty-seven infantry regiments have been suppressed, the rank of captain-general has been abolished and all lieutenant-generals, with one or two exceptions, have been placed on the retired list.

The new organization consists of three High Inspections, under Major-Generals, stationed at Madrid. The army in times of peace will comprise eight divisions distributed over the different provinces, a division of Cavalry in Madrid, and the forces in the Balearic and Canary Islands, besides the Military Command in Africa.

A division consists of two infantry brigades, each comprising two regiments of two battalions; a squadron of cavalry; a brigade of artillery, with two regiments; a battalion of engineers (sappers), with two technical sections; a squadron of aviation with an observation unit; artillery park; sanitary, veterinary and administrative groups.

A division of cavalry consists of three cavalry brigades, each of three regiments; a regiment of artillery, an aviation squadron for observation; cyclist and automobile groups; sanitary and veterinary sections.

The forces in Balears are composed of 2 infantry regiments, a regiment of coast artillery and a mixed group; two mixed groups of sappers and telegraphy; sanitary and administrative sections.

In the Canary Islands there are two regiments of infantry; two mixed groups of artillery; two mixed groups of sappers and telegraphy; sanitary and administrative sections.

Morocco is divided into two military districts, each formed of two infantry regiments, two sections of cyclists; the Foreign Legion; two sections of cavalry; a battalion of engineers, with radiotelegraphy and automobile groups; two groups of aviation; two marine companies; three groups of native troops with three infantry 'tabors,' and one of cavalry.

The total number of generals in active service is 84; chiefs and officers, 9,661; non-commissioned officers, 1,338; sergeants, 5,811; corporals, 12,262; musicians, 1,275; soldiers, 105,367. In Africa there are 3 generals; 2,125 chiefs and officers, and 45,186 of other ranks and soldiers, of which 9,080 are natives and 6,000 belong to the Foreign Legion.

There are also the Guardia Civil and the Carabineros. The former is a constabulary, and the latter a military police used as Customs guard on the frontier. Both are recruited from the army and under military discipline. The actual strength of the Guardia Civil is 22,499; cavalry, 5,318. Carabineros: infantry, 14,526; cavalry, 350.

In 1933-34, 145,000 recruits were called to the colours.

Spain has several fortresses which guard the frontiers and the coast. On the Western Pyrenees, Oyarzun and Pamplona; on the central Pyrenees, Jaca; and on the eastern Pyrenees, Gerona; on the Portuguese side, Badajoz (an old fortification); and finally on the coast, Ferrol, Cádiz, Cartagena, Mahon (Balearic Islands) and Ceuta (Africa). The military estimates for 1933 amounted to 433,594,361 pesetas.

There are 10 flotilla leaders, 3 destroyers, 12 modern torpedo boats, 4 gunboats, and 13 submarines.

The dockyard at Ferrol is worked by a British syndicate, employing Spanish workmen. At this yard two 10,000 ton cruisers (Baleares and Canarias) are approaching completion. Each will be armed with eight 8-inch and eight 4.7-inch guns. In addition, the construction of 12 more submarines and 4 more flotilla leaders has been authorized. Of these, 4 flotilla leaders and 1 submarine are in hand.

A naval wireless telegraphic station, Telefunken system, with a range of 300 miles, is situated at San Fernando (Cadiz). There are also wireless stations at Cartagena and Ferrol. A naval flying service is at work.

For 1934 the strength of the navy was fixed at 18,000 sailors. Total number of officers in active service in the navy, including all departmental corps: 1,407. Reserve: 196.

Production and Industry.

Spain is a preponderatingly agricultural country. The General Land Reform Bill, voted by the Republican Cortes on September 15, 1932, provides for expropriation of land on a large scale. Uncultivated land and other and capable of a better yield under proper cultivation are to be expropriated; likewise, estates belonging to the extinguished aristocracy not made productive for agriculture and only used for hunting and pleasure. Lands within 2 kilometres of villages having less than 25,000 inhabitants are also liable to expropriation if the proprietors own estates in the village producing an income over 1,000 pesetas and are not directly cultivating them. The indemnity agreed ranges from 5 per cent. on lands producing a revenue of 15,000 pesetas to 20 per cent. for revenues of 200,000 pesetas and over.

The productive area was calculated (1932) at 44,274,790 hectares (109,358,731 acres) or 87.7 per cent., and the remainder, 6,176,898 hectares (15,256,938 acres) or 12.3 per cent., as being unproductive. A large part of the productive area is not under direct cultivation, but modern methods and up-to-date machinery are now being employed.

Of the total area of Spain (50,451,688 hectares, or 124,615,669 acres), in 1932, 2,061,893 hectares (5,092,876 acres) were devoted to olive culture (4.08 per cent.); 1,539,716 hectares (3,803,098 acres) to vineyards (3.05 per cent.); 503,844 hectares (1,244,495 acres) to fruit (0.99 per cent.); 16,526,823 hectares (40,821,253 acres) to agriculture and gardens (32.2 per cent.); and 23,642,514 hectares (58,397,009 acres) to pasture and mountains (46.8 per cent.). The value of the agricultural production in 1932 was estimated at 10,414,797,917 pesetas.

In 1921 Spain started the cultivation of tobacco; in 1932, 10,233 acres planted yielded 150,636 cwts., of a total value of 12,650,108 pesetas (Canary Islands included).

The area under the principal crops and the yield (for 3 years) were as follows:—

In 1932, 3,539,636 acres were under vines (3,524,443 acres in 1931) and produced 7,160,353,629 pounds of grapes (6,331,249,205 pounds in 1931), yielding ordinary red and white wines to the extent of 559,854,356 gallons (503,555,580 gallons in 1931). In 1932 there were 26,361,317 orange trees planted and 815,102 lemon trees, yielding 23,420,950 cwts. of oranges and 1,181,888 cwts. of lemons, showing an aggregate value of 235,220,888 pesetas (oranges) and 17,082,845 pesetas (lemons). In 1932, 209,332 acres of beet root sugar planted yielded 40,695,550 cwts., and 8,415 acres of cane sugar planted yielded 4,034,564 cwts. In 1932, 1,032,126 acres of potatoes planted yielded 100,515,116 cwts., producing a value of 848,649,317 pesetas. In 1932, 66,218 acres of onions planted yielded 12,810,720 cwts., producing a value of 85,426,755 pesetas. In 1932-33, olive trees planted covered an area of 4,638,912 acres, yielding 36,197,166 cwts. of olives and 6,376,436 cwts. of oil. 29,297,130 almond trees planted in 1932, covering an area of 349,801 acres, produced 1,998,894 cwts. of almonds of a total value of 97,946,914 pesetas. Hazel nut trees planted in 1932 amounted to 2,991,641 covering an area of 27,718 acres, and produced 397,070 cwts. of nuts of a total value of 17,131,165 pesetas. Other products are esparto, flax, hemp, pulse; and Spain has important industries connected with the preparation of wine and fruits. Silk culture is carried on in Valencia, Murcia, and other provinces (512,621 kilos were produced in 1931). Spain produces yearly some 3,000 tons of honey and 750 tons of beeswax. The number of hives is approximately 619,000. There are 15 cane sugar factories and 42 beet-sugar factories in Spain; in 1931, 17,900 tons were produced of the former and 175,700 tons of the latter. In 1930, the total number of resinous pine-trees amounted to 8,215,648. The total number of alcohol factories in 1931 was 3,421, producing brandy and spirituous liquors to the extent of 110,569,760 litres. Beer factories in operation amounted to 48; yielding 85,745,320 litres.

The number of farm animals in 1931 was estimated as follows:—Horses, 562,877; mules, 1,174,508; asses, 1,002,578; cows, 3,653,667; sheep, 20,046,532; goats, 4,607,946; pigs, 5,102,165; camels (Canary Islands), 4,327.

Spain is rich in minerals. Iron is abundant in the provinces of Vizcaya, Santander, Oviedo, Navarra, Huelva, and Seville; copper in the provinces of Seville, Córdoba, and Huelva; coal is found in Oviedo, Leon, Gerona, Valencia, and Córdoba; zinc in Santander, Murcia, Guipúzcoa, and Vizcaya; cobalt in Oviedo; lead in Murcia, Jaen, and Almería; manganese in Oviedo, Huelva, and Seville; quicksilver in Ciudad Real and Oviedo; silver in Guadalajara; sulphate of soda in Burgos; salt in Guadalajara; sulphur in Murcia and Almería; phosphates in Cáceres and Huelva. Vanadium was reported to have been discovered in Asturias in 1929.

In 1931 workers employed in connection with the mining industries were as follows: 144,374 men, 4,035 women, and 14,113 boys and girls under 18. The total value of the mineral output in 1931 was 489,935,491 pesetas at the pit mouth, there being 2,298 productive mining concessions covering an area of 297,200 hectares. Mining accidents caused 135 deaths. The number of factories engaged in the mining and metallurgical industries amounted to 1,402 in 1931 (1,124 in 1930), with a total output of 942,302,069 pesetas (1,095,572,438 in 1930). The quantities and values of the more important minerals in 1931 were as follows:—

Minerals	Metric tons	Value, Pesetas	Minerals	Metric tons	Value, Pesetas
Anthracite . . .	524,689	21,787,448	Iron pyrites . . .	22,147	381,423

In 1933 the pig iron production was 340,000 metric tons, and steel 455,000 metric tons, compared with 296,481 metric tons and 532,403 metric tons in 1932 respectively.

The total production of cement in 1932 amounted to 1,308,000 metric tons. There are 23 important cement factories. The superphosphate output was 1,200,000 metric tons in 1933. Potash production in 1933, 95,000 tons of K₂O (65,000 tons in 1932).

Spain has considerable manufactures of cotton goods, principally in Catalonia. In 1930 there were 60,083 looms, including 5,820 automatic, and 19,489 lace and knitting looms; in woollen manufactures there are 6,700 looms with 274,800 spindles. There are in Spain about 165 paper mills, making writing, printing, packing and cigarette paper. There are 29 glass-making factories.

In the Spanish fisheries the most important catches are those of sardines, tunny fish, and cod. The total production of the fishing industry amounted in 1931 to 309,378 tons, representing a value of 265,801,643 pesetas.

Shipping and Navigation.

The merchant navy of the Republic contained on April 30, 1938, 1,288 steamers of 1,053,430 tons gross, 106 motorships of 185,428 tons gross, and 346 sailing vessels of 39,834 tons gross—a total of 1,278,692 tons gross.

Barcelona, Bilbao and Cadiz are the chief maritime centres.

The shipping entered and cleared at Spanish ports in two years was as follows:—

	1930		1931
	No.	Tons	No.	Tons
Entered:
With cargoes	13,833	17,758,458	—	—
In ballast	7,064	12,846,489	—	—

In ballast	1,531	3,997,479	—	—
Total	20,048	31,920,167	18,060	28,725,210

Of the vessels in 1931, 8,495 of 11,061,725 tons (entered) were Spanish and 8,843 vessels of 12,031,586 tons (cleared) were Spanish.

Internal Communications.

In 1931 the total length of highways and roads in Spain was 89,591 kilometres (55,636 miles). In 1930 2,600 kilometres of new motor roads were completed.

The total length of the railways in Spain in 1931 (adhered to the Supreme Counsel of Railways) was 13,763 kilometres (8,546 miles), of which 11,627 kilometres (7,220 miles) are of normal gauge (1'67 metres, or 5'48 feet), and 2,136 kilometres (1,326 miles) are of varying gauges, chiefly 1 metre (3'28 feet). The official gauge of the principal Spanish railways has hitherto, for strategic reasons, been purposely kept different from that of France, and in consequence of this passengers are obliged to change trains at the frontier stations. The attempt made in 1882 to remedy this state of affairs was not successful.

In 1931 the total length of tramways in Spain was 2,000 kilometres (1,242 miles).

The whole of the Spanish railways belongs to private companies, but nearly all have obtained guarantees or subventions from the Government. The State tax on tickets and merchandise for the year 1931 amounted to 60,626,830 pesetas. There are 22 companies of normal gauge and 55 of narrow gauge, the most important being those in the North, with 3,801 kilometres (2,360 miles); Madrid-Saragossa-Alicante (system Antigua and Catalana), 3,670 kilometres (2,279 miles); Andaluces, 1,644 kilometres (1,021 miles); Madrid-Caceres-Portugal and West, 1,587 kilometres (985 miles); South of Spain, 397 kilometres (246 miles); La Robla to Valmaseda and Luchana (narrow gauge), 312 kilometres (194 miles); and Calatayud-Teruel-Valencia (Central de Aragon), 299 kilometres (186 miles). A scheme was approved by the Government in July, 1929, for the electrification of the main lines of Spanish railways. In 1932 the construction of a subway was started in the city of Madrid to link the various lines within the town.

The Post Office carried in 1931, in the inland service, 687,878,810 correspondence of all classes; in the international service, 229,796,691 correspondence in general. There were 9,400 post-offices. Receipts, 102,472,750 pesetas; expenses, 75,800,865 pesetas.

The length of lines of telegraphs in Spain in 1931 was 53,213 kms.; the total number of interior messages sent and received (1931) was 80,328,074. International messages sent 1,688,224, received 1,584,603, transit 219,894. The number of telegraph offices was 2,892.

In October, 1924, the entire telephone system of Spain was taken over by the 'International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation' of New York, and a Spanish Company constituted 'Compañía Telefonica Nacional de España,' whose purpose is to provide an automatic service throughout the urban system. On December 29, 1926, this service was inaugurated in Madrid, and the system is being rapidly installed all over the country. In 1931 there were in service 2,699 exchanges, with 242,153 telephones. Number of interurban and international calls, 14,187,734; number of telephone messages, 5,428,979.

The 'Compañía Nacional de Telegrafía sin Hilos' holds the Government concession for the Public Service with ships, and between the Peninsula and the Canary Islands, and the International Service with England, Italy, Austria, France, Switzerland, America and Germany, as well as various special Press Services. They have 10 wireless stations of the Marconi system.

The republican Government has cancelled the airway concession, and the State operates at present the two lines: Madrid-Barcelona and Madrid-Seville; in 1931, 1,309 flights were made, carrying 6,800 passengers and 32 tons of goods. Barcelona-Cadiz or Huelva-Canaries Air Mail Service is in course of inauguration. From the Canary Islands the mails will be taken by steamer to Pernambuco and thence to Rio and Buenos Aires by aeroplane. The formation of a new company is also announced, called Lineas Aereas Interinsulares Canarias, which will run a service between Las Palmas and Santa Cruz de Tenerife. Two services will run daily in each direction. The capacity will be 12 passengers and 2 tons of cargo. There is also the French line from Toulouse to Casa-blanca, which touches Spain at Alicante.

Banking and Credit.

On January 1, 1922, a contract between the Bank of Spain and the Government came into force, according to which the Government participates in the net profits of the Bank, up to certain limits. The note issue was prorogued for another 25 years, up to December 31, 1946. The capital of the Bank was increased from 150,000,000 pesetas to 177,000,000 pesetas. The Bank is now authorized further to increase the capital, up to the limit of 250,000,000 pesetas.

On February 3, 1934, the position of the Bank was as follows:—

	1,000 Pesetas		1,000 Pesetas
Cash in hand { gold . . .	2,261,639	Property . . .	57,944
{ silver . . .	657,676	Capital and reserve . . .	247,800

Savings bank deposits (Popular Savings Banks) in Spain, December 31, 1931, amounted to 2,014,059,758 pesetas, distributed over 2,124,752 accounts. Post Office Savings Banks, which were created under the law of June 4, 1909, were opened on March 12, 1916. On December 31, 1931, there were 926,270 current accounts, representing 277,972,842 pesetas. Savings Departments of ordinary banks had 750,276 depositors with 1,279,500,000 pesetas to their credit. The total number of depositors on December 31, 1931, was 3,801,298, and the amount standing to their credit, 3,571,577,620 pesetas.

The nominal value of the money coined in Spain from 1868 to 1907 was : gold, 1,103,705,080 pesetas ; silver, 1,830,589,807 pesetas. In 1905-07 no gold was coined ; in 1906-07, no silver was coined. No coinage was struck during the years 1908 and 1909. In 1910, money coined to the value of 1,976,180 pesetas in 50 centimo pieces (silver) to replace money retired from circulation. In 1911, 286,843 pesetas of 50 centimo pieces were coined, as well as 60,286 pesetas of bronze centimo pieces. In 1913, 1,429,149 pieces of 1 centimo and 1,639,500 pieces of 2 centimos were coined. A new coin was put into circulation in 1925, consisting of a nickel piece representing 25 centimos ; 5,000,000 pesetas were struck during the years 1925-29, and 2,000,000 pesetas in 50 centimo pieces (silver) during 1926-27 to replace money withdrawn from circulation. In 1927 the 2 pesetas coin was withdrawn from circulation.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The Peseta of 100 Centesimos is of the nominal value of a pre-war franc, $9\frac{1}{2}d.$, or 25·22 pesetas to the pound sterling. The exchange value of the peseta has not been restored to parity since the war.

Gold coins in use are 25, 20, 10, and 5-peseta pieces. Silver coins are 5-peseta, 2-peseta, 1-peseta, and 50-centime pieces.

Both gold and silver coins are of the same weight and fineness as the corresponding pre-war French coins. Under a law of July 29, 1908, the Government is withdrawing from circulation the spurious 5-peseta pieces which had become common. Gold coinage is not in general circulation.

Theoretically, there is a double standard of value, gold and silver, the ratio being $15\frac{1}{2}$ to 1. But of silver coins only the 5-peseta piece is legal tender, and the coinage of this is restricted.

On January 1, 1859, the metric system of weights and measures was introduced in Spain. But, besides these, the old weights and measures are still largely used. They are :—The Quintal = 220·4 lbs. avoirdupois ; the Libra = 1·014 lbs. avoirdupois ; the Arroba, for wine = $3\frac{1}{4}$ imperial gallons ; for oil = $2\frac{3}{4}$ imperial gallons ; the Square Vara = 1·09 vara = 1 yard ; the fanega = $1\frac{1}{2}$ imperial bushel.

Colonies.

The area and population of the colonial possessions of Spain are approximately as follows:—

Colonial Possessions	Area: English square miles	Population
Possessions in Africa:
Rio de Oro and Adrar	109,200	840 ²
Ifni	965	20,000
Spanish Guinea	10,036	140,000
Fernando Po, Annobon, Corisco, Great Elobey, Little Elobey	795	23,846
Spanish Morocco ¹	7,700	750,000
Total, Africa	128,696	934,686

² White population.

For administrative purposes the Canary Islands are considered part of Spain. The area of the islands is 2,807 square miles, and their population (1931) 564,873.

Rio de Oro and Adrar stretch from the Wadi Draa 29° N. and 11° 4' W. to Cape Blanco 20° 46' N. and 17° 3' W. Politically there are three zones:—(1) Colony of Rio de Oro, 26° N. to 20° 46' N., an area of 65,500 square miles; (2) the Protectorate, between 27° 40' N. and 26° N. bordered on the east by 8° 40' W., an area of 34,700 square miles; (3) the occupied territory, between 27° 40' N. and the Wadi Draa, an area of about 9,000 square miles, settled by various treaties, 1900 to 1912. The capital of this colony is Villa Cisneros. There is no town called Rio de Oro, the name being applied to the arm of the sea and the colony generally. The budget for 1929 amounted to 6,947,274 pesetas. There is little or no agriculture. Fishing is the principal occupation of the inhabitants.

Ifni was ceded to Spain by Morocco in 1860. By the Franco-Spanish agreement of 1912 it extends along the West Coast of Morocco to the north of Wadi Draa, from Wad Nun on the south to Wad Bu Sedra on the north, and a distance of 15 miles inland from the coast. The occupation is purely nominal. Area, 965 square miles, population, 20,000. There are several small harbours and villages; the population is engaged in fishing, and in cultivating dates and garden produce.

The Spanish territory on the Gulf of Guinea extends from the Muni to the Campo river and the Cameroons, its eastern boundary being on the meridian of 11° 20' E. of Greenwich. The capital is Santa Isabel, in the Island of Fernando Po, with a population of 8,345. The principal mountain is known as the Pico de Santa Isabel, or Clarence Peak (9,185 feet). The island is considered one of the most fertile spots on the West Coast of Africa. The other possessions of Spain in the Gulf of Guinea comprise the Islands of Annobon (7½ square miles), Little Elobey (22 acres), Great Elobey (½ square mile) and Corisco (5½ square miles), and the district of Rio Muni on the mainland (9,470 square miles), the principal town of which is Bata. The coast region is low and marshy and contains vast forests. The vegetation is luxuriant and at places along the coast there are Spanish, French, and English factories. But there are no harbours and the rivers are all inaccessible to vessels. The population of Fernando Poo is 20,873. There are about 250 to 300 Europeans in the island, about 80 of these being British. The population of Little Elobey is 222. Great Elobey is covered with bush; its population is 123. Corisco has a population of 1,438 and Annobon of 1,204, while the population of Rio Muni territory is estimated at 130 whites and 89,000 natives. All the colonies are under the control of a Governor-General, resident at Santa Isabel. A Sub-Governor is appointed to the district of Bata and another to the district of Elobey, which includes the Islands of Corisco and Annobon. The aborigines of Fernando Poo are called Bubis. Those of Elobey and Corisco are mostly of the Benga tribe, but like the people of Annobon they take the names of their respective islands. In Bata the Pamwes are the principal tribe. There are Catholic and American Presbyterian missions at work among the natives.

Constitution and Government.

The fundamental laws of the Kingdom of Sweden are:—1. The Constitution or Regerings-formen of June 6, 1809; 2. The amended regulations for the formation of the Diet of June 22, 1866 (modified by Acts passed in 1909–1933); 3. The law of royal succession of September 26, 1810; and 4. The law on the liberty of the Press of July 16, 1812. The King must be a member of the Lutheran Church. His Constitutional power is exercised in conjunction with the Council of State or (in legislation) in concert with the Diet, and every new law must have the assent of the crown. The right of imposing taxes is, however, vested in the Diet. This Diet, or Parliament of the realm, consists of two Chambers, both elected by the people. The First Chamber consists of 150 members. Their election takes place by the members of the 'Landstings,' or provincial representations, and electors of six towns, not represented in the 'Landstings.' The constituencies are 19, arranged in 8 groups, in one of which an election takes place in September every year. All members of the First Chamber must be above 35 years of age, and must have the right to vote in municipal affairs. They are elected for the term of eight years. The Second Chamber consists of 230 members elected for 4 years by universal suffrage, every man and woman over 23 years of age, and not under legal disability, having the right to vote. The country is divided into 28 constituencies, in each of which one member is elected for every 230th part of the population of the Kingdom it contains. All men and women who are entitled to vote have the right to stand for election, but only in their own election areas. The manner of election to both Chambers is proportional, and regulated by a special election law. The places to be given to the different groups of voting papers are decided according to the d'Hondt rule. The members of both Chambers obtain salaries for their services, at the rate of 3,000 kr. and 4,000 kr. for members living in or outside the capital, for each ordinary session, besides travelling expenses. The salaries and travelling expenses of the deputies are paid out of the public purse.

The executive power is in the hands of the King, who acts under the advice of a Council of State, the head of which is the Prime Minister. The Ministry (Socialist), appointed on September 24, 1932, is composed as follows:—

Prime Minister.—P. A. Hansson.

Minister of Foreign Affairs.—Richard J. Sandler.

Minister of Justice.—Justice Karl J. D. Schlyter.

Minister of Defence.—Ivar T. Vennerström.

Minister for Social Affairs.—F. Gustav Möller.

Minister of Communications.—Henning V. Leo.

Minister of Finance.—Dr. Ernst J. Wigforss.

Minister of Education and Ecclesiastical Affairs.—J. Arthur Engberg.

Minister of Agriculture.—P. Edvin Sköld.

Minister of Commerce.—J. Fritjof Ekman.

Ministers without Portfolio.—Professor B. Östen Undén, Karl S. Levinson.

All the members of the Council of State are responsible for the acts of the Government.

The second chamber, elected September, 1932: 58 Moderates, 36 of the Agrarian Party, 24 Liberals and members of the Liberal Democratic Party, 104 Socialists and 8 Communists. The upper chamber: 50 Moderates, 18 of the Agrarian Party, 23 Liberals and members of the Liberal Democratic Party, 58 Socialists, and 1 Communist.

The provincial administration is entrusted in Stockholm to a Governor, and in each of the 24 counties to a prefect, who is nominated by the King. As executive officers of the prefects there are 489 sub-bailiffs. The right of the people to regulate their own local affairs is based on the municipal laws of June 6, 1930. Each rural parish, and each town, forms a commune or municipality in which all men and women over 23 years of age, and not under legal disability, who have paid the local taxes for at least one of the preceding three years, are voters. In small communes and towns the parish or town assembly may itself decide on all questions of administration, police and communal economy. It may, however, elect a parish or town council to decide on the questions, and all communes with more than 1,500 inhabitants have to do so. These councils are named Kommunalfullmäktige in the country, and Stadsfullmäktige in the towns. Ecclesiastical affairs are in all communes with more than 5,000 inhabitants, dealt with by councils, named 'Kyrkofullmäktige.' Each county has a county council (Lands-ting) elected by men and women who enjoy municipal suffrage, and have completed their 27th year. Towns having a population of at least 50,000 are in their right to separate from the 'Landstings.' Towns which are administered separately by their municipal councils are Stockholm, Göteborg, Malmö, Norrköping, Helsingborg and Gävle. As in elections for the Diet, so in the elections of municipal representatives, of members of the 'Landstings,' &c., the method of election is proportional. Women are eligible for communal offices.

Area and Population.

I. PROGRESS AND PRESENT CONDITION.

The first census took place in 1749, and it was repeated at first every third year, and subsequently, after 1775, every fifth year. At present, a general census is taken every ten years, besides which there are annual calculations of the people.

The area and population of Sweden, according to estimates for December 31, 1931, and 1932, are as follows:—

Governments (Län)	Area: English square miles	Population Dec. 31, 1931	Population Dec. 31, 1932	Pop. per square mile 1932

Total	173,349	6,162,446	6,190,364	39.1

In 1932 there were 3,053,528 males and 3,136,836 females.

The growth of the population has been as follows :—

Census year	Population	Increase per ct. per annum	Census year	Population	Increase per ct. per annum
1880	4,565,668	0.91	1920	5,904,489	0.67
1910	5,522,408	0.72	1930	6,141,571	0.39

With the exception of 30,247 Finns, 7,162 Lapps, and some thousands others, the Swedish population (1920) is entirely of the Scandinavian branch of the Aryan family.

On December 31, 1920, there were 22,811 foreigners in Sweden, including subjects of Finland 5,897, Germany 4,532, Norway 2,996, Denmark 2,730, Russia 1,885, the United States 1,072, the United Kingdom and Ireland 487, other states 3,212.

For occupational census, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR BOOK, 1928, p. 1319.

Religion and Education.

The mass of the population belong to the Lutheran Protestant Church, recognized as the State religion. There are 12 bishoprics (Uppsala being the metropolitan see) and 2,573 parishes at the beginning of 1933. At the census of 1920, the number of 'Evangelical Lutherans' was returned at 5,880,941, the Protestant Dissenters numbering, Baptists, 7,265, and Methodists, 5,452. Of other creeds, there were 3,425 Roman Catholics (under a Vicar Apostolic resident at Stockholm), 6,469 Jews, and 937 others. A few civil disabilities attach to those not of the national religion. The clergy are chiefly supported from the parishes and the proceeds of the Church lands.

The Kingdom has two universities, at Uppsala (founded in 1477) and Lund (founded in 1668), the former having 3,182 and the latter 2,871 students in the autumn of 1933. There are also a State faculty of medicine in Stockholm (founded in 1810), with 832 students, and private universities in Stockholm (founded in 1877), philosophical and law faculties, with 1,516 students, and Göteborg (founded in 1889), philosophical faculty, with 350 students. In Stockholm and Göteborg there are also academies of commerce. In 1932 there were 136 public secondary schools, with 39,084 pupils; 55 people's high schools, 5,298 pupils; 2 high and 8 elementary technical schools, about 4,000 pupils; military schools, navigation schools, agricultural schools, veterinary and other special schools; besides institutions and schools for the deaf mutes and the blind. Public elementary instruction is gratuitous and compulsory (since 1842), and children not attending schools under the supervision of the Government must furnish proofs of having been privately educated. The school age is 7 to 14 years. In 1932 there were in the elementary schools, 28,414 teachers and 663,969 pupils.

Justice and Crime.

The administration of justice is entirely independent of the Government. Two functionaries, the Justitie-Kansler, or Chancellor of Justice, and the Justitie-Ombudsman, or Attorney-General, exercise a control over the administration. The former, appointed by the King, acts also as a counsel for the Crown; while the latter, who is appointed by the Diet, has to extend a general supervision over all the courts of law. Since 1915 there is a Militie-Ombudsman, also appointed by the Diet, exercising a control over the military laws. The Kingdom, which possesses one Supreme Court of Judicature, is divided (beginning of 1933) into 3 high court districts and 207 district courts divisions, of which 88 are urban districts and 119 country districts.

In town these district courts (or courts of first instance) are held by the burgomaster and his assessors; in the country by a judge and 12 jurors—mostly peasant proprietors—the judge alone deciding, unless the jurors unanimously differ from him, when their decision prevails. In Sweden trial by jury only exists for affairs of the liberty of the Press.

Defence.

ARMY.

The military forces are recruited on the principle of universal service, but aided by a voluntarily enlisted personnel which forms the permanent cadres for training purposes. In June, 1925, the latest defence scheme was accepted by the Diet.

Liability to service commences at the age of 20, and lasts till the end of the 42nd year. The men belong to the active army or Beväring for 15 years; and then for 8 years to the Landstorm. The initial period of training for the main part of the infantry is 90 days (150 days for 20 per cent. of the annual quota), 140 days for cavalry, artillery, and engineers. The infantry is called up for regimental training periods twice for 25 days each time (3 times for 20 per cent. of the annual quota). The cavalry, artillery and engineers have 2 training periods of 30 days.

The army is organized in 4 divisions, 1 brigade, the troops of Upper Norrland and of Gotland. There are 22 infantry, 4 cavalry and 9 artillery regiments (corps). The establishment in 1933 was 2,296 officers and 25,854 other ranks.

The total number on the rolls of the "Beväring" amounts to about 575,000.

The strength of the reserve of officers and N.C.O.s of the reserve were 3,236 and 2,482 respectively.

The Landstorm amounts to about 240,000 of all ranks.

The infantry is armed with the Mauser rifle (calibre 6.5 mm.), heavy machine-gun, model 14 (calibre 6.5 mm.), light machine-gun, model 21 (calibre 6.5 mm.) and mortar m/29 (calibre 8 cm.); the cavalry is armed with short rifle (Mauser, calibre 6.5 mm.), sword, heavy machine-gun, model 14 (calibre 6.5 mm.), and light machine-gun, model 21 (calibre 6.5 mm.): the field artillery have the Krupp 7.5 cm. Q.F. gun. The field artillery has also 10.5 cm. and 15 cm. howitzers. The heavy artillery is armed with 10 cm. gun and 15 resp. 21 cm. howitzers.

The military budget for 1933-34 amounts to 62,838,297 kronor for the army.

AIR FORCE.

The Swedish Air Force consists of a chief, an air staff, four flying corps, and several aviation training schools, bases, depôts, and factories. The Air Force, in 1933-34, numbered 1,140 all ranks, with 91 active and 76 instructional aeroplanes.

NAVY.

The Swedish Navy is maintained principally as a coast-defence force. The following is a list of the principal ships:—

There are 12 destroyers, 3 old torpedo-gunboats, 43 torpedo and vedette boats, one mining vessel, and 16 submarines, besides sundry depôt ships and small craft. Building: Gotland (see above), 2 destroyers, 4 submarines, 4 vedettes.

The personnel of the Royal Navy is divided into three classes, viz.: 1. The Active List; 2. The Reserve; 3. The Beväring (Conscripts). On the active list are 5 flag-officers, 8 commodores, 35 captains, 115 commanders and lt.-commanders, 108 lieutenants, 55 sub-lieutenants, 528 warrant officers, and 3,239 petty officers and men, while about 360 officers belong to the Reserve.

On the active list of the Royal Coast Artillery are 1 general, 2 colonels, 4 lieutenant-colonels, 7 majors, 32 captains, 34 lieutenants, 16 sub-lieutenants, 107 warrant officers, and 624 petty officers and men.

Production and Industry.

I. AGRICULTURE.

Sweden has always been an agricultural country. In 1751 only 9·5 per cent. of the population depended for a livelihood on the various industries and commerce; in 1870 the percentage had advanced to 12·5, in 1900 to 29·1, in 1910 to 37·8, and in 1920 to about 44·2 per cent., so that to-day the population of Sweden is about equally divided in the pursuit of agriculture on the one hand and commerce and industries on the other.

According to the census of agriculture taken in the autumn of 1927, the number of farms in cultivation was 427,152; of these there were of 2 hectares and under, 119,757; 2 to 20 hectares, 271,804; 20 to 100 hectares, 33,122; above 100, 2,469. Of the total land area of Sweden (41,028,000 hectares), 3,755,000 hectares were under cultivation, 1,269,000 hectares under natural meadows, and 21,747,000 hectares under forests, the products of which form a staple export. The estimated forest area is given as 23,181,200 hectares, and the total amount of wood as 1,417 million cubic metres.

The following table shows the area and yield of the chief crops for 2 years:—

Crop	Area (hectares)		Produce (tons)
	1932	1933	1932	1933
Wheat . . .	301,794	323,434	721,213	794,799

Hay . . .	1,648,397	1,640,948	5,774,866	4,789,275

The value of all crops was estimated in 1931 at 851 million kronor; in 1932 at 920 million kronor; and in 1933 at 945 million kronor. In 1932, the live-stock was estimated as follows: Horses, 659,600; head of cattle, 3,120,500; sheep and lambs, 607,700; pigs, 1,542,000.

II. MINES and MINERALS.

Mining has been from time immemorial the leading industry of Sweden, which was the biggest producer of iron in Europe until the use of coal for the manufacture of pig-iron revolutionized that industry. The lack of fossil fuel is the reason why at present mining in Lappland merely concerns itself with the raw products, though experiments made in recent years have carried the problem of electric production of iron ore a good step forward. There were raised in 1932, throughout the Kingdom, 3,298,989 tons of iron ore. The pig-iron produced amounted in 1932 to 264,775 tons, and the ingot iron to 528,278 tons. Of iron ore, in 1932, 2,219,309 tons, and of pig-iron 31,545 tons were exported. There were also raised in 1932, 11,686 tons of silver and lead ore, 3,553 tons of copper ore, 46,034 tons of zinc ore, 4,728 tons of manganese ore, 192,258 tons of auriferous arsenic ore, and 71,534 tons of sulphur pyrites. The lead produced amounted to 39,000 kilograms, the copper to 3,289,000, the zinc to 142,000, the tin to 5,000. There are not inconsiderable veins of coal in the southern parts of Sweden, giving 333,076 tons of coal in 1932. The most important produce of the Swedish quarries is paying stone; the amount produced for sale in 1932 had a value of 8,249,965 kronor. In 1932 there were 47,149 persons (1,284 young people under 18) engaged in the mining and metallurgical industries.

III. INDUSTRIES.

The industries of Sweden are spread fairly well over the whole country. The mining of iron ore has reached its highest development north of the Polar circle, and the most important sawmills are located along the shores of the Gulf of Bothnia. The production of iron and steel has taken place in central Sweden since the earliest times in Swedish history; pig iron is produced chiefly in Sandviken, Domnarvet, Uddeholm, and Fagersta. Cream separators, ball-bearings, lighthouse apparatus, telephone supplies, motors, and many kinds of electrical machinery are among the highly specialised products of the metallurgical industries. The porcelain factory of Gustavsberg and the glass factories of Kosta and Orrefors produce wares that have achieved a high reputation in the markets of the world. Innumerable factories for the production of finished products are scattered all over the countryside.

The timber and wood-work industries of Sweden are of great importance. The public forests have an area of 7,846,499 hectares, of which crown and ecclesiastical forests extend to 6,095,000 hectares. The latter yielded, in 1931, 6,051,313 cubic metres of timber. In 1931 there were in Sweden 1,337 sawmills and planing mills with 37,297 workers who turned out sawn or planed timber to the value of 223,458,000 kronor; 1,117 factories for joinery and furniture with 16,674 workers, the output for the year being valued at 94,666,000 kronor; 106 factories for wood-pulp with 18,711 workers, output 227,940,000 kronor; and 78 paper and pasteboard mills with 17,096 workers, output 183,366,000 kronor.

The following are some data for the most important Swedish industries :—

The total number of industrial factories (including mines and quarries) was in 1930, 14,610, and in 1931, 14,722. The total power used in industry amounted to 4,258,000 effective h.p. in 1931 and 3,973,000 effective h.p. in 1930.

In 1931, 323,444 men, 72,845 women, 24,469 boys, and 9,312 girls (under 18 years of age) were employed in factories.

IV. FISHERIES.

The total value of the Göteborg and Bohus fishing industry in 1931 was estimated at 14,351,000 kronor.

Commerce.

The total customs-duties levied in 1929 amounted to 161,189,000 kronor, in 1930 to 156,843,000 kronor, and in 1931 to 153,346,000 kronor.

The imports and exports of Sweden, unwrought gold and silver and coin not included, have been as follows (18'16 kronor = £1):—

A national Swedish trade-mark was introduced (1911) by Sveriges Allmänna Handelsförening (General Commercial Association of Sweden). The upper half of the mark shows the three royal Swedish crowns, on a light-blue ground, and the words 'Svensk Tillverkning' (Swedish manufacture) are shown on a light-yellow ground below.

The following table shows the value of the trade with the principal countries with which Sweden deals :—

Internal Communications.

On January 1, 1932, there were 47,880 miles of roads in Sweden.

At the end of 1932 the total length of railways in Sweden was 16,776 kilometres, of which 6,878 kilometres belonged to the State. The receipts of the State railways in 1932 were 166 million kronor, and expenses 153 million kronor. The total cost of construction for the State railways to the end of 1932 was 1,143 million kronor, and for private railways, 735 million kronor. The total number of passengers on the State railways was, in 1931, 31,405,000, and, in 1932, 31,331,000; weight of goods, 14,257,000 tons and 9,977,000 tons; (private railways, 36,202,000 passengers in 1931 and 33,288,000 in 1932; goods, 16,504,000 tons and 14,453,000 tons). The line between Luleå and Riksgränsen (the Lapland iron ore line) is run by electric power, as is also, since summer, 1926, the line between Göteborg and Stockholm.

The length of the circuits of the telegraph at the end of 1932 was 58,365 km., 28,143 km. of which belonged to the railways. The circuits of the State telephone had a length of 1,118,199 km., 33,478 of which belonged to the railways; the circuits of the private telephone lines had a length of only 12,266 km. The number of taxed telegraph messages sent in the year 1932 was 5,171,775, including 736,005 in transit. In 1932 there were 577,281 instruments (in Stockholm 177,322) employed in the telephone service, including 12,420 railways' and 1,524 private telephones.

The Swedish Post Office carried 837,213,000 letters, post-cards, journals, &c., in the year 1932. The number of post-offices at the end of the year was 3,915. The total receipts of the Post Office in 1932 amounted to 77,976,230 kronor, and the total expenditure to 64,814,510 kronor.

Commercial aviation is carried on by the A/B Aerotransport with the help of a government subsidy (650,000 kronor annually). A daily service is maintained in each direction, jointly with foreign companies, between Malmö and Amsterdam, and between Stockholm and Helsingfors. In 1932, planes of the company flew 468,982 kilometres and carried 6,440 passengers in the traffic routes.

Banking and Credit.

The Riksbank, or National Bank of Sweden, belongs entirely to the State and is managed by directors elected for three years by the Diet, except one, the president, who is designated by the King. The Bank is under the guarantee of the Diet, its capital and reserve capital are fixed by its constitution, and its note circulation is limited by the value of its metallic stock and its assets in current accounts at home and abroad; but its actual circulation is kept far within this limit.

There are 9 conjointly responsible private banks and 20 joint-stock banks (December, 1933). Since December 31, 1903, only the Riksbank has the right to issue notes.

The following table gives statistics of the National Bank, and private banks (joint-stock banks included) in Sweden for December 31, 1933:—

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The Swedish Krona, of 100 öre, is of the value of 1s. 1½d., or about 18 kronor 16 öre to the pound sterling.

The gold 20-kronor piece weighs 8·960572 grammes, ·900 fine, containing 8·0645 grammes of fine gold, and the silver krona weighs 7·5 grammes, ·800 fine, containing 6 grammes of fine silver. Nickel coins have been issued since 1920.

The standard of value is gold. Gold coins, however, practically do not exist as a currency. National Bank notes for 5, 10, 50, 100, and 1,000 kronor are legal means of payment, and the Bank is bound to exchange them for gold on presentation, but the obligation to redemption is for the present suspended.

The metric system of weights and measures is obligatory.

SWITZERLAND.

(SCHWEIZ.—SUISSE.—SVIZZERA.)

Constitution and Government.

I. CENTRAL.

On August 1, 1291, the men of Uri, Schwyz, and Lower Unterwalden entered into a defensive League. In 1353 the League included eight members, and in 1513 thirteen. Various allied and subject territories were acquired either by single cantons or by several in common, and in 1648 the League became formally independent of the Holy Roman Empire, but no addition was made to the number of cantons till 1798. In that year, under the influence of France, the unified Helvetic Republic was formed. This failed to satisfy the Swiss, and in 1803 Napoleon Bonaparte, in the Act of Mediation, gave a new constitution and out of the lands formerly allied or subject increased the number of cantons to nineteen. In 1815 the perpetual neutrality of Switzerland and the inviolability of her territory were guaranteed by Austria, Great Britain, Portugal, Prussia, and Russia, and the Federal Pact which had been drawn up at Zürich, and which included three new cantons, was accepted by the Congress of Vienna. The Pact remained in force till 1848, when a new constitution, prepared without foreign interference, was accepted by general consent. This, in turn, was, on May 29, 1874, superseded by the constitution which is now in force.

The constitution of the Swiss Confederation may be revised either in the ordinary forms of Federal legislation with compulsory referendum, or by direct popular vote (popular initiative) a majority both of the citizens voting and of the cantons being required, and the latter method may be adopted on the demand of 50,000 citizens with the right to vote. The Federal Government (i.e., the Parliament and the Federal Council) is supreme in matters of peace, war, and treaties; it regulates the army, the railway, postal and telegraph systems, the coining of money, the issue and repayment of bank notes, and the weights and measures of the Republic. The Federal Parliament legislates on matters of copyright, bankruptcy, patents, sanitary police in dangerous epidemics, and it may create and subsidise, besides the Polytechnic School at Zürich, a Federal University and other educational institutions. There has also been entrusted to it the authority to decide concerning public works for the whole or great part of Switzerland, such as those relating to rivers, forests, and the construction of railways. By referendum of November 13, 1898, it is also the authority in the entire sphere of common law.

The supreme legislative authority is vested in a parliament of two chambers, a 'Ständerat,' or Council of States, and a 'Nationalrat,' or National Council. The first is composed of forty-four members, chosen and paid by the twenty-two cantons of the Confederation, two for each canton. Their remuneration depends on the wealth and liberality of the cantons, the average being about 20 francs per day; representatives from the canton of Geneva receive 30 francs, from Uri and from Unterwalden 15 francs per day. The mode of their election and the term of membership depend entirely on the canton. Three of the cantons are politically divided—Basel into Stadt and Land; Appenzell into Ausser Rhoden and Inner Rhoden; and Unterwald into Obwald and Nidwald. Each of these parts of cantons sends one member to the State Council, so that there are two members to the divided as well as to the undivided cantons. The 'Nationalrat' consists (according to a law passed in August of 1930) of 187 representatives of the Swiss people, chosen in direct election for 4 years, at the rate of one deputy for every 22,000 souls. The members are paid from Federal funds at the rate of 40 francs for each day on which they are present, with travelling expenses, at the rate of 20 centimes per kilometre, to and from the capital. Members employed on commissions receive additional pay at the same rate. The members are distributed amongst the various cantons as follows:—

At the elections held on October 25, 1931, the following parties were returned :—National Council : Radicals, 52 ; Catholics, 44 ; Social Democrats, 49 ; Agrarians, 30 ; Liberal Conservatives, 6 ; Communists, 3 ; other parties, 3. Council of States : Radicals, 19 ; Catholic Conservatives, 18 ; Liberal Conservative, 1 ; Peasant Party, 3 ; Socialist, 1.

A general election of representatives takes place by ballot every four years. Every citizen of the Republic who has entered on his twenty-first year is entitled to a vote ; and any voter, not a clergyman, may be elected a deputy. Both chambers united are called the 'Bundes-Versammlung,' or Federal Assembly, and as such represent the supreme government of the Republic. Laws passed by the Federal Assembly may be vetoed by the popular voice, which means in effect that 30,000 citizens or eight cantons may demand that the law in question should be submitted to the direct vote of the nation, which can only say 'Yes' or 'No.' For the decision of the question submitted a majority both of the cantons and of the voters is required. This principle, called the referendum, is frequently acted on.

The chief executive authority is deputed to a 'Bundesrat,' or Federal Council, consisting of seven members, elected for three years by the Federal Assembly. The members of this council must not hold any other office in the Confederation or cantons, nor engage in any calling or business. In the Federal Parliament legislation may be introduced either by a member, or by either House, or by the Federal Council (but not by the people). Every citizen who has a vote for the National Council is eligible for becoming a member of the executive.

The President of the Confederation and the Vice-President of the Federal Council are the first magistrates of the Confederation. Both are elected by the Federal Assembly in joint session of the National and State councils for the term of one year, January 1 to December 31, and are not re-eligible to the same offices till after the expiration of another year. The Vice-President, however, may be, and usually is, elected to succeed the outgoing President.

President of the Confederation for 1934.—Dr. Marcel Pilet-Golaz (Waadt).

Vice-President of the Federal Council for 1934.—R. Minger (Bern).

The seven members of the Federal Council—each of whom has a salary of 1,280*l.* per annum, while the President has 1,400*l.*—act as ministers, or chiefs of the seven administrative departments of the Republic. These departments are :—1. Foreign Affairs. 2. Interior. 3. Justice and Police. 4. Military. 5. Finance and Customs. 6. Agriculture and Industry (Economie publique). 7. Posts and Railways. The city of Bern is the seat of the Federal Council and the central administrative authorities.

II. LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

Each of the cantons and demi-cantons of Switzerland is sovereign, so far as its independence and legislative powers are not restricted by the federal constitution; each has its local government, different in its organisation in most instances, but all based on the principle of absolute sovereignty of the people. In a few of the smallest cantons the people exercise their powers direct, without the intervention of any parliamentary machinery, all male citizens of full age assembling together in the open air, at stated periods, making laws and appointing their administrators. Such assemblies, known as the Landsgemeinden, exist in Appenzell, Glarus and Unterwald. In all the larger cantons there is a body chosen by universal suffrage, usually called der Grosse Rat, or Kantons Rat, which exercises all the functions of the Landsgemeinden. In all the cantonal constitutions, however, except those of the cantons which have a Landsgemeinde, the referendum has a place. By this principle, where it is most fully developed, as in Zurich, all laws and concordats, or agreements with other cantons, and the chief matters of finance, as well as all revision of the constitution, must be submitted to the popular vote. In all the cantons, the popular initiative for constitutional affairs, as well as for legislation, has been introduced, except in Lucerne, where the initiative exists only for constitutional affairs. The members of the cantonal councils, as well as most of the magistrates, are either honorary servants of their fellow-citizens, or receive a merely nominal salary. In most cantons there are districts (Amtsbezirke) consisting of a number of communes grouped together, each district having a Prefect (Regierungstatthalter) representing the cantonal government. In the larger communes, for local affairs, there is an Assembly (legislative) and a Council (executive) with a president, maire or syndic, and not less than 4 other members. In the smaller communes there is a council only, with its proper officials.

Area and Population.

I. PROGRESS AND PRESENT CONDITION.

Area and population, according to the census held on December 1, 1920, and the census held on December 1, 1930, are shown in the following table. The cantons are given in the official order and the year of the entrance of each into the league or confederation is stated :—

Canton	Area : sq. miles	Population		Pop. per square mile, 1930
		Dec. 1, 1920 (census)	Dec. 1, 1930 (census)

The German language is spoken by the majority of inhabitants in 19 of the 25 cantons (French names given in brackets), the French in five—Fribourg, Vaud, Valais, Neuchâtel and Genève—for which the German names are given in brackets), the Italian in one (Ticino). In 1930, 2,924,314 spoke German, 831,100 French, 241,985 Italian, 44,204 Romansch, and 24,797 other languages.

The number of foreigners resident in Switzerland in 1930 was 355,522.

II. MOVEMENT OF POPULATION.

Years	Total Births	Stillbirths	Marriages	Deaths and Stillbirths	Surplus of Births over Deaths
1928	71,332	1,738	30,050	49,801	21,531
1929	70,715	1,709	31,238	52,147	18,568

1931	69,851	1,602	32,269	51,016	18,835
1932	70,254	1,610	31,959	51,520	18,734

In 1932 the illegitimate births numbered 2,966. The number of divorces was 3,041 in 1932.

The number of emigrants in five years was : 1928, 4,800 ; 1929, 4,608 ; 1930, 3,636 ; 1931, 1,707 ; 1932, 1,301.

III. PRINCIPAL TOWNS.

On December 1, 1930, the population of the principal towns was as follows (census figures) :—Zürich, 249,820 (1933, 312,600) ; Bâle, 148,063 ; Geneva, 142,812 ; Bern, 111,783 ; Lausanne, 75,915 ; St. Gallen, 63,947 ; Winterthur, 53,925 ; Luzern, 47,066 ; Biel, 37,726 ; La Chaux-de-Fonds, 35,252 ; Neuchâtel, 22,668 ; Fribourg, 21,567 ; Schaffhausen, 21,118 ;

Montreux, 18,506; Thun, 13,524; Chur, 15,574; Lugano, 15,184; Solothurn, 13,734; Herisau, 13,599; Olten, 13,484; Vevey, 13,036; Le Locle, 12,001; Aarau, 11,666; Rorschach, 11,005; Bellinzona, 10,706.

Religion.

There is complete and absolute liberty of conscience and of creed. No one is bound to pay taxes specially appropriated to defraying the expenses of a creed to which he does not belong. No bishoprics can be created on Swiss territory without the approbation of the Confederation. The order of Jesuits and its affiliated societies cannot be received in any part of Switzerland; all functions clerical and scholastic are forbidden to its members, and the interdiction can be extended to any other religious orders whose action is dangerous to the State, or interferes with the peace of different creeds. The foundation of new convents or religious orders is forbidden.

According to the census of December 1, 1930, the number of Protestants amounted to 2,230,336 (57 per cent. of the population), of Roman Catholics to 1,666,317 (41 per cent.), and of Jews to 17,973 (0·4 per cent.). Protestants are in a majority in twelve of the cantons, and Catholics in ten. Of the more populous cantons, Zürich, Bern, Vaud, Neuchâtel, and Basel (town and land) are mainly Protestant, while Luzern, Fribourg, Ticino, Valais and the Forest Cantons are mainly Catholic. The Roman Catholic priests are much more numerous than the Protestant clergy, the former comprising more than 6,000 regular and secular priests. They are under five bishops, viz., of Basel and Lugano (resident at Solothurn), Chur, St. Gallen, Lausanne and Geneva (resident at Freiburg), and Sitten (Sion), all of them immediately subject to the Holy See.

Education.

In the educational administration of Switzerland there is no centralization. Before the year 1848 most of the cantons had organised a system of primary schools, and since that year elementary education has steadily advanced. In 1874 it was made obligatory (the school age varying in the different cantons), and placed under the civil authority. In some cantons the cost falls almost entirely on the communes, in others it is divided between the canton and communes. In all the cantons primary instruction is free. In every district there are primary schools, and secondary schools for youths of from twelve to fifteen.

The following are the statistics of the various classes of educational institutions for 1931-32:—primary schools 4,362, with 16,692 teachers (8,194 men and 8,493 women), and 471,198 pupils (238,280 boys and 232,918 girls); the 747 secondary schools and lower middle schools had 32,371 boys and 29,950 girls, with 2,428 men and 596 women teachers. There are also cantonal schools, gymnasia, higher schools for girls, complementary schools, teachers' seminaries, commercial and administrative schools, trade schools, art schools, technical schools, schools for the instruction of girls in domestic economy and other subjects; agricultural schools, schools for horticulture, for viticulture, for arboriculture, and for dairy management. There are also institutions for the blind, the deaf and dumb, and the feeble-minded.

There are seven universities in Switzerland. These universities are organised on the model of those of Germany, governed by a rector and a senate, and divided into four 'faculties' of theology, jurisprudence, philosophy, and medicine. There is a Technical High School, maintained by the Federal Government, at Zürich, with 1,757 matriculated students in 1931-32.

The academy of Neuchâtel was transformed into a university in May, 1909, but without the faculty of medicine. The following table shows the year of foundation of each university, the number of teaching staff and of matriculated students in the various branches of study in each of the seven universities in the winter of 1932-33 :—

—	Theology	Law	Medicine	Philosophy and Science	Total	Teaching Staff
Basel (1460)	55	130	411	610	1,206	183
Zürich (1832)	96	592	732	611	2,031	208

² As a University.

These numbers are exclusive of 'visitors,' but inclusive of 1,195 women students.

In the winter of 1931-32 there were 2,561 foreign students, i.e. 28 per cent. of the matriculated students in Switzerland.

A University Institute for International Studies was opened at Geneva in October, 1927.

Justice and Crime.

The 'Bundes-Gericht,' or Federal Tribunal, which sits at Lausanne, consists of 24 members, with 9 supplementary judges, appointed by the Federal Assembly for six years and are eligible for re-election; the President and Vice-President, as such, for two years and cannot be re-elected. The President has a salary of 27,000 francs a year, and the other members 25,000 francs. The Tribunal has three sections, to each of which is assigned the trial of suits in accordance with regulations framed by the Tribunal itself. It has original and final jurisdiction in suits between the Confederation and cantons; between cantons and cantons; between the Confederation or cantons and corporations or individuals, the value in dispute being not less than 3,000 francs; between parties who refer their case to it, the value in dispute being at least 3,000 francs; and also in such suits as the constitution or legislation of cantons places within its authority. There are also many classes of railway suits which it is called on to decide. It is a Court of Appeal against decisions of other Federal authorities, and of cantonal authorities applying Federal laws. The Tribunal also tries persons accused of treason or other offences against the Confederation. For this purpose it is divided into four chambers: the Chamber of Accusation, the Criminal Chamber (Cour d'Assises), the Federal Penal Court, and the Court of Cassation. The jurors who serve in the Assize Courts are elected by the people, and are paid ten francs a day when serving.

Each canton has its own judicial system for ordinary civil and criminal trials.

On December 31, 1929, the prison population of Switzerland consisted of 3,861.

Capital punishment exists in Appenzell-I.-Rh., Obwalden, Uri, Schwyz, Zug, St. Gallen, Luzern, Valais, Schaffhausen, and Fribourg.

Social Insurance.

The Swiss Federal Insurance Law (insurance against illness and accident), as passed by both Chambers on June 13, 1911, was accepted by the electors of the Republic with a small majority. The total number of votes cast was 529,001, of which 287,583 were for and 241,418 against the measure.

All Swiss citizens are entitled to insurance against illness, and foreigners also may be admitted to the benefits of the law. Compulsory insurance against illness does not exist as yet, but cantons and communities are entitled under the act to declare obligatory insurance for certain classes or, in general, to establish public benefit (sick fund) associations, and to make employers responsible for the payment of the premiums of their employees.

Insurance against accident is compulsory for all officials, employees, and workmen of all the factories, trades, &c., which are under the Federal liability law. Every person above the age of 14 can insure voluntarily at the Federal insurance administration (or at any insurance corporation). The Swiss Accident Insurance Institution commenced operations on April 1, 1918. In 1931 the 1,153 societies insuring against illness had 1,717,834 members.

Finance.

The entire proceeds of the Federal alcohol monopoly (amounting to 7,359,161 francs in 1932) are divided among the cantons, and they have to expend one-tenth of the amount received in combating alcoholism in its causes and effects. Of the proceeds of the tax for exemption from military service, levied through the cantons, one-half goes to the Confederation and the other to the cantons.

Revenue and expenditure for six years :—

The public debt of the Confederation (exclusive of the railway debt) amounted, on January 1, 1933, to 1,701,974,000 francs. The floating debt (January 1, 1933) was 230,239,073 francs. The total debt was thus 1,932,213,073 francs, or including the railway debt, 4,912,323,058 francs.

Defence.

There are fortifications on the south frontier for the defence of the St. Gothard pass; others have been constructed at St. Maurice and Martigny in the Rhone Valley.

Switzerland depends for defence upon a national militia. Service in this force is compulsory and universal, with few exemptions except for physical disability. Those excused or rejected pay certain taxes in lieu. Liability extends from the 20th to the end of the 48th year. The first 12 years are spent in the first line, called the 'Auszug,' or 'Élite'; the next 8 in the Landwehr; and the remaining 8 in the Landsturm. For cavalry, however, service is 11 years in the Auszug, and 12 in the Landwehr. The Landsturm only includes men who have undergone some training. The unarmed Landsturm comprises all other males between 20 and 50 whose services can be made available for non-combatant duties of any description.

The initial training of the Swiss militia soldier is carried out in recruits' schools, and the periods are 65 days for infantry, engineers, and foot artillery, 75 days for field artillery, and 90 days for cavalry. The subsequent trainings, called 'repetition courses,' are 11 days annually; but after going through seven courses (8 in the case of the cavalry) further attendance is excused for all under the rank of sergeant. The Landwehr men are only called out once for training, also for 11 days.

The country is divided into 6 divisional districts. There is a staff organisation for three army corps. There are the usual departmental troops, pontoon and railway corps, telegraph troops, and an air force of 10 squadrons with 125 aeroplanes. The peace establishment normally under training is 46,200.

The fortress troops, mostly Landwehr, man the fortifications which close the St. Gothard Pass and the Rhone Valley to a possible invader from the south. They amount to about 21,000 men. The Landwehr is organised in 56 battalions and 36 squadrons. Altogether Switzerland can mobilise nearly 200,000 men (combatants), irrespective of the organised Landsturm, who may amount to another 60,000.

The administration of the Swiss army is partly in the hands of the Cantonal authorities, who promote officers up to the rank of captain. But the Federal Government is concerned with all general questions, and makes all the higher appointments.

The Swiss infantry are armed with the Swiss repeating rifle. The field artillery is armed with a Q.F. shielded Krupp 7.5 cm. calibre. The 'position' artillery has batteries of 8.4 and 12 cm. guns.

Military expenditure, 1933, 94,600,000 francs.

Production and Industry.

About 28 per cent. of the population are engaged in agricultural pursuits. Of the total area 926,897 hectares, or 2,317,242 acres, being 22.4 per cent., is unproductive; of the productive area 926,193 hectares, or 2,315,482 acres, being 28.9 per cent., is forest; and of the rest about 1,210,000 hectares, or 3,025,000 acres (53.2 per cent.) is under grass, and about 800,000 hectares, or 2,000,000 acres (35.7 per cent.) is pasturage. In 1933 the wheat harvest was 2,112,000 metric cwts., and potatoes 7,700,000 metric cwts.

The chief agricultural industries are the manufacture of cheese and condensed milk. The total production of cow's and goat's milk in 1932 was 2,786,800 metric tons, of hard cheese 49,700 tons, of butter 22,900 tons, and of condensed milk and milk powder 16,000 tons, of which 13,377 were exported. Wine is produced in eighteen of the cantons. In 1932 Swiss vineyards yielded 10,248,479 gallons of wine, valued at 33,778,000 francs, as compared with 11,542,290 gallons valued at 37,320,000 francs in 1931. Tobacco is produced in three cantons. On April 21, 1931 (last census), there were in Switzerland, 140,300 horses, 3,710 mules, 833 donkeys, 184,754 sheep, 237,995 goats. On April 21, 1933, there were 1,683,932 cattle (including 912,766 cows) and 897,449 pigs.

The Swiss Confederation has the right of supervision over the police of the forests, and of framing regulations for their maintenance. The entire forest area of Switzerland on January 1, 1932, was 2,447,266 acres in extent (comprising 113,060 acres of cantonal forest, 1,651,314 acres belonging to municipalities and other corporations, and 682,892 acres of private forests). The district over which the Federal supervision extends lies to the south and east of a tolerably straight line from the eastern end of the Lake of Geneva to the northern end of the Lake of Constance. It comprises about 1,828,382 acres, and the Federal forest laws apply to all cantonal, communal, and municipal forests within this area, those belonging to private persons being exempt, except when from their position they are necessary for protection against climatic influences. In 1876 it was enacted that this forest area should never be reduced; servitudes over it, such as rights of way, of gathering firewood, &c., should be bought up; public forests should be surveyed, and new wood planted where required, subventions for the purpose being sanctioned. In the year 1931, 13,759,000 trees (chiefly coniferous) were planted.

There were, in 1931-32, 259 establishments for pisciculture with 202,458,000 fry of various species, produced from the incubation of 252,665,000 eggs.

Many industries flourish in Switzerland. There are 2 salt-mining districts; that at Bex (Vaud) belongs to the Canton, but is worked by a private company, and those at Schweizerhalle, Rheinfelden and Ryburg are worked by a joint-stock company formed by the Cantons interested. The output of salt of all kinds in 1932 reached 804,585 quintals (850,164 in 1931). In the province of St. Gall (Gonzen mine) iron ore and manganese ore are mined. In 1931, the output was 20,000 tons of hematite and 10,000 tons of manganese ore. In 1929 there were 8,514 factories in Switzerland. Watch and clock making is an important branch of manufacture; number of clocks exported in 1932, 9,173,000; in 1931, 13,177,000; in 1930, 18,266,579. The number of persons employed in factories (1929) was 409,083; the motive machinery had 688,610 horse-power. In 1932, 59 breweries produced 55,567,162 gallons of beer (57,656,860 gallons in 1931).

In 1932 the Swiss embroidery establishments operated 1,592 shuttle-machines as against 3,489 in 1926, and 2,130 hand-embroidery machines as compared with 3,670 in 1926.

In 1929 there were 7,772 hotels, employing 63,258 persons (41,610 women and 21,648 men). In 1932, 1,795,740 visitors came to Switzerland (2,202,467 in 1931).

Commerce.

The special commerce, not including precious metals, was as follows in five years:—

	1929	1930	1931	1932	1933
	£	£	£	£	£
Imports . . .	111,353,982	106,568,065	90,048,162	70,507,152	68,778,192
Exports . . .	84,178,185	70,700,064	53,951,952	32,040,320	34,111,892

The following table (in thousands of francs) shows the value of special commerce in 1932 and 1933:—

Merchandise	Imports		Exports

Internal Communications.

The railways of Switzerland (excluding tramways and funiculars) have a length of 3,374 miles. The net operating receipts from traffic of the Swiss Federal railways in 1932 amounted to 342,953,326 francs, and to 335,229,696 francs in 1933. Operating expenses in 1932 amounted to 259,696,079 francs, 249,594,916 francs in 1933. The State railways are gradually being electrified; by the beginning of 1933, 1,131 miles of electrified normal gauge lines were being operated by the Federal Railways. The traffic on the Swiss waters (not including Lago Maggiore) in 1932 was carried on by 104 boats or barges belonging to 13 companies. There are about 9,800 miles of main road.

State aerial service is being gradually developed. In 1932 there were 10,618 flights, and 32,404 passengers were carried.

In 1932 there were in Switzerland 4,013 post-offices. By the internal service there were forwarded 230,700,000 letters, 73,200,000 post-cards, 189,800,000 packets of printed matter and samples, 392,667,000 newspapers. In the international service there were forwarded 35,000,000 letters, 12,600,000 post-cards, 20,200,000 packets of printed matter and samples, 3,910,000 newspapers. Internal post-office orders were sent to the value of 338,610,000 francs. Receipts, 1932, 143,404,000 francs; expenditure, 129,877,000 francs.

Switzerland has a very complete system of telegraphs and telephones, consisting (1932) of 1,176,910 miles of wire. There were transmitted 677,000 inland telegrams, 2,627,000 international (of which 1,332,000 were despatched and 1,295,000 were received), and 710,000 transit through Switzerland. Number of offices, 3,386. There were 339,062 telephones installed; conversations, 256,488,000. The telegraph and telephone gross receipts in 1932 amounted to 90,317,000 francs; the expenditure to 43,875,000 francs, the net profits to 1,100,000 francs.

Wireless communication is furnished by three main and three local stations.

Banking and Credit.

On December 31, 1932, the coin minted in Switzerland was as follows:—23,655,442 gold coins of the nominal value of 447,008,840 francs; 96,002,566 silver coins of the nominal value of 177,640,436 francs; 236,804,115 nickel coins of the nominal value of 28,030,983 francs; and 149,335,173 copper coins of the nominal value of 1,923,894 francs; total, 505,797,296 coins of the nominal value of 649,604,153 francs.

The National Bank, with headquarters divided between Bern and Zurich, opened its doors on June 20, 1907. It has the exclusive right to issue bank-notes in Switzerland. On February 23, 1934, the condition of the bank was as follows:—

	Francs		Francs
Gold	1,877,222,000	Notes in circulation	1,330,381,000
Gold exchange	8,878,000	Deposits	687,229,060
Discounts	84,068,000
Advances	68,105,000

Money, Weights, and Measures.

The international metric system is the sole legal standard of weights and measures in Switzerland. It was made compulsory in the country by the Federal law of July 3, 1875, and since January 1, 1887, no other units than the metric units have been legal. By the Federal law of June 24, 1909, the international electric units were also adopted. By that law, copies of the French standards, deposited at the International Office for Weights and Measures at Sèvres (France), were adopted as the legal standards for Switzerland.

The Franc of 100 Rappen or Centimes, is the monetary unit and is equal to 0.2903225 gramme of fine gold. The par rate of exchange is 25.2215 francs = £1 sterling. Gold coins are the 20 and 10 franc pieces. Silver coins in circulation are 5, 2, 1 and $\frac{1}{2}$ franc; nickel coins, 20, 10 and 5 centimes; bronze, 2 and 1 centime.

As a result of the dissolution of the Latin Monetary Union in 1926, the gold currencies of other countries of the Union are, after April 1, 1927, no longer legal tender in Switzerland, where they have circulated since 1860.

National Bank 20-franc notes are also in circulation (by law of July 30, 1914), 5-franc notes (August 3, 1914), and 25-franc notes (September 9, 1914).

The Centner, of 50 Kilogrammes and 100 Pfund = 110 lbs. avoirdupois. The Quintal = 100 Kilogrammes = 220 lbs. avoirdupois. The Arpent (Land) = 8.9ths of an acre.

The Pfund, or pound, chief unit of weight, is legally divided into decimal Grammes, but the people generally prefer the use of the old halves and quarters, named Halbpfund and Viertelpfund.

TURKEY

(TÜRKİYE CÜMHURİYETİ)

IN November, 1922, a change of capital importance took place in the internal economy of Turkey. Up to that time Constantinople (now called Istanbul) continued to be the residence of the Sultan, and a Government deriving its authority from him still existed there. This Government, however, exerted no effective power outside Constantinople, together with a small adjacent area and another small area adjoining Çanakkale on the Dardanelles. Except for the small areas mentioned above, the whole of Asia Minor was under the authority of the de facto Government set up at Angora (now called Ankara) in April, 1920, under the name of the 'Government of the Grand National Assembly of Turkey.' On November 1, 1922, the Grand National Assembly voted a resolution declaring that the office of Sultan had ceased to exist and providing that the office of Caliph, which had hitherto been vested in the person of the Sultan, should be filled by election from among the Princes of the House of Osman. Previous to this the Angora Government had made preparations not only to take delivery of Eastern Thrace from the Greek occupying authorities in accordance with the military Convention concluded at Mudanya on October 11, 1922, but also to take over the administration of Constantinople whenever an opportunity offered. On November 4, 1922, the administration of Constantinople passed into the hands of the Angora Government. The same day the Grand Vizier, Tewfik Pasha, presented the resignation of the Constantinople Cabinet to the Sultan. The Sultan himself, on November 17, left Constantinople in secret. Nearly a whole year was, however, to elapse before the decisive step of proclaiming a Republic was taken. On October 29, 1923, the national leader, Gazi Mustafa Kemal Pasha, who had been born at Salonica in 1881, was elected first President of the Turkish Republic, and the revolution was complete when, on March 2, 1924, the Grand National Assembly decided upon the abolition of the Turkish Caliphate, a decision which was immediately followed by the expulsion from Turkey of all the members of the House of Osman, at the same time depriving them of their Turkish citizenship. On November 1, 1927, Mustafa Kemal Pasha was re-elected President of the Republic by the unanimous vote of the new Assembly which met on that day.

President of the Republic.—Gazi Mustafa Kemal Pasha, re-elected May 4, 1931.

By a decision of the Grand National Assembly on October 13, 1923, Angora was declared to be the capital of Turkey. All central departments of state are now established there.

Constitution and Government.

For a list of the former sovereigns of Turkey and an account of the older constitutions of the country, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1923, p. 1380.

The Grand National Assembly of Angora voted, on January 20, 1921, a Fundamental Law which introduced constitutional changes of the most radical kind. It declared that all sovereignty belonged to the people, and that all power, both executive and legislative, was vested in the Grand National Assembly as being the sole representative of the people. The old name 'Ottoman Empire' was discarded in favour of the designation 'Turkey.' No provision was made for a Senate. It was laid down that the members of the Grand National Assembly should be elected for a period of two years, and that the Assembly should delegate its executive powers to a certain number of Vekils or Commissioners. The mode of effecting this delegation of power varied somewhat, and ultimately at the beginning of 1924 circumstances necessitated a further revision of the Constitution. This was effected by the law of April 20, 1924, in the first articles of which the Turkish State was declared to be a Republic, the religion of which was Islam, the official language Turkish and the capital Angora. The new law provided for the election of the Assembly every four years, while according to article 7 'the Assembly exercises the executive power through the President of the Republic elected by itself and through the Council of Ministers chosen by him,' with the proviso that the Assembly may at any time control the actions of the Government and at any time dismiss it.

The new law also provided that the President of the Republic should be chosen from among the deputies constituting the National Assembly, and that his term of office should be identical with the life of each Assembly.

The present Cabinet, which was formed in May, 1931, is now constituted as follows :—

President of the Council.—General Ismet Pasha.

Minister of Interior.—Şükrü Kaya Bey.

Minister of Finance.—Fuad Bey.

Minister of Public Works.—Ali Bey.

Minister of Foreign Affairs.—Dr. Tevfik Rüştü Bey.

Minister of Justice.—Saracoğlu Şükrü Bey.

Minister of Education.—Hikmet Bey.

Minister of Public Health.—Dr. Refik Bey.

Minister of National Economy.—Celal Bey.

Minister of National Defence.—Zekâi Bey.

Minister of Agriculture.—Muhlis Bey.

Minister of Customs and Monopolies.—Ali Rana Bey.

The fourth Grand National Assembly which was elected in April, 1931, and consisted of 317 deputies, met on May 4, 1931, and is the fourth assembly to meet at Angora.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

The Fundamental Law, voted at Angora in January, 1921 (see above) altered the system in force up to 1920 by providing that the country should be divided into Vilâyets (now fifty-seven in number) divided into Kazas subdivided in their turn into Nahiyes. At the head of each Vilâyet is a Vali representing the Government. The system aimed at is one of centralisation. Each Vilâyet has an elective council of its own. The Kaza is regarded as a mere grouping of Nahiyes for certain purposes of general administration. The Nahiye or commune is an autonomous entity and possesses an elective council charged with the administration of such matters as are not reserved to the State.

According to the municipal law passed in 1930 Turkish women have the right to be electors and to be elected at municipal elections. This right has not yet been extended to elections for the Grand National Assembly.

Area and Population.

The Treaty of Peace between the Allied Powers and Turkey which was signed at Lausanne on July 24, 1923, defined the European frontier of the new Turkey and to some extent her Asiatic frontiers. This Treaty was ratified by the Grand National Assembly on August 23, 1923, and entered into force August 6, 1924, on its ratification by three of the four Allied Powers.

For the delimitation of the present territories of Turkey, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1930, pp. 1323-4.

The Treaty of Lausanne and the Conventions attached to it provided for the demilitarisation of zones adjoining the European frontier, the Dardanelles and the Bosphorus, subject to the right to maintain a garrison at Constantinople, for the demilitarisation of Imbros, Tenedos and Rabbit Island as well as the islands in the Sea of Marmara with one exception, and for special administrative régime in Imbros and Tenedos. Otherwise Turkey holds unrestricted sovereignty.

The area of the Republic of Turkey is estimated at 762,736 square kilometres or 294,416 square miles excluding marshes (1,170 square km and lakes (8,434 square km.). About 9,257 square miles are in Europe.

For the first time in its history a general census was taken in Turkey on October 28, 1927, and showed the total population of the Republic to be 13,648,270, of whom 6,563,879 were men (48.1 per cent.) and 7,084,391 women (51.9 per cent.).

The population of the vilayets according to revised figures was given as follows :—

According to the census of 1927, the foreign population was as follows :—German, 2,306; Albanian, 1,652; British, 3,413; Austrian, 1,435; Belgian, 258; Bulgarian, 7,448; French, 3,427; Greek, 26,431; Hungarian, 1,830; Italian, 11,573; Polish, 613; Rumanian, 1,530; Russian, 6,206; Serbian, 3,883.

The events of recent years have caused an enormous reduction in the Christian population of the territory still remaining to Turkey. A very large proportion of the Armenian population of Asia Minor disappeared after the War, owing to the fact that large numbers migrated to the Republic of Erivan. The Greek population has practically ceased to exist in Asia Minor and in European Turkey outside the vilayet of Constantinople, which includes both shores of the Bosphorus and Princes Islands in the Marmara. A Turco-Greek agreement signed at Lausanne on January 30, 1923, provided for the compulsory exchange of the Greeks of Turkey, not including the vilayet of Constantinople, against the Turks of Greece, not including Western Thrace, as from May, 1923. The Moslem population of Turkey has also suffered greatly from the effects of the War. It comprises besides the Turks of Asia Minor a considerable number of Kurds in the Eastern provinces, Lazs in the Eastern section of the Pontic coast, and a few Circassians. There is a fairly considerable but diminishing Jewish element in the towns.

Religion.

Although Islam is no longer recognised as the religion of the State, Moslems form the vast majority of the population of the new Turkey. Turkish has been to some extent substituted for Arabic as the liturgical language in all mosques. Under the old imperial system the non-Moslem communities were recognised as organised communities or millets, the heads of which exercised not only spiritual but civil functions. The scope of these civil functions varied. They were in some cases, and more especially in that of the Ecumenical Patriarch, of considerable importance. The Treaty of Lausanne has deprived the spiritual heads of the communities of their administrative prerogatives, and their authority is now purely ecclesiastical.

Constantinople is the seat of the Ecumenical Patriarchate, who is the head of the Orthodox Church in Turkey. The Armenian Church (Gregorian) is ruled by the Katholikos of Etchmiadzin. The Uniat Armenian Church is ruled by the Katholikos-Patriarch of Cilicia. The Chaldeans (Nestorian Uniates) have one Bishop at Mardin. The Syrian Uniates have a See of Mardin and Amidā, but it is united with their Patriarchate of Antioch, whose incumbent resides in Damascus. The Greek Uniates (Byzantine Rite) have as their Ordinary in Constantinople the Titular Bishop of Gratianopolis. The Latins have an Apostolic Delegate in Constantinople and an Archbishop in Smyrna, but their Patriarch of Constantinople is titular and non-resident. There is a Grand Rabbi (Hahambaşı) in Constantinople for the Jews, who are nearly all Sephardim.

According to the census of October 28, 1927, there were in Turkey 13,269,606 Moslems, 39,511 Roman Catholics, 6,658 Protestants, 109,905 Orthodox, 77,433 Armenian, 24,307 other Christians, 81,872 Jews, 17,494 adherents of other religions, and 2,702 undeclared.

On April 10, 1928, the Grand National Assembly passed a law amending the Organic Statute in such a way that Islam ceased to be the State religion of the Republic. An oath of allegiance to the Republic, taken by the President and Deputies, took the place of the former religious formula.

Education.

According to the census of October 28, 1927, only 1,111,496 of the population were literate in Arabic characters.

In Turkey, elementary education is nominally obligatory for all children of both sexes. According to the Provisional Law of October 6, 1913, all children from 7 to 16 are to receive primary instruction, which may, however, be given in State schools, schools maintained by communities, or private schools, or, subject to certain tests, at home. The State schools are under the direct control of the Ministry of Public Instruction. They include not only primary schools, but also secondary schools, 'preparatory' schools (for students intending to enter higher schools), and a certain number of lycées or secondary schools of a superior kind. There are also training schools for male and female teachers, and a certain number of higher technical schools, besides the University of Istanbul, founded in 1900 and completely reorganised in 1933. Number of students, 1932: men, 2,266; women, 512. Towards the end of 1925 a School of Law was founded at Ankara. The important non-Moslem communities in Istanbul maintain their own schools, which, like all 'private' schools, are subject to the supervision of the Ministry of Public Instruction.

The following table gives statistics of Education for 1931-32 :—

A general tendency has been manifested since 1926 to introduce the use of the Latin alphabet in Turkey. A Commission was formed to study the question, and on November 1, 1928, the Grand National Assembly voted a law for the adoption of Latin characters in Turkey. This law decreed the use of Latin characters obligatory in the case of all correspondence in Public Departments as well as all companies, societies and private offices, newspapers, cinemas and advertisements as from December 1, 1928. The publication of books in Arabic characters was forbidden after January 1, 1929, and the employment of the new alphabet became general throughout Turkey in 1930. The number of people who can read and write the new Turkish alphabet (Latin characters) is estimated at 3,000,000.

Previous to this important reform the Grand National Assembly had also adopted the bill introducing the numeral system as used in European countries.

Justice.

Since the beginning of the work of secularisation two years ago, nothing now remains of the old Ottoman laws based on the religious principles. The Turkish Government began by suppressing the religious Courts (Sheri) in 1924, in order to obtain this result. The system which was thus unified consists of (1) juges de paix (single judges with limited but summary penal and civil jurisdiction); (2) tribunaux de base (a president and two assistant judges with wider powers); (3) assize courts (a president and four assistant judges who hear serious penal cases). Appeal has been abolished. The Court of Cassation sits at Eskişehir.

The laws applied by these Courts have been recently drawn up and adopted. The Turkish Civil Code is, with the exception of a few modifications, a reproduction of the Swiss Civil Code, as also the Code of Obligations, and both entered into force towards the end of 1926. The new Penal Code is based in great measure upon the Italian Penal Code, and the Code of Civil Procedure, without being identical, nevertheless closely resembles that of the Canton of Neuchâtel. The new Commercial Code is based on the German.

On January 1, 1932, the prison population consisted of 51,698 men and 1,489 women awaiting trial, and 62,064 men and 5,318 women under sentence, a total of 120,569.

Finance.

The revenue is derived from land, property, income and profits taxes, Customs, consumption taxes, sheep and cattle tax, monopolies, and other sources. The principal monopolies are, tobacco, alcohol, matches, explosives, cartridges and salt.

Estimates of revenue and expenditure for five financial years were as follows:—

By the Treaty of Lausanne the foreign debt of Turkey was to be distributed among the succession States, of which the new Turkey is one. The Turkish debt has been apportioned as follows (the first figure refers to the loans prior to October 17, 1912, the second to those between October 17, 1912 and November 1, 1924): Turkey, 62·25 per cent. and 76·54 per cent.; Greece, 10·57 per cent. and 0·55 per cent.; Yugoslavia, 5·25 per cent.; Bulgaria, 1·63 per cent. and 0·16 per cent.; Albania, 1·57 per cent.; Syria, 8·15 per cent. and 10·02 per cent.; Iraq, 3·96 per cent. and 4·87 per cent.; Palestine, 2·49 per cent. and 3·06 per cent.; and the Arab States, 4·13 per cent. and 4·80 per cent. (Palestine has paid off the whole of her share.) The total debt of Turkey is £T87,316,000.

The agreement reached between the bondholders and the Turkish Government for the resumption of the services of the Ottoman Public debt was ratified by the Grand National Assembly on November 30, 1928. In the latter part of the year 1932 and the earlier part of 1933 negotiations took place with a view to the reduction of the annuities to be paid by the Turkish Government. These negotiations resulted in the conclusion of a new agreement which was signed by representatives of the Turkish Government and delegates of the bond holders on April 22, 1933. The new agreement provides for creation of new debt bonds for the capital amount of francs 962,636,000. The new bonds will be of francs 500 each bearing interest at $7\frac{1}{2}$ per cent.

Defence.

ARMY.

Under the law of June 21, 1927, military service is for 18 months in the infantry and for two years in the cavalry, artillery and air service, while naval service is for 3 years. Men are called up at the age of 21, and liability for service lasts 26 years. The number of men liable to service in any given year is approximately 170,000, but the annual contingent does not at present exceed 60,000. The strength of the active army in 1931 was approximately 20,000 officers and 120,000 men, organised in 3 armies of 9 army corps, each army corps comprises 2 divisions, and there are 5 cavalry divisions, 3 active and 2 reserve.

The infantry is equipped with Mauser rifles. The artillery with 75 mm. Krupp field guns and 10.5 and 12 c.m. Schneider howitzers. The army estimates for 1933-34 amount to 32,383,640 pounds Turkish.

NAVY.

The Turkish Navy has for some time past been undergoing reorganisation, all vessels of any fighting value being taken in hand for refit as money for this purpose can be spared. The effective fleet at present includes the battle cruiser Yavuz, formerly the German Goeben, launched in 1911, displacing 22,500 tons, and armed with ten 11-inch guns; the light cruisers Hamidieh, 3,830 tons, and Medjidieh, 3,300 tons, both dating from 1903; 2 gunboats; 3 minesweepers; 4 new destroyers; 3 old destroyers, 4 submarines, and a surveying vessel.

The Yavuz has undergone an extensive refit at Izmit under a contract made with a group of French shipbuilding yards. The repairs were completed in 1930.

A new naval base at Izmit has replaced the former dockyard in the Golden Horn.

The future strength of the personnel does not appear to have been fixed, but no difficulty is anticipated in manning the ships at present ready for sea. Effective strength at present is about 800 officers and 4,000 men.

AIR FORCE.

There is an Air Regiment, stationed at Eski Sehir, and trained under French advisers.

Naval estimates for 1933-4 amount to 3,765,560 pounds Turkish, and air force estimates to 943,000 pounds Turkish.

Production and Industry.

Agriculture.—Agriculture is primitive, but modern methods are now being adopted. In 1929 the sum of £T100,000,000 was voted for irrigation work. Number of people engaged in agriculture (census of 1927) was 4,368,061, being 81.6 per cent. of total of those engaged in economic activities. The soil for the most part is very fertile; the principal products are tobacco, mohair, cereals, figs, silk, olives and olive oil, dried fruits, nuts and almonds, skins and hides, furs, licorice root, wool, gums, canary seed, linseed, sesame and cotton. Opium is an important crop in Konya and Afyon Karahisar. Tobacco is grown both in European and Asiatic Turkey. The principal tobacco districts are Samsun (the most important), Bafra, Izmit, Charshamba and Izmir (Smyrna). In 1929, tobacco was grown by 79,965 cultivators on 19,520 acres. The principal centre for silk production is Bursa. The production of olive oil, mainly confined to the Vilayet of Aydin, is very important. The following table gives the estimated yields of the principal products for three years:—

Product	1930	1931	1932
Tobacco (Tons)	47,000	51,000	20,000

The forest laws of the empire are modelled on those of France, but restrictive regulations are not enforced, and the country is being rapidly deprived of its timber. About 8,816,299 hectares (21,776,261 acres) are under forest. The most-wooded vilayets are Kastamonu, Aydin, Bursa, Bolu, Trabzon, Konya and Karesi. Of the forest land, about 88 per cent. belongs to the State, 6 per cent. to private persons, and the rest to communes and wakfs (pious foundations).

In 1933 there were in Turkey 11,070,000 sheep, 6,672,000 ordinary goats, 3,080,000 mohair goats, 5,123,000 cattle, 899,000 asses, 534,000 horses, 85,000 camels, 45,000 mules, 541,000 buffaloes.

The wool clip in 1932 was 12,000 metric tons, and the mohair clip, 4,000 metric tons.

Mining.—The Turkish provinces, especially those in Asia, are reported rich in minerals, which are little worked. Production of principal minerals in 1931 and 1932 was as follows:—

Mineral	1931	1932	Mineral	1931	1932

Fisheries.—The fisheries of Turkey are important; the total value of marine produce for Istanbul and dependencies was in 1921–22, £T2,400,778.15 as against £T2,922,332.21 in 1920–21. The total weight of marine produce in 1922–23 attained 22,000 tons. No later statistics are available.

Industry.—Industries were relatively unimportant, but under cover of the new protective tariffs, which came into force on October 1, 1929, an impetus has been given to industrial development. The vilayet of Aydin was before the war one of Turkey's industrial centres. An attempt is being made by the Government to revive industry in Smyrna, and a fair amount of machinery has been imported. Carpet weaving represents approximately 60 per cent. of pre-war capacity. The textile industry is being developed under Government auspices and a scheme has been drawn up for the creation of more than one Government textile factory to supplement existing ones. The number of fig-packing establishments has been reduced. Cotton ginneries are being rebuilt, and in June, 1926, an oilcake factory was established at Adana. A further recent development has been the opening in December, 1926, of sugar factories at Uşak, near Izmir (Smyrna), at Alpulu in Thrace and another in December, 1933, at Eskişehir; their total production in 1932 was 27,435 tons. The total production of the sugar factory in Thrace, in 1931, was 14,106 tons. In 1932 it was estimated at 16,000 tons. Many small factories have been established in recent years, including saw-mills constructed near Bozüyük, and cement works at Ankara and Kartal. The latter was erected in 1929 by a Belgian group on the Anatolian railway, a few miles from Istanbul, and will produce 70,000 tons annually. A German group has constructed a factory at Bakirköy, which will have a similar capacity. The number of electricity undertakings is said to be 48. In 1929, the Ford Company established important assembly works at Tophané in Istanbul. The plant can assemble 80 cars per 8-hour day. There are also a number of cement factories. In 1927 there were 65,245 manufacturing establishments with 256,855 employees, but the number has now considerably increased.

Shipping and Navigation.

On July 1, 1933, 187 vessels under the Turkish flag had a tonnage of 188,461 gross tons.

In 1930 a total of 2,161 vessels of an aggregate tonnage of 1,893,598 tons called at the port of Izmir (Smyrna); in 1931, 6,306 vessels of 16,222,709 tons called at the port of Istanbul, inclusive of those in transit.

Air routes.—Compagnie Internationale de Navigation Aérienne maintains aerial services between Istanbul and many European centres. An air service between Istanbul and Ankara has been established.

Internal Communications.

Turkey has approximately 9,867 miles of roads and about 9,300 miles of unsurveyed tracks, but the roads are, on the whole, in a bad state of repair.

The length of railway line in Turkey in May, 1931, was 3,619 miles broad gauge and 225 miles narrow gauge. In 1932 a further 233 miles were opened to traffic.

In 1929 58,493,622 letters, 1,367,756 postcards, 10,906,704 printed papers were handled internally, 2,211,673 letters were received from and 631,786 letters sent abroad. In 1929 there were 31,551 kilometres of telegraph lines with 61,886 kilometres of wire; 641 offices, 7,407,491 internal telegrams and 1,024,033 foreign telegrams sent.

Banking and Credit.

In January, 1917, the Turkish Government issued a Charter for a new National Bank, to be styled the Central Bank of the Turkish Republic. Its capital is 15 million Turkish pounds, which has been fully subscribed, and up to the present 7,300,000 Turkish pounds has been called up. The future status of this bank was determined by a law passed by the Grand National Assembly on June 11, 1930. It began its activities on October 3, 1931, following the approval of the Statutes by the Government. The bank has a concession for thirty years, renewable during the last five years of this period, and is the sole bank of issue in the country. Amongst the more important Turkish banks may be mentioned the Banque Agricole (Ziraat Bankasi), the oldest of the Turkish institutions, with a paid-up capital of 27,000,000 Turkish pounds. The other banks are the Banque d'Affaires (İş Bankasi), the business of which is increasing rapidly, Banque Industrielle et Minière (Sanayi ve Maadin Bankasi), Emlâk ve Eytam Bankasi (Crédit Foncier) and Esnaf Bankasi (Craftsmen's Bank). The principal foreign bank in Turkey is the Ottoman Bank, founded in 1863. It has a Branch in every important town of Turkey. The concession of the Ottoman Bank, extended in August, 1925, by the Turkish Government, for a further period of 10 years, was prolonged (June 5, 1933) until March, 1952.

The total amount of paper currency in circulation on February 15, 1934, was £T159,830,000, gold coin and bullion, £T17,370,000.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

On April 17, 1916, an order was issued reforming the currency. A gold standard, with the piastre as the unit, was thenceforth to be general all over Turkey, and the piastre to equal 40 para. The piastre, as well as the half piastre (20 para), quarter piastre (10 para) and eighth piastre (5 para) pieces were to be of nickel. Silver coins were 2, 5, 10, and 20 piastres; and gold coins 25, 50, 100, 250, and 500 piastres. Silver was legal tender up to 300 piastres, and nickel up to 50 piastres.

The only money in general circulation, apart from nickel coins for 10 and 20 paras and for 1 piastre and coins for 2½, 5, 10 and 25 piastres, is paper money issued during the war. This forced currency is very depreciated, the Turkish paper lira being worth about one-ninth of the gold coin of the same denomination. At the beginning of 1929 the Government stabilized the exchange at about 1,030 piastres to the £1 (sterling). In 1931 the Turkish Government pegged the lira to the French franc at 12·06 francs to the lira.

The metric system of weights and measures came into force on January 1, 1934.

For the old weights and measures, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1933, p. 1349.

On May 24, 1928, the Grand National Assembly passed a law making the employment of European numerals obligatory as from June 1, 1929.

On March 1, 1917, the Gregorian calendar was introduced into Turkey, to be used side by side with the Hegira calendar, while as from January 1, 1926, it was decided finally to adopt the Gregorian calendar alone, the Turkish civil year 1342 becoming 1926.

URUGUAY.

(REPÚBLICA ORIENTAL DEL URUGUAY.)

Constitution and Government.

THE Republic of Uruguay, formerly a part of the Spanish Viceroyalty of Rio de la Plata, and subsequently a province of Brazil, declared its independence August 25, 1825, which was recognised by the Treaty between Argentina, Brazil and Uruguay, signed at Rio de Janeiro August 27, 1823. The first Constitution was adopted July 18, 1830.

In 1919 a new Constitution was adopted in which elaborate precautions were taken to prevent the conversion of the presidency into a dictatorship. Borrowing the idea from the Venetian Council of Ten, the executive power was divided between the President of the Republic and a National Administrative Council, consisting of nine members (with nine alternates), elected for six years; six were of the majority party, and three of the largest minority; three retired every two years. The President was elected for four years, and could be re-elected after an interval of 8 years. Both the President and the Council were chosen by direct popular vote. The President appointed the Ministers of Foreign Affairs, of War and Marine, and of the Interior, and had supreme control of these departments. The other ministers—of Finance, Public Works, Industry and Education—were appointed by the Council, which was the controlling power of these departments. It proposed the annual budget and recommended to the President such fiscal measures as it deemed expedient.

But the Constitution of 1919, although it made for political peace, appeared to President Terra too costly and cumbersome to grapple with the serious economic crisis of 1933, and on March 31, 1933, he effected a coup d'état, arresting the members of the National Administrative Council, closing Parliament and appointing a Junta of 9 members, drawn from the two leading parties, to assist him in governing the country. He also appointed a Deliberative Assembly of 99 members, drawn from the various political groups. On June 25, 1933, elections were held for a Constitutional Assembly of 284 members to draft a new Constitution; this met on August 25, the anniversary of Uruguay's independence. This Constitutional Assembly is authorized to elect, by a two-thirds majority, the first President under the new regime.

The Constitution of 1919 separated Church and State, and introduced universal male suffrage for all, over 18 years of age, who are able to read and write. In 1921 the Constitution was amended, granting votes to women. Voting is secret, and the principle of proportional representation operates. Voters participating in the National Election of 1931 numbered 317,294; in that of 1932, 160,625; in that of 1933, 250,000.

Parliament, under the 1919 Constitution, consisted of two Houses, the Senate and the Chamber of Representatives, which met in annual session, extending from March 15 to December 15. In the interval of the session, a permanent committee of two senators and five members of the Lower House divided with the President control of that part of the executive power which was vested in him, thus diluting still further his authority. The representatives were chosen for three years, in the proportion of 1 to every 12,000 qualified voters, who must be able to read and write, and over 18 years of age. The senators were directly elected by the people; there was one senator for each department, chosen for six years, one-third retiring every two years. There were 124 representatives and 19 senators.

The following is a list of the Presidents since 1899:

Don Juan Lindolfo Cuestas, March 1, 1899—1903.	Dr. Feliciano Viera, March 1, 1915—1919.
Don José Batlle y Ordoñez, March 1, 1903—1907.	Dr. Baltasar Brum, March 1, 1919—1923.
Dr. Claudio Williman, March 1, 1907—1911.	Don José Serrato, March 1, 1923—1927.
Don José Batlle y Ordoñez, March 1, 1911—1915.	Dr. Juan Campisteguy, March 1, 1927—1931.
	Dr. Gabriel Terra, March 1, 1931.

President of the Republic.—Señor Dr. Gabriel Terra (March 1, 1931, to February 28, 1935, or until the Constitutional Assembly chooses a President). Salary, 24,000 pesos per annum.

Area and Population.

The following table shows the area and the estimated population of the 19 departments (capitals in brackets) on January 1, 1932:—

Departments	Area, square miles	Population Jan. 1, 1932	Pop. per square mile
Artigas (Artigas)	4,394	48,177	10.9
Canelones (Canelones)	1,834	179,070	97.6
Cerro-Largo (Melo)	5,763	85,030	14.7
Colonia (Colonia)	2,193	113,456	51.7
Durazno (Durazno)	5,525	82,675	14.9
Flores (Trinidad)	1,744	31,249	17.9
Florida (Florida)	4,673	93,907	20.0
Lavalleja (Minas)	4,819	103,223	21.4
Maldonado (Maldonado)	1,587	58,746	37.0
Montevideo (Montevideo City)	256	480,685	1,912.8
Paysandú (Paysandú)	5,115	72,257	14.1
Río Negro (Fray Bentos)	3,269	80,719	12.4
Rivera (Rivera)	8,798	65,475	17.2
Rocha (Rocha)	4,280	61,781	16.5
Salto (Salto)	4,805	87,127	17.9
San José (San José)	2,688	58,306	32.8

Treinta y Tres (Treinta y Tres)	3,682	59,589	16.1
Total	72,153	1,941,898	26.9

The last census was taken in 1908, when the total population was 1,042,686, divided into 861,464 native-born and 181,222 immigrants, including 62,357 Italians, 54,885 Spaniards, 27,789 Brazilians and 18,600 Argentinians. On December 31, 1933, total population was estimated at 2,090,000.

The population of Montevideo City (the capital) on December 31, 1932, was estimated at 662,170. Of the other cities, Paysandu had 26,000 inhabitants; Salto, 30,000; Mercedes, 23,000.

Births, deaths, and marriages for three years:—

Years	Living Births	Still-Births	Marriages	Deaths	Surplus of Living Births over Deaths
1930	45,718	1,599	11,799	20,049	25,669
1931	44,854	1,560	11,168	21,163	23,691
1932	44,036	1,566	9,900	19,225	24,211

Of the living births in 1932, 12,686 were illegitimate. Divorces: 712 in 1931; 380 in 1932. Immigration 1932, 151,217; emigration, 146,571. The language of the country is Spanish.

Religion and Education.

State and church are separated; and there is complete religious liberty. The religion professed by the majority of the inhabitants is Roman Catholic. The archbishopric of Montevideo has 2 suffragan bishops in Salto and Melo. The 1908 census showed 430,095 Catholics, 12,232 Protestants, 45,470 unspecified and 126,425 Liberals.

Primary education is obligatory; both primary and superior education are free. In 1932 there were 1,541 public and private schools with 179,876 enrolled pupils and 4,792 teachers; of these 1,386 schools with 4,058 teachers and 160,463 pupils were public. Secondary schools had 11,856 pupils. There were also 62 evening courses for adults with 7,263 pupils and 159 teachers. State expenditures on education in 1932 amounted to 6,663,741 pesos.

The University of the Republic at Montevideo, inaugurated in 1849, had 13,766 students in 1932. There are five normal schools for males and females, and a school of arts and trades supported by the State where 1,100 pupils receive instruction gratuitously. There are also many religious seminaries throughout the Republic with a considerable number of pupils, a school for the blind, two for the deaf and dumb, and a school of domestic science.

Justice.

The High Court of Justice consists of 5 judges elected by the two Chambers sitting as a National Assembly. The President is chosen annually by the members of the Court from amongst themselves. This court has original jurisdiction in constitutional, international, and admiralty cases, and will hear appeals in cases in which the decision has been modified or altered in other appeal courts, of which there are 3 each with 3 judges. In Montevideo there are also 3 courts for ordinary civil cases, 2 for commercial cases, 1 for Government (Juzgado de Hacienda), as well as criminal and correctional courts. Each departmental capital has a departmental court, and each of the 220 judicial sections into which the Republic is divided has a justice of peace court; further, each section is divided into districts, in which deputy judges (alcaldes) try cases involving small amounts.

In September, 1907, the death penalty was abolished, penal servitude for a period of 30 to 40 years being put in its place.

Finance.

The receipts and expenditure for recent fiscal years (ending June 30) are stated as follows (at par 4·7 gold pesos = £1; 1 gold peso = 1·03 dollars U.S.):—

—	Receipts	Expenditure	—	Receipts	Expenditure
	Gold pesos	Gold pesos		Gold pesos	Gold pesos
1928-29	58,576,428	57,565,207	1931-32 ¹	63,699,963	64,986,000
1929-30	58,916,879	59,702,624	1932-33 ²	59,233,698	58,888,074
1930-31 ¹	57,311,712	64,415,211	1933-34 ²	59,044,045	58,181,533

¹ Based on budget of 1929-30.

² Budget estimate.

³ Changed to calendar year 1933.

The public debt of Uruguay on December 31, 1933, stood at 295,578,273 pesos, of which 141,669,763 was external; in addition the municipal external debt was 13,541,247 pesos, internal 49,627,200 pesos. On March 31, 1933, the country's indebtedness included accumulated budget deficits of 19,282,933 pesos; deficits of various State bodies, 10,000,000 pesos; arrears in pension funds, 13,000,000 pesos; other arrears, 5,300,000 pesos; total, 47,582,933 pesos. On July 4, 1933, the Provisional Government suspended payments in gold of the interest on external loans, proffering Uruguayan pesos in Montevideo or foreign exchange at the current rate for pesos. British capital invested in Uruguay stood at 39,349,855£. in 1932 interest at 3 per cent. was paid in 1932 on only 1,347,709£. of that total.

Defence.

The army of Uruguay consists of a small standing army, and the National Guard. Service in the standing army is voluntary, lasting from 2 to 5 years with re-engagement up to the age of 44. It consists of 19 line battalions 4 rifle companies, 9 cavalry regiments, 3 field artillery regiments of 3 batteries each, a fortress artillery company and machine gun company, 1 engineers' battalion, and 1 bearer company with a peace strength in 1932 of 5,751, and a nominal war strength of 50,000.

The National Guard is a militia, service in which is compulsory in the event of war. It is divided into three classes, or 'bans.' The first 'ban,' or 'mobile' national guard contains all the young men fit for military duty between the ages of 17 and 30, who would take the field with the standing army. The second ban, consisting of men fit for service between 30 and 45 is the 'departmental,' or provincial, national guard. Its units do not move out of their own departments, but the men can be drafted to make good the losses of the mobile units in time of war. The third ban, containing all the men between 19 and 45, is the 'territorial' force, and is only liable to garrison duty in its own districts. The total strength of the National Guard (all three bans) is, nominally, about 100,000 men and 120 guns.

There is also a police force, with an establishment of 5,000, and a force of mounted police ('Guardia Republicana') of 400. The Fire Brigade, which also undertakes police duties, numbers 360.

The infantry of the active army is armed with the Mauser rifle; the field batteries have either Schneider or Krupp 7·5 cm. guns. The National Guard is mainly armed with the Remington rifle and old de Bange guns.

The Military Aviation School possessed, at the end of 1932, some 20 machines in active service. The School has its own workshops and staff of mechanics, and an establishment of 8 instructors and 320 officers and men. A naval aeronautical service is also in process of being organized. 3 flying boats were bought in Italy in 1930.

The fleet consists of the torpedo gunboat Uruguay, 1,400 tons, speed 23 knots; a surveying vessel of 500 tons, built in Spain in 1930; and a few smaller craft.

Production and Industry.

Uruguay is primarily a pastoral country, 60 per cent. (27,573,919 acres) of the total area being devoted to the stock-raising industry, 20 per cent. (10,002,126 acres) to mixed farms and ranches, and only 7 per cent. (3,120,000 acres) to agriculture. The remaining 13 per cent. of the country's area is unproductive. Animals and animal products constitute 95 per cent. of the country's exports. Four leading frigorificos have a daily capacity of 4,000 cattle and 7,000 sheep carcasses. Total 'kill' in 1932, 915,720 cattle and 837,629 sheep. Total meat exports (1932), 101,831 tons. Wool shipments for recent seasons have been: 1930-31, 150,490 bales; 1931-32, 92,656 bales; 1932-33, 112,653 bales. Nutria skins are exported at the rate of 50,000 a year. A livestock census, 1930, showed 7,127,912 cattle, 20,558,124 sheep, 600,000 horses, and 307,924 pigs.

Agricultural products are raised chiefly in the Departments of Canelones, Colonia, San José, Minas, and Florida. The average farm is about 250 acres. In 1932, 15·5 per cent. of the farms were run by managers, 40 per cent. by tenant farmers, and 44·5 per cent. by their proprietors. The principal crops and their yield for two years were as follows:—1931-32: wheat, 306,434 tons; maize, 146,282 tons; linseed, 122,967 tons; oats, 45,159 tons. 1932-33: wheat, 147,163 tons; linseed, 37,464 tons; maize, 161,057 tons.

Wine is produced chiefly in the departments of Montevideo, Canelones, Salto, Colonia, and Paysandú. In 1931 there were 4,960 properties of 31,293 acres, producing 61,070,244 kilos. of grapes, and 10,002,564 gallons of wine. Annual fruit crop, exclusive of grapes, about 153,000 tons, principally peaches, oranges and pears. Tobacco (709,510 kilos in 1932) and olives are also cultivated.

In the northern departments several gold mines are worked, and silver, copper, lead, manganese, and lignite coal are found. The supply of electricity for light, power, and traction has been a State monopoly since 1912; as 20 per cent. of total imports, in value, consists of coal and other fuels, exploitation of hydro-electric resources is considered important.

Commerce.

The foreign trade (imports in 'official values' and exports in 'real values') was as follows (at par 1 gold peso = 1·03 dollars, U.S.; 4·7 gold pesos = £1):—

—	1928	1929	1930	1931	1932 *
	Gold pesos	Gold pesos	Gold pesos	Gold pesos	Gold pesos
Imports ¹	93,954,951	93,284,012	91,300,346	88,781,906	58,214,072
Exports	100,802,800	92,952,246	100,934,583	78,242,055	58,266,044

¹ Comparison of import figures for different years is difficult, because the system of calculating "official values" of imports has been several times modified since 1928. Furthermore, as "official values" are stated to be, in many cases, below real values, the balance of trade is not as favourable as the figures suggest. Real value of 1931 imports was 114,127,575 pesos, and of 1932 imports, 66,517,590 pesos.

* Figures of the Finance Minister. The Administrative Council on March 15, 1933, gave imports as 66,517,574 gold pesos, and exports as 58,950,300 gold pesos.

The principal exports in 1932 were as follows:—Live animals, 24,864; meat and extracts, 96,995,726 kilos; wool, 43,146,140 kilos; sheepskins,

7,274,388 kilos; hides, 18,786,458 kilos; flax, 78,403 metric tons. The cattle industry furnished, in value, 82·35 per cent. of total exports.

The imports (official values) and exports (real values) for 1931 and 1932 were distributed as follows (in gold pesos):—

Countries	Imports from		Exports to
	1931	1932	1931	1932

United States	16,910,849	5,349,636	3,563,501	2,417,883

In 1932 the principal articles imported into the United Kingdom from Uruguay (according to Board of Trade Returns) were: chilled beef, 986,489*l.*; frozen beef, 425,522*l.*; tinned beef, etc., 368,885*l.*; frozen mutton, 373,700*l.*; wool, 521,318*l.* The principal articles exported to Uruguay were cotton piece goods, 242,732*l.*, and iron and steel manufactures, 156,718*l.*; coal, 248,866*l.*

Shipping and Communications.

In 1932, 8,488 vessels of 10,729,439 tons entered the ports of Uruguay.

The National roads of Uruguay have a total length of 2,760 miles, and there are about 5,903 miles of departmental roads, of which about 323 miles are macadamised. River transport is also very extensive.

The four principal railway systems are the Central (Combined System, 990 miles), the Midland (320 miles), North Western (113 miles), Northern (73 miles), all British owned. The East Coast Railway (78 miles) and 8 minor lines are controlled by the State. The total railway system open for traffic is about 1,729 miles of standard gauge, of which 205 miles are State lines.

The telegraph lines in operation have a total length of 7,508 miles; in 1932, 249 offices through which 1,219,570 telegrams passed. In 1932 two telephone companies of Montevideo had 36,570 miles of wire, and in the Republic, 19 companies had 61,596 miles of wire. Number of subscribers, 25,506 on December 31, 1932. Wireless telephone communications with Spain and Argentine were established in 1929, followed by connections with United States, France and Great Britain in 1930. Four cable companies connect Montevideo with the United States and Europe.

There are 995 post offices. The movement of mail in 1931 (internal) comprised 116,431,154 letters, packets, &c., and external, 8,156,023. Air mail and passenger service connects Montevideo with Buenos Aires, Rio de Janeiro, Central America, and the United States.

Banking and Credit.

The Bank of the Republic, whose president and directors are appointed by the Government, had a paid-up capital on June 30, 1933, of 27,821,685 gold pesos. This bank has the exclusive right to issue notes, but the privilege is unprofitable owing to the heavy gold reserves required. On December 31, 1933, notes to the value of 78,030,296 pesos, including 63,482,520 of large denominations (convertible into gold whenever the gold standard is resumed) and 14,547,776 pesos (convertible to silver) were in circulation, and sight deposits were 82,412,764 pesos. Stock of gold amounted to 51,432,293 pesos, and bonds of external debt held, 1,881,441 pesos.

In 1912 the Government created a National Insurance Bank (Banco de Seguros del Estado) with a monopoly of new insurance business of all kinds. No new insurance companies may now be established. In 1932 the premiums collected amounted to 5,472,341 pesos. This bank's capital and reserves on March 31, 1933, amounted to 19,619,054 pesos. The Post Office Savings Bank reported October 31, 1933, deposits of 14,500,000 gold pesos.

Of the 21 banks in Uruguay two are British: Bank of London and South America, and Royal Bank of Canada. All the banks reported March 31, 1933, paid-up capital and reserves of 91,967,439 pesos; deposits of 171,430,562 pesos and loans of 249,916,204 pesos.

Money, Weights, and Measures.

Save for a small issue of gold coins, weighing 8 grammes, .485 fine, issued in 1930 in commemoration of the centenary of the Uruguayan constitution, there is no Uruguayan gold coin in circulation, but the monetary standard is gold, the theoretical gold coin being the peso oro, weighing 1.697 grammes, .917 fine. It is equal to 100 centésimos. The actual circulating medium consists of paper notes issued by the Bank of the Republic in denominations of 500, 100, 50, 10, 5, and 1 pesos. Silver coins of 50 and 20 centésimos; and nickel coins of 5, 2, and 1 centésimos are also in circulation.

At par, 1 gold peso = 1.03 dollars U.S. = 51*d.* sterling; £1 = 4.7 gold pesos. The exchange value of the peso in London in 1933 ranged between 37½*d.* and 28*d.*; in New York, between 79.75 cents and 47.25 cents.

The metric system of weights and measures was adopted in 1862.

VENEZUELA.

(ESTADOS UNIDOS DE VENEZUELA.)

Constitution and Government.

THE Republic of Venezuela was formed in 1830 after amicable secession from the other members of the Republic of Colombia. The vigorous efforts of General Juan Vicente Gómez have given Venezuela considerable freedom from factional strife. He was President from 1909 to 1915 and again from 1922 to 1929, when he retired, but, as Commander-in-Chief of the Army, retained a firm control. A military uprising in April, 1931, led General Gómez to resume the reins; Congress demanded the resignation of President Pérez on June 14, 1931, and unanimously elected General Gómez President and Commander-in-Chief of the Army. The Constitution in force is that of May 29, 1929, modified July 7, 1931.

Congress consists of two chambers, the Senate of 40 members, and the Chamber of Deputies of 85 members. Senators, who are elected for 3 years, 2 for each State, must be Venezuelans by birth and over 30 years of age. Deputies must be native Venezuelans over 21 years of age. They are elected for three years; there is one for every 35,000 inhabitants, and one more for an excess of 15,000. A State with fewer than 35,000 of population has one deputy. The Territories, on reaching the population fixed by law, also elect deputies.

The President is elected by Congress for 7 years, must be a Venezuelan by birth and over 30 years of age. He exercises executive power in conjunction with the Cabinet Ministers through whom he acts.

President of the Republic.—General Juan Vicente Gómez, elected June 19, 1931; assumed office, July 13, 1931.

The seat of Government is at the City of Caracas, but, when any unforeseen circumstance requires, the Executive Power may fix its residence at any other point of the Federal District.

The States are autonomous and politically equal. Each has a Legislative Assembly, whose members are chosen in accordance with their respective Constitutions, and a President. The States are divided into 150 districts and 598 municipalities. Each district has a municipal council, and each municipio a communal junta. The Federal District and the Territories are administered by the President of the Republic through Governors.

The following is a list of Presidents since 1892 :—

* Re-elected for period 1915-1922, but declined to take office, and as President-elect served as Commander-in-Chief while his successor acted as Provisional President.

Area and Population.

Venezuela, once regarded as having an area of 393,874 square miles, is now officially considered to embrace 912,050 square kilometres, or 352,051 square miles. Bolívar, the largest state, has an area of 91,868 square miles; the other states are far smaller. The Federal District embraces 745 square miles. According to the census of January, 1926, the population was 3,026,878, not including 10,520 Venezuelans known to be residing abroad. Estimated population on December 31, 1932, was 3,261,734; of the Federal Districts, 208,579; of the city of Caracas, 141,349. The language of the country is Spanish.

The country is now divided into a Federal District, 20 States and two Territories, as follows :—

State	Capital	Pop. January, 1926	State	Capital	Pop. January, 1926
Anzoátegui .	Barcelona	129,792	Portuguesa .	Guanare	58,721

Some of the more important cities with their population according to the census of 1926, are :

Caracas .	135,253	San Cristóbal .	15,295	Cardpano .	25,679
Maracaibo .	74,767	Ciudad Bolívar .	16,762	Rio Caribe .	25,428

Barquisimeto .	28,109	Duaca .	28,719	Boconó .	21,775

Religion and Education.

The Roman Catholic is the prevailing religion, but there is toleration of all others. There are two archbishops, one at Caracas, who is Primate of Venezuela, and one at Mérida. There are six suffragan bishops. In the primary schools religious instruction is given only to those children whose parents expressly request it.

Elementary instruction is free, and from the age of 7 to the completion of the primary grade, compulsory. In 1933 Venezuela had 2,180 public primary schools with 3,342 teachers and, including a few private schools, with a total enrolment of 121,035 pupils; there are 47 secondary schools, public and private, with 360 teachers and 2,040 pupils. For superior education there are four colleges, two maintained by the State at Caracas and two private institutions at Maracaibo and Mérida. Superior instruction is divided into schools, viz.: Philosophy and Letters; Physical, Mathematical, and Natural Sciences; Medical Science; Political Science; Ecclesiastical Science; Dentistry and Pharmacy. The most important are the University of Los Andes at Mérida, with seven schools, and in Caracas the Central University with 1,096 students in 1932. The Government also supports various Institutes for special instruction.

Justice.

The supreme tribunal is the 'Federal and Cassation Court,' whose 7 members are elected by Congress for 7 years, one for each of seven groups of States into which the Republic is divided for this purpose. They select their own President, Vice-President, and Chancellor. The Federal Procurator-General is appointed for 3 years. There are lower Federal courts.

The States have each a Supreme Court with 3 members called respectively President, Relator, and Chancellor. Each State has also a superior court, or superior tribunal, courts of first instance, district courts, and municipal courts. The States' judicial officers hold their posts for 3 years. In the Territories there are civil and military judges of first instance, and also judges in the municipios.

Finance.

The revenue and expenditure for five fiscal years ending June 30 were as follows (25·25 bolívars = £1; 1 bolívar = 19 cents, U.S.):—

—	1929-30	1930-31	1931-32 ¹	1932-33 ¹	1933-34 ¹

On June 30, 1930, as a token of homage to Simon Bolívar, the Liberator, the external debt of 23,757,634 bolívares was completely paid off in gold. The internal debt stood on December 31, 1932, at 22,700,460 bolívares.

Under the Constitution 12 per cent. of the Federal Revenue is assigned to the States and Territories from the appropriation of the Ministry of the Interior; 1933-34, 20,471,745 bolívares.

Defence.

In July, 1933, a law was promulgated according to which all Venezuelans, 21 years of age or older, have to serve three years with the active forces of the army, and to remain in the reserve until the age of 45. The active army consists of 9 infantry brigades, 1 cavalry regiment, 1 mountain artillery regiment, 6 groups of coast artillery, and the technical staff auxiliary to these. The naval force consists of 2 cruisers, 4 gunboats, 1 transport, 1 hospital ship, 1 tugboat, 1 dispatch boat and 1 sailing vessel. The naval fortifications are of steel and timber. There is a military and naval college, a school for military aviation, a training school for troops, and special courses for artillery and cavalry regiments.

Production and Industry.

The surface of Venezuela is divided into 3 distinct zones—the agricultural, the pastoral, and the forest zone. In the first are grown coffee, cocoa, sugar-cane, wheat, rice, tobacco, maize, cotton, beans, &c.; the second affords runs for more than 3,000,000 cattle and numerous horses; and in the third, which covers a very large portion of the country, tropical products, such as caoutchouc, balatá (a gum resembling rubber), tonka beans, divi-divi, copaiba, vanilla, growing wild, are worked by the inhabitants. Forest resources have been barely tapped; 600 species of wood have been identified. The coffee plantations number about 30,000, covering 543,400 acres with 135,000,000 bushes. Output, 1932-33, 1,450,000 bags; 1931-32, 1,000,000 bags. Exports of coffee, chiefly to Europe, 1932, were 108,276,471 pounds; of cocoa, 35,036,518 pounds. There are about 5,000 cocoa plantations and 600 sugar plantations. Production of sugar in 1932-33, 23,300 tons (of which 6,000 tons are exported), and of cotton about 7,500,000 kilos, all locally consumed. Silkworm cultivation has begun.

One-fifth of the population is engaged in agriculture. The live-stock in Venezuela is estimated as follows:—2,077,684 oxen, 113,439 sheep, 2,154,716 goats, 167,708 horses, 54,565 mules, 200,439 asses, 512,086 pigs. Shipments of hides (1932) amounted to 1,689 metric tons.

Venezuela is rich in metals and other minerals and is to-day the second petroleum producing country in the world; the production in 1932 amounted to 119,596,513 barrels (exports, 113,201,361 barrels); in 1933, output was about 119,003,714 barrels. The only difficulty lies in transport; oil tankers able to cross the sand bar into Lake Maracaibo have to be specially built. Asphalt from Lake Bermudez (output, 1931, 28,985 tons) is exported to the United States. There are important gold mines in the region to the south-east of Ciudad Bolívar. Output, 1932, amounted to 91,488 ounces; exported, 1932, 40,038 ounces. Copper ore is also produced (output, 1930, 3,294 metric tons). An American company is exploiting the magnesite deposits on Margarita Island. Coal is worked at Coro, in Falcón State, and at Naricual. Salt mines in various States are now worked by the Government. Round the island of Margarita and neighbouring islets off the north coast of Venezuela, pearl fishing is carried on by the government. Margarita pearls are distinguished by their delicate rose tints.

Venezuela has few industries, most manufactured materials required being imported. There are cotton mills at Valencia, Caracas, Maracay, and Cumaná, producing textiles which compete with imported Manchester goods in the cheaper qualities. There is also a cement and a glass factory at Caracas. Electric power is available in most of the larger towns.

Commerce.

The value of the imports into and exports from Venezuela for 5 years was (1 bolivar = 19 cents, U.S. ; 25·25 bolivars = £1) :—

—	1928	1929	1930	1931	1932
	Bolivars	Bolivars	Bolivars	Bolivars	Bolivars

Petroleum (crude) furnishes about 75 per cent. of total exports; coffee, 17 per cent.

Shipping and Communications.

Foreign vessels are not permitted to engage in the coasting trade, except by special concessions or by contract with the Government. La Guaira is the chief port, but facilities for ocean-going vessels are inadequate. In 1932, 1,696 vessels of 3,597,446 tons entered, and 7,239 vessels of 10,699,859 tons cleared the ports of the country.

Road-building has greatly increased since 1909. There are about 3,100 miles of road fit for traffic the year round and 1,860 miles fit for summer motor traffic. Motor vehicles (1933) totalled 15,050, including 9,730 automobiles, 550 motor buses and 3,799 motor lorries.

In Venezuela there are 12 main lines of railway (6 national and 6 foreign—the latter, by far the most important, including 5 British and 1 Spanish) with a total length of (January 1st, 1933) 608 miles. In addition, the oil companies have about 62 miles of railroads. The Great Railway of Venezuela, 112 miles in extent, is one of the longest lines in the Republic, running between Caracas and Valencia. The Bolivar Railway, 136 miles, the oldest line in operation in the country, runs from the port of Tucucas to Barquisimeto. In Caracas electric tramways are worked by a British Company.

In summer there are 51 rivers and 20 channels navigable for about 12,000 miles; about 4,460 miles are navigable for canoes and small launches. The Orinoco is navigable for ships of 12 feet draught for part of its length. The Compañía Venezolana de Navegacion has a virtual monopoly of the navigation of the river and its tributaries and the Lake of Maracaibo.

The telegraph system, though still inadequate, had a network (1932) of 6,584 miles with 247 telegraph offices. There are 11 telephone systems in the principal towns, but not all are interconnected. There were 447 post-offices in 1932; mail handled, internal and abroad: 21,371,080 letters, 939,305 post-cards, 16,402,798 printed packets, and 2,153,274 other classifications; total, 40,866,457 pieces. Weekly air mail services, domestic and international, were established in 1930.

There are wireless stations at Caracas, Maracaibo, Maracay, Maiquetiá, San Cristóbal, Porlamar, Puerto Cabello, Maturín, and Puerto Ayacucho; the one at Maracay reaches New York and Berlin.

Banking and Currency.

The official monetary unit is the Bolívar (equivalent to 0.290323 gramme fine gold). It is divided into 100 céntimos. The bolívar equals at par 9½d. or 19.3 cents (U.S.) at par. £1 = 25.25 bolívares. But prohibition of the export of gold in 1930 depreciated the bolívar from 5.17 to the dollar (U.S.) to 7 (1932). The following are the coins in current circulation: Gold, 100 (pachanos) 20 and 10 bolívares; silver, 5, 2.50, 2, 1, 0.50 (real) bolívares, and 0.25 (medio) bolívares; nickel, 0.125 (locha), 0.05 (centavo) bolívares.

The bank notes in circulation are as follows (the figures in brackets showing their values at par): 1,000 bolívares (£39 11s. 8d.); 800 bolívares (£31 13s. 4d.); 500 bolívares (£19 15s. 10d.); 100 bolívares (£3 19s. 2d.); 50 bolívares (£1 19s. 7d.); 20 bolívares (15s. 10d.); and 10 bolívares (7s. 11d.). The circulation of foreign banknotes is forbidden.

The Bank of Venezuela (paid-up capital 18,000,000 bolívares) had on June 30, 1932, surplus and undivided profits of 13,330,697 bolívares; it is the sole depository of government funds. Power to control the circulation of the currency was granted in 1930. The Bank of Caracas has a paid-up capital of 4,500,000 bolívares and (June 30, 1929) surplus and undivided profits of 2,919,549 bolívares. There are four other national banks, including the Bank of Maracaibo with a capital of 1,250,000 bolívares, and the Commercial Bank of Maracaibo with a capital of 400,000 bolívares, as well as local branches of 4 British, American and Dutch banks. Issuance of notes is restricted to the six national banks which have power to issue notes to bearer convertible on presentation up to twice their paid-up capital. They must publish monthly balance sheets, and keep 30 per cent. of their reserves against note issues in gold. Two small mortgage banks under quasi-governmental auspices were started in 1929.

Decrees of 1875 and 1912 provided that the official system of weights and measures shall be the metric system.

YUGOSLAVIA.

(KRAJEVINA YUGOSLAVIA.)

Reigning King.

Alexander I, born December 17, 1888, son of King Peter I and Princess Zorka, daughter of the late Nicholas I, King of Montenegro; married on June 8, 1922, Princess Marie, born January 9, 1899, daughter of the late King Ferdinand I of Rumania; Prince Regent from June 24, 1914 to August 16, 1921, when his father died.

Sons of the King.—Prince Peter, born September 6, 1923: Prince Tomislav, born January 19, 1928; Prince Andrey, born June 28, 1929.

Brother of the King.—Prince George, born September 8, 1887; on March 27, 1908, he renounced his right of succession to the Throne.

Sister of the King.—Princess Hélène, born November 4, 1884; married,

September 9, 1911 to Prince Ivan Constantinovitch (died July 18, 1918), son of the Grand Duke Constantine Constantinovitch of Russia.

The founder of the dynasty was Kara-George (i.e. Black George) Petrovitch, who, in 1804, raised the first Serbian revolt against Turkish rule. He was murdered in 1817, leaving two sons—Alexis, born 1801, and Alexander, born 1806. In 1842 Alexander was chosen reigning Prince by the Skupshtina or National Assembly, and the title was confirmed by the Porte, but the dignity was not hereditary. In 1858 Alexander had to abdicate and was banished, and in 1885 he died in exile. King Peter Karageorgevitch was the third of his house who have ruled in Serbia. He succeeded to the throne on the murder of King Alexander of the Obrenovitch dynasty; was elected King by the Skupshtina June 15, and assumed royal rights and duties June 2, 1903.

The independence of Serbia from Turkey was established by Article 34 of the Treaty of Berlin, signed July 13, 1878, and was proclaimed by Prince Milan Obrenovitch in Belgrade. On March 6, 1882, the same Prince proclaimed himself King.

After the Revolution in Austria-Hungary, Slovenia, Croatia, Dalmatia, and Bosnia declared their independence, and their union with Serbia, together with that of Montenegro, which had been voted on November 13, 1918, was proclaimed on December 1, 1918, when the official name of the State was announced as being the Triune kingdom of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes.

By the Treaty of Rapallo the boundaries of the new State on the side of Italy were definitely determined, except as regards Fiume, an agreement on which was not reached till January, 1924, when Fiume was awarded to Italy and Barosh to Yugoslavia. On December 5, 1923, Yugoslavia obtained from Greece a free zone in the harbour of Salonika, which by the end of 1928 covered an area of 351,000 square metres (193,000 square metres land and 158,000 square metres water). During 1931, the total traffic handled consisted of 443,209 tons of imports and 355,765 tons of exports.

By the law of October 3, 1929, the name of the State was changed to Kingdom of Yugoslavia. It consists of nine banovinas (counties) and Belgrade (see map in THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1931).

The King's civil list amounts to 24,000,000 dinars, plus 24,886,328 as difference for payment in foreign exchange.

Constitution and Government.

Yugoslavia is a constitutional parliamentary and hereditary monarchy according to the provisions of the Constitution of September 3, 1931, when the non-parliamentary régime introduced as an emergency in January, 1929, was ended. The legislative power is vested in the King, the Senate, and the Chamber of Deputies. The royal succession is in the direct male line in the order of primogeniture. In default of male heirs the King may nominate his successor. If he does not the Senate and the Chamber meet together to elect the king from among the members of the ruling house. If the successor be under eighteen years of age the King will make nominations in his testament or in a special document. Failing this provision both Houses meet together for the purpose of nominating a regent during the minority.

The Senate consists of members elected for six years, half of whom is re-elected every three years. The King may nominate as many senators as the number elected. The minimum age of electors is fixed at twenty-one years. The right of election to the Senate is reserved to the members of the Chamber of Deputies and to Provincial Chambers and burgomasters.

The right of presentation for election is reserved to citizens of over 40 years of age. One senator is elected to every 300,000 inhabitants. Senators receive from the State an indemnity of 200 dinars per day while the session lasts.

The members of the Chamber of Deputies (Skupština) are elected directly by the electoral body which votes publicly and verbally. All the male inhabitants over 21 years of age have the right to vote. All the electors over 30 years of age have the right of presenting themselves for election. The number of deputies is fixed at present at 305, corresponding to one member to every 50,000 inhabitants. Deputies are elected for a period of four years. Each deputy receives an indemnity of 200 dinars per day and a free pass over the State rail and waterways.

The Senate and the Chamber meet annually on October 20 and are obliged to sit till the new budget is passed. The King has the power of convoking, proroguing and dissolving the Parliament.

The electoral law provides that all candidates for election to Parliament must attach themselves to a national list with representatives in each single electoral division. At the elections held on November 8, 1931, only one list was in the field, and consequently there are no party groups in the present parliament. All the elected deputies decided however to organise themselves into a political party on the basis of the electoral manifesto of the existing Government.

The Cabinet, appointed on January 27, 1934, is composed as follows:—

Prime Minister.—Nikola Uzunovitch.

Minister of Foreign Affairs.—Bogoljub Fectitch.

Minister of the Interior.—Zhivoyin Lazitch.

Minister of Transport and Communications.—Lazar Radivoyevitch.

Minister of Defence.—General Dragomir Stoyanovitch.

Minister of Finance.—Dr. Milorad Georgeritch.

Minister of Commerce and Industry.—Yuray Demetrovitch.

Minister of Education.—Dr. Iliya Shumenkovitch.

Minister of Justice.—Bozhidar Maximovitch.

Minister of Social Affairs and Health.—Ivan Poutselj.

Minister of Mines and Forests.—Yuray Demetrovitch.

Minister of Agriculture.—Dr. Stjepan Srkulj.

Minister of Public Works.—Dr. Stjepan Srkulj.

Minister of Physical Education.—Dr. Lavoslav Hanzhek.

Area and Population.

According to the census taken March 31, 1931, the area and population of Yugoslavia are shown as follows:—

Religion.

All religions recognised by law enjoy the same rights. According to the results of the census of March 31, 1931, there were of the total population :—Serbian-Orthodox, 6,785,501 (48·70 per cent.); Roman Catholics, 5,217,910 (37·45 per cent.); Greek Catholics, 44,608 (0·32 per cent.); Protestants, 231,169 (1·66 per cent.); Moslem, 1,561,166 (11·20 per cent.); Jews, 68,405 (0·49 per cent.); others, 25,279 (0·18 per cent.).

The Serbian Orthodox, or Serb Pravoslav, Church is ruled by a Patriarch and a Holy Synod. On September 12, 1920, the Patriarchate of the Serbs, originally established by King Stephen VII Dushan on April 9, 1346, and suppressed by Sultan Mustafa III on September 13, 1766, was reconstituted. The Serbian Orthodox Church is organised in 6 Metropolitan Sees, Petch, Belgrade, and Karlovce (held by the Patriarch), and Skoplye, Cetinye and Dalmatia-Bosnia (Shibenik), and 20 other dioceses. There are 2,866 Parishes and 166 Monasteries. According to the provisions of the Constitution of the Serbian Church, which was published in November, 1931, the Church is to be governed in the future on an autonomous basis and have the right to organise its own life according to its needs. The Government will transfer to the Church the sums in the Budget which they have allotted to ecclesiastical affairs.

The Latin Church in Yugoslavia is governed in its relations with the State by the Concordats of 1855 in the territories which used to form part of Austria or Hungary; of 1866 for Montenegro; of 1881 for Bosnia and the Herzegovina; and of 1914 for Serbia. It is divided into two complete Provinces, of Sarayevo with 4 Suffragan Sees, and Zagreb with 4 Suffragan Sees and jurisdiction over the Byzantine Uniat Bishop of Krizhevce. In addition to these there are 2 Archbishoprics, Belgrade and Antivari, and 2 Bishoprics which depend immediately upon the Holy See in Rome, and 7 other Bishoprics under the metropolitan jurisdiction of Archbishoprics outside the kingdom. There is an Apostolic Administrator for those parts of the diocese of Zara which are in Yugoslavia. The Church is organised in 1,971 Parishes, and there are 349 Monasteries and Convents.

The Protestants are chiefly in the territories which used to form part of Hungary. Their principal communities are the Evangelical Church (Helvetian and Augsburg Confessions), and the Evangelical Brotherhood. The Mennonites, and the Baptist and Methodist Churches are less numerously represented.

The Moslems who were under two autonomous jurisdictions, that of the Grand Mufti of Belgrade, and that of the Reis-ul-Ulema of Sarajevo for Bosnia and the Herzegovina, are now joined together.

The Jews, who are divided between the Sephardim and the Ashkenazim, have a Grand Rabbi in Belgrade for Serbia, and Rabbimates for Croatia and Slavonia, for Bosnia and the Herzegovina, for Dalmatia, and for the Vojvodina.

Education.

Elementary education is compulsory, and, in all the primary schools under the Ministry of Education, it is free. It lasts 8 years and the schools are divided into elementary and continuation. Children intending to continue their education in secondary or technical schools are exempted from attendance in continuation schools. In the year 1931-32 there were 8,498 elementary schools with 25,142 teachers and 1,276,764 pupils. There were 1,953 teachers and 27,563 pupils in the continuation schools. There were 531 primary professional and industrial schools with 3,859 teachers and 63,735 pupils, and 36 secondary professional schools with 494 teachers and 6,165 pupils; 32 agricultural schools with 190 teachers and 1,297 pupils; 3 higher art schools and 19 theological colleges. The latter had 1,546 students in 1931-32.

There are three Universities in the Kingdom: At Belgrade, founded in 1838; at Zagreb (Agram); and at Lyublyana, founded in 1920. In 1932-33 the total number of students attending the Universities was 13,608, with 664 professors. There is a Law School at Subotitsa with 13 professors and 426 students; a Philosophical Faculty at Skoplye with 22 professors and 163 students; and an Economic-commercial Academy at Zagreb with 27 professors and 179 students.

Justice and Crime.

Justice is administered by independent State courts. Courts of first instance are county and district courts. There are 8 courts of appeal as courts of second instance. The highest court is the court of cassation.

There are special courts for administrative legislature. The State Council is the supreme administrative court.

Finance.

Estimates of receipts and expenditure for 6 years were as follows:—

Year	Revenue	Expenditure	Year	Revenue	Expenditure
	1000 dinars	1000 dinars		1000 dinars	1000 dinars
1929-30	14,643,851	12,464,475	1932-33	11,323,200	11,323,200
1930-31	13,776,458	13,348,013	1933-34	10,973,579	10,433,327
1931-32	13,692,022	12,210,304	1934-35	10,171,250	10,171,250

The principal items of the budget estimates for 1933-34 are shown as follows in thousands of dinars :—

Revenue.	Dinars. (thousands)	Expenditure.	Dinars. (thousands)
Direct taxes	1,808,600	Department of Education .	786,109
Indirect taxes	2,880,000	Finance	308,208

Miscellaneous	159,914	Agriculture	65,587
		Pensions	915,788
		Public health	152,270

On July 1, 1932, the public external debt of Yugoslavia amounted to 32,763,242,636 dinars, internal to 6,020,315,000 dinars, making a total of 38,783,557,636 dinars.

Defence.

ARMY.

The organisation of the army of the Kingdom of Yugoslavia is based on the law of 1923. Compulsory service is in force for men between the ages of 21 and 45, and, as a last defence, men can be taken as fit to carry arms from the ages of 18 to 21 years and from 45 to 50 years. Service in the active army is for 10 years, of which 18 months are with the colours, the remainder of the service being spent on leave subject to recall for training. From 31 to 38, service is with the 2nd base of the reserve, from 38 to 45 with the 3rd base.

The kingdom is divided into five army commands which comprises 2 cavalry divisions, 16 infantry and 16 artillery brigades.

In 1932-33, the peace strength of the active army was 7,123 officers and 105,487 men. The Gendarmerie consists of 19,848 officers and men. The military air force numbers 10,810 all ranks with 563 aeroplanes, organised in 6 air regiments of 18 flights.

The strength on mobilisation is approximately 1,000,000. Military education is provided by the Military Academy at Belgrade for the training of cadets for officers of all arms and by the superior course of the Academy for the training of staff officers and commanders.

The infantry is armed with quick-firing rifles of French pattern and those taken as booty from Austria-Hungary; the artillery with French quick-firing guns (Schneider-Canet system) and those taken as booty from Austria-Hungary, which are of various models.

NAVY.

The Royal Yugoslav Navy is under the command of a Vice-Admiral, a special Naval Department being maintained at the War Office for technical and administrative purposes. The organisation comprises the seagoing squadron; the river flotilla; the air service. The seagoing squadron, composed of the flotilla leader Dubrovnik, of 1,880 tons and mounting four 5.5 inch guns, built in Great Britain in 1931-32, 8 torpedo-boats, 6 mine-layers, 6 mine-sweepers, 4 submarines, an aircraft tender, and a number of smaller vessels, is used mainly for training purposes. A small ex-German Cruiser, Dalmaciya, has been refitted and re-armed to serve as a training ship. A new programme of naval construction, to include 2 flotilla leaders, 6 destroyers, 2 submarines, and 6 coastal motor-boats, has been approved. The main base is at Kotor (Cattaro), where there are facilities for repairs and docking, and a naval engineering college. There are training establishments at Gruz (Gravosa) (for officers) and Shibenik (Sebenico) (for warrant and petty officers). The river flotilla includes 4 monitors, armed with 4·7 inch guns, besides patrol vessels, motor-boats, mining launches, and other small craft. The air service consists of sea-plane detachments attached to the seagoing squadron and to the river flotilla. The total active service personnel of the navy comprises 487 officers and 5,500 men, with a further 700 in reserve.

Production and Industry.

Yugoslavia, with a total area of 24,754,166 hectares, has a cultivated area of 13,953,743 hectares (1932).

The area and production of the principal crops for 2 years were :—

On January, 1, 1933, there were in Yugoslavia 1,156,999 horses ; 16,499 mules ; 114,719 asses ; 3,812,208 head of cattle ; 8,510,441 sheep ; 2,863,177 pigs ; and 1,871,618 goats.

The forest area of Yugoslavia is 19,068,637 acres (1931). The largest forest area is in Bosnia and the Herzegovina (9,388,944 acres). The forests consist largely of beech, oak, and fir, but are less profitable than, with proper management, they might be. The normal timber cut is about 530 million cubic feet per annum. Hemp is an important crop. The area under cultivation in 1932, was 67,840 acres (69,042 in 1931), and the yield 22,201 metric tons (22,949 metric tons in 1931).

Yugoslavia has considerable mineral resources, including coal (chiefly lignite), iron, copper ore, gold, lead, chrome, antimony and cement. The total output of coal and lignite was 5,252,415 metric tons in 1930 ; 4,970,177 metric tons in 1931 ; and 4,474,697 metric tons in 1932. The most important iron mines are at Vares and Lyubiyi in Bosnia and there are also considerable siderite and limonite iron ores between Prizhedor and Sanski Most. In 1930 the output of iron ore was 431,189 metric tons ; 126,847 metric tons in 1931. Copper ore is exploited chiefly at Bor (Serbia) ; output in 1932, 303,140 metric tons ; in 1931, 456,780 metric tons. The principal lead mines are at Mezhitza (Slovenia) ; production of lead ore in 1932, 554,504 metric tons ; in 1931, 371,156 metric tons. Chrome mines are found in the southern part of Serbia and more especially in the neighbourhood of Skoplye (Uskub) ; output of chrome ore in 1932, 39,141 metric tons ; in 1931, 58,385 metric tons. There are 2 antimony mines in western Serbia (Podrinje) which produced 122 metric tons in 1929. Production of salt, 1930, 56,018 metric tons ; 1931, 54,634 metric tons ; 61,251 metric tons in 1932. Bauxite in 1932, 67,086 metric tons ; in 1931, 64,842 metric tons ; in 1930, 94,700 metric tons ; manganese, 160 metric tons in 1932 ; in 1931, 2,454 metric tons ; in 1930, 1,539 metric tons ; pyrites, 15,718 metric tons in 1932 ; in 1931, 29,475 metric tons ; in 1930, 50,345 metric tons.

Of the industries, flour milling is one of the most important, especially in Batchka; there are 50 large flour mills in the country; brewing and distilling are extensively carried on, as are also cotton spinning and weaving, tanning, boot-making, pottery, and iron-working. Carpet weaving is one of the oldest industries in Serbia. The product is manufactured principally at Pirot, in south-eastern Serbia, and the carpets are named after that place. The chief characteristics of these carpets are that they are made of pure wool, dyed with natural colours by local dyers, who pride themselves that the process of dyeing and colour mixing is a secret transmitted by father to son, and is known only to the inhabitants of Pirot. Meat-packing is also becoming important, and there is also an important cardboard and paper-making industry.

Shipping and Communications.

On July 1, 1933, Yugoslavia possessed 167 steamers of 372,200 (gross) tons, besides 13 motor ships of 2,267 (gross) tons, making a total of 180 vessels of 374,467 (gross) tons.

In 1932, 91,495 vessels of 15,843,001 net tons entered the ports of the kingdom, of these, 82,964 vessels of 12,048,469 tons were Yugoslav.

Yugoslavia has (1932) 5,792 miles of railway, of which 4,343 miles are of normal gauge, and 1,449 miles of narrow gauge. Of the whole length of railway 4,019 miles are under the State's administration.

The first Yugoslav air-line for passengers between Belgrade and Zagreb was opened in February, 1928. There is now a service between Belgrade and Skoplye. Regular international services connect Belgrade with Paris, Sofia, Bucharest, and Constantinople.

Of highways there are (1933) 1,422 miles. A five-year programme of road construction was formulated in 1931. It is intended to build a further 450 miles of roads at a cost of 600,000,000 dinars. Total length of waterways, principally the Danube, the Save, the Drave, the Tisa, the Kupa, the Tamish and 8 canals is 1,182 miles. On these waterways there were in 1932, 352 steamships and motorships engaged in river navigation, of which 66 per cent. are State owned, the remainder belonging to private companies. Passenger traffic amounted to 6,655,457 and freights (1930) to 2,146,629 tons.

There were (1932) 12,117 miles of telegraph line and 10,351 miles of telephone line.

In 1932 there were 4,003 post-offices, 1,819 telegraph offices, 1,230 central telephone stations, 5 central automatic telephone stations with a total number of telephone subscribers of 39,101. There were also 1,250 public telephone call-offices.

Banking and Credit.

The principal bank is the National Bank of Yugoslavia, in Belgrade, with a capital of dinars 180,000,000 paid up. Notes in circulation on February 22, 1934, 4,161,701,000 dinars; note cover in gold and foreign exchange, 1,852,403,000 dinars; bills and advances (State and private), 2,126,493,000 dinars. The Export Bank, with agencies abroad, assists in the exportation of Yugoslav produce. The Drzavna Hipotekarna Banka or State Mortgage Bank, the only large State institution of the kind in Yugoslavia, makes advances to a large amount for agricultural operations. The Privileged Agrarian Bank was founded in 1929 with a capital of 700 million dinars for the benefit of farmers. Savings deposits at the banks totalled 9,867,000,000 dinars on October 1, 1933, as compared with 10,226,000,000 dinars at the end of 1932. Postal savings accounts numbered 216,957 with 442,674,000 dinars balance at the end of 1932, as against 177,252 with 334,141,000 dinars balance at the end of 1931, and 127,196 with 209,618,000 dinars balance at the end of 1930.

Money, Weights and Measures.

Yugoslavia has the decimal system for its weights and measures. On May 8, 1931, a stabilisation loan was concluded in Paris to the amount of 1,025,000,000 francs for the purposes of the legal stabilisation of the dinar. On May 12 a law for the stabilisation of the dinar was promulgated to take effect on June 28. The dinar was stabilised at a value corresponding to 26·5 milligrams of pure gold, i.e., 11 dinars equals one gold dinar, or 100 dinars equal 9·13 Swiss francs (approximately 276 to the pound sterling). The National Bank as the bank of issue is bound by law to maintain a cover of gold or foreign currencies of equivalent value, amounting to not less than 35 per cent., and at least 25 per cent. only in gold, of the total amount of the Bank's outstanding obligations. In circulation are bank-notes of 10, 100, and 1,000 dinars; 100 paras = 1 dinar; metallic coins of 0·25, and 0·50 dinar, 1 dinar, and 2 dinars, and silver coins of 10 and 20 dinars with a 50 per cent. silver content and weighing 7 and 14 grammes respectively. According to a law published on August 13, 1932, there is to be an issue of new silver coins of 50 dinars with 75 per cent. silver content and weighing 22 grammes; the value of the issue of all silver coins is to be 1,000,000,000 dinars.

The metric weights and measures have been in practical use since the commencement of 1883. The wagon of 10 metric tons is frequently used as a unit of measure for coal, roots and corn.
